Digitized by the Internet Archive
in 2014

https://archive.org/details/christiansun77gene

HISTORICAL SOCIETY. 1956.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Official Organ of the Southern Christian Convention

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY. IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY. IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXVII. RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JANUARY 1, 1925. NUMBER 1.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

French Bonds.—

A New York financial house opened bids for one hundred million dollars' worth of French bonds, and they were quickly subscribed. How easy it is to raise money for doubtful loans to foreign powers to be invested in armaments and other things, and how lamentable it is that many of the mission boards of the various denominations are being compelled to cut down their foreign mission work because of lack of funds. Somehow, people should be taught that unless we make the world Christian we may lose that we have; certain it is that it is in peril.

Deportation Bill.—

A bill has been introduced into Congress which would deport all alien bootleggers and drug peddlers. There are many of these undesirable foreigners in this country, and it is not just to the American people that they should be called upon to provide penitentiary room for these aliens. America should not be the dumping-ground for the scum of the earth; but, on the other hand, our immigration laws should not exclude from the privileges of this land those worthy to receive and enjoy them. There is room enough in America for thousands who are worthy, of whatever race or country; but there is not room enough for one unworthy one, be he ever so cultured or descended from however pure Nordic stock.

Bar Pistols from Mails.—

An important bill passed by the House and sent to the Senate just prior to the recess was one excluding pistols, revolvers or other firearms susceptible of concealment about the person from the U. S. mails. Under the bill, sponsored by Representative Miller, of Washington, the Postmaster-General would be empowered to draft regulations providing for exemption from the provisions of the bills of firearms intended for the army and navy or for peace officers, etc. Violation of the act would be punishable with a fine of $1,000 or imprisonment up to two years, or both. Proponents of the measure in the House contended such a law would strengthen the police powers of the States, help to curb crime and prevent the sale of firearms by mail-order houses without interfering with local dealers and manufacturers.

Inaugural Committee.—

Senators Curtis, Kansas, and Hale, of Maine, Republicans, and Overman, of North Carolina, Democrat, and Representative Griest, Pennsylvania, and Hadley, Washington, Republicans, is about House, Kentucky, Democrat, have been appointed by the congressional committee to arrange the only exercises attendant upon the inauguration of Calvin Coolidge and General Chas. G. Dawes as President and Vice-President, respectively, next March 4th. Appointment of the congressional committee was announced just prior to the holiday recess.

The joint committee will begin its work immediately after the recess. A District of Columbia committee will co-operate with the congressional committee in perfecting the arrangements. President Coolidge is adhering to his insistence that the ceremonies be as simple as possible, and be commensurate with the dignity and importance of the occasion.

Nation's Scientists Meet.—

Scientists from all parts of the country on Monday in the city of Washington in the seventy-ninth annual convention of the American Association for the advancement of science, which will continue in session throughout the week.

Secretary Hughes was scheduled to address the opening meeting on the subject, "Some Aspects of International Co-operation," and Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador, to speak before the American Political Science Association on the "British Policy and the Balance of Power."

More than 1,000 scientific papers are to be presented to the convention, nearly all of them describing some piece of research work carried out since the last meeting. While many of these papers will be of a highly technical nature, it is expected that nearly all will have some bearing on the problems of the scientific world, such as the liberation of the energy of the atom, the control of the living process, and the fight to control insects dangerous to human life.

Radio will be used for the first time to give publicity to the meeting, and a number of addresses are to be broadcast.

Dry Sentiment Spreading.—

Sentiment for strict enforcement of the prohibition law is growing, even in the populous Eastern centers where there is less regard paid to the law than anywhere else in the country, Senator Capper, of Kansas, asserts in a statement made public. Senator Capper declared that the "wet" minority in Congress was centering all of its efforts toward breaking down the prohibition law; but despite its noisy propaganda, sentiment for strict law enforcement is spreading, and those who would nullify the law are receiving but cold comfort from the White House or from the new Attorney-General, Harlan F. Stone. Senator Capper cited President Coolidge's veto of a Massachusetts bill, while he was Governor of that State, which would have legalized the manufacture and sale of 2.75 per cent beer in that State. In that veto message, the then Governor said:

"The authority of the law is questioned in these days all too much. The binding obligation of obedience against personal desire is denied in many quarters. If these doctrines prevail, all organized government, all liberty, all security are at an end. Force alone will prevail. Can those entrusted with the gravest authority set an example save that of the sternest obedience to law? Can we afford to take any position which may turn out to be, which can anywhere be interpreted to be an act of nullification?"

Science Imperils Civilization.—

In addressing the famous Bible class bearing his name in the Park Avenue Baptist Church, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., told his hearers that civilization was headed toward destruction because the progress of mind and matter had outstripped the growth of spiritual values. Mr. Rockefeller said, in part:

"Consideration, unselfishness, self-sacrifice, service, all springing from love for God, love of our brother—these are the spiritual qualities which must keep pace with and dominate intellectual and material progress if civilization is to survive. Religion in its essence is the personal relation between God and man. Adherence to the literal interpretation of the Scriptures is increasingly less possible in view of the discoveries of science, but the lessons they teach are more impressive. Its judgments are more in the spirit of Christ's words when He said, 'Let him that is without sin cast the first stone.' Its emphasis is on service. Its interest is centered primarily on human society, on the individual chiefly that he may be a worthy member of society. Clean living on week days as well as Sunday, fair dealings in all business relations, ministrations to the physical, mental, and social, as well as spiritual, needs of one's fellows, count more today in evaluating a man's religion than mere attendance at Church. Warmth, beauty, joy, freedom, are finding their way increasingly into present-day religion. Truly, religion emerges from this comparison far nobler, freer, more sincere, more effective, more unselfish, more inspiring than it was a hundred years ago. With marvelous rapidity and flexibility, it is adapting its ministrations to the all-around needs of man. Today it is something to live by, and not only to bring consolation in death."

Our attention is being called frequently these days to the fact that somehow the Church of Christ is dropping behind the onward march of science and material and intellectual prosperity, and such a thing challenges us to our best efforts. We must see to it that the Church of Christ does not fail the world in its hour of need. We must see to it that the spiritual forces are able to cope with the progress oft he world and overcome the world.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Happy New Year to all THE SUN'S readers!

The week of prayer services will be held in Richmond January 5th to 10th.

Watchnight services were held last night, bidbing farewell to the Old Year and welcoming the New.

If you do not take THE CHRISTIAN SUN, January 1st would be a good time to subscribe. You should have it in your home.

Kingdom-enlistment week services will be held at First Christian Church, of Richmond, under the direction of Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, of Holland, Va., from January 18th to 25th.

More than 500 visitors and members have been in attendance upon the Historical Association, in Richmond, during the past week. Many visited Jamestown and other places of interest. Historic lore was in evidence.

If any Church within the bounds of the Southern Convention is without a pastor, let the secretary or some interested member write the Secretary of Missions, Elon College, N. C., and he will be glad to send the names and addresses of available pastors.

The Christmas entertainment on the night of the 23d, at First Christian Church, Richmond, Va., was a most enjoyable program. The children did well and Santa Claus did splendidly. The youngsters were made happy with their treat and presents. A nice box of toys was contributed for the Christian Orphanage.

"The pastor and family are under deep obligations of gratitude to the good people of the Church for the liberal pounding presented by Santa Claus at the Christmas entertainment. We hope and strive to make ourselves more worthy of these acts of kindness on the part of our people."—W. T. Walters, Pastor, in "Church Bulletin."

Will SUN readers bear in mind that 1925 must witness, if God wills, the building of Rocky Ford Christian Church and school-house, and that no benevolence is more worthy and needy than this. Rev. M. T. Sorrell and his co-workers must be encouraged this year with a house here where a Church and school ane already organized and are at work.

It is learned from the Herald of Gospel Liberty that our new publishing association building, Dayton, Ohio, is nearing completion and may be occupied by February 1st. This building is much larger and more convenient in arrangement than the present building, and will give adequate and spacious office room for our General Convention officials.

It is not too late for every Sunday School teacher who has not already done so to secure some good helps on the Sunday School for 1925. Torrey's Gist of the Lessons, Peloubet's Select Notes, Tarbell's Teacher's Guide, the Sunday School Times, in addition, of course, to our own Journal of Religious Education, are all highly recommended.

The year 1924 brought a great and glad Christmas to the people of America—if peace, plenty and prosperity can bring gladness. Those were the happiest ones, and the most fortunate, who were permitted to carry cheer and comfort to others. One's Christmas was not much unless one carried a ray of sunshine to some other one.

The work on our new college buildings at Elon College is now practically finished, the wall around the campus is complete, with the exception of some gateway work, and the land of the campus is being torn up by turn-plows preparatory to lawn work, seed-sowing and shrubbery planting. We have a beautiful and elaborate plant in which the entire Church may certainly indulge a very pardonable and praiseworthy pride.

Berea Church Sunday School, Nansemond County, Va., under the training of Mrs. W. B. Warington and Mrs. R. T. Bradford, gave a very appropriate program on the evening of December 26th, "White Gifts for the King." The songs and readings by the children of the school were greatly enjoyed. A large box prepared for the occasion was placed at the chancel and was filled to overflowing with gifts by members of the school to children in our Fancy Gap, Va., community; also a plate offering of $12 for the Rocky Ford Church building was received.

It is learned with sorrow and deep regret that Dr. W. P. Minton, our foreign mission secretary, Dayton, Ohio, was called upon recently to mourn the loss by death of his mother. The sad event occurred at her home in Covington, Ohio, Wednesday, December 18th, and the funeral services were held at the Covington Christian Church Saturday, December 20th. Dr. Minton's father and mother were both suffering slightly from the grip, his mother taking a sudden turn for the worse, and his father, at last accounts, showing signs of improvement. Dr. Minton has our sympathy in these days of grief and sorrow.

NOTICE TO SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Several Sunday Schools have not yet forwarded their offering for the Board of Christian Education. If you have taken the offering, please forward it immediately to C. H. Stephenson, Raleigh, N. C.; and if your school has not taken the offering, please do so right away, and send it in. We need all the funds asked for in our call. Every school should make an offering.

W. T. WALTERS,
Chairman Board of Religious Education.

HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION IN RICHMOND.

The thirty-ninth annual meeting of the American Historical Association opened Saturday morning, December 27th, at 10 o'clock, in the Jefferson Hotel. Attending the convention are distinguished educators and historians from leading colleges of this country, together with prominent men and women from England, Scotland, and other foreign countries. The literary sessions of the convention, which were closed yesterda, are open to the public today.

Three group meetings were held each morning from 10 to 12 o'clock. These groups discussed "Ancient History," "The Colleges and Historical Investigation," and "English History."

Luncheon Conference.

A feature of Saturday's program was the luncheon conference of the patriotic societies of Richmond, held at the Jefferson Hotel. Dixon Ryan Fox, of Columbia University, was chairman of the luncheon. Mrs. Livingston Rowe Schuyler, of New York, discussed "Services to History of the Daughters of the Confederacy."

A joint luncheon-conference of the American Historical Association, the National Council for the Social Studies, and the Virginia Society of History Teachers was held at 1 o'clock in the dining-room of Hotel Richmond. The afternoon's general session was held from 3 to 5 o'clock in the auditorium of the Jefferson. The topic was "The Confederacy, its Leaders and its Problems —a Resurvey." The speakers included Franklin L. Riley, chairman; Frank L. Owsley, Vanderbilt University; Alfred P. James, University of Pittsburgh; A. Sellew Roberts, University of Illinois; Roy F. Nichols, of Columbia University.

Subscription Dinner.

A subscription dinner was given from 6 to 7:45 o'clock for the Agricultural History Society at the Jefferson. Governor E. Lee Trinkle and Mayor J. Fulmer Bright made the addresses of welcome at the general session held in the auditorium of Second Baptist Church. An address, "These Forty Years," was made by Charles McLean Andrews, of Yale University, acting president of the American Historical Association.

At the close of the literary part of this session, the members of the association were entertained with the rendition of a musical program of old plantation melodies, "spirituals," by the Sabbath Glee Club.

The meeting of this organization was one of the most important of its kind ever held in Richmond, some of the most distinguished educators and historians in the United States, Scotland and England attending the gathering. A number of prominent persons from Great Britain delivered addresses at the meetings.

Yale Professor Principal Speaker.

The beneficent influence of the American Historical Association, in the activities of the body as a whole, and in the efforts of individual members, was stressed by Prof. Charles M. Andrews, of the chair of history, Yale University, in a paper read at the general meeting of the association, held in Second Baptist Church.

More than 300 professors and students of history were in the audience that filled the Church to its portals. Governor Trinkle and Mayor Bright were on the platform with Prof. Andrews and a group of visiting historians from several European countries. England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales were represented in the audience by distinguished educators, members of the faculties of various institutions of learning.

Governor Trinkle, who opened the meeting, spoke only three minutes, confining his address to a hearty greeting to the visiting historians.

Reviews Historical Work.

Prof. Andrews reviewed the activities of the American Historical Association through the forty years of its existence. During that time, he said, there have been marvelous advances in every branch of science. Researches of learned men have thrown new light on old history. In the last forty years the history written has been more exact, more authentic and freer of legend, romance, prejudice and political propaganda for that reason.

With the nineteenth century, he said, came a new era for historians, a renaissance of history writing. The people of the world were better informed and more exacting of their historians. Their eyes were opened in the light of scientific research to palpable fiction in the histories written in the earlier centuries. They realized that much of what was given as solemn and sober f[illegible] by the writers of earlier days was based [illegible] legends, scandals, political and religiou[illegible] ganda of the times with which thos[illegible] dealt.

Prof. Andrews mentioned as a significant fact that in the long ago historians seemingly preferred to write the history of some period several centuries before they were born.

Better History Writing.

Early in the nineteenth century historians appeared who laid the foundation for better history writing. They were careful to distinguish fact from myth, authentic records from legends, and to bar personalities, prejudices and propaganda from their writings. History writers became more exact and more careful. Investigation became more thorough, and the wheat was winnowed from the chaff.

History writers of today are the most reliable of all time, Prof. Andrews argued, due to the wonderful advancement and development of history writing and history teaching in the great universities of the world. He claimed for the educational institutions of the United States a place in the front rank of this important work.

The work in the universities, he said, has been always, for the last fifty years, greatly stimulated by the activities of the American Historical Association and the policies it has promulgated in its official publication, the "American Historical Review." He predicted for the coming forty years even more substantial advances.

Incidentally, Prof. Andrews took a fling at the "popular history writers of today," who aim to amuse the reader as much as to instruct. Solid history cannot be written in any but a serious vein, he said. The faithful, conscientious historian must deal with facts even if his product should prove to be a history which does not entertain or win the interest of society of today.

Following the interesting paper read by Prof. Andrews, the Sabbath Glee Club choristers, entertained with harmony and singing, rendering "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" and other favorite spirituals.

HOW THE CHURCH OF GOD MOVES.

"Wha is she that looketh forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army of banners?"—Song of Sol. 6:10.

Our Heavenly Father has always spoken to us in a way and manner that we may clearly understand, if we are desirous to know the truth. In most instances, He used a natural truth to teach a spiritual one; for instance, the above Scripture, "Who is she that looketh forth as the morning?" It is not hard for us to accept this natural truth without questioning as to how it is or how can it be. We are not dull to this understanding at all—that it has been providentially arranged; that we should have day and night. Then, why is it that we are so blind to His spiritual teachings?

This Scripture teaches us how the Church of God moves. We might climb to the top of the highest mountain in the world in the morning before day, and if the sky was clear the first sign of day we would see in the East would be just a little gray speck, and as we stand there and look at it, it would gradually get larger and larger until the sun would be seen to rise as though it was coming up out of the ocean. Then daylight would be everywhere around about us. We cannot explain it. The first sign of day was a little gray speck in the East, and it gradually got lighter and lighter until it was full day.

Nineteen hundred and twenty-four years ago, over in the little town of Bethlehem, Judea, in the manger of a cattle stall, God placed His Church. Very small then, just in its infancy; but it began to grow larger and larger until it is abroad over our land "Fair as the moon." Scientists tell us the moon is a dark planet, and that the only light it gives out and can give is the reflection of the sun. And so it is with the Church. It is a dark planet within itself; the only light it can give out is the reflection of Jesus Christ through the lives of its members. If He abides in us and we in Him, then we will be as our Master said, "Ye are the light of the world." If we abide in His love, we will let our lights shine, but not turn up the wick. You know, some people turn up the wick and try to make their lamp shine during a revival meeting, and when the meeting closes their lamps begin to smoke. But if we let the Blessed Son of God furnish the "oil" it won't smoke. No! "When He, the Holy Spirit, comes, He will guide you into all truth." "Clear as the sun." What is any brighter and clearer than the Sun? What is any brighter, clearer and purer than the gospel of the Son of God? As the sun is superior to any of the other planets, so is the gospel of Jesus Christ. Some people preach that it doesn't keep one from sinning; that it is impossible to live without sin. Then another class of preachers will say, notwithstanding its purity, that it is no harm or sin to go to dances, card parties, or play checkers, or to matching to see who pays for drinks or cigars. They will say there is no harm in these things; that Mr. So and So is a good man and a member of the Church, and he practices these things. And nine times out of ten, this Mr. So and So is one who is looked upon as a leader in the Church. You can just note that Church (under his leadership) and see if it is "as terrible as an army with banners." No, it will never be! The word of God says, "Gather not my soul with sinners, nor my life with bloody men, in whose hands is mischief and their right hand is full of bribes." We know an army with banners is one that never knew what defeat was. It is one that has gone from victory to victory. So is the Church of God. When our Lord was upon earth, He said that "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it." That is to say, the gates of hell would never be open wide enough to let out demons enough to overcome the Church of God. We read in Revelation that at the end of the thousand years Satan will gather all his hostss together in His last and final effort to fight against the Church to overcome it. But the Word tells us that he will be defeated in this effort also, and that fire will come down out of heaven and devour them, and the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are. You know that in an army with banners there is one that holds a very, very important position—the flag-bearer. The army will rally around the flagman. And when the flag goes down, the army will cease to advance. Jesus Christ represents the flag in the Church of God, and when any Church ceases to raise up that flag, as He said, "If I (that is, Jesus) be lifted up, I will draw all men unto me."

They cease to do what He had commissioned them to do, namely: "Go, ye, into all the world and preach the gospel." The preacher is the flag bearer in the Church of God, and unless he is a true soldier of the cross and preaches a full gospel, he will play the army into the hands of the enemy, who is the devil—that old serpent! the enemy of all righteousness. Many false prophets have gone out into the world, as the Scripture tells us would be. Some of these are preaching no hell; some evolution; others that Christ was just a man, and not divine. Still others preach that the way to heaven is by education. Yes, but what kind of education? Not a kind relating to the intellect or mind; but the heart. The way into the kingdom of heaven is heart first, not head. When the great preacher Paul was converted, it wasn't a college he needed to go to, for he says, "And I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God, for I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ and Him crucified; and my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the spirit and of power" (1 Cor. 2:1-4). Then again in Gal. 1:12-17: "For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it; but by the revelation of Jesus Christ; neither went I up to Jerusalem to them which were apostles before me, but I went into Arabia and returned again into Damascus." Beloved, that is the place to go—out into some quiet place and commune with God the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost—not put last things first and first things last, but go rather to the "Author and finisher of our faith." James tells us "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him." The Master teacher tells us in Matt. 6:33, "But seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

How does the Church of God move? Through men and women who have been cleansed from all unrighteousness and have been baptized with the Holy Spirit and are on fire with the love of God burning in their hearts for lost souls, for the Scripture says, "For as soon as Zion traveled, she brought forth her children." Show me a Church that is on fire for God and I will show you a Church where souls are being born into God's kingdom by multitudes. Our Master said to Peter and Andrew, "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men." And in another Scripture he told Peter "Fear not: from henceforth thou shalt catch men." He didn't tell them maybe you will catch them, but very emphatically, "Thou shalt catch men!"

So it is with the Church where its members have been baptized with the Holy Spirit and with fire. They are fishers of men. And that Church will be known as a saving station. The only reason that all the Churches are not saving stations is that some of them have left the doors open and the world has crept in. The Church is all right in the world, but all wrong when the world gets in it. Many of the Churches are like the "Laodoceans' Church," which was neither cold nor hot, but lukewarm; and we all know how well pleased God was with that Church, as He says, "I will spew thee out of my mouth." Back in the days of Amos the prophet, the Churches had ceased to carry on the work God had commissioned them to do, namely: to win souls. And the prophet was giving a message from God to the Church, and the prophet said, "Woe to them that are at ease in Zion." That same woe is pronounced on all that have put their hand to the plow and look back. Our Master said they were not fit subjects for the kingdom. Then we hear Paul say, "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel." Knowing these things, brethren, it is "high time to awake out of sleep," and let us, therefore, cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light and awake to righteousness, and sin not, and do what we can in "redeeming the time, because the days are evil." So when we come to stand before the great I Am we will not hear the sad news that we let men and women go out into eternity without trying to win them for God, remembering the command of our Lord: "Go, ye, into all the world and preach the gospel."

Let us not forget the grave consequences if we fail to do that. As God told Ezekiel, "Except ye warn them, I will require their blood at your hands; but if you warn them, you have delivered your soul." "Who is she that looketh forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners?"

Ramseur, N. C. H. V. Cox.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR.

J. O. ATKINSON, Elon College, N. C.

Contributing Editors.

W. W. STALEY W. A. HARPER
R. C. HELFENSTEIN S. C. HARRELL

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

NINETEEN-TWENTY-FIVE.

Nineteen hundred and twenty-four years have brought Christianity, and mankind itself, a very long way. Human nature has not changed, but conditions, attitudes and circumstances have so changed that human nature does not, cannot, assert itself as it did when the Christ was yet a Babe in Bethlehem. Crime has not disappeared from the earth; but the pleasure of torture and the delight of inflicting excruciating pain and agony have disappeared from the annals of law and legislative enactment. The day of distress has not passed, but the day of human torture has passed. The day of crime has not passed, but much of that which we now call crime would have been called a mere indiscretion or imprudence, if not a mere pleasant pastime, centuries ago. Nineteen hundred and twenty-four years of the rise and reign of the Nazarene have served to give the whole world a new aspect, and a wholly different outlook on human life.

One only has to go back to ancient days and events to realize how markedly true this observation is. During the holidays, the editor had the time, and indulged the disposition, to spend a few hours with that most marvelous of historians and philosophers, the Roman Tacitus. This pagan writer is explaining why the Roman emperor, Nero, persecuted and tormented the Christians so. Nero had himself been accused of applying the torch that caused Rome's most destructive conflagration. This accusation became so emphatic and pronounced that Nero found it necessary to shift the responsibility of the crime from the throne to some fictitious criminals. The followers of the Christ were chosen to bear the calumny of the accused and accusing tyrant. "With this in view," writes Tacitus, "the emperor Nero inflicted the most exquisite tortures on those men who, under the vulgar appellation of Christians, were already branded with deserved infamy. They derived their name and origin from Christ, who, in the reign of Tiberius, had suffered death by the sentence of the procurator Pontius Pilate. For a while, this dire superstition was checked; but it again burst forth, and not only spread itself over Judaea, the first seat of this mischievous sect, but was even introduced into Rome, the common asylum which receives and protects whatever is impure, whatever is atrocious. The confessions of those who were seized discovered a great multitude of their accomplices, and they were all convicted, not so much for the crime of setting fire to the city as for their hatred of humankind. They died in torments, and their torments were embittered by insult and derision. Some were nailed on crosses; others sewn up in the skins of wild beasts and exposed to the fury of dogs; others again, smeered over with combustible materials, were used as torches to illuminate the darkness of the night. The gardens of Nero were destined for the melancholy spectacle, which was accompanied with a horse-race and honored with the presence of the emperor, who mingled with the populace in the dress and attitude of a charioteer. The guilt of the Christians deserved the most exemplary punishment, but the public abhorrence was changed into commiseration, from the opinion that those unhappy wretches were sacrificed, not so much to the public welfare as to the cruelty of a jealous tyrant."

Again, it may be repeated that Christianity and mankind itself have come a long way since Nero's famous garden illumination and the days when Tacitus, one of Rome's most honored and immortal historians, writing, within a hundred years of the birth of the Christ, could himself speak of Christianity as "a dire superstition."

Nineteen hundred and twenty-four years ago Christianity was the least of all sects, or religions, in numbers or in influence. Today it is the most potent influence and in numbers. Hinduism, originating more than two thousand years B. C., has 217,000,000 followers; Judaism, originating with Abraham, 1500 B. C., has 11,000,000 adherents; Buddhism, originating 560 years B. C., has 137,000,000; Mohammedanism, originating 570 A. D., has 230,000,000 followers; Christianity, originating with Christ, has 557,000,000 adherents. And the increase now is greater year by year. In all human probability, this good year 1925 will witness more deeds done in the name of the Christ, will see more tasks undertaken for the sake of the Christ, and will win more converts to the Christianity of the Christ than any year of all the past. Truly, the prophet was right—"Of his government there shall be no end."

STEWARDSHIP.

The pastor or Sunday School teacher who is not learning and preaching and teaching the truths and lessons of stewardship is certainly missing the meaning of the very plainest and most emphatic truths of the Bible. From Genesis to Revelation, the Book teaches that we are not our own. We only manage, poorly or otherwise, for a season that which another—even God our Creator—has entrusted us with. We brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we shall carry nothing out. To Him, the Creator and Owner of all, we shall give an account of how we managed and handled His while we had it.

In His definition of the unjust steward, Jesus goes to the heart of the whole matter in these words: "If ye have not been faithful in that which is another's, who shall give you that which is your own?" Some one has, with due emphasis, remarked that this teaching was sufficient to show the divine insight and personality of our Lord. For any human teacher would have said: "If ye have not been faithful in that which is your own, who shall give you that which is another's."

We shall have, at the end of 1925, a much stronger, a more powerful, a more devoted and consecrated Christian Church than we now have if our pastors and teachers during the year will lay upon the minds and hearts of the people the burdens, the blessings, and the benefits of stewardship.

Every Christian Church ought to have every member engaged in the holy and divine practice of tithing. Every member of the Christian Church should have the privilege and opportunity, through the every-member canvass and the duplex envelope, of contributing regularly and systematically to the benevolences and expenses of the Church. Every member of the Christian Church should have a working and a living knowledge of the biblical and divine teaching of stewardship. This much at least we should seek to give and to get during the good year of our Lord 1925.

MIRACLES.

Only the fool hath said in his heart there is no such thing as miracles. And why one should wish to discredit, disregard or deny that miracles of our Lord's Christ is strange indeed. One could not ask to witness a greater, a stronger, a more marvelous and mysterious miracle than Christmas itself. No mere man, not even a superman, could have established Christmas. Only the divine Son of God, and He only through a miracle, could have wrought in the world, and before the wondering eyes of mankind, the miracle of Christmas. A Babe born in a manger. (There was no room for Him and His mother in the inn.) There was no wealth, nor prestige, nor kingly power to proclaim Him to the world.

And yet that Child has established in the world the most wonderful holiday ever observed; instilled in the hearts of men the most benevolent and unselfish attitudes and activities than all others coming into the world have instilled. One of the outstanding and living miracles of all times is Christmas.

There are those who say thatt he angel choir did not sing to the shepherds on the Judoean hills. As if the God of Christ did not and could not fill the air with holy song and heavenly melody any and every night, if, and when, he so chooses. The writer of these lines sat in a happy family circle Christmas night last week, in a good Virginia country home, and was thrilled for hours with holy song and heavenly melody as it poured into that home from the air above, around and about. Christmas carols, "Christ, the Hope of the World," "Meditation," Minuett's, "Spirituals" from a dozen orchestras and scores of well-trained choirs and expert singers in New York, Pittsburgh, Springfield, Boston, Chicago, Louisville, Atlanta, filled the room in that good Virginia home, and five million and more other rooms and homes in the United States at that self-same hour.

Miracles! We are witnessing miracles all the time. Only the blind, the ignorant, the fool hath said in his heart there is no miracle. God is good and manifests Himself in unique majesty and might to all who will open their eyes and see, and unstop their own ears and hear.

OUR BROTHERS IN BONDS.

The condition of prisoners has wonderfully improved since our Master, in His home town of Narazeth, announced to His startled neighbors that God had sent Him to bring release to prisoners. The world's attitude then toward prisoners was cruel, harsh, unspeakably cruel and harsh, vindictive in the extreme. The philosophy of the age was that to prevent crime you must make the punishment horrible. Prisons were holes in the ground, and those who endured the rigors of imprisonment were broken in mind and body as a consequence.

But now we have learned a better way—the way of mercy and reformation, the way of Christ. Prisoners are our brothers, in the Christian conception; our brothers in bonds, but our brothers still, and prisons we rightly regard as penitentiaries, as houses for reformation and penitence, and from them our brothers in bonds we expect should return to us restored in spirit as well as restored to freedom and no whit broken in health of body or mind by their imprisonment.

There is in North Carolina a "Citizens' Committee on One Hundred on Prison Legislation." This committee is presenting to the approaching session of the General Assembly a program of prison reform that the heart of Christ undoubtedly rejoices over. It includes thirteen items, as follows:

"1. That it shall be legal for two or more counties to unite in building district jails, and that the substitution of district jails for county jails shall be encouraged to take place as rapidly as possible.

"2. A State-farm colony for women offenders.

"3. The abolition of the county convict camps as such, and State control of all prisoners.

"4. That the State Board of Charities and Public Welfare shall be given power to enforce the rules and regulations already upon the statute books in regard to the care and treatment of county prisoners, and to maintain prescribed standards for county joils and convict camps.

"5. That flogging and confinement in inhuman cells and dungeons as a method of discipline for prisoners shall be prohibited in all prisons, chain gangs, prison camps, or work-houses in the State.

"6. Abolition of the convict lease system for both State and county prisoners.

"7. That a wider use and extension of the honor system in county and State prison camps shall be definitely encouraged.

"8. That at the expiration of the term of the present board of directors of the State prison, there shall be elected by the General Assembly, upon the recommendation of the Governor, five persons who shall constitute the board of directors of the State prison. At the 1925 session of the General Assembly, all five of these members shall be elected, two for a term of two years, and thereafter the term shall be six years for all; provided that the minority party and that both sexes shall always be represented among the appointive members, elections to be by concurrent vote of the General Assembly.

"9. That provisions be made for the establishment of a more adequate system of prison industries in the State prison, which would provide vocational training for such prisoners as are capable of receiving it.

"10. That the board of directors of the State prison shall be authorized to employ one or more psychiatrists or psychologists for the examination and classification of all State prisoners.

"11. Compulsory education for the prisoners in the State prison, and the employment of teachers and instructors for same, said instruction to be during the regular work-hours.

"12. That the present law relating to the membership of the advisory board of parole shall be changed so that it shall be composed of the following members: the superintendent of the State prison, the State commissioner of public welfare, a representative from the State bureau of labor, and the chief of parole of the State Board of Charities and Public Welfare, the last-named member to act as secretary of the board; provided, however, that the secretary of the board shall not have the power to vote.

"13. That the same standards of health and sanitation be maintained in city prisons as are required in county jails."

Christians of every denomination should lose no opportunity to give their representatives in the General Assembly to understand that they approve heartily these measures and that they expect them to be enacted into law at this session. A Christian Commonwealth should have prisons conducted on a Christian basis.

AN APPRECIATION.

Mr. L. J. Fonville, of Burlington, N. C., lived to a ripe old age, and lived nobly throughout his long life. He emphasized and embodied in his living those practical Christian virtues which have always added such charm and loveliness to the Christian profession. Industry, integrity, neighborly spirit, devotion to his family, consecration to the Church and kingdom—these sterling qualities characterized him in his every thought and action, and these are the fundamental qualities of our Christian way as well as of our civilization.

It was as a college boy, in the early nineties, that I first knew Bro. Fonville. He was running the blacksmith shop that was famous in those days for the excellency of its workmanship and the reasonableness of its charges. I talked with him as he worked away on the vehicle I had brought him for repairs. I got the impression from that first interview that here was a man good at heart, whose real business was serving the Lord, though he blacksmithed to make a living; and that impression has not changed during the past twenty-five years and more. He loved to work, and when he had, because of the failure of his health, retired from business, it was his pleasure to have chores aboutt he home and farm that occupied his natively energetic temperament.

Integrity, too, was a marked ingredient of Bro. Fonville's character. His word was his bond. He would not sidestep nor equivocate. You could depend upon him to do exactly what he said, whether in the contract or not. He discharged his voluntary obligations with the same sedulous care and attention as he did those that arose in the normal conduct of his business. To him an obligation was an obligation, and if there were for him any difference in attitude toward his obligations, the integrity of his heart inclined him to give the weightier consideration to his moral obligations. In his estimation, morality outweighed the requirements of the law.

He exemplified the spirit of true neighborliness in all his dealings with his friends. It was his joy to do acts of kindness and to meet cheerfully all the responsibilities of friendship. Those who were closest to him loved him best for this outstanding characteristic of his life. A friend in need is a friend indeed, we say. His friends often recognized him to be such a friend. He rejoiced to be.

In his family circle he shone with all the graces of the Christian father and husband. He thought only of the comfort of his loved ones and labored incessantly to promote their interests and happiness. He had the forward look for his children. It is common now to send sons and daughters to college and university. But when he was educating his children it was not common. He spared no expense of money or sacrifice to give his two sons and two daughters the very best educational equipment to be had. The uses they have made of their culture and training were to him a constant source of pleasure and satisfaction. We never met in his later years but that he made grateful reference to the joy he experienced in giving his children the best thing any father can provide for his offspring—a liberal education in a Christian institution.

And, finally, as an explanation of all the other splendid qualities of his life, Bro. Fonville was consecrated, devoted to the Church and the kingdom of God. His major concern centered in the spiritual life. He delighted to attend the services of the Church. He delighted to support the enterprises of the Church. And he thought it was his privilege and duty to rear up his children to delight in the Church and its enterprises. When his children were ready for college, he could think of nothing except that they should attend Elon, the college of his Church. Elon had no stancher friend than Bro. Fonville. He gave money constantly and liberally to it, and he always praised the college with unstinted praise. It has often been an inspiration to me to come to the services of this Church and find all four of his children in the choir. He could face this Master and quote his Master's words: "Those that Thou gavest me I have kept, and none of them is lost." To rear one's family to love the Church and kingdom and their enterprises is the highest product of the sincere Christian life. Bro. Fonville set this high goal before him. He and his devoted companion wrought harmoniously to that end, and God blessed their efforts with increasing satisfaction of their hopes as the years came and went.

And now we are met to pay the last tribute of respect to our fallen brother; nay, to our promoted brother! We shall see his face no more, but we shall rejoice in the spirit that characterized him and endeavor to embody in our own living the splendid qualities of his devout Christian life. We sorrow now with his loved ones, but we can as truly rejoice with them that a good man, one who loved and served nobly in his day, has gone to that spiritual inheritance which we cherish ere long to enter into and enjoy with him.

Bro. Fonville is survived by his widow and four children—D. R., a trustee of Elon; C. C., and Misses Mamie and Sadie—all four of them students of Elon, and three of them holding degrees from the college. W. A. Harper.

CHURCH IS COMMUNITY CENTER.

Arthur Gleason, writing about California as the most active center of strange new religions, in Hearst's International, described the modern Church "the most perfectly equipped Church in the West," as he found it in Pasadena:

"The Church itself seats 1,700, and the chapel seats 600. With the building for religious education there are 84 rooms for class, club and office use. Large kitchens for the social suppers, a playground, six drinking-fountains, shower baths, eleven pianos, eleven sewing machines, nine telephones, a movie machine, stereopticons, stage properties for dramatics, a stage with footlights and dressing-rooms, and a recreational hall for roller skating and basketball are a few of the items in the equipment."

Envelopes were not in common use until about 1820. In 1825, Lamb mentions the envelope, and in "Harry Lorrequer," published by Charles Lever in 1837, is this quotation: "The waiter entered with a small note in an envelope." It is claimed that envelopes were used in France before they were introduced in England, and there seems to be good ground for the claim. When they first came on the French market, they were very dainty novelties and were made from the most expensive and delicate papers. They were used only by the wealthy and were considered a fad. They were used by the public in England in a limited way between 1830 and 1839.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Leaders are of at least three kinds—self-asserting, elective, natural. The politician is a sample of the first; the statesman, of the second, and Jesus, of the third. Aspiration or an exalted desire to fill a high position is characteristic of the political leader. It no doubt moves men to more thorough preparation for serving others. It has its dangers as well as its opportunities. When it pretends interest, lavishes money to win, uses doubtful methods for promotion, puts self at the center, and hides behind loud professions of love for others, it disqualifies the aspirant for useful service. Such methods are unworthy in the political field, but disgraceful in the Church. Charity "seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil." Personal ambition usually passes the line of aspiration and thinks chiefly of self-interest and self-ends. It is dangerous in the Church, and especially in the ranks of the ministry.

The second, or statesman-leadership, is usually called into position by duly acting constituency. Citizenship or membership see in a man or woman the qualities of leadership and call to position. Eddies of thought start somewhere in society, surround an individual with opinions favorable to promotion, and finally the individual is chosen or elected to lead in Church, State, education, or business. Response to such choice naturally includes preparation to fill the position. This kind of leader is more valuable than the leader who chooses his position, even if he succeeds in winning it. The sense of obligation rests upon the chosen leader more heavily than upon the self-asserting leader; but conditions may exist or arise that there will be no leader unless some one asserts leadership. Sometimes a community—political, educational or religious—may be so indifferent to progress that some one sees an opportunity for promotion and useful service, and steps to the front and makes good. Self-assertion is not always to be condemned nor despised; but where intelligence and aspiration are in the people, it is a finer method of climbing to leadership by choice of others. Leaders in every department of human endeavor are necessary to success. Society can no more make its way without leaders than a ship at sea without a captain. Another thing should be kept in mind—that it is easier to lead men than to drive them. Force never makes men good. If it did, God would force all sinners into His kingdom.

The third kind of leader comes into power as the great river takes its place in the earth. Birth, capacity, education, willing service, modesty, all enter into the natural development of leaders. Jesus found His way to leadership through service. "Though I be free from all men, yet have I made myself servant unto all, that I might gain the more" (1 Cor. 9:19). Again: "Jesus Christ, who, being in the form of God, thought it not robery to be equal with God; but made Himself of no reputation, and took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men. Wherefore, God hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name which is above every name" (Phil. 2:6-9). The leader that comes into place through qualities that are felt by all to be what society needs, can trust and obey, presents to us the leadership that the world needs today. It draws men as naturally as the tree under whose shade men rest from heat.

W. W. Staley.

ELON LETTER.

Two young fellows have just gone out of the office in high spirits. They had abandoned hope of returning to college after Christmas because of poverty. They are excellent students, averaging around 90 each, genteel, well behaved, without handicapping personal habits. After a conference, a way was found whereby they could return. The smiles on their faces were an inspiration. The Christian Church wants such men as these to have a chance. That is one reason why Elon is poor.

The colleges of the land get their income for operating expenses from three sources—student fees, endowment, and annual donations. Each of these sources is expected to supply, in round numbers, about one-third of the income. According to these standards, which the experts say, and rightly say, should be the financial policy of a college able to serve its constituency with the best results, Elon's endowment should produce $30,000 annually, and there should be annual gifts of $30,000 more; or if both are to be capitalized, the college should have at least a million dollars of endowment. It has slightly more than $400,000 of endowment, and the annual gifts for current expenses never exceed $10,000. And here is a second reason why Elon is poor.

The college is not able to pay its professors and other servants the salaries they are entitled to have, that they should have to do their best work. The Church does not appreciate the sacrifices these men and women are making in order to maintain a college for our people, but her Master understands and will no doubt reward. That our faculty and administrators are willing to continue to make such sacrifice, is all the greater reason why the Church should, as speedily as possible, render its further continuance unnecessary.

The Christian Church is proud of Elon, is devoted to Elon, but the Christian Church must sacrifice more for Elon than ever she has. The day is upon us when this must be done. Here is believing she will do it! I have faith in the Christian Church.

W. A. Harper.

BETHLEHEM LETTER.

Since the writing of our last letter, we attended the quadrennial meeting of the Federal Council of Churches, at Atlanta, Ga. At this gathering were great men and women from all points of the compass out of about thirty of the leading Christian denominations.

They came together on one common basis to consider some of the leading problems which the Church is facing in the religious, political and social world. Some of the outstanding speakers were Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer, Bishop William F. McDowell, Dr. James I. Vance, Justice Florence E. Allen, of Ohio, the first woman to be elected to a court of final appeal; Governor William E. Sweet, of Colorado; Dr. Adolf Keller, of Zurich, Switzerland; Dr. Robert E. Speer, Hon. Wm. Jennings Bryan, Prof. James T. Shotwell, of Columbia University, and others. Of our own denomination, there were in attendance Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Dr. F. G. Coffin, Dr. J. F. Burnett, Dr. W. H. Denison, Dr. O. S. Thomas, Dr. W. P. Minton, Dr. Martin Summerbell, Dr. L. E. Smith, and Dr. W. W. Staley.

The general theme, "The Church in the World," was discussed under different heads—"The Need of the World for the Church of Christ," "The Church Universal the Hope for World Peace," "Training the Youth for Christ," "Winning Men to Christ," "The Call to Personal Religion," "Christianizing Our Social Life," "The Challenge of the Rural Community to the Church," "The Spiritual Significance of Church Co-operation," "Loyalty to Christ," "Christianizing the Nations," "Christianizing Our Race Relations," "Christ, the One Hope of the World," "The Duty of the Church in Outlawing War," "Personal Religion and Public Righteousness," "How can Co-operation and Fellowship be Increased among the Churches," "The Source of Power in the Church."

Through these years, the Christian Church has led the way to religious liberty and Christian unity. Through the Federal Council of Churches in America, which is the clearing-house for twenty-nine denominations, of which we are a part, the religious life of America is unconsciously drifting into that life which our cardinal principles have set forth since our inception. Under the auspices of the Federal Council, a new type of Christianity will be produced. This interdenominational agency, through its various organizations, spreading information for promoting Church activities, meeting the greatest need of today in the dissemination of Christian knowledge, cannot do otherwise than result in the greatest good to the universal Church in the spread of Christianity. Since the Reformation, there has not been a wider interest in religion than today. Millions, who had no concern about it ten years ago, are thinking deeply along religious lines today. A Christian nation needs Christian knowledge, and it is acquiring it largely through information from the Federal Council of Churches.

We are just awakening to the vast expansion that Christianity has made, and the demands that this new increment of communicants is making for new Christian knowledge. During the nineteenth century Christianity increased more than it did in all the eighteen before. Today we have grown to 190,000 clergymen, 29,000,000 communicants, and 12,000,000 Sunday School scholars. There were 710 religious books published by American publishers in 1923. This, with many other religious books, would constitute a practical library on Christianity; but it is a library beyond the means of most of us, but most of the knowledge which is forthcoming from the council and is vital to the denominations is free for the asking. The United States is now the center of gravity of Protestant Christendom as represented by the various denominations, and henceforth their highest medium for communication of truth will be through their Federal Council.

S. L. Beougher.

Wadley, Ala.

RESURVEY OF ISSUES BY THE HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION.

If the War Between the States meant the preservation of the white race, then there was no "lost cause." This was the declaration of Franklin L. Riley, of Washington and Lee University, in addressing a meeting devoted to "The Confederacy, its Leaders, and its Problems—a Resurvey," in the auditorium of the Jefferson Hotel.

The session was a feature of the first day's program of the American Historical Association, the convention of which is attended by about 500 distinguished historians. The address of Mr. Riley was one of the important events of the day.

"Secession was lost," the speaker declared; "but secession was not the cause of the South. We resorted to secession to protect our cause," he explained.

"Slavery was lost, but slavery was not our cause, though we once thought so, believing that the freedom of the negro would mean the downfall of the white man's supremacy and integrity."

No Fear of Animosity.

The chairman stated in the beginning of the program that the "resurvey" was planned without fear of arousing animosity, without fear of sectionalism, and that no provision had been made to have weapons checked at the door.

"The Problem of Morale in the Confederacy" was discussed by Charles W. Ramsdell, of the University of Texas. The very principle on which the Confederacy was founded, namely, States' rights, was the cause of its downfall, in the opinion of Frank L. Owsley, of Vanderbilt University, who spoke on "States' Rights and the Breakdown of the Confederacy." Refusal to assist the Confederate army, in favor of local defense, and the withholding of arms from general service for State organizations, was the chief reason for the breakdown of the South, the speaker declared.

Failed to Grasp Situation.

"State Governors were so afraid of local attack, so filled with local patriotism, that they failed to see that general defense was necessary for the promotion of their cause," Mr. Owsley declared. "Had the Confederate resources been illimitable, or had the South had access to foreign supplies, the effect of her individualistic policy might not have been so serious," he said.

Alfred P. James, of the University of Illinois, presented a comprehensive survey of the life of General Joseph Eggleston Johnston.

"Reward of the Blockade Runner," was the subject of A. Sellew Roberts, of the University of Illinois, while Roy F. Nichols, of Columbia, spoke on "The United States vs. Jefferson Davis, 1865-69."

Distinguished Educators Attend.

Distinguished educators from England, Scotland and Wales, as well as from all parts of this country, were among those attending the various meetings offered on the program. Besides the literary and historical meetings held on Saturday, the day's activities were featured by several social affairs.

William F. Edgerton, of the University of Louisville, was chairman of the ancient history group, which met Saturday from 10 o'clock to noon, in the first committee room of the Jefferson. The speakers and their subjects were: Allen B. West, of Wheaton College, "The Aristidean Tribute in the Assessment of 421 B. C."; Susan H. Ballou, of Bryn Mawr College, "Women in Industrial Life in Ptolemaic and Roman Egypt"; M. Rostovtzeff, of the University of Wisconsin, "Augustus as Reflected in the Monuments of Art of His period," and Herbert Wing, Jr., of Dickinson College, "Athenian History from Sulla to Arcadius."

William K. Boyd, of Trinity College, was the chairman of the colleges and historical investigation group, which met Saturday morning at the same time. The speakers and their subjects were: William K. Boyd, "The Aim and Purpose of the Committee on Historical Investigation in Colleges"; E. Merton Coulter, University of Georgia, "Collecting Historical Material"; W. W. Sweat, of DePauw University, "Pertinent Fields for Research in the Colleges." A discussion was conducted by J. F. Jameson, of Carnegie Institution; Marcus W. Jernegan, of the University of Chicago; William E. Dodd, of the University of Chicago.

The English history group met in the Flemish room, with Arthur Lyon Cross, of the University of Michigan, as its chairman. Mary Hayden, of the University College, Dublin, spoke on "Perkin Warbeck"; A. F. Pollard, F. B. A., University College, University of London, spoke on "Some Unexplored Fields in English Constitutional History"; J. H. Clapham, C. B. E., of King's College, Cambridge, spoke on "The Housing Question in Great Britain a Century Ago"; W. T. Laprade, of Trinity College, N. C., spoke on "The Growth of National Consciousness in England."

Among the distinguished men and women who attended the convention were Chas. M. Andrews, acting president of the American Historical Association, of Yale University; Sir Richard Lodge, of Edinburgh, Scotland; C. R. Webster, of Wales; Miss Mary T. Hayden, of Ireland; Frederick O. Powicke, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Pollard, Herbert Butterfield, and J. R. M. Butler, of England; St. George L. Sioussat, of the University of Pennsylvania; T. Stringfellow Barr, of the University of Virginia; Andrew L. Neff, of Salt Lake City; Oscar D. Koreff, of Pittsburgh; Dana C. Munro, of Princeton, N. J., and Waldo G. Leland, of Washington, D. C.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The Illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the Number and prices.

TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Minion Bold-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4 7-8x 7 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

India Paper Edition, Size 4 7-8x7 Inches, 1 1-10 Inches Thick.

2152X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$6.00

Bourgeois Type, Size 5 3-8x8 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2167—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.00

2172—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.50

India Paper Edition, Only 1 1-8 Inches Thick.

2172X—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$8.50

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3¾x5⅝ inches, and 1 inch thick; with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black.

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations. Special book for Sunday Schools 95c

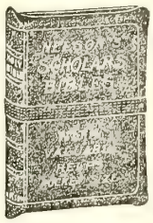
Ruby Type, Size 3¾x5⅝ Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps $2.50

Minion Type, Pocket Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ inches Thick.

With 32 full-colored illustrations; also 25 outline maps through the text and 12 colored maps.

133—Bound in cloth, round corners, red edges, title stamped on side in pure gold $1.60



135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 15-16 of an Inch Thick.

135X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.75

Minion Black-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4¾x 7 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick.

Printed from clear, large, black-face type, 32 full-page illustrations in Sepia and colors, 4,000 Questions and Answers, Harmony of the Gospels, How to Study the Sunday School Lesson, 25 outline Maps, 12 full-page colored Maps.

4152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold.....$3.25

TEXT BIBLES—AMERICAN STANDARD VERSION.

Printed from Easy-Reading Type, on Good Bible Paper, for Sunday School and Church Use.

Minion Type, Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick, 25 Outline Maps, Bound in Black.

101—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, title stamped on back in pure gold..$1.10

112—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title on back in pure gold $2.75

India Paper Edition, Only 7/8-Inch Thick.

112X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

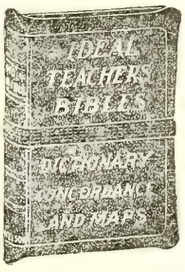
Reference and Text Bibles also in minion, brevier, bourgeois, long primer, pica and English type.

Thumb index cut on edge, 50c extra; name printed on any Bible in gold, 40c extra; extra wording, 40c per line.

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (v vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3-8x 8 1-2 Inches and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

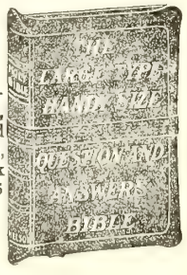


Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With concise Bible dictionary, combined concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.75

RED LETTER EDITION

With all the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.



1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands, title stamped on side and back in pure gold $3.25

Any of the above Bibles sent post paid. Address

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street, - - - Richmond, Va.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

Warren H. Denison, Secretary.

"The Bureau of Christian Stewardship and Promotion" is the official title chosen by the General Board of the Church as the successor both to the Forward Movement and the Department of Stewardship, Promotion and Social Service. Do you not like the new name of the organization which is to carry on the work already done under these former organizations? The work of the bureau is to continue the work and activities of these former organizations or movements, and its field of activities will cover such matters as collecting outstanding Forward Movement subscriptions, securing the renewal or continuation pledges to carry on the work begun by the Forward Movement and to promote activities along the following important lines: Christian stewardship, the every-member canvass, the Church budget, the weekly offering, the duplex envelope, the enlistment of tithers, better Church and Conference organization, improved Church and Conference financial plans, stewardship programs, improved methods of Church work, developing the local Churches in stewardship principles and practices.

This bureau wishes to be of service in every way possible in promoting and developing the work of the Christian Church in every way possible along stewardship, organizational, methods, and financial lines. The writer has been elected as secretary of the bureau, and Mr. J. O. Winters, who has served so efficiently as treasurer of the Forward Movement, has been elected its treasurer. This bureau wishes to be of service to all the interests of the Christians as we begin the New Year of 1925. The personal collection financial system is probably the poorest financial system to be found in any Church anywhere—the system of personally paying the preacher. Those who make promises will meet the preacher and hand him some money as one would tip a Pullman porter. In reality, the pastor becomes the collector of his own salary, and if any benevolences are raised, the pastor raises them the same way, by personally receiving individual gifts.

Some Churches improve slightly on this by the treasurer or some one going around from one to four times a year to collect these pledges. It is a disagreeable job, and is usually put off as long as possible. This is one of the reasons that the financial side of the Church life in some Churches is so distasteful, when it should be one of the most pleasant, worshipful, enjoyable features. Such Churches usually do very little for the benevolences of the Church. Such Churches and pastors fail in every way to train and develop their people. I know Churches, and almost entire Conferences, that are just dying because of such methods. In some such Churches anything, even a hat, sometimes serves as the collection plate when offerings are taken in the Church. Usually the officers give such a small amount for the benevolent work of the Church that they do not expect the people to give scarcely anything. From such Churches the whole offering is $1.76 or $2.47 or $3.17, when under approved systems, various individuals should be giving ten or twenty dollars. It should ever be borne in mind that the Church calls the pastor. Individuals do not. So the Church ought to pay the pastor. The pastor should never be under obligation to any individual of the Church. He should not handle the money of the Church. He should receive his salary from the Church treasurer, and not from individuals. The pastor, through his finance department, should be training and developing his whole people—men, women and children—in the great truths and joys of Christian stewardship and in the use of the best financial plans.

SHALL THE CHURCH OF CHRIST ADVANCE?

By Rev. Arthur J. Brown, D. D.

God is summoning us to go forward. Thirty years ago we prayed for open doors. God has answered that prayer, and now we must pray Him to make the Church willing to enter them. The situation is unprecedented. Nations are plastic. Former hostility to missionaries has largely disappeared. Everywhere people are ready to listen to the gospel. In many fields, chapels, schools and Churches are crowded. It is heartbreaking to turn away inquirers who, if there were room for them, might be brought to Christ. The opportunity is imperial and imperious, and such opportunity means obligation. What we can do for God we ought to do. We do not need to wait for a more favorable time. "Say not ye, there are yet four months and then cometh the harvest. Behold, I say unto you, lift up your eyes and look on the fields, that they are white already unto harvest." Shall Christ wait to see of the travail of His soul for those who will die because His disciples are attending to other things? Behold, now is the day of salvation.

Every consideration of enlightened statesmanship calls upon the Church to advance along the whole line. Said a letter from Japan: "This is the greatest day ever in Japan. There never was such an opportunity to preach and minister to the people." Said a letter from Persia: "Our responsibility is thirty million souls. How, with so limited a force, is the mission to maintain its work? On all sides we see great opportunities, yet are powerless to embrace them." It is wonderful that there are nearly half a million Christians in China, but there are 438,000,000 people there. From India comes the cry: "Millions are yet unevangelized in the territories for which our missionaries are responsible, and are totally inadequate." Said another letter of a single station: "Publish it! Shout it from the housetops! 2,500 villages to be visited; in all of them Christians to be shepherded and 6,000 Christian boys and girls to be educated. Open thou, O Lord, the eyes of the young people of America, burden their hearts, till they come over to help us rescue the lovable boys and girls of India from the slough of ignorance and sin in which they are sunk, till they cannot rest for the cries of these children going up before the throne day and night."

What shall be said of the soldiers of the cross who form the thin red line of the Church of God at the front; little groups of men and women, scantily equipped, in unhealthy climates, often in the midst of war, pestilence or famine, hardly a week in which some of them do not stand face to face with death; but quietly, patiently, month after month and year after year, going on with their work with fortitude undaunted, with devotion superb, witnessing for the gospel of the Son of God. "Why don't you call those imperilled missionaries home?" people sometimes ask. If we did call them, they would not come. When a British admiral offered the protection of his ships of war to some beleaguered missionaries years ago, they told him that their stations were their posts of duty, and that they could not leave the native Christians to be scattered and their schools and hospitals to be destroyed. The admiral took off his cap and said: "Ladies and gentlemen, your courage is magnificent. Men have been given the Victoria Cross for less heroism than yours."

As we read letters which come from workers stationed at the ends of the earth, strange scenes rise to our vision. We see missionaries on the teeming plains of China, in the numberless villages of India, by the rivers of Siam, in the jungles of Africa, on the uplands of Persia, in the valleys of Korea and Japan, in the islands of the Philippines, in the vast spaces of Latin-America; using every conveyance known to the non-Christian world—by cart and chair and litter, by canoe and sailboat and launch, by pony and camel and elephant, sometimes by bicycle and automobile, but often on foot, weary and footsore; in heat and cold, in dust and mud, in drenching storm and blazing sun, but everywhere and always beseeching men in Christ's stead to be reconciled to God.

The world waits for the gospel of which such missionaries are ambassadors. Never has it needed it so urgently as now. The race is in commotion. Turkey is again arrogant. India is seething with unrest. China is in chaos. Japan has been smitten by appalling calamity. Koreans and Filippinos are demanding independence. In Europe, men are talking about the next war and preparing for it. Everywhere peoples are in transition. The old is passing. What is to be the new?

Evil influences are intensifying the danger. Moving-picture films that are so unclean that they cannot be profitably shown in America are shipped to Asia where they are freely exhibited. A single steamship is reported to have taken from San Francisco to Japan 1,150 barrels of wine. Morphine seized in Shanghai was manufactured in Philadelphia. The law forbids shipment from America to China, but not to Japan. In two years and nine months, New York dealers sent three and a half tons of morphine and five tons of cocaine to Japan, there to be reshipped to China through Japanese post-offices, over which the Chinese have no jurisdiction. As a traveler in Asia sees the evidences of vices from alleged Christian nations, he wonders whether the closer contacts of the East and the West are further to debauch the East. They surely will unless they are overcome by a more vigorous propagation of Christianity. America and Europe have taught Asiatics to kill one another more scientifically than ever before. They have taught them the use of machine guns, airships and poison gas. Shall they not give them the uplifting and purifying word of God with its gospel of the Prince of peace?

Under the combined impact of forces good and bad that are pouring into non-Christian lands, the old civilizations are crumbling and the ethnic religions are decaying. What few moral restraints they ever had have been weakened. The whole structure of Asiatic life is tottering. What is to take its place?

"The rudiments of empire here
Are plastic yet and warm;
The chaos of a mighty world
Is rounding into form."

One thinks of the majestic words of Isaiah: "The noise of a multitude in the mountains, like as of a great people; a tumultous noise of the kingdoms of nations gathered together; the Lord of Hosts mustereth the host of the battle."

The Duty of the Church.

What is the duty of the Church of God? We turn for instruction to our Lord. In the 24th chapter of St. Matthew's gospel, He plainly warned His disciples of coming wars and tribulation and false prophets and abounding iniquity; but, so far from advising inaction on that account, He declared that these very conditions made it all the more urgent that "this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world." That is the divine program for a distracted earth. The defects from which the world is suffering are not defects of knowledge, but of conscience. Man's material appliances have developed faster than his moral character. "There is no political alchemy," said Herbert Spencer, "by which you can get golden conduct out of leaden motives." Dwight L. Moody said about the same thing, less elegantly, but more forcibly: "If you want good water, it it not enough to paint the pump, you must clean out the well." Only God can do that. For this, Christ came. "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." Science, philosophy, militarism, politics, secular education—all have failed. The only hope lies in the acceptance of the gospel for whose world extension the foreign missionary enterprise exists. There never will be a better world until there are better people in it, and there will never be better people in it until they conform their lives to the teaching of Christ. The missionary enterprise stands for this. It stands for human brotherhood; for the international mind in religion; for emancipation from the narrow and provincial into the wide spaces of the kingdom of God: for the world-wide sway of Christ; for utter allegiance to Him as King of kings and Lord of lords.

Some allege that the world program of Christ is impossible. But what is the Church for if it cannot be the agency of God for doing what man alone cannot do? Inspiring are the words of revelation: "He is able"; "able to save unto the uttermost"; "able even to subdue all things unto Himself"; "able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think." Let Christians of all men reject the heresy that what Christ laid upon His Church cannot be done. Nothing that is right is impossible. What God tells us to do, we, by the grace of God, can do and should do. Instead of hesitating, let us say with Shakespeare:

"Now let me run,
And I will strive with things impossible;
Yea, get the better of them."

"Human crimes," said Thomas Carlyle, "are many; but the crime of being deaf to God's voice, the crime of being blind to everything but parchments and antiquarian rubrics when the handwriting of God is abroad on the sky, there is none other crime than this that the gods do more utterly avenge." This is no time for a small or timid program. It is time for consecrated effort, for sacrificial giving, for catholicity of spirit, for statesmanship of planning, a time for the splendor of a mighty faith. "If the Church ever intends to vindicate its name among men as the champion of a pure religion of heavenly power, now is the time when it must move forward with consecration surpassing all it has shown before. Now is the hour for sacrifice, for devotion that costs, for fidelities unflinching and unlimited. The reason why the knowledge of the Lord must cover the earth as the waters cover the sea, is now evident as never before. Nothing less than literal saturation with religion will save the world."

This is our splendid task, to exalt the Lord of life above the jarring passions of men, to make His will supreme. We must write His name large across the sky of the world. We must make His voice the undertone of human life. We summon the Church in the ringing words of Charles Hoyt:

"Is this a time, O Church of Christ, to sound retreat?
To arm, with weapons cheap and blunt,
The men and women who have borne the brunt
Of truth's fierce strife, and nobly help their ground?
Is this the time to halt, when all around
Horisons lift, new destinies confront?
No, rather strengthen stakes and lengthen cords,
Enlarge thy plans and gifts, O thou elect;
And to thy kingdom come for such a time.
The earth, with all its fullness, is the Lord's.
Great things attempt for Him, great things expect,
Whose love imperial is, whose power sublime!"

—In Missionary Review of the World.

TWELVE INTERNATIONAL MOVEMENTS.

By Rev. R. F. Brown, M. A.

II. PROHIBITION—A WORLD NECESSITY AND POSSIBILITY.

One of the greatest movements in personal life or organized society is the great prohibitive movement known as prohibition, which is social, ethical, moral and spiritual in its bearing upon life and involves many phases of business, government and religion. It is perfectly clear that the impetus of the method and message of prohibition has brought about the crystallization of sentiment for the observance—with special reference to the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act—which is vital to civilization. It is also evident that the work of the prohibition forces of America is responsible for an achievement which is nothing less than marvelous and which will eventually prove to be a vitalizing force in every nation under the sun.

The eighteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States is now constitutional law. It is as much a part of the Constitution as is the first amendment. There is a movement on foot to nullify the eighteenth amendment because it prohibits the manufacture, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof, for beverage purposes. But this law is so completely in harmony with the social, ethical, moral, commercial and spiritual impulses of the American people that it can be nullified just about as easily as the law of gravitation can be nullified. Of course, the law is violated, but he who violates the law of gravitation does not nullify it. But it is evident that the person who violatse the law would be glad to have it nullified in order that he might not suffer the consequences of his violation. Such a course would be in perfect harmony with his nature. However, such persons are hopelessly in the minority with the frightful fact of diminishing returns constantly facing them.

The prohibition movement did not spring up overnight. It is the fruitage of a hundred years of work, prayer, agitation, organization, education and legislation. It is the crystalized result of public opinion, which, in the last analysis, is the basic principle in a democracy. The prohibition movement, which is the greatest experiment of this nation, went the rounds in the Senate and House of Representatives, finding expression in a resolution which was adopted by the Senate August 1, 1917, and by the House December 17, 1917. It was then submitted to the Legislatures of the several States for ratification. By January 16, 1919, thirty-six of the forty-eight States had ratified the amendment and was then proclaimed by the Secretary of State, and thus became an integral part of our Constitution one year later. The House adopted the amendment by a vote of 282 to 28, and the Senate by a vote of 65 to 20. A little later ten other States ratified the amendment, making a total of forty-six States to ratify. The total vote in the lower houses of the State Legislatures ratifying the amendment was 3,788 votes for it and 1,035 votes against it, or 75.5 per cent affirmative. The total votes in the Senates of the respective Legislatures was 1,310 for it, and 237 against it, or 84.6 per cent affirmative. I recite these figures to remind the reader that the amendment is the expression of the will of the people of America. It is crystalized public opinion. This is perfectly clear, by reason of the fact that the forty-six States ratifying the amendment represent 98.2 per cent of the people of America. In the face of thes facts, who can truthfully say that the prohibition amendment does not represent the will of the people? The proposition does not justify further argument on that point.

The sanctity and worthwhileness of this law are beyond question. If in our present form of democracy we accept law as the crystalized sentiment and public opinion of the majority, and if sentiment and personal opinion are held as sacred possessions, it follows then that there is a certain sanctity of the law which must be guarded. The sentiments of the American people, or any people, are valuable, and they determine the contents of statutory law. If we are to maintain our democracy, the minority must submit to the will of the majority. Disregard for the crystalized will of the majority is the first step toward anarchy. Yet, in the face of this fact, we have in this country hundreds of men who will violate any law ever written into the Constitution if that law proposes to control their conduct and regulate their business. These people will not only violate the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act—which is simply the machinery for the enforcement of the amendment—but they will violate any law that is calculated to intercept their nefarious business or run counter to their will. And just because there are certain people in this country who continue to violate the law, the argument is current that the law should be nullified or amended. But this worthwhile public opinion which has found expression in the eighteenth amendment, and these fine sentiments which have found expression in the statutory provision, which is the only safeguard to the amendment, will never be nullified or modified in order that the violator may continue to make and sell and buy and drink whiskey with perfect impunity. Neither will the law be modified so that the people may make and drink light wines. Such an act would aggravate the trouble. If the violators cannot be brought to justice under the existing law, which gives the officers all the authority they need, how can the violators be brought to justice under a modified law? The absurdity of such an argument is seen without effort.

It is really surprising how some good people are being deceived into thinking that it is absolutely necessary to modify or nullify the prohibition law in order to save the sanctity of the law. It is also beyond comprehension how some people bemoan the violation of the prohibition law and at the same time advocate the modification of the law so that the violation may be less difficult and punishment less possible. Such people, although they may not know it, are classed with the lawless in their demand that the law be modified, and that the only way to preserve the sanctity of the law is to amend it to suit their needs. There are many people who seem to forget that the sanctity of the law is essential to the morality of the nation. Just as a nation cannot exist half-slave and half-free, so a nation cannot exist half-drunk and half-sober, helf-lawful and half-lawless. And to raise the question as to the possibility of enforcing the prohibition law is to breed lawlessness and crime. Every law must be enforced,

(Continued on Page 14.)

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

January 11, 1925.

Subject: "The Last Judgment."—Matt. 25: 31-46.

Golden Text: "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these my brethren, even these least, ye did it unto me."—Matt. 25:40.

Devotional Reading: Eccl. 12:1-8, 13, 14.

Reference Material: Matt. 16:27; Luke 4: 16-22.

Topic: "Christ's Picture of the Judgment."

Home Readings: Mon., The last judgment—Matt. 25:31-46. Tues., The basis of divine judgment—Rom. 2:6-16. Wed., Judgment of the Son—John 5:21-29. Thurs., The certainty of judgment—Acts 17:24-31. Fri., Await the judgment with courage—2 Cor. 5:5-10. Sat., Examples of judgment—Jude 11:22. Sun., The whole duty of man—Eccl. 12:1-8, 13, 14.

Introduction.—The judgment here spoken of is to be distinguished from the judgment of the great white throne, spoken of in Rev. 20:11-15. Here, there is no resurrection; the persons judged are living nations; no books are opened. There are three classes present, represented as the sheep, the goats and the brethren; the time is at the return of Christ (V. 31), and the scene is on the earth.

The Lesson Notes.—The test of this judgment is the treatment accorded by the nations to those whom Christ here calls "my brethren." (Vs. 31, 32.)

The righteous are represented by the sheep, and the unrighteous by the goats. (V. 33.)

Christ the King shall say unto those on the right hand, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." He tells why: "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these least, ye did it unto me." Vs. 34-36.)

To those on the left hand, He says, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into the eternal fire which is prepared for the devil and his angels." (Read V. 45.) (Vs. 41-46.)

Mount of Olives.—Lying on the east side of Jerusalem, from which it is separated by the valley of Jehosaphat, this mountain takes its name from the groves of olive trees which once stood on its western slope, but now have in great part disappeared. Here it was that our Lord wept over Jerusalem. At the foot of the hill is the Garden of Gethsemane; and, too, from this mount our Lord, having led His disciples out near Bethany, and after having blessed them, He ascended into heaven. On the summit is now the Church of the Ascension, built originally by St. Helen in the year 325 A. D. On the slope the multitude found the palm branches when going to meet Christ. Jesus having left the temple, where He had been speaking, proceeded to the Mount of Olives, and there delivered the discourses following, the last of which is our study.

Preceding Discourses Confirmed.—In order more fully to explain and confirm the foregoing representations, our Lord next spoke one of the most interesting and sublime discourses met with even in the Holy Scriptures, and it is wonderful that any person can read it and yet suppose the speaker to be no more than man. There is in it such a divine authority and dignity as could never have, with propriety, been assumed by any mere creature, however exalted.

The Righteous.—Then the "King" of the whole world, as our Lord on this occasion called Himself, will address the company on His right hand as the "blessed of His Father"; His chosen and beloved children, who are to be blessed for evermore. He calls them to "come to Him," that they may behold and share His glory. He makes known their good works as the effect of their faith and love. They had given Him meat when He was hungry, and drink when He was thirsty; when sick, they had visited Him. The righteous enquire when they had thus ministered to His needs; for they were not conscious of having done this service, to which the King will answer, "Inas much as ye did it unto one of these, my brethren, even these least, ye did it unto me."

The Unrighteous.—On the other hand, He declares that He will say to those on His left hand as "cursed," lying under the curse of a broken law, strangers to the blessings of the gospel, and justly deserving of the final wrath of God, to "depart from Him." For so close is the union betwixt Christ and His members that He looks upon the favors conferred on them as done to Himself, and promises accordingly a reward to them.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

January 11, 1925.

Senior Topic: "How to Read the Bible Helpfully."—Ps. 19:7-14; Matt. 7:24-29.

Intermediate Topic: "What Made David a Great Man?"—Ps. 40:1-8.

Junior Topic: "Radio Messages with God."—Matt. 3:13-17; 1 Thess. 5:17.

Each of the world's peoples have their own standards of modesty. Chinese women wear trousers and believe the skirt immodest. Certain Mohammedan women of the Sahara region will tear off their last garment to cover their faces upon the approach of a stranger. The Breton maiden wears a close-fitting hat to prevent her hair from showing.

C. F. Braden, of Eola, Texas, is authority for the statement that turkeys will not eat corn when they can obtain haws, grapes, acorns and other wild fruits and bugs. Mr. Braden raises hundreds of turkeys for the market that never saw corn, wheat, barley or other grain, but grew and fattened on weeds and bugs.

As the sun sinks to the horizon, its rays strike us on the slant shining through myriads of particles of dust and water vapor, breaking them into their component parts and coloring them. This makes for sunsets of brilliant coloring.

The menace to navigation comes not so much from the brilliant ice peaks of the iceberg that are visible for miles, as it does from the great bulk that extends below the surface of the water. Seven-eighths of an iceberg is submerged.

PLEASANT HILL CHURCH.

The Pleasant Hill Christian Church and Sunday School observed white Christmas on December 21st, at 7 P. M. The pageant, "The Shepherd's Vision," was rendered in a most effective manner by several members of the Sunday School. A threefold appeal was made in the pageant—the appeal for the gift of self, service and substance. One hundred and fifty people signed service cards, agreeing to do whatever they can in the service of the Church and the kingdom, there being five young ladies who signed up as life-work recruits. Four of these young ladies will go to the foreign field if the Lord opens the way, and one of them will do missionary work in the home land. In addition to this, there were two boys twelve years old who gave themselves to Christ and joined the Church at the conclusion of the program. The third appeal was for substance, and the people responded with about $60 in cash. This money was given to our Orphanage at Elon College.

Such programs are very fitting at this season of the year. The emphasis is placed on giving instead of receiving, and our people entered into it with great enthusiasm. They got more real joy out of this service than they could have experienced had they been the recipients of many gifts. It does people good to cease thinking of themselves for a while and think in terms of others and their need. This program was distinctly worth while and prepared our people in a very fine way for the season which commemorates the birth of our Christ. It also inspired a greater desire to serve in an unselfish way. We are expecting great things from these five bright young ladies who are offering themselves for Christian work, and there are great possibilities in the lives of these two young boys who gave themselves to Christ and joined the Church.

R. F. Brown, Pastor.

SECRETARY MELLON PLEASED.

The Treasury has been "successfully relieved of excessively heavy financing" for next March by its recent fiscal operation, Secretary Mellon declared in a formal statement, in which it was disclosed that the total issue of new bonds in the December program has been something over $750,000,000.

While the new issue of twenty to thirty-year 4 per cent bonds primarily was for refunding purposes, the Treasury sought and obtained in excess of $220,000,000 in cash. The remainder of the issue of new bonds was taken up in refunding early maturing securities, including third Liberty loan 4 1-4 per cent bonds, Treasury notes of 1925, and certificates of indebtedness maturing next March 15th. With the cash obtained from the sale of the new bonds, together with the December 15th tax payments, the Treasury will be able to meet all requirements until March, when another fiscal operation is due.

As was expected, the bulk of the refunding accomplished with the new issue was made up of Treasury notes and certificates of indebtedness. From these two kinds of paper, some $435,000,000 was turned in exchange for the new bonds. The Treasury was gratified that almost $100,000,000 of the third Liberties were offered in exchange.

The secretary's statement also brought out that a saving of more than $550,000 in interest would be accomplished in the next three months, or the time in which the maturing securities had yet to run because of the lower rate of interest on the new bonds.

Christian Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

List of things sent in since last report: Greensboro Church, white gifts; Woman's Missionary Society, Holland, Va., goods for dress, buttons, thread and trimmings; Former Student, 90 lbs. candy; Rose Hill Missionary Society, Columbus, Ga., 1 box; Young People's Society, Dover, Del., 4 sweaters; Mrs. E. J. Brickhouse, Norfolk, Va., Christmas cards for all children; Christian Church, Cragford, Ala., 1 box; Live Wire S. S. Class, Arthur, Ill., 12 aprons; Aunt Susie Wicker, Sanford, N. C., 1 quilt; Mrs. Walter Seeley, Wakefield, Va., 3 caps; Norfolk, Va., 1 box books; Woman's Bible Class, Haw River, 1 pail candy, 2 1-4 gal. cans fruit; Live Wire S. S. Class, Winchester, Va., 1 box candy; J. D. Howard, Norfolk, Va., 50 lbs. candy; Sellars & Sons, Burlington, N. C., 2 boxes of coats, sweaters, suits, etc.; Concord Church, Va. Val. Central Con., 153 1-2 gal. cans. of fruit; Elmira Cotton Mills, Burlington, N. C., 100 yds. gingham; Hines Chapel Church, 2 boxes oranges, 1 bbl. apples, 10 lbs. walnuts, 20 lbs. Brazil nuts, 7 cans fruit, 4 lbs. honey, 6 chickens, 1 pkg. peanuts, 4 1-2 bu. potatoes, 1 pumpkin, 1 lb. coffee.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR JANUARY 1, 1925.

Amount brought forward		$21,848.07
Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
North Carolina Conference:
Auburn	$ 4.50
Danville, Third Avenue	3.77
Reidsville	6.59
Pleasant Hill (A)	2.95
		17.81
Eastern Virginia Conference:
Wakefield	$ 3.56
Dendron	17.54
Antioch	4.00
Union, Surry	3.00
		28.10
Georgia and Alabama Conference:
Bethany	$ 1.45
N. Highlands	1.17
Mt. Zion	1.08
		3.70
Thanksgiving Offerings.
Mr. & Mrs. H. B. Parsons, Ky.	$ 10.00
Berea, Ea. Va.	20.00
Concord, Val. Va.	7.69
Seagrove, N. C.	5.10
Mrs. F. M. Wright, Asheboro, N. C.	5.00
B. D. Jones, payment on pledge	20.00
Dendron, Ea. Va.	22.00
Twiddy Bible Class, Norfolk, Va.	23.00
Rosemont Miss. Socy., Va.	5.00
Hopedale, N. C.	6.00
Birdie, Alice, Nannie, Sallie Wilson	2.00
Mrs. G. S. Watson	1.00
Antioch, Va.	16.00
Wentworth, N. C.	50.00
Liberty, Vance, N. C.	34.47
Shady Grove, Ala.	3.85
Auburn, N. C.	20.00
Christian Light Ch. & S. S., N. C.	18.37
Union, Surry, Va.	20.70
Third Ave., Danville, Va.	12.05
F. H. Pickard, Ala.	5.00
		307.23
Special Offering.
Pervis Tilley	$ 30.00
Mrs. H. A. Culver	30.00
Wake Chapel C. E. Socy.	15.00
Boone Bible Class, Sanford, N. C.	15.00
S. Garland Horner	25.00
		115.00
Grand total		$22,319.91

MAN'S FINAL DESTINATION.

BY SADHU SUNDAR SINGH.

We know more than we can ever put into words, because we can never explain the whole of our inner consciousness. We have experiences which are beyond our powers of expression, but are not beyond our comprehension. At times, we have an intuition, and lofty thoughts suddenly flash into our minds that have not come from other men nor from the visible world through our senses. How have we been able to come to know these hidden things?

It is evident that our souls are connected with the spiritual and unseen world, whose light, without our being aware of it, is reflected in our inner selves. Some truths from that other world come to us, but they can be proved only by experience, when we enter into that world which we now see as in a glass darkly. When we see a thing from a distance, it appears small and indistinct, but when we have come near, we come to know the think as it really is. No change has taken place in the thing itself, but our knowledge of it has increased. So, step by step, we shall enter into the intimate fellowship of God's immediate presence, and we shall increase in our spiritual knowledge and experience until we arrive at the full recognition of reality, "and we shall see Him as He is" (1 Cor. 13:12; 1 John 3:1-2, 3).

The man who has not seen an apple tree, but has seen only its tiny seed, can never understand that the complete tree—the wood, flowers, and fruit—is all contained in the tiny seed. Under suitable conditions, at the appointed time, the real nature of the apple tree will appear, and all its hidden possibilities will come into perfection. Leaving everything else out of consideration, man does not know what kind of qualities and abilities are hidden in him, but if he walks in fellowship with God and according to His will, then he will continue to obtain all necessary aids for his growth, and will reach that state of perfection for which God has created him. Then all difficulties and problems will be solved, for "it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when He shall appear, we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is" (1 John 3:2).

In the days of our flesh, our understanding and thoughts are limited to the circumference of a very small circle, beyond which it is not possible to reach. But in the future world, under the power of love, every faculty of the soul will grow towards perfection.

"The Spirit of the Lord brooded upon the face of the waters." The Spirit of the Lord still broods over human souls, and He alone knows the great and glorious beings who will be manifested, and will enjoy the Creator's presence for ever. Countless problems arise as we progress towards perfection which will be solved only in the world to come; but as a chick as yet unhatched may wish to fly, so impatient man wants to solve all his problems in this world. This is premature and impossible. We must run with patience and perform with obedience whatever has been revealed to us to meet our present needs; we must leave all things concerning the future to Him, who will safely bring us to our final destination to be perfect as our Father in heaven is perfect.—Missionary Review of the World.

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

These Pens are of standard make, and will give good service. If you are in need of a Fountain Pen, order from us.
MEN'S PENS ..... $2.00 LADIES' PENS $2.00
Postage paid, and Pens guaranteed by the manufacturer.

LIMITED COMBINATION OFFER.—To a new subscriber, or for renewal (if not in arrears), $3.25, either Gentleman's or Lady's Pen, with guarantee of manufacturer. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 EAST BROAD STREET, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Mission Study Books.

Official List for 1924-1925.

ORDER BY TITLE OF BOOK.

FOR ADULT CLASSES.

For Home Mission Classes:
"The Romance of Home Missions," by S. L. Morris, D. D.. Paper, 50c; cloth..... $ .75
For Foreign Mission Classes:
"Ming Kwong—the City of Morning Light," by Mary Ninde Gamewell. Paper, 50c; cloth .75
"In China," by H. F. Williams, D. D..... .25

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

For Intermediate Home Mission Classes:
"The Land of All Nations," by Margaret F. Seelbach. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75
For Intermediate Foreign Mission Classes:
"China's Real Revolution," by Paul Hutchinson. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75
For Junior Foreign Mission Classes:
"Chinese Lanterns," by Minna McEwen Meyer. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... .75

LEADERS' HELPS.

Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Adult Classes) ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Young People's Classes)..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Land of All Nations"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Ming Kwong"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "China's Real Revolution".. .15
Leaders' Helps for "Chinese Lanterns"..... .15

Send all orders to—
THE CHRISTIAN SUN,
1536 East Broad Street - - Richmond, Virginia.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

REMEMBERING AND FORGETTING.

"Forget not all his benefits."—Psa. 103:2-5.

These two texts seem to be contradictory, but are not. It is quite evident from a careful examination that what the biblical writers mean is that godly men and women should learn to use the great faculty of memory for good.

"Thou shalt remember all the way the Lord thy God hast led thee." You shall call up in your darker days the memory of your brighter ones. You shall remember the deliverances of the past, that you may become confident of deliverance now. That was good counsel for Israel, and it is good counsel for us. Nehemiah was building the walls and was meeting with all manner of difficulties and discouragements, but cries out in confidence, "Remember the Lord, which is great and terrible." Your God is not dead! Remember—and "count your blessings."

At the same time you are advised, "Forgetting the things which are behind." This is equally good counsel, rightly understood. The gospel means the inspiration of a fresh start. It is good news. Forget the past and turn to present salvation and future hope.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

TUESDAY.

"BELIEVING IN" AND "BELIEVING ON."

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."—Acts 16:30-34.

While we would not overemphasize the importance of little words, and make our safety a matter of articles or prepositions, nevertheless it is wise for us to study even the articles and prepositions in Scripture texts, for often in them there is vast significance. It would seem that belief in Christ is largely a matter of intellectual acquiescence, of mental assent, of faith as a subjective faculty, rather than an objective reality; while belief on Christ carries with it the implication of committal of ourselves to Him, open avowal of our faith, entire dependence upon His power and grace for present and eternal salvation. As Mr. Moody once pointed out, belief in a railroad leads us to study the time-table, but belief on a railroad leads us to buy a ticket and get aboard.

Creeds invariably begin, "I believe in." That is easy to say. But a creed, however often it may be repeated, and however earnestly it may be contended for, is a poor substitute for Christian experience. An early Christian once exclaimed, "In vain dost thou contend for the doctrine of the Trinity if thou hast not in thy heart the trinity."

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

WEDNESDAY.

THE NEIGHBOR WHO CARED.

"Go and do thou likewise."—Luke 10:33-37.

Everybody likes the good Samaritan. The word "good" is not applied to him at all in the account in Luke. Jesus said: "A certain Samaritan." The first audience that received these words quickly rendered a verdict for the Samaritan as against the priest and Levite, and all audiences since have given the like verdict. Men have liked the character so well that they have substituted the word "good" for the word "certain." Nobody knows his name. He simply lost himself in his good deed and so became one of the world's best-known and most-loved characters.

He paid the price. The privilege of such aid is never quite a gift. The man in Christ's parable paid the price. He even walked, that the wounded man might ride. In other words, we cannot be servants unless we pay the cost of service.

We serve God and man in the positive help ministered through Christian character. To ring true in all the experiences of life has in it a service beyond the power of spoken word or commanding deed. Anything but love grows weary in well-doing. Only love will impel us to "Go and do likewise."

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

THURSDAY.

NEVER GIVE UP!

"And he spake a parable unto them to this end, that men ought always to pray and not to faint."—Phil. 4:6-7.

"Not to faint" means never to lose heart, never to give up. Jesus was always inspiring men with hope and courage. In one way or another, He was always telling men, "fear not; only believe."

Here is Luke 18:1-8, this counsel is joined to the exhortation to pray and a parable which beautifully illustrates its meaning. In every danger and difficulty, we are to pray; and we are to keep on praying. Our prayer has not fallen upon unhearing ears nor reached an unfeeling heart. Even now, the Father may be answering, and He will not fail us, however great the delay.

This is one of the most needed and helpful truths Jesus ever uttered. In one form or another the temptation to doubt, to fear, to lose heart, and grow weary and give up, is present with us all; but in whatever form this temptation comes, we may hold it up against this great teaching of the Son of Man who was the Son of God, and in the light of His life and counsel, the power of the temptation will dwindle away. In the midst of earth's trials and hardships, He bids us go sturdily on, believing that God will surely answer the prayer and in His own way make things come right.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

FRIDAY.

GOLD TRIED IN THE FIRE.

"When he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold."—Job 23:10-12.

I had a friend who had gone through fires of affliction. But through it all, she kept smiling and sweet, with never a word of blame for those who seemed inconsiderate. She never mentioned her troubles in a grumbling manner, but we could all see the scars upon her heart, and we knew that she was bearing up for the sake of others.

Does the artist show us his brushes and paints? Are we interested in the author's typewriter? Do the chisels of the sculptor bring any particular joy to our hearts? No, it is the thing that has been produced that we love to look upon—the painting, the book, the statue. And why should we parade our sorrows and our troubles? These are but the instruments our Father uses to bring out His own likeness in these lives of ours. Shall we invite them to look upon the sore spots? No, rather let the world see the gold that has been refined, than the fire that has tried it.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

SATURDAY.

THE THINGS WE CANNOT HAVE.

"The Lord said unto me, let it suffice thee; speak no more unto me of this matter."—Deut. 3:23-27.

Moses could not go into Canaan because the hand of God was upon him, besetting him behind and before. Here was Canaan, the land of promise, fulfilling the dreams and hopes of a nation. It was the thing he had planned, struggled and sacrificed for for forty years; and yet he cannot go in. With no murmur against God, but with great disappointment in his heart, the leader resigns himself to the decree, and refrains his lips and heart from vain repetition.

But there are compensations. God is gracious to His servant even in the opposing purpose. He shall see the land, and is told to get up to the top of Pisgah. His compensation was to have the view shown him by the divine will, and not a man down in the camp had that privilege. What he saw there by the grace of God more than satisfied him for the lower approach which was denied him.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

SUNDAY.

"For every man shall bear his own burden."—Gal. 6:5.

In the progress of every pilgrim toward the celestial city, a burden must be borne. God wants no one to go empty-handed. He has decreed that rich and poor, high and lowly, educated and uneducated must know the experience of burden-bearing. These burdens vary. Some are afflicted from childhood with the burden of ill health or physical deformity. SoSme are carrying burdens of sorrow, and others burdens of shame. Some bear about with them the burden of a great disappointment, and some have the burden of unfortunate environment. We all have our burdens, but God never asks us to carry too much; He never tests us beyond endurance. He only asks us to carry our burden with submission and faith. Thus burdens are transformed to blessings. We all know the story of St. Christopher, how he carried across the stream the little lad who in the end turned out to be the Christ Himself, and in return for his kindness he received the name of Christ-opher—Christ-bearer.

A returned missionary tells of an African savage, a brave burden-bearer, who, illiterate and humble, still shames many a professing Christian by his words and life. "I am a carrier," said he, "and the load I carry is the ten tyings (ten commandments) and the things of God. Heavy as they are, I will bear to carry them, because this is the order. Though the path be bad, there is a Man ahead of me!"

In the heat of day, and the agony of burden-bearing, can we too say: "Though the path be hard, I will bear this burden, because there is a Man ahead of me?"

The most elaborate dressers of the animal world are the birds, all of whom take baths whenever possible. Some of them use earth, sand or dust. When these fiind a suitable spot, they scratch up the surface and then shuffle backward, moving legs and wings and working the grit right through their feathers. Most birds, however, are water bathers. Some, such as the kingfisher, plunge right in. This bird usually dives from a branch, entering the water with open wings and making a great splash. In addition to his morning toilet, the kingfisher has a complete bath after eating fish that he catches; so that he often takes a dozen headers during the day.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Dr. Atkinson will preach at Mt. Auburn the second Sunday in January, 1925, at 11 A. M. If any of the Churches of my charge desire to have preaching while I am away this winter, they can, of course, make their own arrangements. Rev. Jas. L. Foster, Elon College, has kindly offered to aid, as he has no appointments for the first, third and fourth Sundays.

D. A. LONG.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

KANGAROOS.

The kangaroo is sometimes given the name of "macropodes" (large feet), because its hind feet are so large, thick and strong, while the forefeet are short and weak. The tail is long and powerful, and when the animal is squated on its hind-legs or walking, the tail leans on the ground like a prop, and supports it. It also defends them from the attack of dogs, as they can strike a heavy blow with it.

Kangaroos are natives of Australia and Van Diemen's land. They live in little troops, and prefer woody places. Their flesh is excellent, and the fur of some species very choice. They can be easily domesticated, and would pay to raise, as they have begun to do in England. They can move their lower teeth so as to cut grass like a pair of shears.

About fifty species are already known, and some are so small they are called kangaroo rats.

THANKS TO UNCLE SAM.

By Rosalee Hawthorne.

The 27th of November was Mary Lou's birthday. This year it happened to be Thanksgiving Day, too. Mary Lou's big brown eyes sparkled with anticipation whenever she thought of the double celebration. Mother had said that she might spend the day with grandfather and grandmother, and any day spent with them was sure to be a happy one for Mary Lou.

Father and mother could not go with her because two of their long-ago schoolmates were coming to visit them during the Thanksgiving holidays; but Mrs. Stone, a near neighbor, had offered to take Mary Lou to grandfather's house the day before Thanksgiving.

Mary Lou was much excited over the prospect and eager to tell her friend, the mail carrier, all about it.

"Hello, Skeezics!" he boomed in his jovial way as he turned the bend in the road. "Mail's heavy this morning. Let's see. Here are two papers and a letter for Mr. N. A. Moore; and an apple and a stick of peppermint candy for Miss Mary Lou Moore."

"Oh, thank you ever so much, Mr. Sims!" Mary Lou said. "There are so many things to enjoy all at once that I'm afraid my enjoyer will wear out. I am going to have such a good time Thursday!" And she told him all about her plans for the double holiday.

Mary Lou was awake early Wednesday morning and pattered across her room to look happily out of the window at the bright fall sunshine. After breakfast she helped mother pack into the old-fashioned alligator bag the things that she would need. She was so eager to be off that she had her hat on her smooth-brushed curls and her coat over her fresh gingham dress fully an hour before it was time for Mrs. Stone to come. Mary Lou was swinging on the gate and feeling most impatient when mother opened the front door and called to her.

"I have some disappointing news for you, dear," said mother. "Mrs. Stone just telephoned that one of the children, Bobby, is sick, and she won't be able to go to town today. I am as sorry as I can be."

For one unbelieving moment, Mary Lou stared stupidly at her mother.

"Do you mean that I can't go at all?"

MOLLIE COTTONTAIL AND HER CHILDREN.

Mollie Cottontail was a good little mother. She loved her two children with the real mother love. Several times a day she licked them all over with her tongue and made their little fur coats look glossy and clean. This was her way of giving her children a bath.

The older of her children was named Sunny Jim, and the younger Tiny Tim. She called the older Sunny Jim because he always looked on the sunny side of everything. Tiny Tim got his name because he was such a tiny little bit of a mite. He was a bright-eyed little fellow and loved his mother dearly.

Mother Rabbit and her two little children lived in a patch of woods not far from the great big farm-house, where there were a lot of briar bushes and trees. She made her home in the hollow of an old tree that had been blown down by the wind and broken in the middle. Into this she carried leaves and straw and dried grass to make it warm and snug.

"Come, snuggle close to mother, children," she said, "for it's cold." They curled up just as close to their mother as they could. "Now, go to sleep. You children have played all night long and part of the day."

"I'm not sleepy," said Tiny Tim.

"I'm not sleepy either," said Sunny Jim.

"But you children must go to sleep or you'll never be grown." "Now, Tiny Tim, your little legs are getting sleepy. Yours too, Sunny Jim. Your eyes are tired. You cannot hold them open any longer. You are sleepy all over. You are going fast to sleep." And Tiny Tim and Sunny Jim were soon asleep, and they slept all night. Tiny Tim snored so loud he almost waked up his little brother, but he didn't.

The next morning when they awoke, Tiny Tim looked out the front door—they didn't have any back door to their house—"and," said mother, "it is all white out-of-doors, the ground is all white, and the trees are all white. What do you 'spect it is?"

"I know," said Sunny Jim, "mudder told me about it."

"What?" said Tiny Tim.

"It's snow."

Tiny Tim started to go after a drink of water at the branch, and his little feet sank down in the snow. He came running back to his mother.

"Mudder, I'm afraid to go out."

After a while little Tiny Tim said, "Mudder, I'm hungry. I want something to eat."

"I want something to eat, too," said Sunny Jim.

"Now, children, we will go after something to eat, but you both must mind your mother, and when she says come, you must come, and when she says go, you must go."

So they went across a big field and through fences and down a lane and under a barbed-wire fence to a man's garden, where there were some turnip tops just peeping out from under the snow.

What a good time they were having when mother rabbit said, "Come on, children, we must be going."

"Wait a minute," said Tiny Tim.

"No, come quickly," said mother rabbit, and she made off as fast as she could, with Sunny Jim just behind her.

Now, under the farmer's house there was a great big dog. He had just waked up, and was stretching himself when he saw something out in the garden. What do you thing it was? Three rabbits.

"Bow, wow, wow," and how he did make for those little rabbits. Little Tiny Tim wouldn't mind his mother and was away behind. The dog had his mouth open with his awful teeth just about to grab him when mother rabbit ran right up to the dog. The dog left off running Tiny Tim and ran after the mother, and she ran through the field, down the ditches, and through the briar patches with the great big dog right behind her, barking every step. She ran straight for the barbed-wire fence, where she had a place to get through. This place crossed a ditch. The dog, he didn't know about the barbed-wire fence and he ran right into it, and cut his nose and his ears and his side so that the blood came out on the snow. Then he set up a howl. "Eow, eow, eow, eow," and he ran back to the house as fast as he could.

What do you suppose old mother rabbit did? She just rolled over in the snow and laughed until her sides ached. Then she went home as fast as she could, and when she got there she looked in and saw Tiny Tim and Sunny Jim just trembling all over.

"Now, Tiny Tim," she said, "you must always do what mother says." The dogs would have gotten him sure enough if his mother hadn't come to his aid.

Then they went to their little home and snuggled up close to their mother and went fast asleep. —Wm. Christopher.

THE NEW YEAR.

As the year is drawing soon to a close, we are faced with the question, What will the New Year —this New Year, 1925—bring to us? Moreover, we find ourselves asking, what shall we bring to this New Year—this happy, prosperous, bright New Year that we have had so cordially wished for us and that we, in turn, have wished for others with the same measure of cordiality? With this "checking up" on ourselves, this taking of a mental inventory, as it were, in these closing days of the year, we very naturally consider the institutions which are dear to us. Have they measured up to our high hopes, our expectations of the service we dreamed they would render? Have they justified their existence?

In our inventory, one item looms large—Bethlehem College. We are confident that throughout the past year Bethlehem College has more than justified the sacrifices and the dream which has made its existence possible. It has opened up a field for great service—how great, we cannot say. We only know that the lives it has touched in this year alone, the influence which it has had on these young lives during 1924, has forever more than justified its existence. We have yet greater dreams for the New Year.

These young people! What manner of boys and girls are they? It has been a joy to work for them, a pleasure to live among them. Eager and alert, and open-minded, cheerful under difficulties, splendid in their enthusiasm, appreciative of their opportunities, respectful in their attitudes—they are the embodiment of the spirit of youth. On January 5, 1925, these young people will return for the last semester of this year's work. We hope that they will not be disappointed in what 1925 holds for them. It is our task to see that Bethlehem College shall not disappoint them. What will 1925 bring to us? What will we bring to this New Year?

Wadley, Ala. MRS. SION M. LYNAM.

"Tarbell's Teachers' Guide" gives a full discussion of the International Uniform Sunday School Lessons by departments. It is well adapted to the several grades. Send your order to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Price, by mail, $2.00.

Would you not like to have one of the American Standard Bibles advertised in THE SUN? A teacher's Bible or a scholar's Bible would make a good present to your friend.

TWELVE INTERNATIONAL MOVEMENTS.

(Continued from Page 9.)

whether it be a good law or a bad law, so long as it remains a law. This is absolutely imperative if we are to maintain our national solidarity and moral integrity. Morality is not made possible by Legislation. That is perfectly plain. Goodness is not, and never will be, a question of legislation. But it is a matter of transformation and education. It must be admitted on the other hand, that reformation may be, and often is, briught about by legislation—not simply by resolution. Some people resolve to be good and do good, but there is no incentive in a resolution and no deterrent. There are thousands of people who never reform until the solidified sentiments of the people and the public opinion of the majority are so strong against them that they know that the people demand that they reform and begin to do right. It is not difficult for a person to learn that he cannot long maintain himself in the community if he continues to violate public opinion and transgress public sentiment. He soon makes of himself an outcast. And those who observe his action soon learn that disrespect for one law breeds contempt for all law; and therein is one of the finest points in favor for the prohibition law. It has made men good citizens out of thugs and disrespectful people.

I am willing to grant without argument that perfect results have not been realized in this great prohibitive movement. No one claims perfection in this matter. On the other hand, it must be admitted that prohibition has a most remarkable and unprecedented success. Facts do not bear out the statement that prohibition does not prohibit. Of course, it does not prohibit the possibility of the liquor traffic. The law against stealing does not prohibit the thief from plying his trade, but it does make it mighty hard for him. And what is true with reference to the law against theft is true with reference to the prohibition law. In spite of the fact that there are many men in this country who make and sell liquor and make their living by this illegitimate act, the prohibition law has been and is effective in curtailing the liquor traffic. Statistics show that the number of drinkers of alcoholic beverages has been reduced from 20,000,000 to 2,000,000 in four years. The habitual drinkers consume only 5 per cent of the quantity of whiskey that was consumed four years ago. The drink of the nation has decreased $2,000,000 each year for the last four years. And what is still better, the money formerly spent for whiskey and beer has gone into savings banks, homes, insurance, education of children, and the necessary commodities of life. It is a matter of actual record that the reform stories, correctional institutions, jails, and penitentiaries have shown a great decrease in the number of occupants and prisoners, and in some cases the jails are entirely empty. These facts stand out as a monument to the prohibition law and refute the statement that the law has not been effective, and the further charge that the law is a stigma on the American people. It would be as near the truth to say that the sin of Adam and Eve placed a stigma on God, which is absolutely unthinkable. The law does place a stigma on those who violate it.

It is fair to say that prohibition has been effective in this nation even under the most unfavorable conditions. When the movement first started, there were thousands of men in this nation who furnished people whiskey to drink, not for the sake of furnishing them, but because they made their living by this act. And the leaders in the prohibition movement had sense enough to know that these men would not quit this nefarious business as soon as they heard about the law. Then, there was the drinker, with an insatiable thirst for whiskey. No one thought that the old sod would lose his thirst for liquor as soon as he heard about prohibition. The announcement served rather to intensify the thirst Far from it. Both the bootlegger and the drinker will continue if possible. The bootlegger will violate any law in order that he may ply his trade, and the drinker will violate any law in order that he may obtain the fluid with which to slake his thirst. One is the victim of an unholy desire to make easy money, and the other is a victim of an unholy and uncontrollable appetite. Law, decency and order are foreign to both parties. But in spite of the fact that the law has been flouted, it has worked wonders in this nation. An honest and candid comparison of the conditions now with the conditions five years ago will show without question that the movement has been worth while, and that it is worth all that it has cost in time, money and human energy. An impartial review of the facts will reduce the rumors and inflated reports that prohibition has not been effective to their proper nothingness.

If, under inadequate enforcement, the law has brought about such marvelous changes in our civilization and made such worthy contributions to human life and happiness, what would it do for our nation and for the world if it were properly enforced and observed? Nonobservance of statutory law is one of the great crimes of our day. I am not a fanatic on prohibition, but I am an ardent advocate of it.

I believe with all my heart that the law will be observed more and more as it grows older, and that it will be enforced more adequately as time goes on. Those who are charged with enforcing the law must concentrate on the men who are higher up in the liquor traffic, for in nine cases out of ten the men who are apprehended and punished for the violation of the law are simply the slaves of other men who get the big end of the profit out of the business. The prohibition law designed it, and the officers of the law must see to it that the blockader and bootlegger must quit their business or go to jail. The creation of public opinion in favor of law enforcement is the great task of the prohibition advocate today. And here is hoping that it will not take as long to create this public opinion as it did to create public opinion in favor of prohibition. No law will live long that is ignored or infringed upon. Like any precocious youngster of five summers, it must receive support from one more mature in year. We expect too much if we think the word prohibition will frighten the bootleggers and blockaders to death. The voice of the law means nothing to them. They must first feel the penalty of the law. The immediate task of the prohibition workers, therefore, is to create a sentiment for law enforcement and law observance. This is the movement within the movement to which our loyalty should now be given. This new crusade challenges every Christian in this nation. We must prove to the world that the law is essential to our civilization and is in every way workable. This new crusade should sweep across the country like a great forest fire. Only by faithful effort can we write another chapter in the history of this great experimental and collossal movement. This new crusade calls for the support of the Young Woman's Christian Association, the Young Men's Christian Association, the Parent-Teacher Association, the men's clubs, and women's clubs, the Woman's Temperance Union, and Sunday School and the Church. If in this movement we stand together, the world will be helped by our loyalty and success. Every effort made and every victory won will bring us just a little nearer to the ideal of world prohibition. Our success will aid England, India, Bulgaria, Egypt and other nations in their effort toward prohibition.

In order that the movement may fully succeed, there must be a definite program of temperance education. Along with the enforcement and observance of law must go that other great movement of a continuous education of public opinion. The potency, principles, and policies of prohibition must be made a part of the conscience and convictions of the people of the world before it can be made a reality in civilization. This can be brought about by civic organizations, visual education, scientific temperance instruction, by the Church teaching the evils of alcoholic drinks, the Sunday School giving temperance lessons, civic agencies giving information as to the financial, economic, and civic results, a change in the ideas and customs of society, and in many other ways the movement can be strengthened.

I am confident that the great majority of the people of America feel that the prohibition movement was the greatest social experiment and moral achievement in the history of this nation. A movement which is so unselfish in its very nature and so humanitarian in its purpose is destined to become the common property of the world. But it is for the Church to see that it shall enjoy this distinction. For the Church to fail and America to falter now, and thus cause the movement to weaken, would take the very heart out of every great movement in the world that is designed to help humanity. The Church will not fail; America will not falter. I venture the prophecy that this great movement which has done so much for America, and which is frought with such incalculable possibilities for the whole world, will some day reach to every nook and corner of the whole earth. The Church could render no greater service to the world and make no finer contribution to civilization than to make sure that this movement shall reach to the uttermost parts of the world and become the common heritage of all humanity.

Pleasant Hill, Ohio.

WORKING FOR MEN AND MILLIONS.

It has been my pleasure, as well as great privilege, to work, for the past several weeks, in behalf of our Men and Millions Movement. During that time I have met many faces and friends whom I hope to know better. Many have helped in this work. I have been received by our good people with universal kindness. While many were not in a position at the time to pay their pledge, they received me kindly and gave me words of encouragement.

If all our people could know the spirit of Men and Millions, and the good the movement has accomplished, they would certainly make a heroic effort to pay their pledges.

It is my present plan, purpose, and hope to continue to work for Men and Millions, and for missions, particularly among the women and young people during 1925. My great desire is that the missionary spirit of the Church may grow, and I am certainly most willing to do all I can to this end. Besides paying our Men and Millions pledges we should have a live missionary organization in all our Churches. Quite a number of our Churches are still without any missionary organization whatever. The Woman's Board, under whose auspices I am to work, is exceedingly anxious to see all our Churches have at least one missionary society. I am sure the pastors and other workers will greatly aid in bringing this to pass. GERTRUDE BROWN.

Elon College, N. C.

GUYNN—O'NEAL.

Mr. Richard Guynn, of Fancy Gap, Va., and Miss Lucy F. O'Neal, of Garret, N. C., were united in marriage December 19th. The couple came to the parsonage, but finding the pastor had gone to Mt. Airy, they immediately started for Mt. Airy. But instead of finding him there they met him near Rev. Willie Pain's home, a short distance this side of the North Carolina line.

The writer married them near Bro. Pain's home. After a few days, they will make their home at Garret, N. C. Mr. Guynn is a well-thought-of man of this community. While we were glad for him to wed Miss O'Neal, we are very sorry that they are not going to make their home in this community.

Fancy Gap, Va. M. T. SORRELL.

PERRY—HARRIS.

Henry Judson Perry and Lillian Harris, of Bertie County, N. C., were united in marriage by the writer at the Holy Neck parsonage, Holland, Va., December 19, 1924, in the presence of only a few witnesses. Mr. Perry is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Pete Perry, and Mrs. Perry is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Harris. They will make their home in Bertie County. May rich blessings rest upon their wedded life. N. G. NEWMAN.

The bureau of appointment of Yale finds that 1,354 students last year earned $382,206, an average of not far from $300 a year apiece.

Fort Apache, Arizona, famous Indian military outpost of frontier days, has been converted into an Indian school.

Something You Have Been Waiting For
Remington Portable Typewriter
—with Standard Keyboard and every other feature common to the larger machines. Case only four inches high.
Price, with case, $60.
Send Your Order to
THE CHRISTIAN SUN
Richmond, Va.

HALL—CARR.

On December 20, 1924, Clyde Thomas Hall and Lillial Viola Carr were happily united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The marriage ceremony was performed by their pastor, at his home, in Walters, Va. These young people are very highly respected by all that know them, and they have the best wishes of their many friends. They will reside near Walters, and have the prayers and best wishes of their pastor for a long and happy life. ELISHA BRADSHAW.

Walters, Va.

TRAVEL INFORMATION

EVERYWHERE—ANYWHERE—ANY TIME
FARES—SCHEDULES—ITINERARIES—RESERVATIONS

LET US SOLVE YOUR TRAVEL PROBLEM

Apply to Local Agent, or Address
F. H. Poston - - Division Passenger Agent
809 East Main Street. Richmond. Va.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

Medical College of Virginia

Medicine Dentistry
Pharmacy Nursing

New Buildings. Well-equipped Laboratories, under the direction of full time, competent teachers.

The Memorial Hospital, Dooley Hospital, St. Philip Hospital, are owned and controlled by the Medical College of Virginia, and offer every facility for thorough clinical teaching.

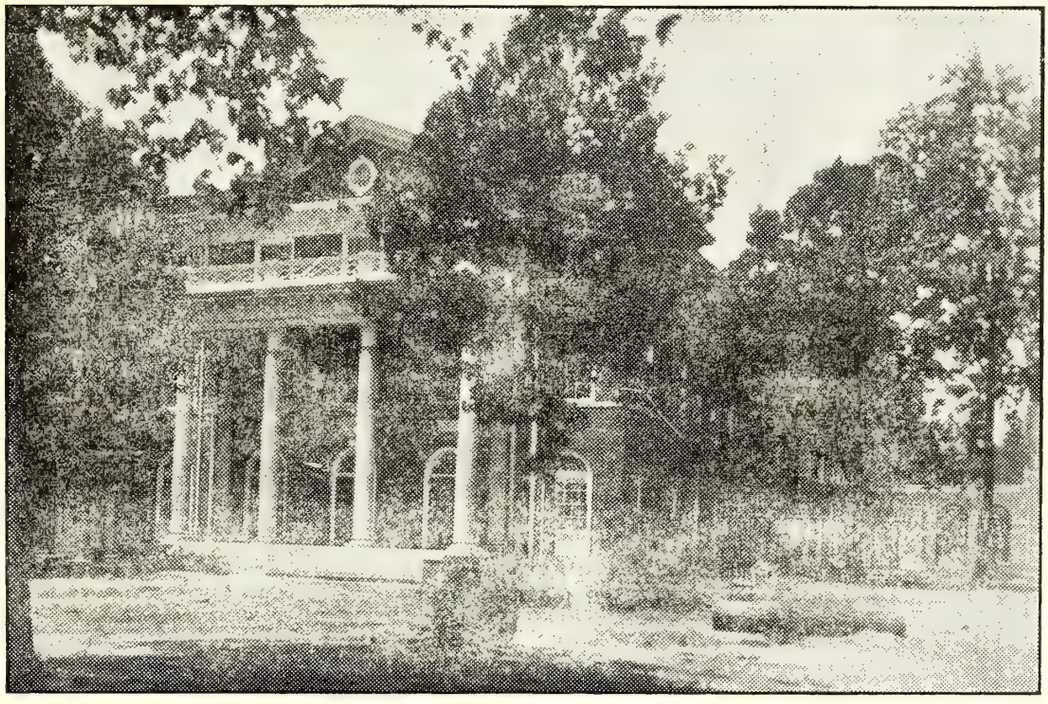
Staffs composed of the Faculty of the College. Additional clinical facilities are offered through other institutions in Richmond.

For full information and catalogue, address—

J. R. McCAULEY, Secretary.

MONEY TO LEND ON IMPROVED FARMS--FAVORABLE TERMS
Write for Details
SO. BOND & MORTGAGE CO.
627 E. Main St. - - Richmond, Va.

ELON COLLEGE---CO-EDUCATIONAL



WHITLEY AUDITORIUM BUILDING
One of the Group of Five New Buildings now Completed.

Elon, in her rebuilding program, has been looking to the future. Ten buildings, new and modern equipment, and a highly trained and efficient faculty are at the service of the future leaders of our Church. The phenomenal growth of Elon in the past two years indicates a larger growth throughout the whole denomination in the years just ahead. Make Elon your own Church College in a personal way by your patronage and prayerful co-operation.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D.....Editor
W. W. STALEY, D. D.....Associate
W. A. HARPER, LL. D.....Associate
R. C. HELFENSTEIN, D. D...Associate
REV. S. C. HARRELL.....Associate
REV. S. M. LYNAM.....News Editor
P. J. KERNODLE....Managing Editor

Subscription Rates.

One Year $2.00
Six Months 1.00

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post-Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows the date of expiration. Please renew at least two weeks in advance.

Change of Address: Give both old and new post-office when asking that your address be changed.

When subscriptions are made for friends, state whether paper is to be stopped at end of the year.

Remittances: Make all remittances to "The Christian Sun," 1536 East Broad Street, Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and Marriage Notices, limited to 100 words, are published free of charge. All over 100 words, published at 1 cent a word. Remittance should accompany copy. Write names distinctly.

Advertising Rates: "Want Ads," 2 cents a word an insertion. Display Rates quoted upon request.

TAPSCOTT.

Died at the Rainey Hospital, Burlington, N. C., where he had gone for treatment, Albert L. Tapscott, December 7, 1924, in his fifty-seventh year. Brother Tapscott was a member of Union Christian Church, from which Church the funeral services were conducted by the writer, his pastor, and his body was laid to rest in the Church cemetery. He was engaged in business at Burlington, N. C., and as a business man he was prompt, kind and courteous. A good citizen, Church member, and friend has passed from earth to his reward. The esteem in which Bro. Tapscott was held was evidenced by the large number who attended the funeral services. Sweet be his sleep till he awakes on the resurrection morning. P. H. FLEMING.

Burlington, N. C.

SHUE.

Departed this life at her daughter's, Mrs. Nancy Hicks, Guilford County, N. C., December 6, 1924, Mrs. Tempy Shue, in her seventieth year. Her husband preceded her to the grave by some twenty-five years. One son and four daughters survive her. She leaves thirty-five grandchildren and twenty-three great-grandchildren. As I knew Sister Shue, she was one of those quiet, peaceful, gentle souls that bless the world by living in it.

The remains were brought to her old home Church, New Providence, Graham, N. C., for burial and were laid to rest in the Church cemetery. The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. T. E. White. Sweet be her rest till Jesus bids her arise.

Burlington, N. C. P. H. FLEMING.

COLEY.

Bro. H. W. Coley was born April 2, 1881; died November 15, 1924. In early life he gave his heart to God, and to the end lived a consecrated Christian life. When he came to the community several years ago he united with Grace's Chapel Church and was counted among her most faithful and valuable members. Truly, a good man has gone to his reward. He leaves his wife, ten children, father, four brothers and one sister. Many, by their presence at the funeral, bore silent testimony of sorrowing hearts to the esteem in which he is held. May the dear Heavenly Father comfort the bereaved.

R. L. WILLIAMSON.

WHICH IS THE
BEST INVESTMENT?

It is that one best suited to the requirements of the individual purchaser.

For example: What is best for the millionaire, whose income is in the high brackets, and to whom income is no object, is obviously not the best for the investor who must have the maximum income consistent with safety.

We offer to our clients individual service.

. . .

ESTABLISHED 1874

John L. Williams & Sons

INVESTMENT BANKERS

Phone: Randolph 244 Seventh and Main Streets

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

WINSTON-INTERNATIONAL
LOOSE-LEAF BIBLE
A PRACTICAL BIBLE FOR NOTES
Contains over 250 loose-leaf pages for personal notes that may be inserted in any number of pages between any pages in the Bible. Looks like a regular Divinity Circuit bound Bible.
Send for Illustrated Catalog of Bibles
THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO., Publishers
American Bible Headquarters
423 Winston Building Philadelphia

V. E. MAREAN
Pipe Organ Expert
TUNING — REPAIRING
REBUILDING
Motors Installed Yearly Contracts
P. O. Box 864, - Richmond, Va.
Phone, Boulevard 7011-J

OXFORD
TEACHERS'
BIBLES

An Oxford Teachers' Bible has references and 300 pages of helps that are a mine of information to Bible students. The helps are arranged in alphabetical order, like a dictionary. They are accurate, comprehensive and up-to-date. A few styles are listed here. Many others are described in our Bible catalogue, mailed upon request.

04403 [This size print] Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 6⅞ x 4¾ inches $4.00
0623x [Same Bible as 04403] Printed on Oxford India paper. Only 1 inch thick..... $6.00
04453 [This size print] French Morocco leather binding, overlapping covers, 7¼ x 5 in. $4.35
0773x [Same Bible as 04453] Printed on Oxford India paper. A remarkably thin and light Bible. (Only 1 inch thick) $7.75
05453 [Same Bible as 04453] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $6.25
05453x [Same Bible as 0773x] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $8.75
04523 [This size print] A self-pronouncing Oxford Bible. Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 8½ x 5½ inches... $5.50
0923x [Same Bible as 04523] Printed on Oxford India paper, only 1⅛ inches thick... $9.75

ORDER FROM
"THE CHRISTIAN SUN"
1536 East Broad
Richmond, Va.

FOR GOOD HOME COOKING
MRS. COOK'S CAFETERIA
805 East Grace Street.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE
A Co-Educational School
LOCATED AT
WADLEY, ALABAMA

This School offers the last two years of Academic work and the first two years of College work.

The following Courses are offered in the—

COLLEGE DEPARTMENT: English, Bible, Religious Education, Latin, French, History, Education, Mathematics and Science.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENTS: Music—Piano, Voice; Commercial Department—Bookkeeping, Typewriting, and Shorthand.

Due attention will be given Athletics, such as Tennis, Basket-Ball, Baseball, Football.

The government of the School is mild, but firm, endeavoring to create a home atmosphere as much as possible, not merely to maintain discipline, but to cultivate Christian character.

This is our own School, located within reach of all in this section, and the cost is less than any other College within reasonable distance of those who would attend School from this section.

Send for a Catalogue giving full description of Courses and entrance conditions.

S. L. BEOUGHER, President
Wadley, - - - - - Alabama.

:TY. 1956.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Official Organ of the Southern Christian Convention

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY. IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY. IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXVII. RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JANUARY 8, 1925. NUMBER 2.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

To Erect Memorial.—

The Salvation Army has selected Denmark Hill, London, as the site of its million-dollar memorial to the founder, General William Booth. There will be in the million-dollar memorial, educational buildings and lodging-accommodations, together with a great tower on which will be placed a beacon light visible from all parts of London. Sir Giles Scott, the man who designed the Liverpool Cathedral, will be in charge of the construction work.

A New Idea in Advertising.—

The Michigan Christian Advocate, published at Detroit, has something new in the way of advertising itself. A small phonograph record, about three inches in diameter, is to be distributed in ten thousand Methodist homes. It is believed that few recipients will fail to have enough curiosity to play the record, which contains a subscription-getting appeal. This is something of which many another religious journal might take notice. At least, it is a novel idea.

Tempora Mutantur.—

As the round-the-world fliers passed over Prouts Neck, Me., a summer visitor there, Rev. Hugh A. Moran, Ithaca, N. Y., recalled the old hymn for seafarers, with the stirring refrain—

"Lord, help us when we call to Thee
For those in peril on the sea."

He felt moved to add a new stanza, bringing the old hymn up to date for airmen. The stanza meets a need, and will probably live. It reads:

"Jehovah, Lord of wind and storm,
Whose power the billowing clouds doth form;
Who bid'st the mists and fogs arise,
And bearest up each wing that flies—
Oh! answer, Thou, our humble prayer
For those in peril in the air."

An Alarming Situation.—

At a recent meeting of the students of Harvard University, which was largely attended, some very personal questions were asked the students, to which they responded by a show of hands. It was disclosed that only four had prayed the day before, and only the same number had read the Bible through. Furthermore, it was disclosed that only about one-fourth of those present believed in a personal God.

Those students are going out into the world of tomorrow to carry on its work with no faith. It is an alarming situation. It is a situation, too, which brings, or ought to bring the Church to reckon on the matters of youth and religious training. Harvard University was founded in 1636 for the training of ministers, and today brings such disclosures from its students. It would, doubtless, be a fine thing to check up on the religious situation in many of our religiously controlled colleges. For such situations to continue among those who by necessity will lead other men, endangers the well-being of the nation.

The President's Christmas.

The nation was interested to learn how President Coolidge spent Christmas. He spent it quietly and simply just as he used to do back when he was a member of the rural population of Vermont. On Christmas Eve, President and Mrs. Coolidge went to one of the parks in the capital and there took part in the national community Christmas tree. The President lighted the tree, a live spruce brought from the Adirondack Mountains and replanted. He then took part in the singing of Christmas carols on the White House lawn, and after that retired to his own fireside to spend Christmas. They pondered, too, over the loss in their home since the last Yuletide season.

The nation would do well to emulate this simplicity of the chief executive. There was splendor on that first Christmas, but it was a quiet and holy splendor like that which shines about the fireside of a home where love is.

A Creed for Citizens.—

William and Mary College, Williamsburg, Va., one of the oldest colleges in America, is asking what makes a good citizen, through its classes in government. Those classes have been debating the question, and out of these debates the students have evolved a creed for good citizens which might, with profit, be accepted by all of us. They say: "To acquaint myself with those fundamentals embodied in our Constitutions and laws which experience has shown are essential to the preservation of our liberties and the promotion of good government. To inform myself on all public issues, and on the character, record and platform of all candidates for office, and to exert actively my influence in favor of men and measures in which I believe. To vote in every election, using my vote only for the public good, placing the welfare of my country above that of my party. To have the courage to perform my duties as a citizen, regardless of the effect upon me financially or socially. To stand for honest election laws impartially administered. To obey all laws, whether I deem them wise or not, and to uphold the officers in the enforcement of the law. To make full and honest returns for all my property and income for taxation. To acquaint myself with the functions of the various departments of my government, and to spread the knowledge of the same among my fellow-citizens. To encourage good men to enter public service and remain therein by commending the faithful performance of their duties and by refraining from criticism except such as is founded on a knowledge of facts. Not to think alone of what my government can do for me, but more about what I can do for it. To inform myself with respect to the problems which confront my country in its foreign relations and to support policies which safeguard its legitimate interests abroad and which recognize the responsibilities of the United States as a member of international society."

Choosing Great Preachers.—

The ministers of the country, at the invitation of the Christian Century, Chicago, have been choosing the greatest twenty-five preachers of the country. It has been interesting to watch the development of the voting, and to await the final result. These twenty-five famous preachers selected by nearly 20,000 other ministers, will furnish sermons for the Christian Century during 1925. The final choice was as follows: Rev. Chas. R. Brown, dean of Yale divinity school, New Haven, Conn.; Rev. Henry Sloane Coffin, Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York City; Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, Central Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Rev. Russell Conwell, Baptist Temple, Philadelphia, Pa.; Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick, First Presbyterian Church, New York City; Rev. Geo. A. Gordon, Old South Church, Boston, Mass.; Rev. Charles W. Gilkey, Hyde Park Baptist Church, Chicago, Ill.; Rev. Lynn Harold Hough, Central Methodist Episcopal Church, Detroit, Mich.; Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis, Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Rev. Edwin H. Hughes, bishop of Methodist Episcopal Church, Chicago, Ill.; Rev. Chas. E. Jefferson, Broadway Tabernacle, New York City; Rev. Francis J. McConnell, bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Rev. William F. McDowell, bishop of Methodist Episcopal Church, Washington, D. C.; Rev. Wm. P. Merrill, Brick Presbyterian Church, New York City; Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York City; Rev. Mark A. Matthews, First Presbyterian Church, Seattle, Wash.; Rev. Joseph Fort Newton, Church of Divine Paternity, New York City; Rev. Merton S. Rice, Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal Church, Detroit, Mich.; Rev. Frederick F. Shannon, Central Church, Chicago, Ill.; Rev. John Timothy Stone, Fourth Presbyterian Church, Chicago, Ill.; Rev. Wm. A. Sunday, evangelist, Winona Lake, Ind.; Dr. Robert E. Speer, New York City; Rev. Geo. W. Truitt, First Baptist Church, Dallas, Tex.; Rev. Ernest F. Tittle, First Methodist Church, Evanston, Ill.; Rev. James I. Vance, First Presbyterian Church, Nashville, Tenn.

It was claimed by the Century that in taking this straw vote, there was no bias or prejudice as it selected its voters from men representing all shades of opinion and all denominations.

NOTES-PERSONALS

It is now Duke University instead of Trinity College, Durham, N. C. And $6,000,000 is to be spent at once in building the great plant.

The managing editor has sent out a New Year's letter to many of THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S patrons, and here is expressing the hope that it will be appreciated.

At the First Christian Church, of Richmond, Dr. W. C. Wicker preached for the pastor at both morning and evening service. Both sermons were well received and highly spoken of.

As a rule, most readers like short, spicy articles, but, if you will take the time to read the articles now appearing in THE SUN you will find them full of today's religious thought and profitable. The trend is after God's thought.

Rev. J. W. Wellons, D. D., passed successfully and happily his ninety-ninth anniversary January 1st. His host of friends are hoping that he shall live another year, and yet another year, thus in his body revealing to us a century and more of what it means to be in the flesh consecrated solely to Him who is the Giver of every good.

Rev. McD. Howsare, D. D., secretary of evangelism, has conducted a series of meetings with Christian Temple, Norfolk, the past week. The new method of conducting evangelistic services is personal in its endeavors and contacts, seems to be logical, biblical and highly fruitful of results. Dr. Howsare seems eminently qualified and highly successful in directing these meetings.

Added to his other dignities, duties and degrees, SUN readers henceforth may say "Judge W. W. Staley," of Suffolk, Va. Down Suffolkway, where they know the worth of this great and good man, they will not cease using—and honoring—him. A vacancy having occurred recently, Dr. Staley has been appointed judge of the domestic relations and juvenile court, and assumed his duties on the "bench" January 1st. Whereupon, we congratulate the city of Suffolk and the State of Virginia.

An excellent address on "Teachers and Teaching" was delivered by Dr. W. C. Wicker before the Sunday School of the First Christian Church of Richmond, the occasion being the anniversary of the organization of the school five years ago. The program, besides a memorial address by Dr. W. T. Walters, pastor, was also made interesting and entertaining by four young lady violinists and a vocal quartet. Twelve of the original seventeen members who took part in the organization of the school were present. Dr. Wicker's address appears in this issue of THE SUN.

This line is written to express a deep sense of sorrow and of grief as we learn of the death, at Windsor, Va., of Robert A. Rhoads, the good husband of our long-time friend and former pupil in Elon College, Mrs. Garrie Watkins Rhoads. The following is from a Norfolk daily paper: "Robert A. Rhoads, 46, a prominent citizen of Windsor, Isle of Wight County, died last night at his home in Windsor after a brief illness of pneumonia. He is survived by a widow, who was Miss Garrie Watkins; three children—Elmina, Robert A., and Watkins Rhoads; three brothers—William and Raleigh, of Windsor, and the Rev. Beecher Rhoads, of Norfolk; and a sister, Mrs. Ernest Rhoads, of Isle of Wight. Mr. Rhoads was prominently known throughout the county and was engaged in the mercantile business in windsor. Funeral services will be held at 2:10 o'clock December 31st, and burial will be made in Windsor Cemetery." THE SUN'S editor often visited in the Rhoads home, and mourns that he shall no more find there the splendid host and amiable Christian husband and father that presided over that hospitable house.

A GREAT TOUR.

Rev. W. P. Fletcher, D. D., field secretary of adult work of the Department of Christian Education, has just returned from a tour of the Western Convention, having traveled 3,297 miles in the magnificent distances of that country, and reaching sixteen Churches in Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska. It is heartening to know that Dr. Fletcher was cordially received by responsive people every where, and a tangible proof of this is the fact that they contributed the entire amount for his expenses for the trip.

This tour was arranged by Rev. Jesse M. Kauffmann, pastor of the Madrid, Iowa, Church, and director of Christian education of the Western Christian Convention. Among the Churches visited where Christian education institutes were held were Madrid, Red Cloud, Weyland, Morning Star, Oronoque, Good Hope, Olive, Meredith, Neola, Pleasant Hill, Towands, Cassoday, Matfield Green, Pleasant Valley, Five Mounds and Elm City.

Dr. Fletcher reports the most loyal spirit in the Churches of the Western Convention, both to the general work and to Palmer College. The isolation of the Churches, however, is so great that field work must be done to maintain their feeling of Church unity. But the Churches are promoting their denominational loyalty by a wide use of the Sunday School literature and the publications of the Christian Publishing Association, which keeps them continually in touch with the larger work of the Church. The great need of these Churches is men, and at least a field worker, giving time to Kansas and Nebraska, and five young ministers who are ready to serve and to sacrifice there, are among the immediate needs of this section.

Dr. Fletcher declares that the tour was greatly worth while, and that this is probably the first time for years that any representative of the general Church has touched some of these outlying Churches of our Western Convention outside of the representatives of the Western Convention.

The field is large and needy, and a loyal people are ready to co-operate in any way for the advancement of the whole cause and objectives of the Church and the kingdom.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

WANTED.

We want a place for the Sunday School Convention of the Eastern North Carolina Conference to meet this summer.

The Churches desiring to have the Convention meet with them will please send their invitations at once to C. H. Stephenson, president, Raleigh, N. C.. as the executive board will meet on Tuesday evening following the first Sunday in February, and at that time will decide the time and place of the meeting of the Convention.

C. H. STEPHENSON, Pres.
J. F. JOHNSON, Ex. Secy.

The managing editor desires to thank all who have aided in the circulation of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Will others join us?

TEACHERS AND TEACHING.

By Rev. W. C. Wicker, D. D.

All the other departments of the Sunday School exist for the promotion of the educational department. The great problem in Sunday School work is the problem of teachers and teaching, and for this reason this subject shall engage our attention during this hour.

The first question of great concern is the personality of the teacher. In religious education especially, the first consideration should be concerned with the personality and moral characistics of those who teach, for Sunday School teachers teach by example as well as by precept.

The first scientific study of the personality of the teacher was made in 1912 by supervising officers and principals at the suggestion and under the direction of A. C. Boyce. These superintendents and principals in thirty-eight different towns and cities in the North Central and Middle Atlantic States were asked to rate their teachers in order, according to general excellence, placing the best first, the next best second, and so on to the poorest teacher; and they were further asked to rank them according to certain specific qualities, such as instructional skill, general appearance, health, disciplinary ability, success with pupils, adaptibility, sympathy, and a sense of humor. The amount of preparation and experience was also recorded. The chief conclusions arrived at were that the specific qualities of merit in the secondary school teacher that contribute most towards success are instructional skill, securing results, stimulating individuals, intellectual capacity and ability to maintain discipline.

A later study by the same investigator, in 1915, confirmed, in general, these conclusions.

It should be kept in mind that most of the qualities here listed are relatively complex. For example, instructional skill is composed of various elements. Boyce lists them under the technique of teaching, as follows: definiteness and clearness of aim, skill in habit-formation, skill in stimulating thought, skill in teaching how to study, skill in questioning, choice of subject-matter, organization of subject-matter, skill and care in assignments, skill in motivating work, attention to individual needs. Likewise, discipline is a matter that has many different aspects.

The term "personality" is often vaguely used to indicate a quality highly essential to the success of the teacher. F. L. Clapp, as reported by Prof. Bagley, in "School Discipline," attempted to give this term a more specific meaning by securing from one hundred experienced superintendents and principles lists of ten specific qualities which entered into the personality of the teacher. These qualities, in order of their importance, were to be: address, personal appearance, optimism, reserve, enthusiasm, fairness, sincerity, sympathy, vitality, scholarship.

The negative side of the question as to what constitutes a successful teacher has been worked out by several investigators by securing data from superintendents and principals, as to the causes of failure of members of the teaching staff. These, in general, point to conclusions similar to those obtained from approaching the question of excellence from the positive side, and show the great importance of discipline, instructional skill and a strong personality.

Cleda Moses, in "School and Home Education, 1914, places poor instructions as the chief cause of failure among teachers. She finds further that a weak personality, coupled with poor discipline, were important elements contributing to failure. Lack of sympathy, nervousness, deficiency in social qualities, and deceitfulness were also causes.

In a recent study made by Grace Bird, at Brown University, results similar to those secured by Prof. Book were obtained. Miss Bird asked 392 pupils to state the qualities they liked best in their teachers. Two hundred and fifty-three boys, replying, mentioned most frequently in the order named the following qualities: fairness, kindness, disciplinary control, patience, humor, good temper, social ability, knowledge of subject, clearness of explanation, and neatness.

The order of preference for the girls replying was kindness, disciplinary control, patience, humor, fairness, clearness of explanation, neatness, good temper, and sociability. One of the striking results of the study was the fact that nearly two-thirds of the girls replying mentioned kindness as a quality to be found in an ideal teacher. The boys did not agree with any such unanimity in regard to any single quality, but one-quarter of them mentioned fairness, and a little over one-fifth kindness. If kindness, patience, good temper, humor and sociability are combined, we find these qualities mentioned by nearly half the boys and all the girls, clearly showing that the kind, social, and good-natured teacher is generally liked. Those qualities that are related to instructional skill—knowledge of the subject, clearness of explanation, and neatness are regarded as important by both boys and girls, but are mentioned more frequently by the latter, about one-sixth of the boys and one-half of the girls referring to these requirements. On the whole, the study shows a high correlation between the judgment of boys and girls as to what constitutes a good teacher.

If we summarize all these studies and name the common qualities of personality which have been named by school officials and pupils, we shall have something like the following characteristics essential to the personality of the successful school teacher: scholarship, good appearance, good health, a good voice, self-control, sympathy, kindness, energy, professional aspect, fair-mindedness, enthusiasm and promptness.

From all this study, we learn that the teacher's personality depends upon his conduct as a teacher. His conduct determines his general physical appearance and develops certain tendencies and habits that reveal the inner characteristics on the spirit and life of the teacher. The professional man soon develops a certain type of personality corresponding to his profession. The lawyer, the doctor, the preacher, and the college professor, as well as the teacher, soon develop a certain type or set of personality. This is due to the fact that conduct soon determines mannerisms as well as excellent qualities; habits constitute the sum total of our education. Habits are based upon our instinctive tendencies to act. Man, by nature, is active, and his activities tend to become fixed and formulated as they accidently hit upon satisfying responses to environment as in trial and error learning, or are controlled by the higher thought process of reflective thinking. It is true that teachers must be born with certain instincts that form the warp of a good teacher, but the woof is woven in by guiding activities until they become formulated into suitable habits and skillful practices in the teaching process. We are capable of developing almost any type of personality, provided we have the innate tendencies for such development. This offers a large field for the improvement of Sunday School teachers who are in service to improve themselves by helpful reading, by group discussion, by the exchange of helpful suggestions that may develop from cooperative thinking. These studies of personality that we have reviewed are bristling with suggestions for the Sunday School teacher. They show that there are certain essential qualities for any successful teacher; that these qualities have an instinctive basis in controlling our teaching activities until they shall become a part of our permanent nature. In a sense, we are masters of our professional preparation as Sunday School teachers. We can develop personality if we will, and the consecrated teacher will.

Personal magnetism is a result that can be acquired by the proper development of personality, which can be attained only by education and training. It grows out of self-confidence without too much self-assertion. There must be manifested a strong will, and habits of interested attention, clear-cut, purposive thinking, and habits of making definite decisions. A strong will depends on the power and practice of concentration of attention. A strong will depends on the power and practice of concentration of attention. A strong personality grows out of self-controll, incites and maintains activity as well as inhibits random response in situations of doubt, difficulty and perplexity.

For strong personality, there must be real ability and achievement in some worthy field of experience. Expert knowledge in any field will draw people to you rather than repel them. The Sunday School teacher that would develop a strong personality and strong personal magnetism must become an expert master in some particular field of biblical knowledge. He must be looked up to as an authority in some kind of Sunday School work. Then people will be drawn to him with a fascination, and hang upon his words with unabated attention. He must have initiative in thought and action, and possess a degree of originality in doing things in a new way.

The disposition and attitude of the teacher of strong personality must be happy and attractive. He must have an optimistic temperament toward life. He must feel that God is in his heaven and all is well with the world. He must be considerate of others, interpreting their motives as his own and co-operating with them in realizing their ideals. The strong personality will show friendliness and frankness of manner, develop genuine love for people, cultivate an intelligent understanding of their desires, and appropriately express a keen appreciation for their purposes.

The manner in which we conduct ourselves as teachers will greatly modify our methods of expressing our personality. For example, the skillful pianist or violinist, by training and practice, modify their ability to express their personality through musical instruments. The public speaker acquires similar ability by the masterful controll of voice, facial expression and jesture. And the Sunday School teacher can acquire similar powers of expressing personality and acquiring personal magnetism by seeking improvement through study and group discussion and helpful reading.

The Sunday School teacher who nags her pupils will tell it in her face. The sunny, optimistic, cheerful nature, suffused with kindness, will wear a radiant face, aglow with the glory of God, which wins the best that is in human nature in its upward reach for self-realization. Sunday School teachers cannot afford to wear refrigerator faces.

In the smoothly running class, the teacher must dominate the entire class by the imperial power of a spiritual personality. Such a teacher controls not by physical force, but by what may be vaguely called his personality. What this personality consists in, from the standpoint of the pupil, we have found out. The pupil has a rather definite notion of the teacher that he likes; and an equally clear notion of the teacher he dislikes. We have seen that the well-liked teacher must have a good nature, he must be cheerful, pleasant, enthusiastic, sympathetic, patient, and possessed of a sense of humor. But to be good-natured is not enough. These qualities alone do not constitute an ideal teacher from the point of view of the pupil. He must be absolutely fair, and administer strict justice. Further than this, he must know his subject and have some skill in teaching it; and he must at all times be master of the situation. Every teacher should strive to be liked by his pupils, for if he is liked by them, he will have little trouble in discipline. There will be no positive and intentional disorder. Inattention and minor disorders will be checked by a look or a word. If the pupils know what the teacher wants, they will try to do it.

By striving to understand them and to help them, they will come to understand you, and in this way a mutual sympathy will be created, a sympathy that will be genuine and lasting.

In the class, you should always be good-natured, but you cannot afford to laugh every time your pupils laugh, just to show your sense of humor, for much of their laughter may be silly. Be patient, but not procrastinating. You should not always restrain yourself. You must sympathize with stupidity and folly, but you must do what you can to remove them.

Cultivate initiative on the part of the class, but do not surrender your control. Let your pupils know what you think and what you believe to be right. When there is doubt, be frank to admit it, but be sure of those things that you ought to know. Be positive in your teaching.

Have courage. Meet every situation resolutely, with a firm voice and vigorous manner. Youth admires courage, respects action, reverences mastery. When you have once determined what to do, never hesitate. Be master of yourself and you will have the strong support of the class.

FROM BRO. J. S. CARDEN.

The dear brethren and sisters of Bethel (Caswell County) Church still remember their former pastor in the way of giving a nice purse of money. Those that gave were J. W. O'Ferrell, John Shaw, W. M. Miles, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Murray, Mrs. Dr. Penix and Bro. Thomas Fitch. May God's blessings continue with them all is my prayer. Many thanks to all.

Bros. J. E. Heron, from Carboro; F. R. Snippe and Paul Wicker, from Sanford; C. Welch, of New Hill, all of these brothers remembered me with a nice Christmas present in the way of money. Many thanks to them all.

On Thursday before Christmas, a truck drove up to my door loaded with meat, flour, sugar, pickles, honey, preserves, two pound-cakes and many other things that make a preacher and his family feel good. May God bless these good people. This came from Hanks Chapel to their former pastor, showing that they haven't forgotten him yet. I served this Church for seven years and found them a good people. May God's blessing continue with them, is the prayer of their former pastor.

On the fourth Sunday in December, at my appointment, when I got off the train and walked over to T. J. Preston's house and sat down, Bro. Preston asked me if Santa Claus had been to see me. I told him that he had. "Well," he said, "he has come here to see you, too, and has brought flour, sugar, coffee, pickles, canned goods, money and many other things that make a preacher and his family feel good. We also received a nice box of oranges sent from Florida from Bro. J. E. Sapp, a member of Belews Creek. This is my first year with this Church. I find a consecrated people ready to do what they can to further the cause of Christ. May God's blessings continue with them, and I, as their pastor, render to them a great service this year.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR.

J. O. ATKINSON, Elon College, N. C.

Contributing Editors.

W. W. STALEY W. A. HARPER
R. C. HELFENSTEIN S. C. HARRELL

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

OUR MANNER OF CONVERSATION.

A recent public speaker declared that our conversation is an index to our thoughts; that what we talked most about showed what we were thinking most about. Does our speech reveal our thoughts? Is the tenor and trend of our conversation also the burden and bundle of our thought? If so, it is easy to discover what people are thinking most about, not only most in quantity, but in quality also.

The sociologists have made it very easy to check up on the matter—have, in fact, checked up for us. In the conversation of the present, gathered from hundreds of sources, the common and uncommon walks of life, people are talking most of all about "industry." That which is most often spoken of in conversation now, we are told, is something about industry, business, affairs, things. Second in the list is politics—things that pertain to the State, to government, to laws, to authority. Third in the list, we are assured, is the school—education, scholarship, learning, ignorance, culture. Fourth in the list is the home—domestic relationships, divorce, marriage, rearing of children, youth, old age. The last and least in the list of the five topics of our usual conversation, we are told, is the Church—religion, spirituality, holy pursuits, divine achievements.

If the sociologists have checked up accurately and correctly, it is a rather dismal showing; provided, of course, that our conversation is a real index to our thinking. If people generally talk most about that which they think most often on and about, then ours is indeed and in truth an industrial age. For we are thinking first and foremost of all in terms of industry.

This is not as the prophets said it should be, nor as our Lord Christ taught and preached and lived that it might be. "Which of you, by taking thought, can add one cubit unto his stature? And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin: and yet I say unto you, that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. But seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness: and all other things shall be added unto you."

THE SENSE OF STEWARDSHIP.

Can we bring home to ourselves not the meaning only, but the sense of stewardship? There is a distinction and a difference. We may get the meaning from a dictionary, from any book or volume of definitions; but there is need now of more than definition—yea! even of more than meaning. There may have been a day of definition, a time when one could know the meaning and not yet practice the might of stewardship. If there was such a day and time, that now has past and is done.

What will this Christian Church of ours, what will we members and individuals of the Church, do about stewardship?

Our progress, our spiritual life and power, our future are at stake. The times, the customs, the events and stubborn facts of the day in which we live have forced us to the issue. We shall have to say in one way or in another what we will do with the might and meaning of stewardship.

Stewardship is not tithing. Our practice of tithing is only one way of manifesting our belief in stewardship, in the matter of goods, possessions, belongings. If we have a sense of stewardship we are likely to express that sense in the holy habit and divine practice of tithing.

But the full sense of stewardship makes us realize that our time, our talents, our possessions belong to God, and we are His stewards in charge for a season. By tithing, we legally and rightfully acknowledge His sovereignty over that increase which He allows to come for the time into our hands. The sense, the feeling, the realization of stewardship enable us to tithe gladly and graciously and happily.

But in what way has our time forced to the fore, as an issue, the fact and matter of stewardship? Briefly and pointedly, because ours is an industrial time. We think and talk and act in terms of industry, of materials, of things. And God has ever shaken in terms of the times in which His children live and try to learn. If we would now think through to God, feel after and find Him, we shall have to think through the thin veneer of this industrial age, and find God, see God, realize and interpret God as the Owner, Creator, Possessor of things, of industries, of the world's wealth, and of the time and talents and energy and wisdom of man in managing and accumulating things. Partners with God, servants and stewards of God in managing for Him the themes and things we find about us. This is stewardship in its true sense and significance.

THE NEW YEAR.

The New Year opens; the Old Year is no more. The Old Year has written its history; the New Year takes up its pen to write a new chapter in human history of your life and mine. All best things are new when they receed. Sunrise is as new in the morning as it was on time's first morning. What is not worth repeating is not worth saying or doing once. Sin will not bear repetition, for it gets worse every time. Hate grows worse when repeated; love grows better all the time. God can do nothing better than to love men again and again; but He can use a thousand ways to express that love. God will never repeat the flood; but He does repeat the seasons and the harvests. The old songs are the best; but they are the best when they are sung anew. Anything new is better than the old—the new house, the new dress, the new car, the new life. The New Year deserves to be better than last year. The year itself is no better, but we may make it better by being better and doing more than last year. How can this be done?

By laying out new plans and executing them—that is what progressive business men do. No man can build without a plan. No man can really live without a plan. Plans are maps of the future. The largest plan is the religious plan, because it reaches farthest into the future. It plans for eternity. It includes destiny. It builds upon the "apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief corner-stone." The Church should lay her plans to do the best work of her history during 1925. This can be done by beginning the first of the year and working to the end of the year. Church attendance is a big factor in kingdom work; "not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is." If all Church members would attend Church regularly, it would make this year of grace a New Year indeed. One of the weak spots in the Church is non-attendance.

Systematic giving is another element in turning over a new leaf in the New Year. If farmers waited till harvest-time to plant, even the seed would be lost. They must plant in planting-time to reap in harvest-time. Weekly or monthly contributions, as services may be held, should begin the year's giving. "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." "Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together and running over, shall men give unto your bosom. For with the same measure that ye mete withal, it shall be measured to you again." No man can successfully serve God and withhold from Him His due or tribute. Giving is the material expression of spiritual faith. "Man shall not live by bread alone," and the "kingdom" cannot live by worship alone. It takes bread and the Word of God to make man live; and it takes faith and works of man to make the kingdom grow.

It requires work also to make the New Year an improvement on the Old. "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling; for it is God which worketh in you, both to will and to do of His good pleasure." It is the Christian's privilege to work out what God works in. That is what the miner does. That is what the musician does. That is what the inventor does. "Son, go work in my vineyard." "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." Begin the New Year with a self-starter. God can give you that. Keep in the road. Make straight for the city of our God. The New Year is a new opportunity. It is a new gift from God. It is a part of eternity. It contains destinies. It is the gate to heaven. We are responsible for its use and its results. Shut the door on last year; open the door into the New Year, and make Church membership count for its true value, and it will glorify God.

When an eagle built her nest on the transcontinental telephone line between San Francisco and New York, at a point near Elko, Nevada, telephone conversation between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts was stopped and Associated Press wires for a few hours had no service. In the nest were found pieces of wire and automobile parts, which caused a short-circuit.

Denmark has decided to introduce a bill disbanding its army and navy and providing for a constabulary only.

PERSONAL RELIGION AND PUBLIC RIGHTEOUSNESS.

By Dr. W. A. Harper.

[This address was written by Dr. Harper to be delivered before the Federal Council, at Atlanta, Ga., December 8th. There was deep regret that Dr. Harper could not attend the council and deliver the address on account of illness in his family at the time. —Editor.]

"For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

These words are the greatest utterance in the religious history of mankind. They are a rebuke to those who would spurn the world as unworthy of redemption. What God loves, no man can sanely hate. They are a rebuke to the social propagandists, under whatever name, who would reform the world by a change of environment. These words are a synthesis of what we have come to know as personal religion and the social gospel. In the common thought of our age, we have divorced these synthetic ideas, to the hurt of the kingdom of God. The personal gospel is social in its expression. The social gospel is personal in its dynamic. What God hath joined together, let no man or organization of men dare put asunder.

We were greatly disturbed a few years ago when the psychologists announced that, so far as they could discover, there was no such factor in our mental and spiritual makeup as a religious instinct. Psychologists were declared to be Godless, and we vociferously denounced them. But we were wrong. Man's religious life, we know now, has a much more solid foundation than any instinct could give it. Our religious nature rests on the synthesis of all our instincts. Religion is native to every realm of the experience of life. Religion has a message for the whole man. It cannot be confined to a single segment of his being. It spiritualizes and vitalizes with its dynamic the whole circle of human relationships. Wherever man may go, whatever he may aspire to be, religion is the inspiration of his way, the lamp of his feet, the light of his pathway; provided he will co-ordinate and synthesize his motives in terms of the spiritual dynamic of life. The most vitalizing dynamic for any man is to know the will of God. He who enters upon any undertaking in response to a deep religious conviction, is the most effective man in the world. He is invincible in any cause who is conscious that he is in the line of God's appointing. You may crucify him, but his cause will live on. His blood will save his brothermen. The blood of its martyrs is the guarantee of the perpetuity and progress of any crusade for righteousness.

We can, therefore, now, with all the more confidence, declare that man is incurably religious; that he will never outgrow his religious needs. When we have pruned away all the instincts of our nature, upon which religion rests, we will have ceased to be human. We will be truly dead. So long as there is life, there is religion's opportunity to vitalize every longing of the heart of man. Religion is the sole sovereign power able to give grace and beauty and worthful meaning to life. No normal man has yet been found without the majestic presence of religion in his life as a shaping, guiding, uplifting influence. Atheists and agnostics are oftentimes very religious persons. Their very denial of religious faith itself becomes a religion. Only those who are incapable of a cohesive principle, a synthesizing power in their experiences, can be described as fundamentally irreligious. Insane people are accordingly irreligious. They have no motive for their conduct, no organizing, synthesizing principle for their life.

When we essay to discuss religion therefore, we are dealing with the most important theme that can possibly engage the thought of man. What a man's religion is, determines his character. Character is the fruit of religious convictions. Isaiah's religious convictions made him the most exalted seer of ancient Israel. Paul's religious convictions transformed him from a bigoted Pharisee into a truly spiritual democrat, ready to be all things to all men, that he might communicate to them the enthusiasm for humanity which was the central concept in the gospel he preached. So absorbed in, so dedicated to this cause was he that he could declare: "For me to live is Christ."

Martin Luther's religious convictions made him the unperturbed storm-center of the Protestant Reformation. "God helping me," he said, "I can do no other." We can cite numberless instances from history and from personal experience wherein religious convictions have transformed little men into big ones, made pigmies into giants, out of the refuse of life produced seers and prophets of the hopeful way. Truly does a man's faith become for him the substance of the things he hopes for, the evidence of the things not now but to be seen. Our deeds are the fruitage of our creeds. And religious dogma, understood and conceived as a working symbol of spiritual reality, is a tremendous inspiration to noble, to serviceable, to sacrificial living.

Religion does as marvelous things for the social order, for the organizations and institutions of life, as it does for the personal man. President Coolidge has truly said, "The strength of our country is the strength of its religious convictions." Religion is the sole universal interest capable of unifying men. If the world is ever to be saved, religion will save it. The history of the world teaches one thing sure and certain, that the organizations of men cannot permanently survive the loss of religion as their unifying force. Grote ascribes the fall of Greece to the decay of her religious belief in what we are pleased to call her pagan deities. Athens' great scholars destroyed the religion of their country. No unifying force arose in the form of a better religion, and the glory that was Greece faded away. The situation in Japan today is ominous with disaster for that country and for the world for a parallel reason. Contact with our Western civilization is fast undermining her religious convictions. We owe those splendidly endowed people the gospel that has made our Western civilization possible, and we must spare no effort to discharge our Christian obligation. "Blessed is that nation whose God is the Lord." Blessed is that age in human history that shall give to the whole world a religion that shall unify all nations into a functioning whole.

A religion that is to be this universal, unifying force must not only have strong religious convictions, but those convictions must be correct. They must rest on unimpeachable notions and ideals as to certain fundamental issues for the human soul and for every interest of the soul. This universal religion must appeal to the highest loyalties of life, and it must supply the dynamic capable of bestirring its adherents to consistent and persistent pursuit of the demands of those loyalties. The great questions that men's hearts yearn to have answered for them and which the seers and prophets have ever striven to answer must be ideally satisfied in the conception of this religion. It must convincingly tell men of God, of man, of the world, of destiny. Is there a religion that can do this? Then that religion holds the keys to the kingdom of God, that religion will eventually win the universal homage of men's hearts, that religion will redeem the world. Is there such a religion, or look we for another?

Our conviction is unequivocal that the Christian religion is able to answer these issues, and that it is destined to redeem mankind. Its conception of God as our loving, spiritual Father, satisfies the deep heart-hunger of the soul for a unifying principle that shall be all-inclusive in the spiritual realm. The Mohammedan conception of God as arbitrary and partial in His dealings and relations with men appalls and repels us. The Hindu conception of Him as spiritual force and as untouched by our life, its infirmities or its achievements, fails to quicken us to noble action. But our Christian view of Him as present in His world, as vitally concerned in the consequences of our conduct, as grieved when we sin, or rejoiced when we achieve victories for His cause, and in every instance loving us, no matter how far we stray from his way, such a conception wins the hearty assent of all men everywhere. The Christian's God is the kind of God the world needs. We rejoice that our religion is privileged to make Him known to all men. We are confident they will love Him when they know Him as He is. For such a loving, spiritual Father, we are inwardly moved to undertake any conceivable task. Nothing is too high for those who feel He wishes them to aspire to it, and nothing too menial.

The Christian conception of man, too, satisfies the universal yearning for a unifying force, capable of welding the races of men into a social solidarity that shall end strife and enthrone peace, righteousness and good will as the ruling passion of men's hearts. The Mohammedan religion debases man into a plaything in the hands of Deity. The Hindu religion holds before him the enervating absorption into Norvana wherein personality is regarded as the chief of evils. Our Christian religion regards man as the child of God, the object of His loving solicitude, and as brother to every other man. Spiritual Fatherhood and spiritual brotherhood are the obverse and reverse of the same great conception. As brothers, so teaches our Christian faith, we must do all that becomes brothers, such brothers as the children of a loving spiritual Father should be. How puny and pitiful appear the quarrels and jealousies of men one for another in the glorious illumination of this conception of brotherhood! Christian brotherhood! What infinite possibilities it offers us to exemplify the tender affections of the family life in all the experiences of living! Such conception of man as Christianity teaches satisfies the noblest longings of the heart. It honors man as the child of God and it honors God as the Father of man.

In its conception of the world, our Christian religion takes sharp issue with the other two great spiritual religions of the world. They both agree in conceiving the world as something vile and essentially evil. The Hindu would escape from its pollution. The Mohammedan would use it as a means of sensuous enjoyment. Our religion regards it as the handiwork of God, as eminently serviceable to the life and growth, even the spiritual life and growth of man, as essentially good, as a challenge to men to transform it wherein it is lacking, as the arena of action wherein is eventually to be realized the democracy of God. We are commanded to subdue the world and to replenish it. The Christian view further conceives of God as pleased when the world and its forces are made more serviceable to the life of man. The world of the Christian can, therefore, be no static world. Progress and

(Continued on Page 8.)

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

There are three good reasons why highways should not parallel railroads, and yet a little travel on railroads or highways will disclose the fact that many new highways do parallel the railroads. Highways should not be competitors of railroads. Railroads have done more to develop the United States than any other one factor. Bus lines paralleling railroads compete not only in passenger traffic, but the constant sight of it makes an impression that reduces the public estimate of the value of railroads. Railroads have created business, distributed products, educated the public, and helped to civilize mankind. Subtract their activities from service, and coal, iron, lumber, and scores of other industries would be reduced to almost primitive conditions. Bus lines have their place, make their contribution to human convenience and real business, but they should co-operate with and not compete with railroads. "Competition" is said to be "the life of trade," but it is often the death of the trader.

Highways should go through the country, serve the country people, increase business in the country, help to improve farms and Churches, homes and schools, and really put the rural districts in touch with one another. The concrete, or sand-clay, roads along railroads may help tourists, those who go from town to town, those who ride for pleasure; but they do not benefit the average farmer as he deserves. Railroads ten or twenty miles apart are not of much service to the midway section between them. If the highway passed midway between the railroads, it would put that stretch of country in easy touch with the towns.

In the third place, it is easy to see that farmhouses do not gravitate to the railroads; but they do move to the highways. If the highway branched out from the towns through the country, farmers would naturally move their homes to the side of the road and on both sides of the road. They would also improve their houses, their homes, their lands, their orchards, their premises generally. Go back in the country far from railroads and good roads, and very little paint is used; but where people live in sight of the public they naturally paint their houses, their barns, and their fences. It would really be more attractive to tourists. Young people would be more inclined to remain in the country. It is a fine idea to make the way good for tourists; but it must be kept in mind that the country lives and prospers through its permanent residents. No criticism of towns and cities, of tourists or pleasure-seekers; what is intended is a plea for the expenditure of tax in a way that will benefit all taxpayers. Any system that builds cities at the expense of the country is unjust and a public fallacy. Railroads should build cities; highways should build the country. Both are necessary, and they should help each other; and that is true of all activities.

W. W. STALEY.

ELON LETTER.

The blind confidence in a progressive social order which obsesses our age is responsible in large measure for the laxity of morals and the general religious depression. People somehow have come to believe that since God is in His heavens, all is well with the world, and that all we need is enough time for man and the world to come inevitably to a state of perfection.

This pernicious conception—for it is pernicious and tragic too—takes its rise out of the mechanical action of evolution, which Darwin enunciated in his doctrines of natural selection and of the survival of the fittest. If time is all that has been necessary to bring man to his present state, more time will bring him to a higher state, and enough time will bring him to perfection. How easy it all is! Just fold your hands and wait, wait. With such a notion of progress, why should we worry about anything? Morals, religion, industry, everything will come out all right if we give evolution time enough. Meanwhile, we are not personally responsible for progress, nor even for our own acts.

Now, all this is veriest nonsense. We know that progress has not evolved according to any such simple mechanical process. The law of progress, we admit, is in man's nature. But the method of that progress is equally there, according to which there can be no progress without hard effort to climb from the lower to the higher stage. And there is another law equally as persistent and equally as operative, that we must go forward or backward—we cannot stand still. God has said that those who love Him He will prosper to thousands of generations, but those who sin against Him for the third or fourth generation He will cut off. This law is inexorable. The biologists, along with the theologians, are beginning to appreciate its force and presence. And this is modern evolution. It is also ancient theology of the Christian type.

Now, the writer is naturally an optimist. This pessimistic note is sounded in the belief that in the final analysis it is the most enduring sort of optimism. We recognize that progress is the law of life, and worthwith we begin to grow optimistic over the future. We must, however, also recognize that progress can come only through constant effort, and that failing such effort, devolution (not evolution), retrogression (not progress) will inevitably ensue. We find evidences of such moral and spiritual decay all around us today.

Our leaders in moral and spiritual education, which especially includes our parents, our ministers, and our teachers in whatever kind of school, need to understand the implications of these facts and to inculcate right standards of life and conduct in the minds and hearts of the young. Young people will not resent stern morality when they understand that its standards are necessary to guarantee the progress of the race and of the kingdom of God. The heroic, the sacrificial, the hard things grip and challenge youth.

Darwin was wrong. Mankind has advanced, but not mechanically, nor without design and effort. Progress has been achieved through conscious struggle to attain. Tihs sort of evolution is the very heart and essence of the Christian gospel. That other mechanical sort is rankest paganism, is materialism gone to seed. It is greatly undoing our moral and religious life at this time. Let us have a vertebrate evolution, an evolution based on the will to advance in moral and spiritual achievement, and all will be well.

W. A. HARPER.

VALLEY LETTER.

I have been in revival meetings almost continually since October 2d, and have been so busy all the time I have not had time to give an account of myself through THE SUN.

I have held revival meetings at Leaksville, Bethlehem, Concord, and Newport. All were good meetings. Congregations were good most of the time, sometimes unusually good. There were ten conversions at Leaksville, twelve at Bethlehem, five at Concord, and nineteen at Newport, forty-six in all. Most of these united with the Churches. About the only outside help I had was the Cadle Crusaders from Harrisonburg a few nights at Bethlehem and Concord, and my wife to take charge of the music sometimes. The weather has been fine for meetings most of the time, and I have enjoyed keeping busy preaching and visiting all the time. It is a strenuous life, and means sometimes a sad neglect of writing, reading and study; but I hope the neglect along this line is fuly atoned for by the amount of good accomplished even apart from the souls won to Christ and the Church. I have now pulled into winter quarters at home to spend as much of the winter weather at home as I can between Sundays, and catch up a little on some much-needed reading and study.

This is my first year with the Churches at Leaksville and Newport. I am well pleased with the work at both places, and like the people fine. Before taking these two Churches, I gave up five Churches in Shenandoah County—Woods Chapel, Whistler's Chapel, Palmyra, Joppa and Dry Run —to Rev. D. B. Seal. I had been pastor for eighteen years at some of these Churches, and for a little less time at the others, and it was somewhat like leaving home to give them up.

My last day with them was a sad day to me, though sweetened by the conviction that strong friendships had grown up between us during those years that would never die out. Since making this change in my work, I still have seven Churches to care for, and so I am still kept very busy. I like to be busy among Churches and people, and yet I have a great desire to spend more time in my study.

Several of my Churches held very appropriate Christmas services this year. Bethlehem and Concord had excellent services, which it was my privilege to attend. Bethlehem observed the now-famous "white gift" service, which, in my judgment, is a decided improvement over the ordinary service. Giving to those in need is a more blessed thing to do than to receive some little gift for which there is no real need. I think Timber Ridge and Leaksville also had Christmas services, but it was not my privilege to attend them.

While filling my appointments at Timber Ridge the third Sunday in December, I found myself the victim of an organized and prearranged pounding at the hands of some of my best friends there, and then received threat from others that more of the same kind awaited me upon my next visit. Friends in some of my other Churches, while they have not taken me by storm like Timber Ridge did, have kept up a sort of continual pounding all fall as opportunity afforded. For all these things, and especially the good will thereby shown, the whole Andes family is deeply grateful. These tokens of appreciation serve to lighten the load on a busy pastor's heart, diminish the family care, and stimulate the energy to do a faithful part toward a great and good people.

A. W. ANDES.

Harrisonburg, Va.

DR. STALEY VISITS BETHLEHEM.

At the close of the meeting of the Federal Council, in Atlanta, Ga., Dr. W. W. Staley, of Suffolk, Va., paid a visit to Bethlehem College, Wadley, Ala. While here, he preached three excellent sermons at the Wadley Christian Church to large, attentive audiences. His subjects were: "The powers that are for the Church are more than those that are against it"; "Co-operation, or fellow-workers with God and men"; "Three men in one." His discourses were admired because of their spirituality, simplicity and power.

His lectures at the college certainly made a "hit" with the student body. The subjects were: "The three unpopulars—the subject, teacher, and the student"; "Youth—is the training time, the fighting time, the learning time, the loving time, and the believing time." The addresses were filled with wit and humor, or, as Sam Jones would put it, "facts, fun and philosophy." He also made an address to the students of the public school in the morning before he left for his return trip home, to the profit and pleasure of all.

His work and associations were surely appreciated by all who met him or heard him speak. Everybody considered it an honor to have Dr. Staley come to Wadley and pay a visit to the college. Everybody looked upon him as a grand (old?) man, whose face was filled with sunshine, and from whose lips and life flowed a great message.

There is a kindly welcome extended to him to visit Wadley and the college again. Many have expressed a desire to have him deliver a course of lectures at Bethlehem College next year.

Wadley, Ala. S. L. Beougher.

NEW YEAR'S MESSAGE TO CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS.

Dear Christian Endeavorers:

Some of you I haven't seen for a long time, and others, perhaps, not at all; but I trust the New Year brings each of you happiness and renewed interest and energy for the Christian Endeavor work. This is my New Year wish for you. Have you made any new Christian resolutions? Any new Endeavor resolutions?

Beginning this week, I am writing the Christian Endeavor notes for The Sun, and I want you to help me in the following ways:

1. Your Christian Endeavor Society is your very own, and it isn't like any other society anywhere else. The suggestions which I may make may not always be suitable for your society. Your task is to make your society best serve your young people, give them the things they most need, and help in the Sunday School and Church work. The aim of any Christian Endeavor Society is to win the young people of the Church to Christ, to enrich the daily lives of the members, to train them for active service and to give them something to do that is worth while. Your success as a Christian Endeavor Society can be measured only as you serve the members, and they in turn serve Christ and others.

2. In order for me to give you what you need, I must first know that need. Write me the kind of things you would like included in the notes each week.

3. Subscribe to the Journal of Christian Education, published at the Christian Publishing Association, C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio. It is one of our strongest Church periodicals, and costs only $1.00 per year. In it each month, besides the special articles and suggestions, are the Christian Endeavor notes written by Mr. Hermon Eldredge, whom most of you know. You will find them very helpful.

4. Make your program for each meeting soon enough for each member to know his part at least a week ahead of time. A well-planned and well-prayed-over meeting will mean a good meeting. Do you talk ten minutes when you have prepared only five minutes?

5. When your society has done something worth while, write a short article about it and send it to me and I will have it published in The Sun. This will give suggestions to other societies.

6. I wonder how many of you are planning already to come to the Chautauqua next summer! Now is the time to begin planning for it. Last year we had a large number of young people at Elon and Bethlehem; so many, in fact, that this year our program will include a number of special classes and special features for our young people.

Many good wishes for 1925.

Sincerely yours,

Pattie Coghill.

Wars in which the United States has taken part since 1790, exclusive of the World War, have cost the nation more than $6,836,000,000 in pensions.

Subscribers who do not receive their paper should write and send full, corrected address.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The Illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the Number and prices.

TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Minion Bold-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4 7-8x 7 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

India Paper Edition, Size 4 7-8x7 Inches, 1 1-10 Inches Thick.

2152X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$6.00

Bourgeois Type, Size 5 3-8x8 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2167—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.00

2172—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.50

India Paper Edition, Only 1 1-8 Inches Thick.

2172X—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$8.50

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3¾x3⅜ inches, and 1 inch thick; with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black.

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations. Special book for Sunday Schools 95c

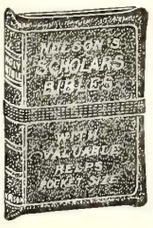
Ruby Type, Size 3¾x3⅜ Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps $2.50

Minion Type, Pocket Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ inches Thick.

With 32 full-colored illustrations; also 25 outline maps through the text and 12 colored maps.

133—Bound in cloth, round corners, red edges, title stamped on side in pure gold $1.60



135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 15-16 of an Inch Thick.

135X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.75

Minion Black-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4¾x 7 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick.

Printed from clear, large, black-face type, 32 full-page illustrations in Sepia and colors, 4,000 Questions and Answers, Harmony of the Gospels, How to Study the Sunday School Lesson, 25 outline Maps, 12 full-page colored Maps.

4152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold.....$3.25

TEXT BIBLES—AMERICAN STANDARD VERSION.

Printed from Easy-Reading Type, on Good Bible Paper, for Sunday School and Church Use.

Minion Type, Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick, 25 Outline Maps, Bound in Black.

101—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, title stamped on back in pure gold..$1.10

112—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title on back in pure gold $2.75

India Paper Edition, Only ⅞-Inch Thick.

112X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

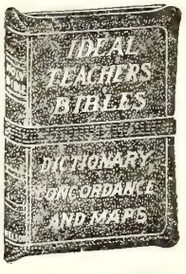
Reference and Text Bibles also in minion, brevier, bourgeois, long primer, pica and English type.

Thumb index cut on edge, 50c extra; name printed on any Bible in gold, 40c extra; extra wording, 40c per line.

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (v vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3-8x 8 1-2 Inches and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

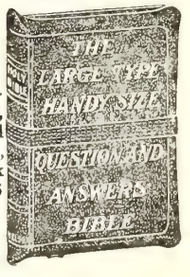


Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red;other parts of the book are printed in black. With concise Bible dictionary, combined concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.75

RED LETTER EDITION

With all the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.



1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands, title stamped on side and back in pure gold $3.25

Any of the above Bibles sent post paid. Address

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street, - - - Richmond, Va.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

By Warren H. Denison, Secretary.

Some Churches do not use any envelopes. This is usually due to the fact that some member of the finance committee or of the official board has for years fought against using envelopes to keep his brother officers from knowing how little he gives to advance the cause of Christ. He has been hiding his penuriousness behind the passage in the Scriptures where Jesus refers to giving to the poor and needy. One stingy, avaricious officer who has not learned the joy of giving, can block the Church from having an efficient system if the other officers will allow him. The regular contributors want the envelope system. The irregular contributors need the envelopes to train them to become regular contributors. The envelope system reveals the ones who do not give anything. So envelopes are needed for all the members to train them to give regularly and proportionately.

Then, there is another system that may be designated as the pay-once-a-year system. It is not worthy of being called a system. It is used in sections where they say, "We get our money once a year, so we cannot pay by the week." Can you imagine a farmer saying to his horse, "Doll, I can't feed you in January, February and the other months. You will simply have to eat in October and get along the best you can the rest of the time?" You do not treat your horse that way. Why do you treat your preacher and your missionaries that way? You raise your corn, put it in your crib and feed your horse two or three times a day all the year. Why not set God's portion aside and have something to worship him with all the year? God says once a week—every one of you: husband, wife, children. Have you a right to say to your Lord, "Once a year?" Do you do all your praying, going to Church, worshiping, eating, sleeping, exercising once a year? Do you take a day or two off once a year and do all your praying and say, "It's a lot easier," "It's too much bother to get change and fix up envelopes." Dare you say to your Lord, "Too much bother" when He says, "Let every one of you," "on the first day of the week?"

We must know that we cannot be well spiritually by giving once a year or once in a while, even monthly, any more than we can be at our best physically by eating, sleeping, exercising occasionally. This whole matter is a matter of worship, and no one can give for the entire family any more than one can eat, sleep, exercise, sing, pray, read the Bible or go to Church for all the family. "Let every one of you." Because the pay-check comes in in your name alone, do not think you can change 1 Cor. 16:2.

SUNDAY SCHOOL MISSIONARY OFFERINGS FOR DECEMBER.

First Church, Portsmouth, Va., $15.56; Liberty-Vance, Henderson, N. C., $3.59; Rose Hill, Columbus, Ga., $3.46; Henderson, N. C., $6.59; Citizen's Bible Class, Elon College, N. C., $2.02; St. Luke's, Dover, Del., $1.12; Dendron, Va., $11.07; Franklin, Va., $5.00; First Church, Greensboro, N. C., $25.39; Raleigh, N. C., $2.50; Zion, Moncure, N. C., $1.10; People's Christian S. S., Dover, Del., $16.44; Winchester, Va., $5.30; Wadley, Ala., $2.60; Shallow Ford, Elon College, N. C., $2.82; Antioch, Harrisonburg, Va., $2.73; Philathea Class, Elon College, N. C., $2.68; Beulah, Wadley, Ala., $2.33; Richland, Ga., $1.00; Leaksville, Luray, Va., $1.74; Pleasant Grove, News Ferry, Va., $3.12; Salem Chapel, Walnut Cove, N. C., 80 cents; Suffolk, Va., $33.03; Dry Run, Seven Fountains, Va., $1.84; Hines Chapel, McLeansville, N. C., $1.05; North Highlands, Columbus, Ga., $2.55; Apples Chapel, Brown Summit, N. C., $3.31; Third Avenue, Danville, Va., $5.21; Elm Avenue, Portsmouth, Va., $5.25; Berea (Nansemond), Driver, Va., $6.00; Durham, N. C., $21.01; New Lebanon, Elberon, Va., $5.00; Elon Junior and Int. S. S. children, $8.00; Rosemont, Norfolk, Va., $4.68; Damascus, Sunbury, N. C., $3.61; Ramseur, N. C., $2.61; Burlington, N. C., $203.88; Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., $425.00; Berea (Nansemond) S. S., special for Rocky Ford Church-building fund, $12.00. Total S. S. collections for month of December, $862.99.

We are grateful to these good schools for their liberal offerings to our mission cause. We trust that this number shall greatly increase, as funds are so much needed now to carry forward our missionary work at home in Carroll County, Va., and abroad in Japan. We are happy at what these wide-awake schools are now doing.

Gratefully,

J. O. Atkinson,
Mission Secretary.

LYNCHINGS IN 1924.

Dear Sir:

I send you the following concerning lynchings for the past year, as compiled by Tuskegee Institute in the department of records and research. I find there were 16 persons lynched in 1924. This is the smallest number lynched in any year since records of lynchings have been kept, and is 17 less than the number 33 for the year 1923, and 41 less than the number 57 for the year 1922. Nine of the persons lynched were taken from the hands of the law, 6 from jails and 3 from officers of the law outside of jails.

There were 45 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings—2 women, 1 white and 1 colored, were among those thus saved. Eight of these preventions of lynchings were in Northern States, and 37 in Southern States. In 36 of the cases, the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In 9 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. In 4 instances during the year, persons charged with being connected with lynching mobs were indicted. Of the 19 persons thus before the courts, only 5 were convicted. These were given jail sentences.

Of the 16 persons lynched, all were negroes; 7, or less than one-half, of those put to death were charged with rape or attempted rape.

The offenses charged were: murder, 1; rape, 5; attempted rape, 2; killing officer of law, 2; insulting women, 3; attacking woman, 1; killing man in altercation, 1; wounding man, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred, and the number in each State are as follows: Florida, 5; Georgia, 2; Illinois, 1; Kentucky, 1; Louisiana, 1; Mississippi, 2; Missouri, 1; South Carolina, 1; Tennessee, 1; Texas, 1.

R. R. Morton, Principal.

The cash value of a college education to its possessor is $72,000, according to a report based on a long study of the earning capacity of college graduates. The cash value of a high school education is placed by the report at $33,000.

A NEW YEAR PRAYER.

By Rev. R. F. Brown.

Almighty God, we thank Thee for the year 1924, which is now closing. We know not to what extent our influence and our deeds have been felt. Our life is a divine philosophy. Time is a sacred trust. It is a scroll upon which we are privileged to write. We are frank to confess that upon many of the pages of our record are messages that witness against us. We have broken our vows of loyalty and love to our Christ and our fellow-men. But our life is a living testimony of Thy altar of pardon and love.

With sacred memories and painful regrets, we bid good-by to the year of our Lord 1924. Like a vanishing road, the year is behind us. We would refrain from gazing upon its wistful curves, its journeys of prosperity and adversity, its struggles and defeats, its victories and blessings. We gladly welcome the New Year, which swings open the radiant door of hope and opportunity. For us, the year 1925 is an unbeaten path which beckons us on and bids us walk through the unguessed storms and unheralded sunshine. The New Year is before us as an open book, as a spotless sheet. Lord, guide our faint hearts and our trembling hands as we begin to write upon its spotless pages. We are blind as to what the year will bring us. Thou dost hold the events of the year in Thine own hand. And as we gaze into the future, may we have continued revelations of Thy will, an undimmed vision of Thy love, and a double portion of Thy wisdom.

As we wend our way into the future, guide, Thou, our faltering feet over the valley of sorrow and solitude, through the burning deserts of trial and temptation, over the battlefields of struggle and hardship. Unite our hearts in a common feeling of the Fatherhood of God, a profound consciousness of the brotherhood of man, and establish our souls on the continent of human sympathy and unselfish service. And may we love and serve Thee with all our being until this life is supplanted with that new, higher and better life, that fuller and sweeter joy made perfect in Thy holy presence. In the name of Jesus we pray. Amen.

Pleasant Hill, Ohio.

PERSONAL RELIGION AND PUBLIC RIGHTEOUSNESS.

(Continued from Page 5.)

achievement must be characteristic of it. They have been characteristic of it and will continue to be, world without end.

But religion has also to do with destiny. To what end are all these conceptions to converge, and wherein is their fulfillment to be found? We must satisfy the cry of the human heart here, or we shall miserably fail. The world's religions have answered the question, but in their answers there has been a marvelous divergence of conception and a marvelous disparity of satisfaction. The Mohammedan believes in a sensuous continuation of the life that now is, with all the passion and partiality that their God is even now conceived as practicing and as delighting in. The Hindu fondly hopes to attain to the state of complete bliss, of endless nothingness, incorporation into Nirvana, the all-soul of unconscious spirituality. The Christian looks forward to an endless growth in spiritual concept and power, untrammeled by physical limitations, to a spiritual life begun on earth, never ending and with infinite challenges to progress, wherein he shall be satisfied because he shall see Christ as He is and grow constantly more and more like Him. For the Christian, there is no break between the spiritual life of earthly experience and the spiritual life of heavenly bliss. The spiritual life we initiate here ripens and fruits into completeness and realization as the years of eternity shall unfold. This conception satisfies. The heart of man assents and the spirit of man rejoices in the prospect of such a destiny, a destiny justifying God in the creation of man and the world, a destiny worthy of the sons of God.

But these conceptions are mighty dynamics for action. The heart irrepressibly yearns to do the will of such a loving spiritual Father as we Christians conceive God to be. To realize that it breaks His great heart when we sin against His high and holy purpose determines us to undertake His will. To realize that this loving spiritual Father is grieved at every act of ours by which we fail to treat our every brother everywhere and in every relation of life as a brother is an irresistible incentive to undertake measures for the realization of true brotherhood among men. To realize that the whole world is God's world and that He loves it with a passionate love, loves it so that He is ready to die for its redemption, what greater impulse could be imparted to the conscience of man to go forth and render acceptable service, to reconcile man to God and man to man, transforming all the life and the institutions of life in terms of that holy reconciliation? To realize that this life and its achievements are the vestibule of admission to the life of the spirit, a life that shall never end, gives punch and purpose to the most ordinary experiences of this present life, causes it to take on immortal significance, and sends one forth energized for valiant service, determined not to appear before his Lord at the portal to the eternal world empty-handed, having wasted his talents in profitless pursuit of interests that have no permanent values abiding in them. The record of the Christian religion is embellished with the evidences of heartening progress. Its brightest day is just ahead. The Christian leadership of the world never had such opportunities to interpret the Christian faith as it has today. The leaders must interpret it so that it shall win not only men's intellectual assent, but that it shall also grip their hearts with its mighty dynamic for the realization of the kingdom of God here and now in the earth.

There will be objection on the part of some to our conceiving of the Church as the sponsor of Christian principles as a truly militant or reconciling agency whereby the will and purpose of God may be achieved in the world. Of necessity, however, this must be the aim of the organized children of God. The government of the United States is the citizenship of the United States organized to express its ideals politically. Industry of America is organized to express our economic ideals. The Church is the American people organized to express our religious ideals; and in so far as these ideals reflect the teachings of Jesus, the Church is the organized body in America that undertakes to make Christian attitudes supreme in our life. We have seen that the Christian concepts of God, of man, of the world, and of destiny are tremendously dynamic in their influence over the life and conduct of men. These ideals are not limited to personal life nor to any land. They are universal principles. They have a personal and also a social application. The gospel has a message for every realm of life, for every interest of life. Democracy is essentially a Christian concept. Democracy has implications not only for government, but for industry, for racial problems, for our sectarian divisions in the ranks of Christendom, for every conceivable relationship of life. And where democracy goes, there also necessarily goes the parent of democracy, the Christian religion, and the Church as its sponsor, its organized organ of expression.

It is, therefore, inconceivable that the dynamic influence of the Christian religion dwelling in the hearts and consciences of men and constantly seeking expression in their life and conduct should not be felt in the solution of industrial, racial, sectarian, and political problems. Public righteousness is a major interest of the kingdom of God. The Church's great duty is to exemplify in personal religion and in public righteousness the inevitable consequences of acceptance of, and loyalty to, the dynamic conceptions of the Christian faith. She can recognize no artificial division of the interests of life into sacred and secular. She has a message for every interest, and she makes the most secular issues sacred by the application to them of the principles and teachings of her Lord.

We must frankly, though with shame, confess our sins and short comings in these matters. Too long the Church has contented herself with the annunciation of spiritual truth and neglected the practical application of her teachings. Designing politicians and seasoned diplomats, industrial barons bent on the sheer immolation of childhood on the altar of industrial greed, adroit exploiters of the backward races and peoples, clever protagonists of schism and cleavage in the body of Christ, and other such proponents of vested interests and of social injustice in high places have raised no objection to the Church that satisfies its conscience with mere preaching. These modern pagans have even patronized the Church with offerings to support her work. But when the Church begins to apply her gospel in practical form we find employers' associations withdrawing their support from Christian organizations that undertake to point out the mind of Christ with reference to a steel strike and we find members of Congress expressing their vigorous resentment that the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America should undertake to advise our national legislators of the Christian principles underlying the summary abrogation of a treaty with a friendly nation.

What is the Church to do? Her duty is plain. She is the light of the world. She is the salt of the earth. She holds the keys to the kingdom. She is the chosen spokesman for God to interpret His will and purpose. She is to teach spiritual brotherhood. She is to seek to incarnate the principles of Christian democracy in all the realms of man's experience. She is to recognize no rightful cleavage between personal and social religion. Her Lord did not. His whole teaching is social, and it is also personal. When He pictured the final judgment, the division between good and bad was based on acts of social service growing out of religious conviction. Service rendered was to be in His name. Service is the normal expression of Christian character, not a substitute for it, nor an annex to it. We of this day must not think Christ is to be imprisoned in the Church. He is at home everywhere and personal faith in Him must not only flower in personal saintliness, it must also fruit in public righteousness. We shall please Him most when we content ourselves not with criticizing what we find wrong in the social order, acting, so to speak, the part of spiritual policemen, but when we become prophetic statesmen with practical programs of righteousness embodying the plain implications of His teachings for the problems of our day and time.

There can be no doubt that Jesus is wistfully expectant of great spiritual advancement on the part of the Church in our day. The great forward movements in religion have always taken place under the call of great historical situations. We live today under the historical situation that has ever confronted mankind. The World War has precipitated this situation, though it has been ushered in too by our marvelous material and scientific achievements. Civilization is in a state of flux today. Class consciousness is keener than ever before. This class consciousness has various phases—industrial, racial, sectarian, national.

The Ku-Klux Klan embodies two phases, the racial and the sectarian. Our refusal to enter the League of Nations grows out of our espousal of three of these phases—the industrial, the racial, and the national. The strengthening and solidifying of the historical denominational positions, to many of us an anachronism almost transcending belief, embodies one of these phases, the sectarian, while the clash of capital and labor rests for its acrimony on the industrial or economic phase. What a challenge to lead the way out of the wilderness of uncertainty and jealousy and selfishness the Church has in this unparalleled situation! Let her come with her conception of God as the loving spiritual Father of every man, with her conception of man as brother to every man and finding his highest satisfaction in discharging to the full his brotherhood obligations, with her conception of the world as created and loved by our God and the consuming object of His redemptive energies acting through man, with her conception of man's destiny as offering him unlimited opportunity to develop and embellish the character he begins here in the spirit world, and his duty and privilege to please his Father with the achievements of his stewardship years here, with these splendid concepts, with these satisfying ideals as dynamic in the hearts of her adherents and functioning in the social order, the Church can sublimate these class consciousnesses in terms of the higher loyalty to mankind's universal and abiding interests and exalt the sense of brotherly love which underlies all class-consciousness into that love for every man everywhere which we of the Christian faith know as the kingdom of God. So shall the Fatherhood of God be realized in a true brotherhood of man. So shall plersonal religion yield abundantly her normal fruit of public righteousness. So shall the United States Senate awake from the nightmare of its partisan selfishness and become the initiator of measures that will realize in our international relations the high principles of personal good will which are the noblest endowment of this Christian nation.

Let us hear the conclusion of this whole matter. There is absolute necessity of personal religious faith as the dynamic of all social and international effort. There is the further absolute necessity of conceiving our personal religious faith in terms large enough to make it the nourisher of a social and international outlook. The true synthesis of the so-called individual, as of the so-called gospel, is found in a personal religious faith expressing itself in public righteousness. Thus only can the Christian religion avoid the charge on the one hand of silly sentimentalism, and on the other of blatant hypocrisy. For the mind of Christ, the international mind, the universal mind, the mind conscious of social and redemptive mission, for this mind, the Church must stand in our day, and having done all she can, she must continue to stand. In such loyal devotion to her Lord, she shall conserve the spiritual interests of mankind. Through loyalty to Christ, she shall save the world. She shall save the world through self-giving love. In her own heralding of her Lord's passion, she must sacrifice herself in loving service for the coming of His kingdom, dependent for its fulfillment on personal religious faith and on public righteousness as its ultimate goal.

Elon College, N. C.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

January 18, 1925.

Subject: "The Lord's Supper."—Luke 22:7-30.

Golden Text: "This is my body, which is given for you: this do in remembrance of me."—Luke 22:19.

Devotional Reading: Psa. 22:22-28.

Reference Material: Matt. 26:17-30; Mark 14:12-26; John 13:1-30.

Topic: "The Meaning of the Communion Service."

Home Reading: Mon., The Lord's Supper—Luke 22:14-23. Tues., The first passover—Exod. 12:21-28. Wed., The true bread—John 6:10-35. Thurs., The bread of life—John 6:48-58. Fri., The sanctity of the Lord's table—1 Cor. 11:23-29. Sat., A purified people—Rev. 7:13-17. Sun., The satisfying portion—Psa. 22:22-28.

Introduction.—The paschal supper was celebrated as follows: Four cups of red wine diluted with one-fourth water were drunk during the meal, and served to mark the progress of the feast. The first was preliminary with a blessing invoked. Then followed ablutions, and the bringing in of bitter herbs, unleavened bread, the roasted lamb, and a broth or sauce made with spices. Instructions respecting the passover and a song of praise followed. The second cup was then drunk. After a blessing, the guests partook, the lamb being eaten last. Thanks were then returned, and the third cup drunk, called the cup of blessing. Then the remaining psalms were repeated, and a fourth cup, which ordinarily ended the feast. The institution of the Lord's supper probably took place at the close of the proper meal, immediately before the third cup, or cup of blessing which would seem to have made a part of it.

Notes on the Lesson.—Two of the disciples, Peter and John, were sent to make ready the passover. When the hour came to eat, Jesus and His disciples took their places at the table. Jesus said He desired to eat with them before He suffer. (Vs. 14, 15.)

It is to be fulfilled in the kingdom of God. (V. 16.)

This was the first cup of the passover meal. Then followed the preparations and main meal. Christ's statement follows. (V. 18.)

Then comes the institution of the supper. After this, Jesus spoke other discourse. Vs. 19, 20.)

The First Cup of Wine.—When the evening had come, our Lord sat down with His twelve disciples and said, "With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer: for I say unto you, I shall not eat it until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God." And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and said: "Take this, and divide it among yourselves: for I say unto you, I shall not drink from henceforth of the fruit of the vine, until the kingdom of God shall come."

The Institution of the Supper.—The Lord amongst his own disciples officiated as Head of the family and as priest; engaged in the prayer and song; broke the bread and divided the cup; but above all, seized the usual intent of the passover in its deepest significance and consecrated it to holy engagements of a higher kind which are to be repeated in the Church of the Lord until the day of His second coming.

Foretells His Betrayal.—Jesus said, "But behold, the hand of him that betrayeth me is with me on the table." "And they began to question among themselves which of them it was that should do this thing."

The Meaning of the Supper.—The significance of the Communion is thus expressed: The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not a Communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not a Communion of the body of Christ? Seeing that we who are many are one bread, one body: for we all partake of one bread.

Cup of the Last Supper.—It is conjectured that the Last Supper took place in the home of Mary the mother of John Mark, and that Mary owned the cup used by Jesus, and that later she moved to Antioch and took the precious cup with her. There it was treasured for centuries, and finally lost in some breaking up of the city in time of war, perhaps. This cup was accidently discovered in 1910 by some Arabs while digging in the ruins of the ancient city of Antioch.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

January 18, 1924.

Topic: "Friendliness and Medical Missions."

Scripture Reading: Matt. 8:1-17; Acts 14:8.

Suggestions: Announce the meeting with a poster made from some missionary magazine or other magazine pictures, giving the time, the place, and the leader of the meeting.

Announce a silver offering to go for the missionary kindergarten work in Japan or for the work in Porto Rico.

As this is the beginning of the New Year, appoint twelve young people—six young men and six young women—as missionary tourists. Let them visit our missionary fields. (They may do this by writing to the missionaries, to our board secretaries, or writing Mrs. Emma S. Powers, of Dayton, Ohio, for information about our mission fields.) Each month, one of them will write a letter to the society, telling about the field which he or she has visited. This will create missionary interest throughout the year and give valuable information about our work and workers. The letters should be written to seem as real as possible, giving facts about the manners and customs, etc.

Points for the Leader's Talk.

A missionary said to me a few days ago, "The work of medical missionaries cannot be exaggerated because it is so great and the opportunities so many." We have had medical missionaries for many years, and are realizing more and more the great work which they are doing. When the first medical missionaries went out, they found much uncleanliness, many diseases and very, very crude methods of treating the sick. Diseases were thought to come from evil spirits, and fires were built around the patients and they were burned with red-hot irons to drive the evil spirits away. Sick babies were thrown into the rivers to die. These conditions still exist in some countries, but the natives are beginning to have more and greater faith in our missionary doctors.

Women doctors have done great good by ministering to the women and sick babies and teaching sanitation and visiting in the homes. In this way they teach of Christ and His goodness. Dr. Clara Swain was the first woman to go as a medical missionary.

In 1800 there were only two medical missionaries in the world. From the death of Vanderkemp, in 1811, to the sailing of Scudder, the first missionary from America, in 1819, there were no medical missionaries in the world. In 1900 there were 719 medical missionaries, and 223 of these were women.

Work in the Hospitals.

The work in the hospitals is growing so fast that they are crowded both night and day a great many times with people standing around waiting their turn for treatment. The physicians and surgeons have hardly time to sleep because they are so busy ministering to the sick and telling about Jesus and His love. The native girls in China, Japan, Korea and other places are taking training in the hospitals for nurses, and they in turn will work both in the hospitals and in the homes. This will mean that when they have established homes of their own they will be clean and healthy homes.

Jesus, Our Example in Medical Missionary Work.

Matt. 4:23-24: "And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness, and all manner of disease among the people. And His fame went throughout all Syria and they brought to him all sick people that were taken with divers diseases and torments, and those which were possessed with devils, and those that were lunatic, and those that had the palsy, and He healed them."

We have many accounts of Jesus teaching, preaching and healing. He was the Great Physician, the Great Friend, ministering to the sick and giving comfort to all.

The parable of the good samaritan gives us what Jesus thought of being a friend and ministering to the weak. And in another place He says, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto me." What joy medical missionaries must get from ministering to the poor, healing the suffering, showing kindness and tenderness, and showing some of the beautiful spirit of the Christ.

Robert Moffat, one of the first and most famous missionaries, said: "The medical missionary is a missionary and a half."

Missionary Facts.

Peter Parker was the first medical missionary to China.

George L. Mackay earned the title "dentist missionary" by extracting 21,000 teeth in twenty-one years in Formosa.

This statement of David Livingston shows the sincerity of missionaries: "My Jesus, my King, my life, my all, I again dedicate myself to Thee."

Dr. William Cary said: "Expect great things from God, attempt great things for God."

Topics for Talks on Papers.—"The Daily Work of a Medical Missionary," "Hospitals in the Foreign Fields," "Why I Believe in Medical Missions," "Medicine, the Golden Key," "Some Great Medical Missionaries."

Question for Open Discussion.—"What can the stay-at-homes do for missionaries? Mission work in general?"

Six million Americans have saved a quarter of a million dollars as members of Christmas clubs through the various banks of the country, and six million Americans have been learning this year little lessons of thrift not to be taught in schools.

How easy it would be to build up the circulation of The Christian Sun if pastors would use a little tact.

Christian Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

The children at the Christian Orphanage had a real happy Christmas, although it looked a little discouraging up to two days before Christmas. It looked like old Santa was not coming, but we have always heard it said that "behind the darkest cloud is the brightest sunshine."

Mrs. Lula Brown Whitfield, one of our old girls, sent us ninety pounds of fine candy; Mr. J. D. Howard, Norfolk, First Church, sent us fifty pounds; Hines Chapel Church sent us chickens, two boxes of oranges, walnuts and a large pumpkin and many other things; Mr. and Mrs. K. M. Banks, Raleigh, sent one bunch of bananas; the Episcopal Church, Burlington, a barrel of apples and oranges; Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Williams, Franklin, Va., a bag of peanuts; the Woman's Guild, New Bedford, Mass., a present for each child; First Church, Berkley, presents for the children; the junior department of Durham Church sent presents for the children; the College Y. M. C. A. gave a Christmas tree for the children in the baby home; First Church, Greensboro, sent us five crates of oranges—so you see, they were well remembered and were happy. I am very grateful indeed to each one who had a part in making Christmas a happy occasion for our little folks.

A list of miscellaneous donations sent in since our last report: Miss Margaret Clegg, Burlington, N. C., 7 union suits; John R. Foster class, Burlington, N. C., 36 neckties; Miss Alice M. Bowland, Burlington, N. C., 1 box, containing hats, towels, belts, dolls, collars, ties, etc.; Circle 3, Burlington Missionary Society, 1 coat, towels, handkerchiefs, 15 cakes soap, toys, etc.; Mr. John W. Fonville, Burlington, 1 quarter beef; Burlington Christian Church, miscellaneous box.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR JANUARY 8, 1925.

Amount brought forward		$22,319.91
Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
Western North Carolina Conference:
Pleasant Ridge	$ 1.80
Zion	1.25
		3.05
North Carolina and Virginia Con.:
New Elam	$ 5.32
Bethlehem	7.10
Palm Street, Greensboro	10.14
Apples Chapel	3.28
Hines Chapel	4.30
Salem Chapel	1.00
Elon College	2.50
Philathea Class	3.50
		37.14
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Henderson	$ 5.44
Morrisville	2.00
		7.44
Eastern Virginia Conference:
Spring Hill	$ 3.00
East End, Newport News	8.49
		11.49
Valley of Virginia Conference:
First Church, Winchester	$ 5.88
New Hope	3.00
		8.88
Georgia and Alabama Conference:
Kite		3.48

Thanksgiving Offerings.

Concord, Va.	$ 4.20
First Church, Winchester, Va.	7.52
New Hope, Val. Va.	13.00
New Elam	19.50
Pleasant Hill	5.80
Burlington, additional	62.36
Burlington, cash in Xmas gifts	1.50
Bethel (W), N. C.	15.00
Suffolk, Ea. Va.	200.00
Berea, N. C.	12.01
Mrs. G. F. Carr	1.00
Cyrus Shaffner	1.00
Pleasant Union, N. C.	65.00
Rose Rogers	1.00
Chapel Hill, N. C.	40.00
Antioch, N. C.	5.24
Pleasant Grove, Va.-N. C.	12.00
G. M. Womble	10.00
Centerville Church, Va.	3.27
Barretts, Ea. Va.	8.49
New Lebanon, Va.	16.85
New Lebanon, N. C.	19.25
Baracca Class	2.00
Bethlehem, Val. Va.	5.00
First Church, Greensboro	5.00
W. J. Cotton	2.50
East End, Newport News, Va.	45.00
Mrs. T. E. Brickhouse, Norfolk	5.00
New Harmony, Ala.	3.55
Mr. & Mrs. J. H. Massey, Durham.	20.00
S. Y. Spain, Manson, N. C.	15.00
Mrs. H. T. Harper	1.00
Pisgah, Ala.	2.00
Woods Chapel, Val. Va.	5.00
Mrs. I. W. Johnson S. S. class	5.65
Brown's Chapel S. S., N. C.	1.20
Boys and Girls, Elon S. S.	8.00
Leaf River S. S., Ill.	3.12
New Lebanon, Va., special	9.00
Mrs. J. P. Barnett, Elon	2.50
Noon Day S. S., Ala.	5.65
Cash	2.00
Wake Chapel, N. C.	62.20
Pleasant Hill, Ohio	30.44
High Point, N. C.	1.01
		765.41

Special Offerings.

Interest	$ 15.00
Albert Godley, Tenafly, N. J.	1.00
Men and Millions, tenth dis.	125.00
		141.00
Grand total		$23,297.80

METHODIST MILLIONS.

The members of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church raised more than $3,000,000 for their work last year, according to reports presented at the annual meeting held in Chicago, October 8th to 15th. This represented an increase in contributions over the previous year of more than $130,000. In four years, the 448,000 members have given more than $11,000,000. Of the total, mite-boxes brought 18,100,600 pennies. Reporting to the same convention the work of the denomination as a whole, Dr. R. J. Wade, secretary of the World Service Commission, said that more than $68,000,000 had been expended in benevolent work in the last five years, while expenditures for new Churches and parsonages last year reached the total of $26,000,000. The total property valuation of this one denomination in the United States and abroad was reported to approximate $500,000,000.—Christian Century.

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

These Pens are of standard make, and will give good service. If you are in need of a Fountain Pen, order from us.
MEN'S PENS ..... $2.00 LADIES' PENS $2.00
Postage paid, and Pens guaranteed by the manufacturer.

LIMITED COMBINATION OFFER.—To a new subscriber, or for renewal (if not in arrears), $3.25, either Gentleman's or Lady's Pen, with guarantee of manufacturer. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 EAST BROAD STREET, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Mission Study Books.

Official List for 1924-1925.

ORDER BY TITLE OF BOOK.

FOR ADULT CLASSES.

For Home Mission Classes:
"The Romance of Home Missions," by S. L. Morris, D. D.. Paper, 50c; cloth..... $ .75

For Foreign Mission Classes:
"Ming Kwong—the City of Morning Light," by Mary Ninde Gamewell. Paper, 50c; cloth .75
"In China," by H. F. Williams, D. D..... .25

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

For Intermediate Home Mission Classes:
"The Land of All Nations," by Margaret F. Seelbach. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75

For Intermediate Foreign Mission Classes:
"China's Real Revolution," by Paul Hutchinson. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75

For Junior Foreign Mission Classes:
"Chinese Lanterns," by Minna McEwen Meyer. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... .75

LEADERS' HELPS.

Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Adult Classes) ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Young People's Classes)..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Land of All Nations"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Ming Kwong"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "China's Real Revolution".. .15
Leaders' Helps for "Chinese Lanterns"..... .15

Send all orders to—

THE CHRISTIAN SUN,
1536 East Broad Street - - Richmond, Virginia.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

THE SOUL THAT STOOD STILL.

"Curse ye Meroz, said the angel of the Lord." —Judges 5:23.

Tom was not his name, but it will serve the purpose. When winter came, the man was a "regular" at the gospel missions, those beacon lights for hard-pressed men. Few men were more prayed for than Tom. There was something in the mien of the man that touched the heart—something akin to harmlessness. Although so many mission workers prayed for him, there was apparently less hope for this man than for some of the most hardened cases.

During several years that men worked and prayed for the man, some notorious "bad" men were thoroughly converted and entered upon a new life, while Tom stood religiously still. Here was Tom's weakness—he could never be brought to a decision.

"Curse ye Meroz, said the angel of the Lord." A reading of the full verse shows that the indignation of God was not because of some heinous crime committed; but because Meroz refused to come to the help of the Lord's people. They were lacking in decision. They did not fight against the Lord; they stood idle when their help was needed. "Neither hot nor cold," was the condemnation of Laodicea. Many men miss life and fail of God's blessing, not through gross sinning, but because of indecision.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

TUESDAY.

THE UNDAUNTED SPIRIT.

"Father, into Thy hands I commend my spirit." —Luke 23:39-46.

These are the last words of Jesus on the cross. How touching they are; what resignation and trust they represent in the hour when physical life was departing! They have been the inspiration of a great host through the ages, and will be in the future.

Jesus always had a sense of the nearness of the Father. The infinite Creator was also the tender Father. This is one of the first lessons we must learn if we would get comfort out of our religion, and enter the kingdom of God. Through Jesus' sacrifice, we also are become sons and daughters of the Heavenly Father.

While His physical life was ebbing away, after men had scoffed, and disciples had scattered, Jesus still retained His sense of complete dependence on the Father. Into the hands that roll the stars along He committed His spirit; not His body, but His spirit.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

WEDNESDAY.

TRAINING THROUGH FELLOWSHIP.

"Ye shall be my witnesses."—Acts 1:6-8.

Peter and John were first disciples of John of the desert. The testimony of this heroic figure when he pointed them to Jesus and said, "Behold, the Lamb of God!" marked the first outstanding incident in the training of Peter and John. That event was the fountain from which all other events were to flow. John the Baptist showed them the Light of the world; and that Light cast a radiance on them that was the beginning of all their glory, whether of reputation or of character. With them, as with all of us, the supreme day of our life is the day when we meet Christ.

Yet even this would have passed from significance, if it had not been followed by an accepted call to the service of the Master. The fellowship with Jesus changed John into the John of the Apocalypse, who wrote: "Little children, love one another." The fellowship and patience of Christ won John to his high character.

With Peter, the problem of Christ was to win the earnest and wavering man to steadiness and loyalty. When he entered the door of Christ's school-room, the Teacher had intimated that He was to take Simon, shifting sand, and make him into Peter, enduring rock. It was a long and hard task.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

THURSDAY.

"When he saw him, he fell at his feet."—Mark 5:21-24.

Charles Lamb said that if some other great parsonage of history should enter the room where he was, he would rise as a mark of respect, but if Jesus Christ should enter the room, he would bow at His feet. There was something about the personality of Jesus that arrested attention, stimulated interest, and commanded reverence. In His presence, men felt the emanation of divinity. They felt the presence of a power that could not be explained on any human basis—a power benevolent, gracious, majestic. On seeing Him, their first instinct was one of adoration.

Men do not make demands of Him. They fall at His feet. And there they find the place of true humility, the best place to make contrite confession of their sins. At His feet they get clear visions of themselves, as Peter did, and feel the infinite reaches of space that stretch between His holiness and their own sinfulness. At His feet they find the power to rise again.

Prayer.—Lord'e Prayer, all the circle joining.

FRIDAY.

THE FULLNESS OF JESUS.

"For in Him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily and ye are complete in Him."—Col. 2:6-10.

The pre-eminence of Christ rests upon His being the Image of the Invisible, the Instrument of creation, and the Head of the Church in having reconciled us through His death, and having made known unto us the riches of the mystery which is Christ in you, the hope of glory. However, materialistic philosophy, ceremonialism and asceticism would rob Him of His pre-eminence in us. For this reason, we are to put down resolutely the first rising movement of impurity, covetousness and uncharitableness. The elect, holy and beloved, being renewed in knowledge after His image, are to put on a heart of compassion, kindness, lowliness, meekness, long-suffering, forbearance, forgiveness and love.

The three channels through which the fullness of Christ flows to the believer are these: Letting the peace of Christ rule or arbitrate in your heart; letting the word of Christ dwell in you richly, and doing all you can, in word and deed, in the interests of the kingdom. Christ having thus His way in you, enables you to have a family life that is Christian, and an individual life that expresses itself toward God in earnest prayer, and toward men as a center radiating forth the kingdom of God, you meanwhile walking in wisdom toward them that are without the kingdom, and speaking always, with grace seasoned with sale, words that are saving and transforming.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

SATURDAY.

THE GENEROUS SOUL.

"Remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how He said, It is more blessed to give than to receive." —Acts 20:32-37.

Health, knowledge, character, our chiefest possessions, are largely derived from others than ourselves. But if we have received, others have given. And if others are to receive, we must learn to impart. We that are parents must give health to our children. We that have been taught must be vigilant and zealous to teach. We that love truth and hold inestimable the inheritance of faith must do our utmost to propagate it.

Some say the hope of the world is in education. Some look to a better political economy for human salvation. Some build their hopes on improved hygiene and sanitation. We, who see the world through the eyes of Jesus, know that the hope of the new heaven and the new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness is in the increase of generous souls, souls that are like fountains supplied with living water, souls that pour it out over the earth in the form of service to mankind.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

SUNDAY.

BECOMING CONVERSATION.

"Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ."—Phil. 1:27.

There is nothing which injures the sensitive and sanctified spirit like the hammer-blows of evil speaking. Paul wrote our text with the vile conversations which he overheard in the streets of the ancient heathen city of Philippi still ringing in his ears! The apostle hated to hear conversation that was corrupt and wicked; to guard his young Philipian converts from the prevalent evil of pernicious talk, he cautioned them to keep their conversation always on the high plane of the gospel of Christ.

Do the young people of our day need the same warning? Go on the streets of our cities and overhear the conversations which pass between the people, young and old, whom there you meet! You will hear some things that will shock the sensibilities of your soul! "They speak mischievous things all the day long!" You will hear conversations full of emptinesses, trivialities, nothings! "They speak vanity every one with his neighbor!" You will hear falsehood and deceit and lies and insincerities! "With flattering lip and with a double heart do they speak!" Most modern conversation is not molded after the gospel of Christ! "Our lips are our own, who shall say what we dare speak?"

"Set God before thee; every word
Thy lips pronounce by Him is heard;
Oh, couldst thou realize this thought,
What care, what caution would be taught!"

FROM WALTERS, VA.

On December 13th, I went down to Zion, at Eclipse, Va., and went to Bro. Fields' for dinner. On the afternoon I visited several homes. I spent the night in the home of Bro. and Sister Dickson. They received me very cordially, and I enjoyed being in their home very much. I went with one of the Methodist brethren to hear Bro. Wallace, pastor of the Methodist Church, Sunday morning. We had our service at Zion in the afternoon. We had a good attendance under the weather and other conditions that kept the people away. We had three to join Zion Church, and all appeared to be very much encouraged.

I went to Hobson at night, preached there and spent the night with Bro. Beale. I enjoyed being with those people very much. We are hoping and praying that these Churches will grow in numbers and spiritual power this year.

ELISHA BRADSHAW.

The New Year is here. Don't wait to begin. Carry out your resolutions.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

KIDDIES—ONE AND ALL:

This means, the dearest Kiddies in all the whole world, too! Your editor sends you a New Year's Greeting—and, gee! guess why we are all so happy this first week of the New Year? You are always happy Kiddies, I know, and your editor is most always happy, too—'cept one time when a certain little Ford was stolen! And now there is a new little Ford all ready to use—oh-oo! and it's so shiney and new, and so easy to drive, and we can run around together—the little Ford and I—to see all the happy little children and a very dear old grandmother, who reads all about you dear Kiddies every week, but she can't go around too much, 'cause she might take a bad old cold. Well, Kiddies, it's great, good luck to be able to go to see them all once more.

You know why you didn't see the little Midnight Kewpie the last night of the Old Year? I have heard that they come every year on that mystic hour of midnight when the black night is all around and the little stars are twinkling up in the sky so far away. Yes, sir-ee, and they play all around the big old clock while it strikes the last time for the Old Year. Did you see them this year? I wonder what they look like! But I hear they are tiny little men, with beautiful silver wings, and tiny gold harps that play sweet music; but I've never seen a single one, or heard their music either, have you?

Dears, did you know that the boys and girls at the Elon Orphanage have a brand-new sidewalk to keep their little shoes clean from that muddy-red dirt? And now they can race over to school every morning and not take a bad old cold. Aren't you glad? If you have an interesting little game you can do with out, why not send it to Mr. Johnston for some one in the big Orphanage home? Wouldn't that make some little boy happy? And, gee! it might keep some little girl from crying big ole salty tears onto her new Christmas apron! So, come on, Kiddies, see if you can spare some little game, or some little toy, and we'll all be happy together.

Heaps and heaps o' love this winter day.

Your editor

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT.

THE KING'S SERVANT.

Once upon a time there lived a King, who had a servant named Muccio, of whom he was very fond—so fond, in fact, that all the other servants disliked Muccio very much and wished to be rid of him.

At last, one day when the King dressed Muccio in a coat of red velvet and gave him a sword to wear at his side, the servants could stand it no longer, their envy was so great. So one of the servants went to an Old Witch in the woods and asked her to change Muccio into a cat.

This the Old Witch promised to do for a bag of gold, which all the servants had to make up out of their small savings. And one day, while the King and Muccio were sitting in the garden of the palace, Muccio suddenly disappeared and a big black cat took his place.

The King hunted, and the servants pretended to hunt, for Muccio also, but nowhere could he be found, of course, for he had been changed into a black cat.

When the King saw the big black cat around the palace grounds, he called it to him, and when it rubbed its head against him and followed him about (for of course the black cat was fond of the King just the same as Muccio had been), the King ordered that it should have a red-velvet cushion to sleep upon and a gold collar for its neck, and should be fed on the richest cream.

The servants saw they had not done much harm to Muccio after all, and again they went to the Old Witch and asked her to change the cat into a lion. For another bag of gold, the Witch promised to do as they wished, and so out of their small store of savings the servants made up another bag of gold and gave it to the Witch.

Then one day when the King went to the place where the black cat usually slept on its velvet cushion, he was nearly frightened out of his wits to find a lion.

But instead of being fierce, as he looked, the lion crawled along to the King for him to scratch his head, just as he had done when he was a black cat.

Then he licked the hand of the King, who was so pleased that the king of beasts should be so tame and fond of him that he ordered a gold cage to be made and a bed of purple velvet to be put in it and a gold dish for the lion to eat from.

Again the servants saw they had failed to get rid of Muccio, so they went to the Old Witch and told her she must change the lion into something so dreadful that the king would not want it near him.

This time the Old Witch asked for more gold, and it took all the savings the servants had to pay her, and this time Muccio was changed into a dreadful dragon.

When the King went to the cage and saw the dragon in place of the lion he knew some wicked spell was at work around him, and he sent for the Old Witch in the woods. Of course, the King could give her more gold than his servants, and he asked her to find out what spell had been cast over the black cat to change it into so many different shapes, for he did not know that Muccio had been changed into the black cat; he still thought he was lost in the woods about the palace, and probably had died for want of food.

The Old Witch, knowing she could not get any more from the servants, told the King that for a barrel of gold she would tell him what had happened. First she caused the dragon to change to the lion, and then the lion into the cat; then she waved her hand and muttered a few words, and to the surprise of the King there stood his servant Muccio before him.

After the Old Witch had hobbled away, Muccio told his King that he was sure the servants had caused all his troubles; and the King called the servants, who now were very frightened, and they confessed all to him.

Muccio pleaded for them not to be punished, and the King spared their lives, but only on condition that they should have no more money to spend, but that they should work for their food and clothes the rest of their lives.

"For you are not to be trusted with money," he told them; "you need a master as well as a King, and now you shall have one."

So the wicked servants had to wait on Muccio the rest of their lives, for the King grew fonder of him than ever, and never let him leave his side.

FIRST CHURCH, GREENSBORO.

The Christmas holiday season has just passed by, with many activities having engaged time and attention of the First Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C.

Among several things of interest was the Christmas pageant given under the auspices of the Sunday School. The following members of the school were participants in the performance: Misses Graham Rowland, Melissa Cook, Della Cotten, Essie Cotten, Dale Shelton, Lilliam Gattis, Ellen Shelton, Mary Strader, Viola Lassiter, Dorothy Thompson, Vongue Moffitt; Mesdames Walter Bales, A. E. Pie, Lacy Truitt, John Richardson, Mrs. J. R. Foster's class, Messrs. Lacy Truitt, Walter Tate, A. E. Pie and Walter Bales.

The pageant was very impressive as to the birth and spirit of the new-born Babe, Jesus Christ. Many carols and Christmas hymns were sung with the usual Christmas spirit, that of thoughtfulness and appreciation of Him who gave His life to the world, that we might forever live.

More than 250 gifts were made by the Sunday School and Church to the Orphanage at Elon College. Among these gifts were several boxes of oranges given by Mr. S. A. Caveness. Mr. Caveness also gave nine boxes of oranges to the primaries and juniors of the Sunday School at their Christmas party. The Church honored Dr. C. H. Rowland and family with a purse of gold and a very beautiful floor lamp for their home.

The Christian Endeavor Society has been unusually active during the Christmas season as well as most of the year. They filled ten baskets for charity at Thanksgiving, costing them about $15.00. They sang Christmas carols at the jail and county home on Sunday before Christmas, gave appropriate gifts at the county home, gifts to a family of five children on Christmas Eve, and decorated the Church for the Christmas services.

Dr. Rowland's services on the last two Sundays in the old year were very benefiting, and brought him excellent praise as well as response from many members of the Church as to what they expected to help him do in the New Year.

With Dr. Rowland at the head, and his better-half behind him to back him with her many good works, there is no reason why we should not have an excellent New Year of increased activities.

F. F. MYRICK.

CHRISTMAS PAGEANT.

The Christmas pageant, entitled "The Bethlehem Inn," given last night in the First Christian Church, under the direction of Mrs. M. L. Bryant, and supported by about forty members of the Church, attained the high mark of success in the beauty of its presentation as on the many former occasions, if not even greater success.

The rendition this year was accompanied with special pictorial scenery of Bethlehem prepared by the authors of the story. Many interesting settings of Jesus' earthly entrance, the prophecy of His coming, the wise men and shepherds, King Herod's desire to slay Him, and the angels' warning to Joseph to flee to save the young child's life were all interestingly set forth in story and song by the actors, of whom V. Lee Hanbury, Mrs. John G. Truitt, S. T. Ballard and Thomas L. Fulcher won special distinction. Each of the actors wore colorful costumes, in keeping with his or her part. The singing was especially good. Nearly two hours were consumed in its presentation.

A Christmas pageant has been given in this Church each Christmas season for several years, and the re-enacted story has grown more interesting each year.

The Church was packed to its capacity and many were turned away.—Virginian-Pilot.

May you think of a friend
Who is thinking of you
As the Old Year has waned,
And you welcome the New!

DUCK.

On December 13th, J. H. Duck passed from this life to his reward. He had been a great sufferer for several years. He was 63 years old. He was married twice, seven children by his first wife, and seven by his last. He was a member of Mt. Carmel Christian Church, and in his last days gave evidence that he was trusting Christ as his Saviour.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer, his pastor, from the M. Carmel Church, and his body was laid away in the Church cemetery. May God's richest blessings rest and abide with his wife and loved ones left behind.

ELISHA BRADSHAW.

ROGERS.

Mr. G. W. Rogers died at the home of his sister, Mrs. Mary E. Steinhardt, December 28, 1924, at the age of 63 years. The funeral services were conducted at the home by the writer.

Mr. Rogers was the son of the late Alexander and Martha E. Rogers, of Gates County, N. C. He leaves, besides Mrs. Steinhardt, one brother, Bennie Rogers, of Nansemond County, Va., and a sister, Miss Emma Rogers, of Norfolk, Va. Mr. Rogers was a member of Franklin Christian Church. He had never married. We extend our sincerest sympathy to his sorrowing loved ones.

Holland, Va. N. G. NEWMAN.

HALL.

Departed this life December 16, 1924, at her home, Burlington, N. C., Mrs. Kiziah Jane Hall, in her eighty-second year. Her husband preceded her to the grave about five years ago. Surviving her are six children. She was a charter member of Long's Chapel Christian Church, devoted and true. A mother in Israel has fallen asleep. Sweet be her rest till the Master of life and of death awakes her on the resurrection morning.

Funeral services were conducted from Long's Chapel by the writer, assisted by Dr. G. O. Lankford. The interment was made in the Church cemetery, and her grave was covered with beautiful flowers.

Burlington, N. C. P. H. FLEMING.

LOUDERBACK.

Isaac Newton Louderback was born April 12, 1856, and died December 24, 1924, aged 68 years, 8 months, and 12 days. Deceased was a member of the Newport Christian Church for about thirty-two years. Besides a host of other friends and relatives, he is survived by his widow, six children, nineteen grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren. He was held in high esteem by all.

The funeral services were held at Grove Hill United Brethren Church, near his home, December 26, 1924, and the body laid to rest in the cemetery nearby.

A. W. ANDES.

WEMBLEY.

Sister Diley Wembley was born November 18, 1854; died December 9, 1924. She was a good Christian woman. She was a member of New Hill Christian Church, where she held her membership for many years. She leaves two girls, three boys and many friends to mourn her going. She was killed by a fast train at New Hill, N. C., December 9, 1924, and on the 10th she was buried in the family cemetery near New Hill, N. C.

May God's blessings comfort the loved ones. Funeral by her former pastor.

J. S. CARDEN.

WHAT WOULD JESUS DO?

Why not adopt this as your motto for the New Year? Can you find a better one? The royal law, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," is good as gold. The Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would they should do unto you," is a safe guide to conduct above reproach. But the human life of Jesus is a most holy inspiration. To live His life as He would have us live it is a most sacred privilege. He craves such an invitation. He commands us to be and do like Him. "I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you."

The ordinary standards of life are entirely too low. Ideals of conduct and service run in a vain circle of doing as others do. Men imitate the ordinary, the self-centered, and the indifferent. They pass along the ruts of failure or mediocre attainment.

Get a vision of the Christ. He still lives, moves, and has His being in the Holy Scriptures. He still walks among the seven golden candlesticks. He is still with us always, even unto the end of the world. He still rules in trusting hearts. His will is written large in the gospels and epistles. He is speaking to mind, heart and conscience. He is telling you what He would do if He was in your place. Give ear to His still, small voice, "Go, and do thou likewise."—Word of Life.

TRAVEL INFORMATION

EVERYWHERE—ANYWHERE—ANY TIME
FARES—SCHEDULES—ITINERARIES—RESERVATIONS

LET US SOLVE YOUR TRAVEL PROBLEM

Apply to Local Agent, or Address
F. H. POSTON - - Division Passenger Agent
809 East Main Street, Richmond, Va.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

V. E. MAREAN
Pipe Organ Expert
TUNING — REPAIRING
REBUILDING
Motors Installed Yearly Contracts
P. O. Box 864, - Richmond, Va.
Phone, Boulevard 7011-J

WINSTON-INTERNATIONAL
TEACHERS' BIBLES
SELF-PRONOUNCING
Containing References, a Concordance and the most authoritative Aids to Bible Study. Printed in Black Face Type. Beautiful Bindings
Send for Illustrated Catalog
THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO., Publishers
American Bible Headquarters
429 Winston Building Philadelphia

Something You Have Been Waiting For
Remington Portable Typewriter
—with Standard Keyboard and every other feature common to the larger machines. Case only four inches high.
Price, with case, $60.
Send Your Order to
THE CHRISTIAN SUN
Richmond, Va.

Laxatives do not overcome constipation

LAXATIVES and cathartics provide temporary relief only. Their continued use leads to permanent injury. In time, says an eminent physician, an almost incalculable amount of harm is done by the use of pills, salts, mineral waters, castor oil and the like.

Physicians advise lubrication for Internal Cleanliness

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt the habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

Nujol
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
For Internal Cleanliness

LORICK—SANDERS.

At the home of Mr. J. M. Sanders, of Parkers Street, Durham, N. C., at 3 o'clock, December 31, 1924, Miss Daphne Sanders, of Durham, was married to Mr. Nolon Lorick, of Wilmington, N. C. Immediately after the marriage they left for South Carolina, where they will visit Mr. Lorick's parents. Upon their return they will reside in Wilmington, N. C., where Mr. Lorick holds a position with the Seaboard Railroad Company.

May their lives be long and happy. The marriage was performed by the writer.

Durham, N. C. J. S. CARDEN.

EDWARDS—KING.

Mr. Claud Edwards and Miss Viola King were united in marriage on December 22d, at the bride's home, near Fancy Gap. No one was invited outside of the family. While the occasion was quiet, yet it was of an unusual type for the community. After the marriage, the bride's father and mother gave a very nice supper. After a few days they will make their home at Mt. Airy, N. C.

M. T. SORRELL.

HICKS—MURRAY.

A wedding, pretty in its simplicity, was solemnized on Thursday, December 25th, at 11 o'clock, when Miss Lucille Murray, of this city, was married to Mr. Lee Hicks, also of Durham.

The ceremony was witnessed by only a small circle of friends, and was performed by Rev. J. S. Carden, 906 Shepherd Street, Durham, N. C. May their lives be long and happy.

J. S. CARDEN.

M'NEIL-SAUNDERS; COX-CAVENESS

At the home of the writer, on the evening of December 24, 1924, were united in matrimony Mr. Aster McNeil to Miss Dessie Saunders, and Mr. Vertis Cox to Miss Virtle Caveness. Their many friends wish for them much happiness.

A. K. SCOTTEN.

ELON COLLEGE---CO-EDUCATIONAL

WHITLEY AUDITORIUM BUILDING
One of the Group of Five New Buildings now Completed.

Elon, in her rebuilding program, has been looking to the future. Ten buildings, new and modern equipment, and a highly trained and efficient faculty are at the service of the future leaders of our Church. The phenomenal growth of Elon in the past two years indicates a larger growth throughout the whole denomination in the years just ahead. Make Elon your own Church College in a personal way by your patronage and prayerful co-operation.

A TELEPHONE COMEDY.

Ours is a party line. In our house is a young woman, Miss Ethel Brown, who is engaged to teach in Rockingham County, at a place called Matrimony. The beginning of the school is delayed to finish building a schoolhouse, but she has been expecting a call to go any day. At another house on the line is a young lady named Ethel. She has a beau who sometimes communicates with her by telephone. The doings for the two houses are so much alike that it is easy to mistake one for the other. Recently, Miss Ethel Brown was called by the school committeeman, who wished to inform her that the school was ready to be opened. The telephone was answered by the other Miss Ethel, when the following conversation ensued:

He: "Hello."

She: "Hello."

He: "Is that you, Miss Ethel?"

She: "Yes."

He: "This is Mr. Price. (It happened that the beau was also a Mr. Price.) Are you about ready for Matrimony?"

She: "Why, Mr. Price! This is so sudden."

He: "The house was just finished this week, and I feel that we ought not to wait longer."

She: "Let me talk to Mamma about it, and I will tell you tonight; that is, if you come tonight."

I WILL NOT BE AFRAID.

The longer we live, the more are we convinced that fear is the great foe of human happiness and well-being. Thousands of men and women not only cannot enjoy life because the days are filled with mistrust and dread of what is to come, but that mistrust and dread is a seriously hampering and hurtful thing as well. Our ancestors a few millenniums ago stood in awe of nature, and felt the world about them to be peopled with evil spirits and adverse forces that must be guarded against and placated and got the better of in various ways; and it is to be feared that many of us do not have in reality a much more Christian view of life and the universe than they had. If we do not people our world with evil-minded and wicked spirits, neither are we able to think of it as under the hand of divine goodness and love, and in practical life, whatever our theory of things may be, we seem to think that some evil fate may be lurking around the corner to seize us. And the way we do this is pure paganism, indeed, from which even the rudiments and beginnings of the Christian faith ought to deliver us. If you will take your New Testament and go through it with any care at all, you will find that fear of any kind is one of the things that a Christian is not supposed to have, and that deliverance from it is of the greatest blessings that a faith in Christ brings. —Christian Guardian.

A species of worms which lives only in ice and cannot live when the ice around them melts, has been discovered by a scientific expedition in the Olympic Mountains. What they live on is a mystery, and although they have been photographed it is impossible to get any of them out of the mountains alive.

MONEY TO LEND ON IMPROVED FARMS--FAVORABLE TERMS

Write for Details

SO. BOND & MORTGAGE CO.

627 E. Main St. - - Richmond, Va.

Medical College of Virginia

Medicine Dentistry

Pharmacy Nursing

New Buildings. Well-equipped Laboratories, under the direction of full-time, competent teachers.

The Memorial Hospital, Dooley Hospital, St. Philip Hospital, are owned and controlled by the Medical College of Virginia, and offer every facility for thorough clinical teaching.

Staffs composed of the Faculty of the College. Additional clinical facilities are offered through other institutions in Richmond.

For full information and catalogue, address—

J. R. McCAULEY, Secretary.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D.....Editor
W. W. STALEY, D. D.....Associate
W. A. HARPER, LL. D.....Associate
R. C. HELFENSTEIN, D. D...Associate
REV. S. C. HARRELL.....Associate
REV. S. M. LYNAM.....News Editor
P. J. KERNODLE....Managing Editor

Subscription Rates.

One Year $2.00
Six Months 1.00

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post-Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows the date of expiration. Please renew at least two weeks in advance.

Change of Address: Give both old and new post-office when asking that your address be changed.

When subscriptions are made for friends, state whether paper is to be stopped at end of the year.

Remittances: Make all remittances to "The Christian Sun," 1536 East Broad Street, Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and Marriage Notices, limited to 100 words, are published free of charge. All over 100 words, published at 1 cent a word. Remittance should accompany copy. Write names distinctly.

Advertising Rates: "Want Ads," 2 cents a word an insertion. Display Rates quoted upon request.

MAIFELD.

Albert Henry Maifeld was born December 12, 1862, in Kniesteadt, Germany, and died November 25, 1924, at Waverly, Va. He came to the United States in 1881, and soon thereafter located at Waverly, Va., where he lived till death. On December 22, 1883, he was married to Miss Matilda J. C. Loehr, who also was a native of Germany. They spent their married life at Waverly, where they reared a family of eight children—six boys and two girls. One son and one daughter preceded him in death. He leaves to mourn their loss an afflicted wife, six children, a number of grandchildren whom he loved tenderly, two brothers and two sisters who reside in Iowa. He had many friends. For years he had been a leading business man of Waverly. He ran a wood and iron shop, corn mill, and electric-light plant. He was a skilled mechanic, being able to fashion wood or metal into a thing of beauty or an implement for service. He still held the credentials of the Lutheran Church, where he had been confirmed in early life in Germany.

The burial services were held from the home and cemetery in the presence of a large gathering of people on November 28th, at 2:30 P. M. The floral designs were numerous and very handsome. The services were conducted by the writer, who was pastor to the family for twelve years. Peace to his dust. Loved be his memory. JAS. L. FOSTER.

Elon College, N. C.

BARBER.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father, in His wisdom and mercy, has seen fit to call from our midst our esteemed Bro. D. Riley Barber, a deacon of Shallow Ford Christian Church; therefore, be it resolved:

First, That, while we bow to the will of Him who doeth all things well, we realize our Church has lost a faithful and zealous member; while we shall miss him from our Church, we feel we have been benefited by having him as a member.

Second, That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy, and pray that God may sustain his widow and children and comfort them in this sad hour.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy be spread upon our minutes, and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

R. P. ISLEY,
J. B. GERRINGER,
W. D. WALKER,
Committee.

BLAND.

On Thursday, December 18th, Robert Bland, of Walters, fell dead at his home while all of the family was out of the house. He was 79 years old, but was in as good health as usual, and had just ate a hearty dinner. He leaves to mourn their loss two sons—Charlie Bland, of Walters, and Willie Bland, of Windsor—a faithful wife, and many friends.

His funeral was conducted by the writer, his pastor, at Mt. Carmel Church, of which he was a member. His body was laid away in the Church cemetery. May God's richest blessings rest and abide with his wife, children and friends.

ELISHA BRADSHAW.

WHICH IS THE
BEST INVESTMENT?

It is that one best suited to the requirements of the individual purchaser.

For example: What is best for the millionaire, whose income is in the high brackets, and to whom income is no object, is obviously not the best for the investor who must have the maximum income consistent with safety.

We offer to our clients individual service.

. . .

ESTABLISHED 1874

John L. Williams & Sons

INVESTMENT BANKERS

Phone: Randolph 244 Seventh and Main Streets

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

A Co-Educational School

LOCATED AT

WADLEY, ALABAMA

This School offers the last two years of Academic work and the first two years of College work.

The following Courses are offered in the—

COLLEGE DEPARTMENT: English, Bible, Religious Education, Latin, French, History, Education, Mathematics and Science.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENTS: Music—Piano, Voice; Commercial Department—Bookkeeping, Typewriting, and Shorthand.

Due attention will be given Athletics, such as Tennis, Basket-Ball, Baseball, Football.

The government of the School is mild, but firm, endeavoring to create a home atmosphere as much as possible, not merely to maintain discipline, but to cultivate Christian character.

This is our own School, located within reach of all in this section, and the cost is less than any other College within reasonable distance of those who would attend School from this section.

Send for a Catalogue giving full description of Courses and entrance conditions.

S. L. BEOUGHER, President
Wadley, - - - - Alabama.

OXFORD
TEACHERS'
BIBLES

An Oxford Teachers' Bible has references and 300 pages of helps that are a mine of information to Bible students. The helps are arranged in alphabetical order, like a dictionary. They are accurate, comprehensive and up-to-date. A few styles are listed here. Many others are described in our Bible catalogue, mailed upon request.

04403 [This size print] Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 6¾ x 4¾ inches $4.00

0623x [Same Bible as 04403] Printed on Oxford India paper. Only 1 inch thick..... $6.00

04453 [This size print] French Morocco leather binding, overlapping covers, 7¼ x 5 in. $4.35

0773x [Same Bible as 04453] Printed on Oxford India paper. A remarkably thin and light Bible. (Only 1 inch thick) $7.75

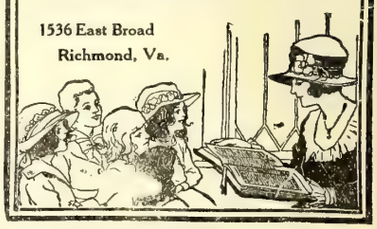
05453 [Same Bible as 04453] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $6.25

05453x [Same Bible as 0773x] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $8.75

04523 [This size print] A self-pronouncing Oxford Bible. Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 8⅛ x 5½ inches... $5.50

0923x [Same Bible as 04523] Printed on Oxford India paper, only 1⅛ inches thick... $9.75

ORDER FROM
"THE CHRISTIAN SUN"
1536 East Broad
Richmond, Va.



FOR GOOD HOME COOKING
MRS. COOK'S CAFETERIA
805 East Grace Street.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY. 1956.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Chu...

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Official Organ of the Southern Christian Convention

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY. IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY. IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXVII. RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JANUARY 15, 1925. NUMBER 3.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

Rev. Dr. John Fox Dies.—

Rev. Dr. John Fox, one of the most widely known of Presbyterian ministers, and a leading fundamentalist, has died at his home at Easton, Pa., at the age of seventy-one.

Over 48 Million Protestants.—

According to the year-book of the Churches recently edited by Dr. E. O. Watson, head of the Washington office of the Federal Council of Churches, points out that in 1923 there were 48,224,014 Protestants in the United States. There are, he points out, 79,140,849 Protestant adherents in this country, while the Catholic Church is credited with 18,260,793. The Methodists are the largest Protestant group, their seventeen bodies totaling 8,433,268 members. The Baptists are running a close second, with 8,189,448. All the Churches raised for all purposes $547,560,562, which is an increase of $29,242,984 over the previous year.

Justice McKenna Resigns.—

Associate Justice Joseph McKenna has resigned his place on the Supreme Court bench. His resignation was not a surprise. His reason for retiring is his advanced age and long service as an associate justice. He had been a member of the Supreme Court for twenty-seven years, and is now nearing his eighty-second year.

President Coolidge has appointed Attorney-General Harlan F. Stone to succeed Justice McKenna. The appointment came in a few hours after the announcement of Mr. McKenna's resignation from the bench by Chief Justice Taft. Mr. Stone succeeded Harry M. Daugherty as Attorney-General, coming to that position from a professorship at Columbia University.

The First Woman Governor.—

It was rather a fitting thing that Wyoming, the first State to grant the franchise to women, should be the first State to inaugurate a woman Governor. On Monday, January 5th, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Rose was solemnly inducted into office. She took the oath of office dressed in mourning for her late husband, the former Governor of the State, who died a few months ago. It was Mrs. Ross' request that all the usual plans for an inauguration should be dispensed with, and immediately after taking the oath she retired to the seclusion of the Governor's mansion. No inauguration ball was given, and none of the usual ceremony marked the occasion. At the last election, besides Mrs. Ross, one other woman, Mrs. Miram A. Ferguson, was chosen as the chief executive of a State, but Mrs. Ross was first to take office.

Chinese Forbid Teaching Religion.—

In spite of the chaotic condition of the political affairs of China, recent dispatches show that the educational conference convened as usual. The conference was held at Kaifeng, in the Province of Honan. Eighteen provinces were represented, and regarding missionary education, four resolutions and eleven recommendations were passed. In the conference, with other things, close government supervision of mission schools was recommended, and resolutions forbidding the teaching of religion in China were passed. If this resolution is enforced, it is a severe blow to the mission work in China.

After Fifty Years.—

Eleven of the twenty-two graduates from the Boston University School of Theology are still alive, and in answer to some questions of the secretary in preparation for the fiftieth reunion, all of these men declared that if they were again upon the threshold of life and knew what they now know after fifty years they would still choose the ministry as a life-work. When asked whether they perceived progress or retrogression during the past half-century, without exception the reply was "Progress."

There is strength for those just beginning in the work of the ministry, and alike for those grown old in the work in such a testimony. It gives one courage to again take hold and to "carry on" in the profession whereto he has given himself. He knows that others have found the calling sweet; sweet enough again to choose it for another half-century were the opportunity given them so to choose.

A Change in Attitude.—

The Japanese Empress attended the morning worship service of the Doshisha High School girls, and stood behind her chair and bowed her head in worship, praying in unison with the others, says a cablegram. This is, perhaps the first time in history that a Japanese ruler has taken part in a Christian service. The change in attitude is emphasized by the announcement that the crown princess will give a sun dial to the leper hospital of the Church of the Advent. The dial will bear the text, "From the rising of the sun to the going down thereof, the Lord's name shall be praised."

These things seem small to us across the sea in a land where to pray is not yet such a strange thing; but to the great officials of Japan, those are momentous steps to take. Some time ago we noted on this page the opening of the city schools of Tokyo to religious education. The signs are hopeful for a more rapid spread of Christianity in the island empire of the East.

Newspapers Spread the Gospel.—

After eight years of advertising fundamental Christian truths in the newspapers of Japan, Dr. Albertus Pieters, who has charge of the work, declares that the results have exceeded the fondest expectations. During the eight years, more than 7,500 inquiries have been received which have been followed up with books, tracts, and personal interviews. More than 130 persons are known to have been so converted, and the influence has been tremendous. More than 95 per cent of the people of Japan read some newspaper. Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars are being sought for the work, which is entirely undenominational.

Properly directed advertising in our American newspapers might yield a similar result. There is a widespread interest manifested in religious news today. This is one of the good results of the controversy between the liberals and the fundamentalists. Some months ago, the New York dailies were devoting whole pages to the Stratton-Potter debates, and New York dailies do not devote whole pages to anything unless their readers desire to read about it. It is an ill wind that blows no good.

The New Labor Chief.—

The American Federation of Labor has chosen William Green, of Coshocton, Ohio, long an official of the United Mine Workers, to succeed Samuel Gompers as the chief of that organization. Mr. Green is a Democrat, and teaches a Baptist Sunday School class in his home town. His elevation was hailed with joy by the Anti-Saloon League, because, as the officials of that organization pointed out, they could now point to the fact that the head of the American Federation of Labor was an active prohibitionist, which would have a marked effect in spreading prohibition throughout the world. Mr. Green is a representative of the conservative element of organized labor, and will perpetuate the policies of Mr. Gompers. His election was opposed by James Duncan, a member of the granite cutters and long vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, and by Matthew Woll, of the Photo Engravers' Union. Mr. Duncan has resigned his position and is leading an opposition party. It remains to be seen whether the new labor chief is strong enough to unite the warring factions.

The new labor head was born in this country of an English father and a Welsh mother. He served for four years in the Ohio State Senate, two years as speaker. He does not believe that labor should become a political organization, at least not yet. With Mr. Green at its head, the business of the American Federation of Labor is expected to proceed quietly on its way.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Bro. R. L. Fine, the good secretary of our Palm Street Christian Sunday School, Greensboro, N. C., in making the remittance from his school for December, very generously adds: "We are going to put forth every effort to make the year of 1925 a banner year in missions for our Church." That is a fine resolution, which other schools, no doubt, have made also.

Miss Gertrude Browne, one of our splendid Christian girls at Elon College, has been elected field secretary by the Woman's Board of the Southern Christian Convention for our woman's and young people's mission work, and took up her duties in this behalf January 1st. Miss Browne is also working for Men and Millions, and the past week has visited many members of our Churches in the vicinity of Sanford, N. C.

Rev. T. J. Greene changes his address from Ramseur, N. C., to Elon College, N. C. Bro. Green has already entered upon his pastoral duties with Shallow Ford, Apple's and Hines Chapel, all of which are in easy reach of Elon. He has five appointments each month, and will be kept quite busy. Bro. Green is one of our faithful and successful ministers and pastors, and he is gladly welcomed back to Elon, where he resided while in school here some years ago in preparation for his ministerial labors.

If all who pledge to Men and Millions could realize what the fund paid in has done for the Church and how very sorely all amounts yet due are needed, we are sure there would be many others like the good man and liberal soul who last week sent us a check for $400 with the wish that this might be used for real service in kingdom work. That wish will certainly be gratified. If ever a fund was used for real service in kingdom work of our Christian Church, then surely this fund is. No one who pays a dollar to it and who knows what the need is and loves the Christian Church, can ever have any cause for regret.

Rev. W. H. Brewer, one of our devoted and promising young ministers of Lanett, Ala., is working in Eastern Virginia for Men and Millions, seeking to give all subscribers an opportunity of paying something on their pledges. Bro. Brewer is proving himself a faithful and efficient worker, and very deeply appreciates the kindness and the courtesy shown him by our ministers and others of our Christian forces whom he has met and with whom he has mingled during his work. Any assistance that SUN readers may give him to expedite his task is a real service to the Church and aids in a very vital manner a most worthy cause.

Rev. O. D. Poythress, the hustling and wide-awake pastor of South Norfolk Church, writes: "In spite of the recent inclement weather, our work at South Norfolk moves forward with encouragement. We have part of the foundation laid for our new Church, and just as soon as the weather permits we will continue work, and as I have written you before, we expect to be in our new Church before next Christmas. We gave our Christmas cantata entitled "The True Christmas," last Sunday evening. We presented it on Tuesday night before Christmas with such credit that many requested that it be repeated, and in keeping with the spirit of the cantata, we took an offering in behalf of our mountain work at Fancy Gap, which amounted to $18.20. I am enclosing you check for same."

THE SUN'S editor is very glad to insert the following at the suggestion of Bro. Sam Davis, and indulges the hope that it will result in opening up work for Bro. Davis and his good wife. They are certainly great assets in evangelistic work. Any pastor or Church contemplating a series of meetings would certainly do well to secure their services if possible. Let those interested make note of the following: "We wish to announce to our many friends that we are exceedingly anxious to continue in kingdom's service, and would be glad to communicate with pastors who may desire evangelistic help. We are hopeful that pastors will so use us that we may continue in Christian work. Any one desiring our services will communicate with Mr. and Mrs. Sam Leonard Davis, 114 East Fifteenth Street, Norfolk, Va."

Bro. L. L. Kernodle, a faithful man of God and a member of Bethlehem Christian Church for more than seventy-five years, died in the hospital at Graham, N. C., Thursday, January 8th, and was buried in the Bethlehem Cemetery Friday P. M., January 9th, the funeral service being conducted by Rev. T. E. White, pastor of our Graham Church, which Bro. Kernodle had attended for the last fifteen years, being a resident of Graham. THE SUN'S editor was also at the funeral and assisted in the services. Bro. Kernodle was the father of Prof. P. J. Kernodle, managing editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and Bro. John D. Kernodle, Graham, N. C., and Sister J. J. Williams, of Guilford County. We extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved wife who survives him, and the two sons and daughters. Bro. Kernodle was in his ninety-third year, and through a long useful life manifested the deepest interest in his Church and its welfare, being, almost to the day of his death, a constant and close reader of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, manifesting a lively interest in all the interests of the Church.

Mr. Hermon Eldredge, of our Christian Education Department, is our denominational representative on the International Lesson Committee, which met in Cincinnati, December 29th to January 1st. Mr. Eldredge has served our Church on this committee for eight years, and at the Cincinnati meeting was elected stated secretary of the uniform group of the international committee.

At the Cincinnati meeting there were released four years of group graded lessons for the primary, junior, intermediate and senior for 1927, and the uniform lessons for 1927 subject to revision by the uniform committee at a meeting to be held in Washington later this month. Mr. Eldredge presented a communication to the international committee from the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference, requesting one or more lessons each year in the uniform series on the subject of peace as interpreted in the terms of the teachings of Christ. This communication passed the business committee and was recommended by the general committee to the uniform group, requesting that it receive sympathetic consideration.

The joint committee on international curriculum presented its report to the international committee, outlining its work in the field of Christian education, which is to build a Church curriculum to embrace the instructional, devotional and expressional teachings of the Church as given in the Sunday Schools, daily vacation Bible schools, and week-day schools of religion, as well as in other lines of religious education conducted by the Church, the plan being a comprehensive curriculum, correlating the teachings of all departments of the Church into a Church school program. In this connection, it may be said that the Christian Church has gone further on its organization to take up such a program than any of the other denominations, but there is a decided tendency in all denominations toward this unity of organization and promotion of all Christian education under the direction of the Church. Other denominations which have recently taken steps toward this goal are the Episcopal, Presbyterians, Methodist Episcopal, which have endorsed the plans through their general conventions and have entered upon the work. Other denominations are in the midst of making such adjustments, but so far as known, the Christian Church is the only denomination which has fully and whole-heartedly accepted one plan for its educational work from the home to the college.

MISSIONARY PROGRAM.

The following is the program for the Woman's Missionary Societies, January, 1925:

Subject—"The Light of the World."
Hymn—"Joy to the World."
Devotional—John 1:1-14.
Prayer.
Roll Call
Payment of Dues.
Business Meeting.
The Lesson for the Day—From the mission study book, provided your society is using the book; otherwise, the following is suggested: Have some member read to the society "Making Your Church Missionary," by W. P. Minton (see "Christian Missionary" for December). If your society does not take the "Missionary," it should immediately subscribe in the name of the president, secretary, or some one who will have it at each meeting.
Read and discuss "Department of Methods" (page 87, December "Christian Missionary").
Chain of Prayer.
Hymn—"I Love to Tell the Story."
Benediction.

GERTRUDE BROWN,
Elon College, N. C. Secretary.

FROM WALTERS.

On Sunday, January 4th, the roads were very wet and muddy, but we had a good congregation at Mt. Carmel, especially good considering the condition of the roads. I went to Johnson's Grove in the afternoon. The roads around Johnson's Grove were very bad, because of the continued rains the week before, but many of the faithful were present, and we had a good time together. They have some very good people over at the Grove; some that are always there, in bad and good weather.

On the third Sunday in December, when I went to my Ford after preaching, I first thought that I had gone to some one else's Ford, as there were so many packages in it. As I was about to look for another car, some one informed me that some one had been pounding me, but as I had not felt it I was very much surprised. But as some of you that read know (pastors especially), it was a glad surprise.

May the good Lord bless each one of them, and may the Lord help me to be able to give the very best service possible in the new year that we are now beginning. ELISHA BRADSHAW.

AN APPRECIATION.

I wish to extend my sincere appreciation to our good friends of Holland, Holy Neck and vicinity, for the liberal offerings and services otherwise that has been extended to us during my affliction. May the Lord bless each one of them bountifully, and lift us up to still higher plains of Christian living. We covet your prayers.

Holland, Va. J. T. CROSS.

VISITING ROCKY FORD.

I heard recently that Mr. Alfred Edwards and family, of the Rocky Ford neighborhood, were preparing to move to an adjoining county. I determined at once that I must see them before they left. Yesterday morning I set out over the Strickland road, which is a short route to the Fancy Gap. The morning was bright, and the distant views were beyond description. By taking this route instead of going out Elk Spur to the top of the mountain, where we come into the Fancy Gap road, I saved a walk of two miles. However, I found the road through the timber quite icy, so much so that I could not walk rapidly. When I reached the Fancy Gap, I was relieved by finding it muddy. After having traveled another mile, I came to the Edwards home. It is one of the first homes that I visited when I came here two years ago, and since that time it has always been a delight to meet any member of the family. During my stay yesterday, Mrs. Edwards crossed the room, and returning said, "Miss Morey, here is my bar-pin. I want you to have it and wear it." It was with reluctance that I accepted it, but be assured that no gift that I have ever received is more highly appreciated.

Mr. Edwards and a son are members of our Rocky Ford Church. Mrs. Bevell, a relative, who will leave with them, is also a member. These dear people have been so faithful in attending our services, and I regret exceedingly that they must leave without seeing our Church and schoolbuilding at Rocky Ford.

Mrs. Noah Rigney, whose husband died recently, moved to Mt. Airy yesterday. She is known as "Aunt Lou," and is loved by all who know her. She has been present at almost every service since our work began at Rocky Ford.

I spent a part of the day in the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Rigney. They so willingly shared their home with me during the first three months of stay here. Their kindness to me was unlimited.

Miss Lettie is teaching in the little room in which I taught. I was glad to have the opportunity to visit her school. There are no desks, but the children were seated around the little heater. I was told by the teacher that it was their study period, and all were working very quietly. I stayed until the close of school, and by hearing them recite found they have advanced greatly since I taught them two years ago.

I had carried them a little after-Christmas treat which came through the kindness of Mrs. E. L. Beale, of Franklin, Va., and the Young People's Missionary Society of which she is leader. The candy, nuts and raisins pleased them greatly.

I hope in the near future to visit other Rocky Ford homes. Readers of THE SUN will hear from me again. The workers here feel sure that our people generally do not realize the great need of a building in this section. Those who have visited our work know what a handicap the lack of sufficient room is too Bro. Sorrell and his audiences. He will join me in making an urgent appeal for contributions to the Rocky Ford building fund. These people have waited so patiently. Will you not make it possible for us to build in the spring?

I will acknowledge by receipt and also in THE CHRISTIAN SUN all money sent to me. I will turn into the hands of the mission treasurer all money received, the same to be used as designated in building the Rocky Ford Church and school. Below is a list of subscriptions already received:

Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay, $2; Miss M. H. Morey, $20; Miss Clemmer, $15; Miss Midyett, $5; Rev. and Mrs. Sorrell, $10; Rocky Ford Church, $5; Mr. Noah Combs, $25; Mr. Francis King, $10; Mr. Walter Edwards, $20; Mr. J. McCrary, $20; Bruce Rigney, $10; Mr. Dan Tate, $5; Mr. Albert Tate, $10; Mr. Earlie Jones, $20; Miss Mass Combs, $1; Mr. Ben Rigney, $10; Mrs. Ashby and mother, $5; Mr. E. W. Jones, $20; Mr. D. W. Jones, $1; Mr. M. C. Sorrell, $15; Mr. Bert Combs, $2; Mr. Cable Strickland, $1; Mr. H. Leftwich, $1; Mr. E. Wood, $1; Mrs. Edwards, $1; Miss Lettie Rigney, $1; Mr. J. Dawson, $1; Miss Rose Meredith, $1; Mr. D. McCrary, $1; Mr. A. Payne, $2.50; Mr. H. M. Easten, $2; Mr. Raleigh Guynn, $5; Mr. Joe King, $5; Mr. Bob Rigney, $5; Rev. Payne, $1; Mr. Josh Tate, $1; Mr. Willie Tate, $1; Mr. Rufus Tate, $1; Mr. Carl Tate, $2; Mr. Claude Guynn, $5; Mr. Frank Pain, $2.50; Mr. H. Towe, $5; Mr. Josh Tate, $5; Mr. J. W. Tate, $2; Miss Sena Tate, $1; Mrs. McCrary, $1; Mr. Taylor King, $2.50; Mr. J. L. Tate, $5; Mr. C. E. Eagle, $5; Mr. T. W. King, $5; Mr. E. B. Bowman, $10; Mr. K. M. Knash, $10; Mr. Iroler, $10; Mr. B. J. Rigney, $1; Mr. Geo. Willard, $1; Mr. Robert Jones, $1; Mr. Willis McMillan, $1; Mr. Judde Bolen, $1; Miss Daisy Tate, $2; Mr. E. B. Johnson, $5; Mr. J. Beal Johnson, $5; Mr. T. M. Franks, $5; Mr. E. C. Foy, $1; Mr. H. M. Foy, $1; Mr. J. J. Reynolds, $1; Mr. Claude Sorrell, $2; Mr. J. E. Franks, $1; Mr. Hylton, $1; Miss Summers, $1; Miss Eula Humble, $1; Mrs. Rich Mitchel, $1; Miss Celestia Pennie, $5; Mrs. Teague, $1; Rev. Hook, $1; Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Collins, $2; Mrs. Ellen Potter, $2; Miss Stela Johnson, $3; Mr. P. W. Womble and wife, $10; Mrs. B. Curtis, $1; Catawba Springs, $10; Catawba Springs S. S., $10; Wake Chapel S. S., $100; Mr. Gerrenger, $1 a member of Wake Chapel Church (one month's work as carpenter), $130; Mr. Geo. McCullers, $1.

MARGARET H. MOREY,
Treas. Rocky Ford Bldg. Fund.

FAMOUS PASTOR VISITS WINTER HAVEN.

A distinguished visitor in the city is the Rev. Daniel Albright Long, D. D., LL.D., pastor of the First Christian Church, of Franklinton, N. C., and head of the theological department at Franklinton Christian College. The distinguished clergyman and educator, now well past eighty years of age, came to the city several days ago, and is located at the Plaza Hotel for a short stay.

Sunday evening, Dr. Long occupied the pulpit of the First Methodist Church, preaching an inspiring discourse. The aged gentleman's discourse was scholarly, but deeply spiritual, and made a fine impression upon his hearers.

Dr. Long is a native of North Carolina, but has been a college president in several States in the Union. He is an ex-Confederate soldier, and has the distinction of being the only Son of the Confederacy ever to become president of a college north of the Mason and Dixon line. For ten years he was president of Graham College, N. C., and then for sixteen years president of the famous Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio, in whose presidency he was succeeded by the now United States Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio. A four-year term as president of Christian Union College, in Indiana, terminated his educational work in the North, and years ago he returned to his native State to assume the pastorate of the Franklinton Church and the presidency of the Franklinton College theological department. He also for several years was editor of Spirit and Life, a noted religious journal.

Dr. Long has been coming to Florida for a quarter of a century, and first visited Winter Haven twenty-two years ago. He owns a 630-acre tract near Lake Alfred. Recently he sold a seventy-acre tract near Lake Alfred. He is delighted with the city and the entire section, and sees great possibilities for the upbuilding of Florida as a whole.—W. Haven (Fla.) Exchange.

BIG OAK—BENNETT.

We entered upon our work at these Churches beginning with the Conference year, giving each two preaching services a month. On our second visit to Big Oak, we held a business meeting of the Church, and at that time elected three new deacons to fill vacancies created by the death of two and removal from Church membership of one. The following were elected to this office and ordained: Messrs. W. P. Copeland, Charles B. Cole and Estheride Bailey. Of course, we regret the loss of our former deacons, but congratulate the Church which has such noble young men to fill this position and to be willing to accept it and strive to fill it with credit.

A new Communion set has been ordered for the Church, and other things are being planned for the improvement of the Church and its services.

A nice Sunday School is being conducted under competent leaders, and a splendid number is enrolled. We hope to see this Church go forward during the year in many ways.

We went to Bennett for our first time as pastor in December. With all respect to all concerned, I believe they have the finest Sunday School I ever attended, in some ways at least.

The membership here seems to be in full harmony and have the assistance and co-operation of other denominations of the village. We hope to be able to clear the Church of its indebtedness and dedicate it during the year. May we ask the interest in your prayers for this work, that it may go forward and glorify God.

C. E. GERRINGER.
Jackson Springs, N. C.

The November, 1924 "Bulletin" of Elon College is entitled "Library Number," and is an exceedingly appropriate and beautiful souvenir brochure. Beside the very handsome tan-cover pages, the "Bulletin" carries eighteen pages of very neatly printed matter, showing by picture and sketches the Carlton Library Building which was formally dedicated September 7th, historical sketch of the building, and an illuminating description of the building, and also the great address delivered on the day of dedication by Mr. Lewis R. Wilson, librarian of the University of North Carolina. Besides the fine cuts, displaying the building, the faces of the Carlton family, who presented the building also grace and gladden pages of the "Bulletin." The bochure is bound with red-silk corn and presents a very attractive souvenir and valuable keepsake. The editor is not informed as to the number for distribution, but presume that any CHRISTIAN SUN reader interested and desiring a copy should secure same by addressing the president, Elon College, N. C.

The following note on the last page of the "Bulletin" is also of interest to and should concern SUN readers: "The Carltons have provided Elon a magnificent library building and have equipped it most admirably. Nothing is left to be desired as to building or equipment. The gratitude of Elon's friends and alumni, as also of the Christian Church, toward these princely givers is unbounded in its expression of appreciation. The one thing needful now is books to fill to the overflow these rows on rows of steel shelves. The surest expression of gratitude to the Carltons at this time will no doubt be found in supplying the one thing needful to complete this generous benefaction. The library must have books, and must have them without delay."

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR.

J. O. ATKINSON, Elon College, N. C.

Contributing Editors.

W. W. STALEY W. A. HARPER
R. C. HELFENSTEIN S. C. HARRELL

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

A CHRISTIAN CHURCH ORGANIZED.

It was the privilege of the mission secretary to be present Sunday, January 4, 1925, at the formal organization of a Christian Church on Route 1, Lynchburg, Va. The new Church building, soon to be occupied, is near the city on one of the leading highways, and the city is rapidly growing in the direction of the new Church property and the community there is developing very rapidly. It is a community Church, made up of members of the various denominations in the community and who, on coming together and making inqquiry and investigation, found that they could all very happily unite on the basis of our Christian Church principles and co-operate in kingdom's service as a Christian Church.

The organization is to be known as the United Christian Church. Rev. M. F. Allen, formerly a Presbyterian preacher, was formally elected pastor of the new organization, and the Church, in making application in the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference, voted unanimously that their pastor be admitted to the same Conference. Mr. F. H. Dunn was elected secretary of the Church, and Mr. O. F. Tolley was elected Treasurer. A board of five deacons was elected, and also a board of advisors, consisting of three members, and a board of trustees.

At the formal organization, twenty-nine persons signed their names as charter members and as petitioners that their Church be received into the Christian Conference. There are quite a number of others who are to join that will easily bring the charter membership to fifty or more. The congregation has been worshiping in an otherwise unoccupied store building while their house of worship has been in course of construction. This building is of stucco work on the outside, beautifully plastered within. The main auditorium will easily seat 300. The basement has the same amount of space as the main auditorium, and is to be divided into eight class-rooms for the Sunday School and other auxiliary organizations. It is a very neat structure, and must have cost not less than $5,000 in the building, though the writer failed to inquire authoritatively as to this.

But for the unfavorable weather of the last two weeks, our worship on Sunday, January 4th, was to have been in the new building. A week's work will easily finish the building, which will immediately be thrown open for regular services.

A splendid Sunday School was organized the same day the Church was organized, with its various classes and departments. This is a most promising congregation, made up of a thrifty, intelligent and progressive people. Many heads of families were among the number, and the writer was much impressed with the large number of young people present on the day of organization. The prospect seems bright indeed for a substantial and prosperous Church here. We have not for a long time met a people more hopeful and enthusiastic over the prospect and achievement as a Church, and there seems to be no good reason why this should not result in a large and growing congregation.

Bro. Allen, the pastor, is much loved by the people whom he is leading, and he in turn thinks he has the finest people to serve that any pastor ever had. The various communions of the community, having come into this united Church, should, by their co-operative effort and with their ideas from the Churches from which they come, be able to do a great and glorious work in the community.

PHILOSOPHY AND THE SECOND BIRTH.

Something happens when a man becomes a Christian. At one time it is described as a well of water springing up into everlasting life. At another we are told it is comparable to putting off the old man and putting on the new man. Jesus, in speaking to Nicodemus, used the strongest figure of all, "ye must be born again."

Now, philosophy has been supposed to be arrayed against this new birth, and for that reason many devout saints have decried philosophy and regarded it as the enemy of the faith. But now behold philosophy become the comrade of the Church in teaching this fundamental doctrine of the faith! Certainly the philosophers do not use so simple a term as birth to explain the process by which we transform our lower ideals of life into the higher conceptions. They say that progress in moral and spiritual growth and achievement is acquired by a sublimation of our instincts. But what is this sublimation of our instincts? It is a grandiloquent phrase for the transformation of our varied animal passions from a selfish to an altruistic basis.

So again the scholars vindicate the saints. We knew we were right all the time. Experience told us we were right. The Bible told us. And when these two combine, we may be sure that sooner or later the philosophers will capitulate.

Take your choice—sublimate your instincts, or be born again. They are both the same. One comes by way of Boston, and the other by way of the cross.

A CORRECTION.

In an article appearing in The Christian Sun of November 20, 1924, under the heading, "A Promising Plan," and discussing the budget system of the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference, this statement appears: "It speaks well for the Conference that only one Church, Lebanon, failed to endorse the budget suggested by the higher body, and no doubt Lelanon will fall in line this year."

Now, in so far as I am informed, this statement is technically correct. But in its implications, it does the Lebanon Church a grave injustice. I am convinced that the writer meant no reflection upon the Lebanon Church, but one might readily infer that the other Churches of the Conference are more ready to comply with the recommendations of Conference than is Lebanon. When from a personal acquaintance with the Lebanon Church and the good people that comprise its membership, I know that such is not the case.

The idea back of the budget system, as it was presented to the Conference, was that the Church should decide what it should send to Conference in the light of the needs as presented by the Conference, and the ability of the Church to pay. Lebanon, co-operating heartily with the plan suggested voted to accept an amount that was less by one-fourth than that suggested by Conference. It also adopted the other items recommended by Conference, made out a Church budget, conducted an every-member canvass, adopted the envelope system of payment, and sent up to Conference the amount voted by the Church. Though they did not accept the amount suggested by Conference, one is forced to see that they were following both in letter and spirit the recommendations passed by Conference. From personal acquaintance, I happen to know that some of the very best business men of the Church and community are giving of their time and best effort to put the finance of the Church on a sound, business-like and pay-as-you-go basis.

As to whether the other Churches formally adopted the amounts suggested by Conference or not I am unable to say, as none of them reported to me as secretary of Conference their acceptance of the full amount, or the amount adopted if less than suggested. But the report of collector at Conference shows that of the thirty-four Churches reporting to Conference, eighteen sent the entire amount suggested by Conference. Five Churches sent three-fourths, or a little over that, of the amount suggested. Four Churches sent approximately one-half of the amount suggested. Five Churches sent about one-third of the amount suggested. Two Churches sent nothing at all. One Church, reporting exactly three times as many members as Lebanon, and recognized as perhaps the strongest financially of the country Churches of the Conference, sent exactly one-third of the amount suggested by Conference, which was less by exactly one-third than the amount sent to Conference by the Lebanon Church.

This article is written with a twofold purpose. I am aware that some one has well said, "All comparisons are odious." But since one Church was mentioned by name in the public print, I deemed it only fair to that Church to set forth its achievements for the past year as compared with the other Churches of the Conference. In the second place, few of our people ever get the facts that are contained in the statistical table of "The Annual," and it may prove helpful to know just what we are accomplishing as Churches of the Conference.

Stanley C. Harrell,
Sec'y N. C. & Va. Christian Conference.

Students at Indiana University, at Bloomington, Ind., are not permitted to motor outside the city of Bloomington and are denied the privilege of possessing an automobile while attending the university. The ban was placed on automobiles because of poor scholastic standing, according to the dean.

TWELVE INTERNATIONAL MOVEMENTS.

By Rev. R. F. Brown, M. A.

III. THE DAWN AND THE DESTINY OF DEMOCRACY.

Democracy is a term that is closely related to life. The advent of human life witnessed the dawn of democracy, for the very principles of the movement are inherent in the very nature of man. In all humanity there is a commonality of desire and experience and ideal which unite in a demand for a fair, untrammeled, and organized method of expression. In every human heart there is a feeling of selfhood which desires a part in the formation of the rules which are to govern men, shape their thought, and contribute to their personal experience. Man's better quiescent self demands this and will be satisfied with nothing less.

A democracy cannot be handed down to the masses. The very nature of the movement forbids it. It cannot build from the top down. It is not a condescending stoop of superiority to inferiority. Rulers and kings have never produced a democracy; but democracies have been produced in spite of them. Every democracy of which we have record has resulted from the slow process of gradual unfolding, a struggle upward, a reach forward. It is because of this fundamental truth that democracies have been born. The dawn of democracy is the result of the finer sentiments of the soul, the high ideals, the feeling of selfhood and freedom.

Another essential principle upon which a democracy depends is that of virtue. This constitutes its very heart. Without this principle, the thought would never have found expression. In the absence of virtue, a true democracy cannot be born, and without the element of virtue it cannot be conceived.

According to Montesquieu, that great political writer and philosopher of nearly two centuries ago, all governments are divided into three classes, namely: the democratic, the aristocratic, and the despotic. In a democracy, the sovereign power is reposed in the people acting collectively; in an aristocracy, the power is lodged in only a part of the people; in a despotic form of government, all power is lodged in one person. The only argument against the latter is it endeavors to function by force. The only reason despotism has failed is because it has tried to function on the policy that might makes right. One great argument against an aristocracy is the fact that it lays claim to success on the principle of honor. Honor is a splendid trait, but it should be merited, not inherited. The glory of democracy is found in the fact that it depends, not on force or honor, but on solidarity of concept, collective action, and inherent virtue. These principles give rise to democracy. History makes it perfectly clear that democratic republics are born only during epochs of great virtue. Look at Rome during the days of the first Brutus; the Swiss in the days of William Tell; the Dutch at the time of Nausau, and America under the leadership of Washington. And the world's youngest democracies were born during the recent great world struggle between autocracy and democracy. The World War was indeed an epoch of virtue versus force, and it revealed democracy at its best and despotism at its worst. It has been and always will be at just such times—the times of bitter and hard-fought contests between the natural, legal freedom of man and the brutal and abusive principle of absolute force—that men emerge with the trophy of a new-born democracy. Once more I quote from Montesquieu's book, "The Spirit of the Laws": "In a democracy alone the principle of government is virtue, and equal power is confided to every citizen. In such a government, criticism is required. . . . Not only do crimes destroy virtue, which is the foundation of democracy, but carelessness, defaults, and relaxation in love of country destroys it also."

Again, there is within every heart that feeling of equal rights. This is fundamental principle of democracy, and it is properly stated in the Declaration of Independence, which declares that "all men are created equal." This principle of equality means that all men have equal political rights and an equal share in the benefits accruing from the democracy. Behold, the farmer's child sits in the school-room with the banker's child, and they in every way share equally in the benefits of popular education which democracy has crystalized into a common heritage. It united the differences of all races, giving each an equal right to all that democracy offers. The ideals of democracy have to do with "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," making it plain that every man, woman, and child has a right to these things. Our democracy proposes to give every one such a conception of possibilities that his life will be fuller, and sweeter, and his pursuit of happiness more intelligently and worthily directed. Man does not long primarily for a harmonious and undisturbed physical existence. The average, red-blooded American wants a harmonious, varied, and satisfying experience equal with other men. And our democracy guarantees that man shall have this. William Jennings Bryan says: "Behold, a republic resting securely upon the foundation-stone quarried by Revolutionary patriots from the mountain of eternal truth; a republic applying in practice and proclaiming to the world the self-evident proposition—that all men are created equal; that they are endowed with inalienable rights; that governments are established among men to secure these rights; that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed." A larger life, a liberty that is deeper and more real, a pursuit of happiness that is more likely to be crowned with enduring success, equality, union, justice, tranquility, defense, general welfare—they are all made more possible and more fully realizable because of what democracy is and does. These ideals, indeed, cannot well hope for fulfillment without just that type of service which democracy is fitted sympathetically and continuously to give. And there will never be peace and joy until this ideal which abides in the human is reached. It is this great urge in the superb better self that makes democracy possible and gives it its chief point of approach. Such is democracy's ethico-political hope; and if democracy can discover this juvenile urge in man and weave it into a great social, political, moral, and spiritual organism, it will have served the purposes of its origin. Democracy makes it plain that "equality before the law" does not mean that all men have equal ability, but it does insist that men have equal rights and that these rights will be protected under the principles of democracy.

But there is another underlying and determining factor in the dawn and destiny of a democracy. In religion, we call it unity; in society, we call it sameness, and in political economy we call it solidarity. Political solidarity is not an aggregation of material elements, for it is impossible to compound material elements and produce a spiritual, social, or political organism. Democracy depends not on a mechanical combination, or legislative decisions, but on a conscious, living, expanding solidarity. It is evident that the essence of democracy is found in that solidarity which is a rich heritage in the unsullied nature of man, and which literally grows in his own free nature, reaching out and finding its counterpart in other lives, and together these free and co-operating spirits live and produce an organism of democracy. And these free spirits always succeed in finding a spokesman. In Washington and Jefferson, our forefathers had spokesmen who voiced the sentiments of the masses. While Lincoln wielded a hammer of dictatorship that would have crushed men like Charlemagne, Napoleon, and Musselini, he understood the meaning of democracy, and succeeded in weaving his lofty conception into the very fabric of our national life, culminating in the freedom of the slave and the unity of a mighty people. He knew that a democracy would forever remain an irredescent dream so long as the free spirits of men were hampered and the ideals and conceptions of men were at variance. His conception of solidarity was correct, and our democracy was saved.

America's ideals of democracy are not original. While Washington and Jefferson and Lincoln and Wilson played a great part in the history of democracy, their ideals were borrowed from other men and nations. What they did was simply preserve for humanity those finer conceptions which found expression in earlier republics. Our ideals of democracy sprang from many sources, the neucleus of which began many centuries ago. Indeed "We are the heirs of all the ages in the foremost files of time." The legal aspects of our personal associations as experienced in demrocacy were borrowed from Rome. Our conception of rights and equality and personal liberty we derived from the ancient conceptions of slavery as practiced by Russia and Egypt. Our reverence, such as we have; our political intuition, and our social organism we derived from the Saxons. Our democracy is young and picturesque, and its dawn opened a new and brighter path for humanity.

But the dawn of democracy is not enough. It must experience healthy growth, like any other organism. And in order to develop, there must be certain contributary forces and agencies. One of the first contributing factors to democracy is the home. The home is the oldest institution, and it is indeed a serious blow to democracy when the home loses its power of leadership and direction over the growing manhood and womanhood of the nation, for when we grow men and women we are growing a democracy. From the time the first American home was built at Plymouth Rock till now, the home has been the greatest potential factor in developing those latent faculties in humanity which either contribute to the healthy growth of democracy, or hinder its growth. From the home come the highest ideals out of which a democracy is developed, or the meanest ideals which undermine the foundation of democracy and prevent its growth. It matters not whether the home is a hut, a cabin, or a palace, the highest type of manhood and womanhood should be developed in order that there may be an expansion of the principles of democracy. If this were true, the growth of democracy would be assured. The virtue, the power, the stability, the growth of democracy are the smoltering embers in the homes of the world. The tide of democracy will never rise higher than the ideals of the home Truly, the homes mold the ideals and measure the growth and stability of nations and democracies. History makes it perfectly clear that the home sets the goal for democracy, or carves the rugged tomb in which it must sleep.

The school is another force in the making or marring of democracy. It takes the child at the most crucial period of life and exerts a controlling influence over his entire life. Dr. Simon N. Patten, professor of economics at the University of Pennsylvania, once said: "If we move our students we move the world." The tendency of our school system is not in the direction of democracy. The tendency of the pulpit, the plat-

Continued on Page 7.)

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Martha James, wife of Benjamin James Roberts, was born January 2, 1846, and died at their home in Windsor, Va., January 6, 1925, at the age of 79 years and 4 days. They were married March 17, 1864, and had lived happily together for 60 years, 9 months, and 19 days.

There were born unto them twelve children, four of whom died in infancy, eight of them lived to be grown, and six are still living. The names of those who reached maturiay are as follows: (1) Addie, married R. W. Holland, son of Rev. R. H. Holland, and was the mother of five children, all living; (2) Cordelia, married L. Watkins and was the mother of four children, three of whom are living; (3) Pocahontas, deceased, unmarried; (4) Benjamin James, deceased, unmarried; (5) Claudius, married C. W. Bailey and was the mother of two children, one of whom is living; (6) Mattie S., unmarried; (7) Post, married Hazel Wright, and they have one child living and three dead; (8) Lillian, married William Carson and was the mother of five children, three of whom are living.

The grandchildren are: Hollands—Wallace, Ethel, Walter, Orion, Clairbell; Watkins—Alvah, Florence, Vance; Baileys: Martha, Frances; Roberts—Zenas P., Jr.; Carsons—Robert, Russell, Sarah Elizabeth.

Great-grandchildren: Walter Franklin Daughtery, Jr., Eric Cecil Holland, James Wallace Holland, Robert W. Holland, III.

Totals: Children, 12; grandchildren, 20; great-grandchildren, 4—in all, 36, and thirty-two of the descendants are living. Mrs. Roberts is survived by one sister, Mrs. Alice Elizabeth Harris, and Charlie Spivey, who lived with them sixteen years. Nearly all of the descendants were present at the funeral services conducted from the family residence in Windsor at 2:30 on the afternoon of Wednesday, January 7, 1925, with Scripture, prayer, brief remarks and the singing of "Asleep in Jesus" and "Will the Circle be Unbroken?"

Both Mr. and Mrs. Roberts were charter members of Windsor Christian Church, coming from Antioch Christian Church. Mrs. Roberts was Miss Martha James Bracey before her marriage. Mr. Roberts was one of seven brothers, all of whom served through the Civil War, and all returned at its close, most of them with wounds. Prof. J. W. Roberts is the son of one of them, and Rev. J. M. Roberts is the son of another. Benjamin is the only one of the seven brothers who survives. He is 86, and mourns the loss of a dear companion with whom he had lived a happy life for more than sixty years. He secured permission from his general to come home to be married, and one of the sweetest memories, among a thousand others, is what his sweetheart said when some one asked her if it would not be a big mistake to marry him and let him return to the army and perhaps be killed. She replied: "I would rather be his widow than to be like I am." Threescore years have only served to deepen those words in his memory and to enrich his love for her.

Bro. Roberts has the love and sympathy of a host of friends, and regretted the absence of Pastor Dr. W. D. Harward, who had gone to Durham to see his mother, who was not expected to live. The blanket of flowers that covered her grave and the wreathes that surrounded it were not more beautiful than the family devotion that expressed itself in the presence and tender feelings for their dear father as the tears fell from his eyes. W. W. STALEY.

ELON LETTER.

President Coolidge is a graduate of Amherst College, one of the small New England denominational colleges; small because it believes such a college has a real mission, and denominational because it regards religious instruction necessary to the best education, and State schools cannot legally give such instruction. President Coolidge is the very type of man such a college aspires to produce.

When his alma mater recently was to inaugurate a new president, he found it impossible to be present. So he sent a message. From it I wish to quote two paragraphs of great significance, as follows:

"It is with a great deal of regret that I have to decline the invitation to be present at the inauguration of President Olds. He began his career at Amherst at the same time that my class began its career. I know he was a good teacher because I was able to pass the examinations that he gave us in mathematics. I am certain that he will be a good president, for he is a man of ability, of vision, and of high ideals, and has that strength of character which is the result of a sound and honest mind.

"He is more likely to be attached to principles because he believes them to be true than because he fancies that they are novel. I think he will minister to the purpose for which Amherst College was founded, of resisting the disbelief of the times by teaching men what is right and inspiring them with a firm faith in the realities of life. I expect that those who follow him will finish their course with a firmer conviction that there is a difference between right and wrong; that there are not only material values, but even more important moral and spiritual values in life; that there is a law of service which carries its own recompense, and that there has never been any progress or development of society which neglected industry and self-denial. Believing these things, I feel that he will be a worthy president of a Christian college established to teach men to follow the truth." W. A. HARPER.

BETHLEHEM LETTER.

The progress of the institutions of the Christian Church depends largely upon the attitude and activities of the pastors and leaders. In a denomination in which the local Church is the prime factor, the pastor is key to the situation. When he wills for any enterprise to go forward in the Church of which he is pastor, it succeeds; and when he opposes it, it fails. The success of Bethlehem College, in its last analysis, will depend upon the loyalty of our pastors to our youngest college of our communion. They must not fail in their duty to this institution. It is unbelievable that they should, since they prayed for it, worked for it, and helped in its being located in this Southland for the special benefit of the Alabama and Georgia and Alabama Conferences. When the Southern Christian Convention, through the Men and Millions Forward Movement, decided to build a college within the bounds of one of these Conferences, there was no thought that one Conference should monopolize its benefits or pay its obligations. If it had been prepossessed with this impression, I feel quite sure that the money would have been turned elsewhere, for no one Conference can support an institution like Bethlehem College, neither should it be expected to do so.

A very commendable amount was subscribed for the college by our people throughout this section in both Conferences considering their means, and I cannot help believe they pledged it in good faith, expecting to pay every dollar of it—may God pity all who subscribed with any other motive. If Bethlehem College had the money that is now due on subscription, she would not be in such financial straights. We would not be trying to borrow $10,000, for we could get along without it. We hope and pray that the good Lord will open the heart and pocket-book of some person—a person who will help us out of our financial embarrassment, though others have fallen down on the job. Brethren, let us pray that God will convert those who have pledged and feel that they are under no obligations to pay, and also that God will give us new subscribers that will pay, as well as pray.

I was informed the other day by one of our financial solicitors that a pastor of a Church, which had subscribed $1,000 to the college, had informed his people that they need not pay any of it until they had paid off the entire debt on their Church. If this be true, they will be a long while getting out of debt, for when a Church becomes so self-centered there is already slumbering in its bosom the elements of death.

And more than that: how dare a pastor—the servant of the people, and not an owner of the Church—to assume such a dreadful responsibility as would rest upon a man who would advise his flock against doing their plain duty and paying their honest debts! I am fully persuaded that the success of collecting pledges made depends upon the attitude and willingness of the pastor to get back of the movement himself. Some pastors are led on by the mistaken idea that the more money their Church pays to outside causes, the harder it will be to pay off their own local Church debt, and the smaller and harder it will be to collect their own salary; but it is not true for the Church that has a world-wide view of its obligation, which will have no trouble to meet its local obligations.

Bethlehem College does not seek to act arbitrarily against the pastors' wishes in the matter of collecting pledges, but to be used by him and to learn the proper method of doing the work. Building up the local Church, making it stronger and better is the one aim in view in all our activities. Bethlehem College will fail unless the pastors and laity get back of the work prayerfully, financially and numerically. Of course, the school is not conducted to suit all of our fancies, and no other school ever was; but in the main it is Christian, and that is all that can be said of any denominational school. We must all learn, sooner or later, to cast aside our own personal prejudices and religious pecularities and eccentricities and get behind every movement that comes within our reach which is for the public's general good, whether in the Church or out of the Church. We must all uphold and sustain our own institutions, for if we do not who will? There is no plausible reason why any of our ministers or lay members should assume an indifferent or neutral attitude toward any phase of our denominational work, and they will not when they allow the Spirit to lead them to think in the broadest terms of kingdom work. We have in Bethlehem College a task to which all our pastors have been called upon to co-operate and contribute, and we cannot feel that they will prove faithless to the trust the Church has committed to them. They have wrought nobly in the cool of the day; will they go away back in the form and the teacher's desk, for the most part, is not in the direction of democracy. In each of these agencies are found tendencies which are not safe for democracy. In all of these educational processes there are tendencies which endeavor to make the individual an end in himself, giving but little consideration to the fact that upon the shoulders of the youth of today must rest the responsibilities of the democracy of tomorrow. So long as our educational process teaches the art of war, the spirit of avarice and greed, the function of ancient gods, and things just as foolish, we may expect to reap a harvest of crime and criminals, and mourn the fact that our democracy is expanding and becoming stronger. For purposes of security touching democracy, to say nothing else, we need a reform in our educational system. We should make our educational process safe for democracy. That it is not safe, is beyond question. Why did the judge in New York say just recently that eighty-five per cent of the criminals who appeared before him were boys and girls under twenty-one years of age? The answer is not far to seek. A change of emphasis is imperative.

(Continued on Page 10.)

TWELVE INTERNATIONAL MOVEMENTS.

(Continued from Page 5.)

A third pregnant factor in the growth of democracy is the Church. When I say the Church should be a force in the making of democracy, I simply mean that the Church should be the organized medium through which the influence of Christianity is felt. A code of ethics and morals may be taught by the home and the school, but the Church is the only organized body tha can effectively teach the principles of Christianity. And so basic is Christianity in life and civilization that no type of civilization or democracy can reach its highest pont of perfection and usefulness without it. The Church is the most potent, the most liberalizing, and the most unifying organization in the world. In all fairness to the Church, the foregoing fact should be acknowledged. However, there are some well-meaning people who say that the Church and civilization, or the State bear no relation to each other. These people allow their zeal to outrun their knowledge. While the Church and State are nominally separated, this separation was never intended by those who promoted the idea. It was by accident. By a strange twist in the growth of national life, the matter of developing good citizens was taken away from the Church and given to the State. This change was made on the ground that the State wants good citizens; and in order to realize this ideal the State must educate them. That the Church taught morals and ethics and worship, there was no question; but whether one institution could educate the constituency of the other was a question. The American ideal of religious freedom and the growing complexity of civilization made it imperative that creedal religion be separated from the school system; but it was never intended that non-creedal religious instruction should be eliminated from the school system. And those who are familiar with the history of Church and State are aware of this fact. The elimination of religious instruction in our schools constitutes one of the greatest menaces to civilization. The growing child needs a knowledge of God; and as the situation now stands, the Church is the only institution under the present arrangements that can supply this knowledge. And the Church is not meeting the challenge. The Church knows, and every one knows, that there is something wrong with democracy; and we are agreed that the present weaknesses of democracy are caused by the omission of morals, ethics and religion from our educational system. I am insisting that the Church must take up the gavel of religious education that the home and school have rejected. In this lies the only hope of democracy.

The destiny of democracy is not assured. For nine hundred years, other democracies, with just as much promise as our democracy, thrived, but finally died. Behold Carthage as a democratic republic for seven hundred years; but Carthage went to naught. Behold Rome pursuing the ideals of a so-called democracy for five hundred years; no one is proud of Rome's experience with democracy. Florence kept pace with the rest of the world for three hundred years, but fell behind in the race. The same story is told of the Netherlands and Venice. Of course, conditions were different; but the fundamentals of democracy were the same. Notwithstanding the weaknesses of our democracy, I am not alarmed about its destiny; but it is possible, with our cosmopolitan civilization and complexity of ideals and conceptions, for our democracy to suffer the fate of other democracies of the world. But if it dies it will go down in history as the shortest-lived of any democracy of which we have record.

In spite of the weaknesses that have been pointed out, I believe that the movement of the world is in the direction of democracy. Witness the birth of democracies since the World War; and the expansion of democracies is virtually assured. I conceive of a world democracy outstriping the achievements of the present and the past, and measuring up to the ideals of future generations —a democracy whose fervor will reach to the ends of the earth, whose message will be the solace to every liberty-loving heart and whose ministry will be the mutual heritage of the world.

Pleasant Hill, Ohio.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The Illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the Number and prices.

TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Minion Bold-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4 7-8x 7 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

India Paper Edition, Size 4 7-8x7 Inches, 1 1-10 Inches Thick.

2152X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$6.00

Bourgeois Type, Size 5 3-8x8 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2167—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.00

2172—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.50

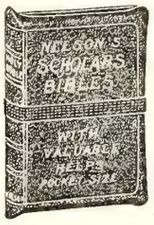
India Paper Edition, Only 1 1-8 Inches Thick.

2172X—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$8.50

Minion Type, Pocket Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ inches Thick.

With 32 full-colored illustrations; also 25 outline maps through the text and 12 colored maps.

133—Bound in cloth, round corners, red edges, title stamped on side in pure gold $1.60



135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 15-16 of an Inch Thick.

135X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.75

Minion Black-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4¾x 7 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick.

Printed from clear, large, black-face type, 32 full-page illustrations in Sepia and colors, 4,000 Questions and Answers, Harmony of the Gospels, How to Study the Sunday School Lesson, 25 outline Maps, 12 full-page colored Maps.

4152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold.....$3.25

TEXT BIBLES—AMERICAN STANDARD VERSION.

Printed from Easy-Reading Type, on Good Bible Paper, for Sunday School and Church Use.

Minion Type, Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick, 25 Outline Maps, Bound in Black.

101—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, title stamped on back in pure gold..$1.10

112—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title on back in pure gold $2.75

India Paper Edition, Only 7/8-Inch Thick.

112X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

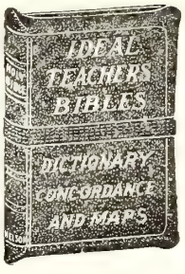
Reference and Text Bibles also in minion, brevier, bourgeois, long primer, pica and English type.

Thumb index cut on edge, 50c extra; name printed on any Bible in gold, 40c extra; extra wording, 40c per line.

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (v vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3-8x 8 1-2 Inches and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

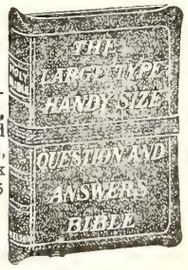


Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red;other parts of the book are printed in black. With concise Bible dictionary, combined concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.75

RED LETTER EDITION

With all the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.



1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands, title stamped on side and back in pure gold $3.25

Any of the above Bibles sent post paid. Address

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street, - - - Richmond, Va.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

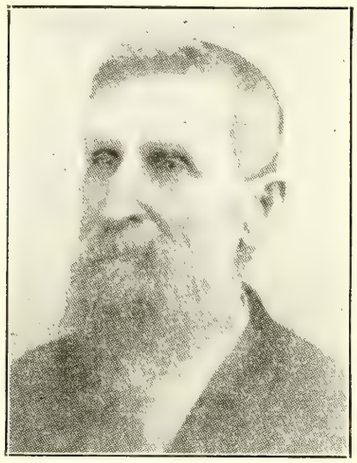
A REAL APOSTOLIC SUCCESSION

As Illustrated in the Mooney Family.

By W. A. Harper.

I have always believed in the apostolic succession—not of the laying on of hands, but of character. I have a story of five generations which proves it beyond peradventure.



REV. ISAAC MOONEY

Foundero ft he Christian Church in Illinois and Kansas. For him, the Christian Education Building of Elon College is named.

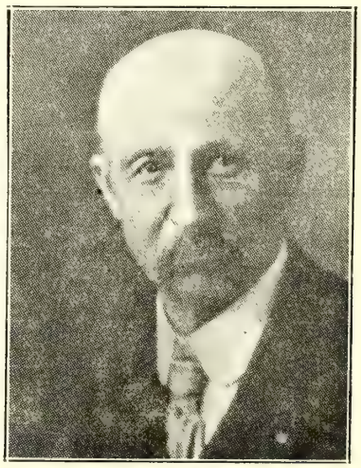
Ten miles north of the city of Dayton, Ohio, in the pioneer days of that country, there lived the devout family of John F. Mooney and his wife, Nancy (Terry) Mooney, daughter of Judge Terry, of Greenville, Ohio. They were simple, farmer-folk, whose mansion was a log-cabin, but whose hearthstone was an altar of the Most High. Mrs. Mooney died young, but left a deathless impress for Christian service upon her children, who grew up to be stalwart servants of the kingdom and members of the Christian Church.

On May 22, 1820, about ten years prior to Mrs. Mooney's decease, she gave birth to twins, Isaac and Rebecca. These names are suggestive of the high place religion held in that log-cabin. The mother of that home was God's teacher of religion, and the father was high priest. Isaac was, from his babyhood, a devout and consecrated child. He grew to man's estate with no abatement in his Christian zeal. At an early age he was baptized by Elder Ford, in Greenville Creek, and forthwith united with the Christian Church of that place. He was at the age of twenty-five ordained to the Christian ministry. Throughout his long life he preached without money and without price. He worked on his farm during the week, reared his family to be industrious, sober, and devout, and preached on Sunday and at other times to the glory of God and the salvation of men.

The first Christian Churches of two States were founded by him—Illinois and Kansas. He removed to Whiteside County, Ill., in 1856, and immediately founded a Christian Church. In 1869 he moved to Kansas, and at Towanda, of that State, in his own home, organized the first Christian Church in Kansas. He resided in the town of Towanda till his death, on October 20, 1902, a town which he staked off and to which his great Christian example gave a tone and character which even now it cherishes as its finest inheritance. Rev. R. L. Hendrickson is now pastor of the Church Bro. Mooney founded, and Mr. M. Orban, Jr., and family are members of it.

Rev. Isaac Mooney and his wife, Eliza Rhodehamel, of Miami County, Ohio, were parents of nine children—Mrs. G. W. Lane, Sol. R. Mooney, Mrs. F. T. Johnson, Judge Volney P. Mooney, Mrs. A. Swiggett, Walter Mooney, Mrs. E. A. Spalding, Joseph Mooney, and Mrs. M. Orban, Jr. At the time of his death he had thirty grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Elder Mooney (for he preferred this title to "reverend," since it is biblical, and to him the Bible was God's Word and our only rule of faith and practice) stood six feet in his stockings, and in his prime weighed about one hundred and sixty pounds. He wore long, flowing beard. Physically, as also in his spiritual endowment, he reminds of the Rev. James O'Kelly, the pioneer preacher and founder of the Christian Church in the South. He was a man of stainless character, of good repute, positive in his opinions, firm and determined in all his acts, liberal almost to a fault, fearless of consequences, always punctual in his appointments of whatever character, passionately devoted to the interests of his fellowmen, energetic and ambitious for his Master's service. He never lost an opportunity to render even the most simple kindness in that, to him, matchless Name. Death had no terrors for him. He approached the hour of his dissolution in absolute and perfect confidence, with a certitude of conviction that for him became undoubted knowledge. In this calm and joyous anticipation, in his eighty-third year, he made the great adventure into the challenging life of the great beyond, leaving to his loved ones and to all who knew him or should learn of his beautiful career, the rich inspiration of a life hid with Christ in God. Blessed be his memory!



JUDGE VOLNEY P. MOONEY

A great Christian judge. He first sentenced juvenile delinquents to Sunday School and Church.

A gentleman of distinction in later life, converted under his ministry, writes this word of evaluation of him as a minister and as a man: "The first sermon I ever heard preached in my life came from the lips of Rev. Isaac Mooney. It was the primitive beginning of a religious awakening in the community. Rev. Mooney came up from Towanda, a distance nearly twenty miles, about once a month to preach, and if Isaac Mooney left the same impression upon others as he did upon me in my early years, as he no doubt did, his memory will brighten with imperishable luster throughout all eternity. His patriarchal presence in the community in which he lived so long was like a perpetual benediction, and he compelled by his goodness, his gentleness, his patience, and his rectitude, the respect, affection and reverence of all who knew him, and especially of little children to whom his arms, like the Master's, were always outstretched in sympathy and kindness."

The mantle of this grand old Abraham of the Christian Church in the West fell on all his children; but on two of them in especial degree—Judge Vol P. Mooney and Mrs. M. Orban, Jr.

Judge Mooney was the fourth of his father's children, and was born in Darke County, Ohio, September 23, 1852, before his parents moved to Illinois, and later to Kansas. He was a lad in his late teens when his father settled at Towanda, Kansas. He shared with his family all the hardihood of the pioneer life, securing the best education he could in the schools of the day and adding to his scholastic training a thorough schooling in the university of hard knocks. Always a diligent worker and of the strictest integrity, he arose rapidly in popular esteem, serving as teacher, merchant, lawyer, and public official. He has been probate judge of the Butler County Court, Eldorado, Kansas, since 1915, a position which he holds without opposition and in which he has won a national reputation. He was the judge who began the practice in this country of sentencing juvenile offenders to Sunday School and Church. He inherited his love and sympathy for the erring from his father, and has applied the gospel principles to the execution of the law. He has yet to regret his kindness to any young offender. His great heart swells with grateful pride when he recounts the instances of young lives saved by his Christian parole. He, too, is a preacher, though without license from any constituted ecclesiastical authority. His evangelistic methods are most efficacious.

His sister, Mrs. M. Orban, Jr., is the youngest child of Elder Mooney, and for the past several years has resided with her husband and two daughters in Whittier, Calif. Her husband and children address her as "Angel." Association with her makes it perfectly clear that their pet name is true to the facts. It has been difficult to secure her photograph for this article. Her modesty is a soul quality. She shrinks from notoriety. It is her joy to love and to serve. "Her children rise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her." So does the aged father of her husband, whose home is with her. So do all who know this lovely Christian mother in Israel. She is not only in harmony with the generous philanthrophies of her great-hearted husband, but one suspects she inspires them. When Bro. Orban, in August, 1923, decided to give the Christian Education Building to Elon College in memory of his sainted father-in-law and to call it the Mooney Building, her simple comment was, "I am so glad!" and the joyous expression of her countenance proved the sincerity of her words. The Orban home is a sanctuary of the Lord unfeigned. You can never forget the faith, the hope, the love that are its rich endowment and its everlasting charm. Elder Mooney lives anew in the affection and consecration of the Whittier home of his youngest daughter.

MR. M. ORBAN, JR.

Donor, together with his wife, of the Mooney Christian Education Building to Elon College.

Judge Vol P. Mooney is the father of four children, all of them citizens of distinction. His son, Judge Walter H., resides at Wichita, Kansas, where he is claim adjuster of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company. It is said that he knows everybody who lives along his system, and that his awards are never questioned either by citizens or the railroad officials. His fairness is proverbial. Neither friendship nor the interest of his company can swerve him an iota from the path of justice which his keen intelligence and rare accuracy of insight and discernment always readily indicate to his good judgment. He is now in his forty-fifth year and in the very prime of his life and influence. In addition to being a consecrated layman in the Baptist Church, to which his father also belongs, Judge Walter H. Mooney is a prominent Mason, being at this time illustrious potentate of Midian Temple. Wichita last year organized a Booster Club and unanimously made Judge Mooney chief booster. He accepted on the condition that he produce results, which, he said, required co-operation. He has had both in fine degree.

Judge Walter H. is not only himself a fine example of business efficiency and Christian activity, but he has inherited from his ancestors the rare ability to rear up his children in the ways of the Lord. His son, Walter Harold, now a young man of eighteen years, holds the championship Sunday School record of Wichita, Kansas. For thirteen years he has never missed a

MRS. M. ORBAN, JR.
Donor, together with her husband, of the Mooney Christian Education Building to Elon College.

Sunday. Oftentimes he has had great difficulty to maintain his unbroken record. He has been taken from his home and also from the hospital, wrapped in blankets, in order to be present. Once his pastor had to come to his home and hold a private session with him, since the physician obdurately refused to allow him to be carried from his sick-room. He frequently makes long trips with his father, but he never misses Sunday School. Once he chartered a taxi to wait outside to take him so soon as the class should close to catch a special train, which waited at the station for his return.

Harold Mooney is known in the family circle as "Buddy." He and his dad are good friends and bosom pals. That explains his wonderful record. Buddy is a first-class Boy Scout, a veteran Scout now, with rank of assistant Scoutmaster. He takes an active part in the DeMolay, being a charter member of the Wichita Chapter, and now holds the office of junior deacon and member of the patrol and of the dramatic section. He has just been made teacher of a class of junior boys in the St. Paul's M. E. Church, where for more than thirteen years now he has maintained an unbroken record of perfect attendance. He graduates this year from the Wichita High School. His Sunday School badge, with a cross and crown for the first perfect year and a pin added thereon for each succeeding year, is now so long he can hardly keep from stepping on it. He is the worthy son of the fifth generation of the Mooney family, epitomizing in his devotion to the kingdom the ardor of his consecrated forebears.

This is the kind of apostolic succession in which we can all most heartily believe, a succession according to which father passes on to son his love for the kingdom, in each generation expressing the same ideals of Christian character in a life well and honorably lived for God and fellowman. John F. Mooney, Isaac Mooney, Volney F. Mooney, Walter H. Mooney, Harold Mooney—five generations of Christian men, an honor to their family, a moral bulwark to their communities, true servants of God, and not the least among them the noble daughter of Rev. Isaac Mooney, Mrs. M. Orban, Jr. The Christian Church, the most democratic of all Churches, wherein each believer is rated a priest and king unto God, rejoices in this notable instance of the real and vital and true apostolic succession.

JUDGE WALTER H. MOONEY
A leading Christian layman, who loves men and loves God.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

By Warren H. Denison, Secretary.

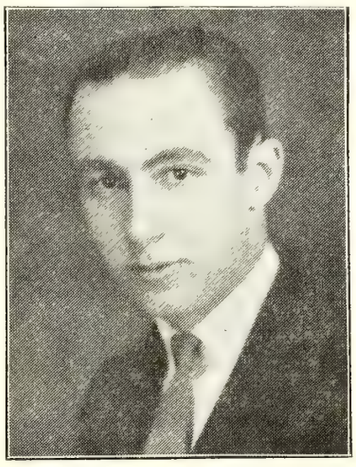
Thank You!

We desire to express our appreciation and thanks to all those who are sending in their renewal pledge to continue the work inaugurated and carried on by the Forward Movement. Those who gave to the five-year work of the Forward Movement will hardly be able to realize fully how much good they did unless they have been on some of the boards or intimately associated with the executive and administrative work of the Church. Those who really appreciate the work are glad to continue their gift annually even at sacrifice. We thank all who have renewed. Some who have completed their payments have not yet sent in their continuation pledge. Will those kindly do so soon, and thus help us with an economy of time and expense? Please do so today. If you have misplaced your card, kindly ask us for another. Help get another to join you in the continuation work. Will you help the work today?

Church Financial Systems.

If you have been following those weekly financial talks you will readily understand why progressive Churches do not use the plans we have



W. HAROLD MOONEY
Who holds the Sunday School record of the State of Kansas. He has not missed for more than thirteen years.

heretofore discussed. Do you believe that your financial plan is pleasing to God? This is what he said to Israel: "Ye have offered polluted bread upon mine altar; and ye say wherein have we polluted thee? In that ye say, the table of the Lord is contemptible. Ye said also, behold, what a weariness it is! And ye have snuffed at it, saith the Lord of Hosts; and ye brought that which was torn, and the lame and the sick; thus ye brought an offering. Should I accept this of your hand? saith the Lord.

If our members live in good houses, ride in good cars, dress nicely, use approved business methods in their own business, should God's house be poorly kept, go unpainted; should the Church use the poorest business system? How would our colleges get along, our mission work be carried on, our Church interests be supported if your Church had the management? Do you think God is pleased with your methods of financing His work? Study them carefully.

Many Church officers are incompetent for their tasks for the reason that the pastor does not provide for their training. How many treasurers and finance committees think that they are elected primarily to handle money. That is not over 10 per cent of their real task. Their chief work is to train and develop the Church membership to become real stewards of what they possess, and to introduce the better scriptural methods of Church finance. See that your Church does not use a system in 1925 that is inefficient, worn out, and unworthy of you and your Church.

President Coolidge has decided that the question of elevating the guns on the older American battleships is relatively unimportant at the present time, and will wait to see whether progress in aviation has not made it unnecessary, though he declines to acceptt he British contention that it is an international issue.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

January 25, 1925.

Subject: "Jesus Comforts His Disciples."

Golden Text: "I am the way, and the truth, and the life; no one cometh unto the Father but by me."—John 14:6.

Lesson: John 14:1-31.

Devotional Reading: Psa. 20.

Reference Material: Luke 24:49; John 7: 37-39, 15:26, 16:5-15.

The fourteenth chapter of John is the world's "greatest after-dinner speech." Whereas the average after-dinner speech is usually dull, or at its best sparkles with wit which is soon forgotten, this after-donner speech is fresh and vital, and glows with an eternal light, which gains in lustre as the years roll by. And it is full of truths that lie close to the heart of Christians. With the possible exception of the twenty-third psalm, this chapter is more universally read and cherished than any other section of the Word of life. This is because it was spoken by Him who is the way, and the truth, and the life.

Jesus told His disciples—there were only eleven of them when He made this informal talk—some comforting, challenging, and inspiring things. Some of the more important of them are as follows:

1. Jesus said that He had gone to prepare a place for us, and that He would receive us unto Himself. He did not tell us any of the details of the after-life, but He did tell us that it was in the Father's house, and that He would be there. In that Father's house were many mansions—enough for all His children who were faithful unto the end. Therefore, we faint not, for though our outward man is decaying day by day, yet our inward man is renewed, and if this earthly house of our tabernacle be dissolved, we have an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Heaven is the Father's house, and Jesus will be there. That is enough for us to know.

2. Jesus said that he that had seen Him had seen the Father. Men have always been interested in such questions as "Is there a God?" "How can I be sure that there is?" "How does He feel toward us?" "What can I expect of Him?" In immortal words, Jesus says that He is the revelation of God, and any one who has seen Him has seen God. Whenever we need to know about God, we need only to know about Christ, and that will suffice. The magnitude of this truth will grow increasingly upon one as he meditates over it.

3. Jesus promised us that if we would ask anything in His name He would do it. That does not mean that God is a glorified Santa Claus. But it does mean that no real need of His children goes unheeded or indeed unanswered. It helps greatly to know that we can come to the throne of grace and find mercy and grace to help in time of trouble.

4. Jesus reminds us that the ultimate test of our love for Him is our response to His commandments. And His commandments are not grievous, and can be summed up in the new commandment which He had just given—love one another. And if we keep His commandments, the Father and Son will manifest themselves to us.

5. Jesus promised to send His Spirit, which would comfort and guide His followers. And comfort and guidance are two significant words in life. Sorrow comes into every life. But He who was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief knows how to comfort those who mourn. And He does it. Guidance is imperative for the man who wants to go right. And He who is the way, and the truth, and the life will guide his steps aright.

6. Jesus bequeathed to us His peace. It is peace which the world cannot give and which the world cannot take away. And because He gives that peace, we are not to be troubled of heart. We are to seek first the kingdom of God and its righteousness, and not only will these other things be added unto us, but the peace of God which passeth understanding will guard our minds and hearts in Christ Jesus.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

January 25, 1925.

Subject: "What our Christian Endeavor owes to the denomination." Bible reference: Rom. 12:3-13.

Announce the place, time, subject and leader of your meeting from the pulpit, by a special poster, and through personal invitations. Did you ever try calling your friends over the telephone and telling them all about the C. E. meeting and inviting them to come? An attractive poster can be made by putting the subject of meeting, and so forth, at the top of the paper, and pasting a picture of a Church in the center, with arrows pointing from the windows and doors outward, saying: "Evangelism, Christian Stewardship, Christian Education, Home and Foreign Missions." At the bottom of the page may be pasted pictures of young people, and under the pictures written, "The Hope of the World."

Suggestions for the leader's talk:

Why does this Church have a Christian Endeavor Society? The purpose of the organization is to make Christians and stronger Christians, young men and women who will go out into the world to serve both the denomination and the larger program of Christianity. If we fail in this, we fail as a society. We need to realize our relationship with a world-wide evangelism and to do our part.

The Christian denomination is not narrow in its principles, but stands decidedly for Christian union, and hopes the day may soon come when we may have it. However, since we do not have a union of all Christian people, we must strengthen our forces for a larger service. Perhaps the two best ways to do this is to, first, appreciate the things for which it stands and the work which it is doing; and, secondly, to support it by our interest and endeavor. Every member of the Christian Church should love the passage in the Bible which says: "They were first called Christians at Antioch." From it we get our name. Think what this must have meant to the early followers of Christ when they were struggling so to spread His principles. Later they were to bear this name through terrible persecutions from without the Church, and heresies from within. Read the five principles of the Christian Church.

Rom. 12:3-13. A careful reading of these verses show us something of what Paul thought of the Church, and should make us believe more thoroughly in the organized work of the Church. His idea of organization is seen in "So we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another," and "All members have not the same office." So we need our different officers in the Church—ministers, deacons, Sunday School teachers and superintendents. "Whether prophecy let us prophesy, or ministry, let us wait on our ministering." Each of us has different gifts, talents and capabilities, and the Church needs us to help.

The Early Church—Bible References.

It will make the meeting interesting to have some one read some of the following verses from the Bible which show who some of the first members of the Church were: Rom. 16:5; Col. 4:14; Phil. 1:1-2; Phillip. 4:22; Heb. 13:24, and Acts 1:13, 1:15, 2:41, 8.27, 10:1, 16:14, 17:4. The early members were some from the house of Caesar, a member of the Italian band, a seller of purple, etc.

Another may read the following verses which refer to the early organization of the Church: 1 Cor. 12:28-31; 1 Pet. 2:25, 5:1-4; Acts 6:3-4, 14:23, and Tim. 3:1-13.

Reference to buildings or early meeting-places: 1 Cor. 3:9, 3:16, 16:19; Col. 4:15; Acts 5:12, 12:12, 20:8.

References to Church services: 1 Cor. 10:16-17, 11:13, 14:15, 16:1-2; Col. 3:16-17; Heb. 6:2; Acts 2:42, 14:27, 17:2-3, 20:7, and 20:9. These refer to praying and singing in the Church, the offering, testimony and preaching until midnight and some falling asleep.

Special Talks on Work of the Christian Church.

The mission fields and missionaries. The work in Japan, Porto Rico, the Americanization work at Haverhill, the work among the Indians, the lumber camps, and the work at Fancy Gap, Va.

Six things Christian Endeavor can do to help the denomination which will also create interest in the society and strengthen its work: (1) Conduct a teacher training class, using standard courses; (2) send magazines and books, and boxes of clothing to the missionaries and to Rev. M. T. Sorrell for the work at Fancy Gap; (3) write letters to the missionaries (addresses in the Christian Missionary); (4) win at least ten young people to Christ during the next few months; (5) get five of your members to tithe within the next three months; (6) read the Church periodicals.

Subjects for Talks.

1. Christian Endeavor a part of a world-wide program.
2. Some of the best things my denomination is doing. (By some member of another Church who attends your meetings.)
3. The life of James O'Kelly.
4. Why young people should attend the Church regularly.
5. What baptism and the Communion service mean to the Church.

Hymns.—"The Church's One Foundation," and "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord."

(Continued from Page 6.)

shade and sit down in the heat of the day? God forbid! They cannot, they will not! Why should the work stop while they rest by the wayside? All our people of this Southland have begun well, they have wrought well, and we cannot help but believe they will finish the task; but should they not, it will be completed by another, and the honor and larger reward will go to another, for the Lord's work will not cease. God, give us at least a thousand people who will at once begin in earnest to pray and work for Bethlehem College. God, give us at least one thousand men who will pay not less than $5.00 each to Bethlehem College on or before January 24, 1925.

Wadley, Ala. S. L. Beougher.

Christian Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

Our little tots at the Baby Home had a surprise treat last Sunday. In the afternoon, a big machine stopped in front of the door, and the writer went out to invite the guest in, and to our surprise we found in the machine our old friend W. P. Williamson and also Mr. Qualls, of Burlington, with some little children on the back seat. They informed me that when the Hocutt Memorial Baptist Church in Burlington gave out their Christmas treat that they had quite a number of packages left over, and the question was asked as to what would be the best thing to do with them, and Mr. Williamson suggested that they be sent to the children at the Christian Orphanage, and those friends were delighted to deliver them. The packages were filled with oranges, apples, grapes, nuts, and it was a very happy time for our little folks. They thought old Santa had returned. It was certainly kind of our Baptist brethren to remember our children, and we appreciate it.

The Episcopal Church in Burlington also remembered us with a treat for Christmas. Our Burlington folks are hard to equal, and cannot be beat. My old friend Williamson is an acquaintance of thirty years ago, and a fine fellow. He and I worked together in a Baptist Church Sunday School thirty years ago in a little town. The Christian Church had no organization in the town at that time. The writer was elected teacher of a class of most excellent young ladies in the Baptist Church, and the joy of teaching that class has been a sweet recollection all these years. Mr. Williamson, remembering us so kindly, brought back the sweet memories of thirty years ago.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR JANUARY 15, 1925.

Amount brought forward		$23,297.80
Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
North Carolina Conference:
Union Grove	$ 3.00
Shallow Ford	2.64
		5.64
Thanksgiving and Christmas Offerings.
Waverly, Ea. Va.	$ 50.50
Dry Run, Val. Va.	18.00
Christian Temple, Ea. Va.	31.93
M. J. Carlton	5.00
Damascus, N. C.	11.20
New Providence, N. C.	21.54
Moore Union, N. C.	11.00
S. Norfolk, Ea. Va.	78.41
Salem Chapel	6.15
Wayland S. S., Gresham, Neb.	5.00
		238.73
Special Offerings.
A Friend	$ 15.00
J. F. Burnette, Sec'y	113.59
Orp. Ins. collection to date	12.00
		140.59
Grand total		$23,682.76

FOR VALUE RECEIVED.

$1.00 spent for lunch lasts 5 hours.
$1.00 spent for a nacktie lasts 5 weeks.
$1.00 spent for a cap lasts 5 months.
$1.00 spent for an auto lasts 5 years.
$1.00 spent for a railroad lasts 5 decades.
$1.00 spent in God's service lasts for eternity.
—Rodger W. Babson.

MEN AND MILLIONS COLLECTIONS DURING DECEMBER, 1924.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson,
Elon College, N. C.
Dear Sir:

I inclose herewith amount collected by Men and Millions during month of December, 1924, by Conferences.

North Carolina Conference.

Shiloh	$ 10.00
Ether	40.00
Liberty	5.00
Pleasant Hill (A)	.95
Zion	55.00
Howard's Chapel	2.50
Graham	12.00
Shallow Ford	16.80
Haw River	13.00
Burlington	89.60
Youngsville	5.00
Mt. Gilead	10.00
Franklinton	5.00
Pope's Chapel	50.50
Liberty, Vance	192.50
Fullers Chapel	45.50
Mt. Auburn	90.00
Happy Home	5.00
New Elam	15.00
Asheboro	10.00
Hebron, Va.	3.00
Graham	5.00
		$ 680.75

Eastern Virginia Conference.

Rosemont	$ 30.00
Damascus	96.00
Oak Grove	7.40
Bethlehem	10.00
Union, Southampton	14.00
Windsor	25.00
Antioch	50.00
Liberty Springs	60.00
Holy Neck	594.00
Mt. Carmel	69.00
		955.40

Valley of Virginia Conference.

St. Peters	21.45
Wood's Chapel	6.00
Mayland	17.00
Newport	8.50
Lineville	43.00
Leaksville	35.86
Mt. Olivet (G)	20.20
New Hope	37.00
Winchester	116.80
Joppa	2.25
Dry Run	2.00
Timber Ridge	4.50
Mt. Olivet (R)	4.00
Palmyra	2.00
		320.56

Georgia and Alabama Conference.

Ambrose	$ 25.00
Vanceville	50.00
Rose Hill	96.00
		171.00

Alabama Conference.

Pleasant Grove	$ 29.00
Rock Stand	15.00
Antioch	10.00
Noon Day	16.50
Shady Grove	1.00
Wadley	10.00
New Hope	17.50
		99.00
Total for month		$2,226.71
Less check returned J. Fuller Johnson		50.00
		$2,176.71

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Executive Secretary.

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CHRISTIAN SUN.
These Pens are of standard make, and will give good service. If you are in need of a Fountain Pen, order from us.
MEN'S PENS ..... $2.00 LADIES' PENS $2.00
Postage paid, and Pens guaranteed by the manufacturer.
LIMITED COMBINATION OFFER.—To a new subscriber, or for renewal (if not in arrears), $3.25, either Gentleman's or Lady's Pen, with guarantee of manufacturer. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 EAST BROAD STREET, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Mission Study Books.

Official List for 1924-1925.

ORDER BY TITLE OF BOOK.

FOR ADULT CLASSES.

For Home Mission Classes:
"The Romance of Home Missions," by S. L. Morris, D. D.. Paper, 50c; cloth..... $ .75
For Foreign Mission Classes:
"Ming Kwong—the City of Morning Light," by Mary Ninde Gamewell. Paper, 50c; cloth .75
"In China," by H. F. Williams, D. D..... .25

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

For Intermediate Home Mission Classes:
"The Land of All Nations," by Margaret F. Seelbach. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75
For Intermediate Foreign Mission Classes:
"China's Real Revolution," by Paul Hutchinson. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75
For Junior Foreign Mission Classes:
"Chinese Lanterns," by Minna McEwen Meyer. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... .75

LEADERS' HELPS.

Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Adult Classes) ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Young People's Classes)..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Land of All Nations"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Ming Kwong"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "China's Real Revolution".. .15
Leaders' Helps for "Chinese Lanterns"..... .15

Send all orders to—
THE CHRISTIAN SUN,
1536 East Broad Street - - Richmond, Virginia.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

SECURITY OF THOSE THAT TRUST IN GOD.

Scripture, Psa. 37.

Why worry over the mean things which are said of you, and which may come to you, when you know you are going straight and doing the right thing?

You cannot go through life without enemies, if you amount to anything. If you are content to be spineless, a mollycoddle, a will-o'-the-wisp, with no set ideas or principles, you might go on without making bitter enemies, but what would you be worth to yourself or any one else?

Stand for something which is worth while, and stick to it. There is little to this popularity stuff. Get some light into yourself. Steer straight and let the backbiters continue their sport.

Even a man who is worsted in a fair and square fight has some respect for the man who has beaten him in an honest way. But none has respect or strong personal regard for the lukewarm individual, who has not enough backbone to stand up for anything. If you are sure of your ground, and it is right, hold it. (Copyright, 1924, International Feature Service, Inc.)

Prayer.—O Lord, teach us how to pray for loyalty to Thee and to trust in the sure promise that Thou wilt give us our desires. Amen.

TUESDAY.

ETERNAL LIFE.

"Verily, verily I say unto you, He that heareth my word and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life."—John 5:24.

Jesus had come into Jerusalem, and had gone to the pool of Bethesda, and while there He healed a man who had been suffering for a long time. This miracle caused his enemies to be all the more jealous of the work he was doing, so they sought to kill Him. It is in the midst of this opposition, the Saviour teaches the great doctrine of eternal life.

This is the quest of the religious world: how shall eternal life be obtained? Jesus says that to hear His word and believe on Him that sent Him is eternal life. What do we learn? That we are spiritual beings destined for life with Him in the spirit world; that it is obtained in part in the life that now is through faith in and following of the Lord Jesus Christ, and that its fullness comes when we have arisen and ascended in His presence. Every-day living is our opportunity for grace in possession.

Prayer.—Oh, God! how great is Thy power? How little are we beside Thee! Help us to prove ourselves worthy of the trust of life committed to our care, and may we continue to attain more and more unto eternal life as it is in our Saviour Jesus Christ. Amen.—B. J. Earp.

WEDNESDAY.

A LITTLE LAD WITH A LITTLE LUNCH.

"There is a lad here, which hath five barley loaves and two small fishes."—John 6:9.

There must have been other boys and girls in that great multitude of five thousand men, besides that little lad who had a lunch. Yet, with the exception of Jesus, he stands up prominently as the greatest person in the crowd. Of all the hungry throng, he alone has that which, when given to the Master, may feed a multitude. The miracle of the Master and the hope of the multitude is in the pocket of a little lad. And the task of feeding the nations of earth with the bread of life will be accomplished when our boys and girls shall bring their best to Jesus. But they must have something to bring to Jesus. Let it be observed that the wise and thoughtful parents of the little lad had prepared him to be such a great blessing on that day. If our boys and girls are to have such a large part in feeding a hungry world, we must, in our homes by proper training and teaching, prepare for them the spiritual lunch. Then there must be Andrews, who can observe children and see their lunches. The greatness of Andrew is seen in his ability to make discoveries and report them to the Master. He brings Peter to Jesus; and he calls the Master's attention to the lunch of a little lad. When we properly prepare our boys and girls, and they in turn shall bring the gifts to Jesus, the miracle of the loaves and fishes will be repeated in the feeding of the hungry nations with the bread of life.

Prayer.—Our Father, help us to prepare our children, so they may have something they can bring to Jesus which He may bless and multiply. Amen.—T. E. White.

THURSDAY.

THE EVIL HEART PUNISHED.

"Yet all this availeth me nothing, so long as I see Mordecai the Jew sitting at the king's gate."—Esther 5:11-14.

Haman was next the king in authority. He was telling his friends and his wife of his riches, of his power. But one solitary Jew would not bow down and do him reverence; so he was miserable. Although he was given the riches and the favors, he reached after misery and cherished it. He held a magnifying glass over the fly in his ointment, and filled his life with the view.

If one has already many advantages, should a small thing nullify them all? Why not ignore it, attend upon the blessings, and be happy? Haman was saying to himself that his happiness depended upon something outside of himself, and not upon the kind of man he was. Because one Jew would not bow, he tried to kill all the Jews. Resentment and hatred dig the pit for one's own undoing. He was hanged on the gallows he had prepared for the others.

We strive for things, gather them and pile them up. We are dissatisfied. Our souls are not fed by them. The spirit is fed by the things of the spirit, righteousness, faith, love. "Set your mind on the things that are above." "For a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things he possesseth."

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

FRIDAY.

IN GOD'S IMAGE.

"God created man in His own image."—Gen. 1:27. (Read Gen. 1.)

God made the light and the sun, and they were good; the seas and the mountains, and they were good; the sea and the fish, the birds and the beasts, and they were good. He adored gloriously the face of the world with herbs, fields and forests, and it was very good. Though in these heaven and earth were filled with the majesty of His glory, something was lacking yet. There was a beauty yet to be reached which these failed to do. All these things declared the glory of God, but they did not declare His love and kindness. They displayed His wisdom, but not His spirit. The world lacked soul, so He said, "I will make man in our image, after our likeness."

We are the image of God to convey to the world His thought, His love, His kindness, His spirit, His holiness, His soul, that the world may see Him and live. Let us examine our lives. How much of this are we carrying in us and transmitting to the world for Him? "Ye are my witnesses," saith the Lord.

Prayer.—Our Father, help us to realize the responsibility of His image in us, and not fail any day to do our best to carry Him to the world, that they who see us may take knowledge of us as of the apostles of old, that we walk with Jesus and are known of Him. In Christ's name, we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE MEANING OF THE NAME OF JESUS.

"Thou shalt call His name Jesus, for it is He that shall save His people from their sin."—Matt. 1:21.

The name of Jesus is adorable. It is the name of the Son of God, it is the name of the Son of man, it is the name of the one perfect, sinless man, it was given to Him by God Himself, and, therefore, it must show and mean not merely some outward accident, but something which He seemed to be, or looked like; but also it must mean what He was in the sight of His Father, what He was in the eternal purpose of the Father, and What He was to Himself. Therefore, He is God, the Saviour of the world. He proved it in His character, and He bears it throughout eternity as a mark of what He has been, and is, and will be forever.

Let us meditate upon this how that He is to us "wonderful Counselor, mighty God, everlasting Father, and Prince of peace. That is what His companionship through the day means to us.

Prayer.—Our Father, as Jesus our Saviour is perfect and the pattern for our lives, help us to take Him daily into our lives and live only by the design of His great life. In His name we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE DAY WHICH THE LORD MADE.

"This is the day which the Lord hath made; we will rejoice and be blad in it."—Ps. 118:24. (Read the entire psalm.)

It is said that this is a psalm which was used antiphonally in temple worship about the time of the restoration of Israel from Babylon. It implies the completion of the temple. It is said to be the vestal cry that was raised by the worshipers around the altar. This was done seven times on the Sabbath Day.

How beautiful to gather together in the sanctuary on the Sabbath, and in praise and worship set forth the great truths of God's restorations, His abiding presence, His wonderful abiding spirit with us, His glorious promises, and acknowledge the fact that He is the basis and the foundation of all building, and especially that of character. Let us not forsake the assembling of ourselves together and truly praise Him.

Prayer.—Our Father, forbid that we should ever forget what Thou hast done for us, art doing for us continually, and the manifold blessings vouchsafed unto us. Show us our duty. May we forget our hard places and sorrows and rejoice in the Lord. May we understand that Thy light and good things pierces and outshines all the clouds and lighteth the hearts of every man. In His name we ask it. Amen.

A check-up by city employees has shown that in the Borough of Queens, a division of New York City which in 1920 had a population of less than half a million, there are 34,994 radio sets. On that basis, how manya re there in the United States?

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

KIDDIES:

Hurry up! Rush that letter to me now! Don't wait a minute, please. I want it for the "Kiddies' Korner" next week, and you want your letter there sure, don't you, dears? So write it at once and send it along to me.

You started to school again Monday, didn't you? And you had a good time, too; now, didn't you? Fine! Some of my Kiddies here are getting ready for a beautiful party, and I just hope you will get to hear all about it next week. We are all so excited over it now that we will wait till later to tell it. But, wait—I'll tell you one thing they are to have. Oh-oo! it's too funny! Two little girls are going to dress up like really, truly clowns, with their faces painted and a tall cap, too. Just wait till you hear about the whole party, and maybe you will have one just like ours.

What do you think! A great, big, kind policeman was walking along the street last week, and there resting beside the curb was your editor's little lost Ford! Yes, sir-ee, Kiddies! And the policeman just mended it all around its little self, 'cause some one had hurt the little Ford all over, and now it has come back home to stay. So! oh, my! oh, me! your editor has two little Fords —one is a shiney new one, and the other is the little lost Ford. Now what would you do about that? Did you give away your old dolly this year when Santa brought you a new one? Oh-oo! me-ee! Suppose you write me what you would do about it.

Love from YOUR EDITOR.

FROM A KIDDIE.

DEAR MISS MOFFITT:

I am having a very happy Christmas, and I will tell you why. Father went with us to the woods and we got us a nice Christmas tree, and mother let me help fix it for Christmas.

I enjoyed buying and fixing Christmas gifts with my Christmas savings' club money. I also fixed a white gift for our Sunday night program when each Sunday School class makes white gifts for the King, which go to the Orphanage.

Some of my gifts were a toy saxaphone on which real tunes can be played, bedroom slippers, a knife, a tooth brush, and several games. We do not have to go back to school, and that gives us a long time to play with our things.

Yours truly,

EUGENE S. LANKFORD.

"TROTTY," THE NURSE.

Of course, her name wasn't really "Trotty," but it was a good name for her just the same.

She was a little Hindu woman, who was a helper in a mission hospital in India, and she just made up her mind that she was going to learn to be a fully trained nurse. So she studied hard on the course that the missionary doctors marked out—for both the sahib and the mamma sahib at the station were doctors—and then she trotted right around after them, and when there was a pause in the very practical part of the hospital work, down the mamma sahib would sit with Trotty, and they would have a lesson. The hardest thing for her to learn was to have confidence in herself; to believe that she could do the things that she had learned how to do. But at last she gained that, too, so that the mamma sahib said: "We have taken in many cases and performed many operations that we could not have touched without Trotty."

Then came the big test. An emergency arose when the missionary doctors had to go away for many weeks, and if the hospital continued its work, Trotty would have to take the complete charge of it.

She did it!

She stayed bravely at her post, superintended the care of over 1,500 patients, and performed a dozen operations herself—that little Telugu woman! Skill like that! Yet here is one of the best of Trotty's tributes. "There is no work counted too humble for her busy hands. I have often seen her climbing along the window-sills polishing the glass, or down on her knees scrubbing the floor. Yet all look up to her with respect and confidence."

A BOY WHO HONORED THE FLAG.

BY RUTH E. RAMSDELL (12).

Richard was twelve years old, and he went to school in a little old gray school-house with about twenty other children. The Heston schoolhouse was a poor building, faded to a gray color, but the Heston school boys and girls were very patriotic, and a flag was always waving at the top of a pole on the school-house roof.

Richard was very proud of that flag. He liked to read about the heroes who have given their lives for the flag, and he had often thought that he would gladly give his life for the flag if his country should need him. One day the test came.

It was a beautiful day in June, and everything was as dry as could be, for rain had not come for a long time, and it was sorely needed.

The scholars were all busy when one of them glanced out of the window and immediately sounded the alarm—"Fire!"

The pupils quickly marched outside with the teacher following them. They watched the flame licking greedily at the back of the school-house. Then panic seized them and they scattered in all directions, but before Richard had run two yards he stopped and looked back. The fire was nearly half-way across the roof of the school-house, and the flag was at the other end! Richard quickly ran back to the front of the school-house where the rope, for hoisting the flag, dangled. Frantically he began to haul down the flag. But what is this?—a knot! He would have to climb to the roof before he could untie it. He hesitated only a moment, then up the rope he went, hand over hand, until he reached the roof. The flames crept nearer and nearer, and great beads of sweat stood out on Richard's forehead as he wrestled with the knot. At last it was loosened a little, but still the flames crept nearer. The fire was now halfway across the roof; now it was more than halfway; now it was within two yards of him. Ah! the knot was untied at last, and Richard slid down the rope, hauled down the flag. He cut the rope with his knife, and took the flag as he fell exhausted to the ground. Then came cool, delicious darkness, as he fainted away, still holding his precious Stars and Stripes.

THE PROUD DAHLIA.

Gorgeous was the name of a beautiful, big dahlia who bloomed most abundantly all summer and fall. Ever since early spring, good old Mother Earth had fed her just the right food to make her grow. Then the rains had come, so that her thirsty roots might be satisfied. The sun gave her warmth and the soft winds stirred her leaves and stem for exercise. So she grew and grew, as all healthy, well-cared-for children will. The man who owned the garden kept the weeds away, and Gorgeous was very glad. She did not like weeds. They seemed to her as wild animals seem to little human boys and girls. Gorgeous wanted to thank the man, and Mother Nature, and the sun, and the winds, and the clouds that sent the rain. So one morning she gave them something she had been making for them for weeks and weeks, such a beautiful something that all the world seemed happier for having seen it. She was glad it was a success, for she had tried very hard to make it beautiful. What do you think it was? Yes, it was the lovely red bloom that made every one call her by name.

So she blossomed right through the summer, and when the first beautiful flower grew old and faded she had another all made to take its place. Each one she tried to make lovelier than the last. Now, when Georgeous was a child plant she was very sweet and modest, but she had heard so many say how beautiful she was that at last she opened up her blossoms, not in gratitude for what had been done for her, but just to hear them say:

"Isn't this one beautiful?"

The summer passed, and fall came. The winds grew cold. Jack Frost lightly touched Mother Earth and Mother Earth shivered.

"Come, children, it is time for your naps," she whispered to her flower children and her tree children. All of them obeyed her except Gorgeous. That silly little dahlia had become so vain that she thought she was better than any one else and didn't have to take a nap.

"Come, Georgeous, crawl into your little brown bed and get to sleep before Jack Frost bothers you."

"Let him come! Jack Frost won't bite me. He loves beautiful things. Look at the pictures he paints. He couldn't destroy anything as lovely as I."

"But your bloom is about gone, and if you will not mind, the sun and the wind and the rain won't help you to make another. Then where will your beauty be? See, your sisters have slept for a week. You will be sleepy next spring if you do not come now," coaxed Mother Nature.

"I won't come!" replied impudent little Gorgeous.

"All right, Gorgeous, but when children won't mind their mothers, something always happens. Remember that dear." And Mother Nature went on looking after her other children.

That night Jack Frost was flitting about, looking to see what mischief he could do. He saw Georgeous, standing so straight and tall, with her last red bloom just starting to fade.

"Well, look who's here!" he said, laughingly. "So you are the little lady who wouldn't mind her mother. I'm afraid I'll have to bite you for that," and he gave her wonderful red bloom such a nip that every bit of it turned an ugly old brown.

The next morning the man and his children walked in the garden.

"The frost got the last dahlia," said the man. "Last night I thought of cutting it, but it looked so sort of impudent there that I hadn't the heart. Its beauty is all gone now, isn't it?"

"Nasty old thing! Ugly old thing!" cried the children, stamping the wilted blossom under their feet. Gorgeous hung her head lower and lower; then she saw that even her stem was dark, and she was so ashamed that she lay right down on top of the ground, so she could whisper to Mother Earth:

"I'm sorry, Mother, dear."

And because she had once been so beautiful, and because she was truly sorry, the clouds pitied her, and that night sent a nice, white blanket to cover her.—Presbyterian Banner.

WHITAKER.

My pen drags heavily. Just read a letter from Bro. George T. Whitaker and wife. Their six-year-old child, Hazel Penelope Whitaker, was buried at Franklinton on January 2d. Surely "death loves a shining mark, and a signal blow." This world will be much lonelier for many days without the sunshine of her smiles.

Death is an absolute certainty. No warrior ever held spear, or gun in his grasp without knowing that they would drop from his hand. The orator who stood over slumbering Greece and uttered a note at which Athens started from her indolence, Thebes aroused from her lethargy, and Macedon trembled, knew that soon his tongue would be still, and the forum silent. The greatest musicians knew that soon the minstrel's harp will hang upon the willow. Death drinks from the blushes of beauty the mingled hues of the rose and the lily, and the reptiles of the grave soon banquet upon lips erstwhile so fondly kissed. The first deed for title to land recorded in the Bible was for a cemetery. We all know we have a death to die, but not a death to choose. Every birth is the herald of a death. Every heart-throb is a warning that our journey, on earth, is soon to end.

Never! oh, Death, was thy insatiable dart cast against a sweeter, purer, and more lovely child than Hazel. Often at the midnight hour her dear father and tender mother will cry out: "Oh! for the touch of a vanished hand and the sound of a voice that is still." Well may they wipe their tears away, and sing: "Safe in the arms of Jesus." She never knew an enemy; never more alive than now. If we knew how happy this "precious jewel" is, we would never wish her back.

Farewell, darling Hazel; we will meet again in the morning.

D. A. LONG.

KERNODLE.

Lovick Loftin Kernodle was born in Alamance County, N. C. (then Orange County), March 11, 1832; died January 8, 1925, age 92 years, 9 months, and 27 days. He was twice married, and is survived by his last wife. He and his first wife lived together over fifty-two years.

After his marriage to Miss Mary Michael, they settled in Guilford County until after his second marriage. He had made his home in Graham about fifteen years. To the first marriage were born four children. One of these died in infancy. Those surviving are Prof. Peter J. Kernodle, of Richmond, Va.; John D. Kernodle, of Graham, and Mrs. Elizabeth J. Williams, wife of John J. Williams, near Gibsonville. There were no children by the second marriage. There are ten grandchildren and thirteen great-grandchildren.

He was a member of Bethlehem Church for about seventy-five years. He was a successful farmer, and lived on the farm until he moved to Graham, about fifteen years ago, and retired from active life.

Bro. Kernodle is the last of a family of seventeen children.

T. E. WHITE.

FONVILLE.

Bro. L. J. Fonville was born February 19, 1848, and died at his home in Burlington, N. C., December 25, 1924, being 76 years, 10 months and 6 days old. He was married to Miss Sarah Elizabeth Walker on May 1, 1877. To this union, four children were given, as follows: Mamie, D. R., C. C., and Sadie, all of whom, with the mother, survive and were with him in his last hours on earth. He was a loyal member of the Burlington Church, a faithful Christian, and a devoted husband and father. He has fought a good fight, his good works follow him, and his soul rests in peace.

The funeral was held from the Church he loved on the day following his departure, and was conducted by his pastor, assisted by Dr. P. H. Fleming and Dr. W. A. Harper. Interment in the local cemetery. G. O. LANKFORD.

GREEN.

Little Mary Palmer Green, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. T. J. Green, died December 3, 1924, at the age of 5 years, 5 months and 13 days.

"Precious darling, she has left us;
Left us, yes, forever more,
But we hope to meet our loved one
On that bright and happy shore.
Lonely the house and sad the hour
Since our dear one has gone;
But, oh! a brighter home than ours,
In heaven, is now her own."

FATHER.

"A fool praises himself; a wise man turns the job over to a friend."

"It is easier to preach ideals than to look facts squarely in the face."

TRAVEL INFORMATION

EVERYWHERE—ANYWHERE—ANY TIME
FARES—SCHEDULES—ITINERARIES—RESERVATIONS

LET US SOLVE YOUR TRAVEL PROBLEM

Apply to Local Agent, or Address
F. H. POSTON - - Division Passenger Agent
809 East Main Street, Richmond, Va.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

V. E. MAREAN
Pipe Organ Expert
TUNING — REPAIRING
REBUILDING
Motors Installed Yearly Contracts
P. O. Box 864, - Richmond, Va.
Phone, Boulevard 7011-J

WINSTON-INTERNATIONAL
TEACHERS' BIBLES
SELF-PRONOUNCING
Containing References, a Concordance and the most authoritative Aids to Bible Study. Printed in Black Face Type. Beautiful Bindings
Send for Illustrated Catalog
THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO., Publishers
American Bible Headquarters
429 Winston Building Philadelphia

Something You Have Been Waiting For

Remington Portable Typewriter

—with Standard Keyboard and every other feature common to the larger machines. Case only four inches high.
Price, with case, $60.
Send Your Order to
THE CHRISTIAN SUN
Richmond, Va.

Get rid of constipation by internal cleanliness

HEADACHES, biliousness, sleepless nights, heaviness, are Nature's warning that intestinal poisons are flooding your system. If this is allowed to continue, you may become a victim of serious organic disease.

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favour Lubrication

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

Nujol
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
For Internal Cleanliness

MURRAY.

No more tragic death has occurred in our city, nor one that stirred the sympathies of the people more, than that of Virginia Dare Murray, aged ten years, the oldest child of Bro. and Sister J. E. Murray. On the afternoon of December 9th, Virginia and a little friend had gone down the street to make some Christmas purchases, and were on their way home when Virginia was struck on the head by a brick from a building that was being torn down, and was knocked unconscious. She was hastily carried to a hospital, but in a few brief hours her little spirit had winged its flight.

There was no more promising worker in our Sunday School than Virginia. She was strikingly devoted to her Church and Sunday School for one of her years. She was one of those outstanding little creatures in whom the gift of leadership was most marked. Her parents, teachers and pastor had high hopes for her young life. Her sudden taking away has been a blow that has saddened all our hearts. A bright little flower has been safely transplanted into the heavenly clime, there to develop and blossom in all its fullness.

May God bless and comfort the sorrowing parents and sanctify this tragedy to the good of all.

C. H. ROWLAND.

Greensboro, N. C.

BANKER CITES TEN TENETS OF SUCCESS.

Otto H. Kahn, banker, in a "message to young business men," delivered before the Harvard Business School Club, outlined ten precepts of success. Mr. Kahn, who has been closely connected with the affairs of Wall Street for thirty years, stressed the importance of doing seemingly trivial tasks as carefully as more important ones, and advised against skepticism, mistrust and suspicion.

Mr. Kahn's ten tenets, in part, are as follows:

First: Eliminate from your vocabulary the word "perfunctory." Every task is a test. However trivial it be, your manner of performing it will testify in some way for or against you.

Second: Remember that the most serviceable of all assets is reputation.

Third: Think! Quite apart from the requirements of your regular work, practice your mental "daily dozen."

Fourth: Go for a ride on the horse of your imagination from time to time. But remember it's a high-strung animal and needs keeping under careful control.

Fifth: Keep a sharp lookout for opportunities, recognize them and seize them boldly when they come within your reach. But do not think every chance means an opportunity.

Sixth: Be neighborly; be a good sport. Don't think you can lift yourself up by downing others.

Seventh: Work hard. Presumably you have ideals; keep them. Don't become cynical. Don't scoff. Don't lose faith.

Eighth: Take an interest and a due share in public affairs. Business cannot prosper unless the ship of state is run on a steady keel and steered with competence.

Ninth: Meet your fellow-men with confidence, unless you have reason to suspect.

Tenth: If the so-called capitalistic system is to be continued, as I believe it will and should, it is particularly incumbent upon those whom it places in positions of business leadership to exercise self-restraint and consideration for others. Be patient, courteous, helpful, conciliatory. Avoid ostentation. Abhor purse-pride and arrogance.

ELON COLLEGE---CO-EDUCATIONAL

WHITLEY AUDITORIUM BUILDING
One of the Group of Five New Buildings now Completed.

Elon, in her rebuilding program, has been looking to the future. Ten buildings, new and modern equipment, and a highly trained and efficient faculty are at the service of the future leaders of our Church. The phenomenal growth of Elon in the past two years indicates a larger growth throughout the whole denomination in the years just ahead. Make Elon your own Church College in a personal way by your patronage and prayerful co-operation.

CAMPAIGN OF EDUCATION.

A careful survey of the program for popular education and its broad implications discloses its wide scope. It includes the education of the entire nation and the stamping out of illiteracy. It cannot be accomplished in a year, perhaps not in a decade. A generation may pass before its splendid objectives are attained. But even so, they are well worth the effort. What the glorious achievement of popular, democratic education, under which is a generation of labor compared to the poorest, and most lowly, may have an unlimited educational opportunity; an opportunity restricted only by his capacity and desire?

Think of what it will mean for the future of the nation—all the children of all the people, studying, playing, working together with one aim and in one spirit, not an arbitrary purpose superimposed upon them by an all-powerful government, but a co-operative, patriotic purpose entered into willingly and joyfully as becomes the children of freemen. Class education, sectarian education, aristocratic education, will in time become as obsolete as the doctrine of the divine right of kings.

A man is to be valued for his character, his intellect, his capacity for leadership. A citizen is to be honored for his disinterested public service, his patriotic idealism. All the factitious differences that separate men into warring groups shall be fused in the enthusiasm of a common search for knowledge, a common love of truth.—The New Age.

MONEY TO LEND ON IMPROVED FARMS--FAVORABLE TERMS

Write for Details

SO. BOND & MORTGAGE CO.
627 E. Main St. - - Richmond, Va.

Medical College of Virginia

Medicine Dentistry
Pharmacy Nursing

New Buildings. Well-equipped Laboratories, under the direction of full-time, competent teachers.

The Memorial Hospital, Dooley Hospital, St. Philip Hospital, are owned and controlled by the Medical College of Virginia, and offer every facility for thorough clinical teaching.

Staffs composed of the Faculty of the College. Additional clinical facilities are offered through other institutions in Richmond.

For full information and catalogue, address—

J. R. McCAULEY, Secretary.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D.....Editor
W. W. STALEY, D. D.....Associate
W. A. HARPER, LL. D.....Associate
R. C. HELFENSTEIN, D. D...Associate
REV. S. C. HARRELL.....Associate
REV. S. M. LYNAM.....News Editor
P. J. KERNODLE....Managing Editor

Subscription Rates.

One Year $2.00
Six Months 1.00

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post-Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows the date of expiration. Please renew at least two weeks in advance.

Change of Address: Give both old and new post-office when asking that your address be changed.

When subscriptions are made for friends, state whether paper is to be stopped at end of the year.

Remittances: Make all remittances to "The Christian Sun," 1536 East Broad Street, Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and Marriage Notices, limited to 100 words, are published free of charge. All over 100 words, published at 1 cent a word. Remittance should accompany copy. Write names distinctly.

Advertising Rates: "Want Ads," 2 cents a word an insertion. Display Rates quoted upon request.

BARBER—BLANCHARD.

DeWitt Barber and Mabel Blanchard, both of the neighborhood near Elon College, were united in marriage December 31, 1924. There were present several of their friends. Immediately after the ceremony the couple left for Greensboro, N. C. We wish for them the best.

P. T. KLAPP.

STARR—SMITH.

At the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Smith, of Brown's Summit, N. C., Mr. John L. Starr and Miss Irene Smith were united in marriage on December 24, 1924. The marriage was witnessed by a few near relatives and friends. Mr. Starr is a prosperous young business man of Greensboro, N. C., at which place they will make their home. May their wedded life be long and happy.

T. J. GREEN.

HINSHAW—BLAIR.

In the presence of a few witnesses, on the 5th day of January, 1925, Robert Hinshaw and Alta Blair were united in marriage in the home of the writer. Both were of Gibsonville, N. C. We wish for them the best.

P. T. KLAPP.

SARTIN—PETTIGREW.

On December 31, 1924, at the home of the writer, Burlington, N. C., Mr. John Frank Sartin and Miss Belia Pettigrew were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by the writer in the presence of a nice company of friends and relatives. The many friends of the happy couple wish for them a prosperous and happy life.

P. H. FLEMING.

COX—STOUT.

Mr. Claud Cox and Miss Montie Stout, both of Ramseur, N. C., were united in marriage at the home of the writer on December 25, 1924. These are prominent young people of the town of Ramseur, and their many friends wish them much happiness through life. They iwll reside at Ramseur, where Mr. Cox holds a responsible position with the firm of Craven & Cox.

T. J. GREEN.

WALKER—LEACH.

On December 13, 1924, at the residence of the writer, at Ramseur, N. C., Mr. Claud Walker and Miss Mary Leach, both of Seagrove, N. C., were united in marriage. Mr. Walker has been the popular mail deliverer from Seagrove for a number of years. Mrs. Walker is the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Leach. Mr. and Mrs. Walker expect to make their home in High Point. May this be a happy wedlock.

T. J. GREEN.

WHICH IS THE
BEST INVESTMENT?

It is that one best suited to the requirements of the individual purchaser.

For example: What is best for the millionaire, whose income is in the high brackets, and to whom income is no object, is obviously not the best for the investor who must have the maximum income consistent with safety.

We offer to our clients individual service.

. . .

ESTABLISHED 1874

John L. Williams & Sons

INVESTMENT BANKERS

Phone: Randolph 244 Seventh and Main Streets

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

"Be not arrogant because of that which thou knowest; deal with the ignorant as with the learned; for the barriers of art are not closed, no artist being in possession of the perfection to which he should aspire."—From "Precepts of Ptah-Hotep."

There are 25,000 miles of concrete road in the United States. California has 3,288 miles, the largest mileage of any State in the Union.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

A Co-Educational School

LOCATED AT

WADLEY, ALABAMA

This School offers the last two years of Academic work and the first two years of College work.

The following Courses are offered in the—

COLLEGE DEPARTMENT: English, Bible, Religious Education, Latin, French, History, Education, Mathematics and Science.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENTS: Music—Piano, Voice; Commercial Department—Bookkeeping, Typewriting, and Shorthand.

Due attention will be given Athletics, such as Tennis, Basket-Ball, Baseball, Football.

The government of the School is mild, but firm, endeavoring to create a home atmosphere as much as possible, not merely to maintain discipline, but to cultivate Christian character.

This is our own School, located within reach of all in this section, and the cost is less than any other College within reasonable distance of those who would attend School from this section.

Send for a Catalogue giving full description of Courses and entrance conditions.

S. L. BEOUGHER, President

Wadley, - - - - Alabama.

OXFORD TEACHERS' BIBLES

An Oxford Teachers' Bible has references and 300 pages of helps that are a mine of information to Bible students. The helps are arranged in alphabetical order, like a dictionary. They are accurate, comprehensive and up-to-date. A few styles are listed here. Many others are described in our Bible catalogue, mailed upon request.

04403 [This size print] Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 6⅞ x 4¾ inches $4.00

0623x [Same Bible as 04403] Printed on Oxford India paper. Only 1 inch thick..... $6.00

04453 [This size print] French Morocco leather binding, overlapping covers, 7¼ x 5 in. $4.35

0773x [Same Bible as 04453] Printed on Oxford India paper. A remarkably thin and light Bible. (Only 1 inch thick) $7.75

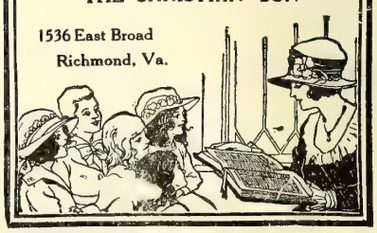
05453 [Same Bible as 04453] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $6.25

05453x [Same Bible as 0773x] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $8.75

04523 [This size print] A self-pronouncing Oxford Bible. Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 8½ x 5½ inches... $5.50

0923x [Same Bible as 04523] Printed on Oxford India paper, only 1⅛ inches thick... $9.75

ORDER FROM
"THE CHRISTIAN SUN"
1536 East Broad
Richmond, Va.



FOR GOOD HOME COOKING
MRS. COOK'S CAFETERIA
805 East Grace Street.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY. 1956.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Official Organ of the Southern Christian Convention

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY. IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY. IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXVII. RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JANUARY 22, 1925. NUMBER 4.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

A Unique Danish Bill.—

A bill has been brought up in the Danish Parliament by Minister of Justice Steincke which would authorize doctors, under certain conditions, to take the life of a person who was hopelessly ill and who desired it, without incurring punishment. This, according to the old law, was designated as manslaughter or murder.

Panama has Record Year.—

The fiscal year ending June 30th last was a record year for the Panama Canal. During the year the canal earned $17,000,000 and more. This amount was increased by another million earned by the Panama railroad. This shows an increase of nearly 39 per cent above the earnings of 1923, 5,230 ships paying toll to pass through the great canal.

Missionary Conference to Meet.—

The North American Foreign Missionary Conference is to hold a great meeting in Washington, D. C., January 28th to February 3d. Many of the world's greatest missionary leaders will be present and speak at this meeting. Our Southern Convention is allowed twelve delegates, and it is reported that the twelve have been elected and will all attend. The prospect is for a great missionary conference, followed by a great missionary awakening among the people of the United States and Canada.

Premier of Japan Speaks.—

Premier Kato, of Japan, says: "Japan is keenly appreciative of the earnestness displayed by President Coolidge and Secretary Hughes in denouncing efforts of naval propagandists to embroil Japan and America."

Those retired admirals are becoming indeed a genuine menace to the country with their continual prophecies of war with Japan. Americans must not become alarmed because a few men talk. If Japan and America are given a decent chance to understand each other, there will be no war, and the citizens of this country ought to insist that a fair chance for understanding be given.

Kellogg to Succeed Hughes.—

Announcement is made that Frank B. Kellogg, now ambassador at the Court of St. James and in attendance on the reparations parley, will succeed Charles E. Hughes as Secretary of State. Mr. Hughes is now sixty-two years old, and proposes to recoup his private fortune by legal practice during the few remaining years of active life. He has enjoyed every honor that can come to a citizen of the United States except that of being the President, and he came near to that in 1916. He has occupied a place on the bench of the Supreme Court, has been Governor of New York, has held the premiership of the Cabinet, and many other important positions of trust. For the past twenty years he has been almost constantly in public service, and there has been little time to care for his declining years and for his family. It is regrettable that the governmental positions of both States and nation make it necessary for those who hold them either to be wealthy men or else hold them at terrible sacrifice.

Turning Refugees into Citizens.—

Mr. Morganthau's work for the Greek refugees is bearing fruit. The international loan of sixty million dollars recently floated is one of the most hopeful signs of modern times. The money is to be used for the settlement in Greece of the refugees in gainful employments. Greece herself subscribed ten millions of the loan, America took up ten millions more, and London saw to the remainder. The Armenians already in Greece will share in the benefits without discrimination, but Greece could not afford further to open her narrow confines. This move ought to eventually release the Near East Relief forces in Greece, but certainly not for the next two years. Charles P. Howland, a New York lawyer, will succeed Mr. Morganthau, and will have charge of the expenditures of the money. This loan to turn refugees into citizens is one of the finest things attempted since the war. It means the placing of men again on a stable basis for life. It means that in so doing, the world will have a better chance for stability too.

Returned to the Bench.—

In the November elections, Judge Ben B. Lindsey, who has served for the past twenty-five years as judge of the juvenile and domestic relations court of Denver, Col., was returned to the bench for the ninth time by the people of that city in the hardest fought campaign Judge Lindsey has ever known. This is a tribute to the judge, and a reflection of credit on the basic common sense of the people of Denver.

In a letter in the New Republic, Judge Lindsey tells about a woman who screamed in his face in a public meeting "You dirty cur! you dirty cur! you dirty cur!" He encountered the same woman later outside the hall and asked her why she called him a dirty cur. Her reply was that he wasn't one hundred per cent American, and intended to wreck the nation. As the judge observes, "They had paid ten dollars for the privilege of hating somebody, and they were getting their money's worth." How pathetic it is when men are so deluded, and how criminal it is for men so to delude them! There is but one way out of such menaces, and that way is through the schools.

France Leads the World.—

In placing her signature to the compulsory clause of the protocol, France has sprung into the leadership of the world. By that signature, France agrees to submit to the world court all questions arising between her and any other power. This removes all talk of justiciable and non-justiciable questions. No longer will the matter of national honor be considered a just cause for war. In signing the compulsory clause of the protocol, France was simply following to a logical conclusion her action at London when she agreed to abide by the decisions of the reparations court, a thing which before she had persistently refused to do. Premier Herriot has led France into a place of leadership and honor among the nations. There is no question but that the French Parliament will endorse the signature, for in France the signature of a plenipotentiary is a binding thing, which cannot always be said for the United States. France has taken a very definite step in the direction of world peace in a very tangible way. She has reserved the right to withdraw her signature after fifteen years, providing the plan does not go into effect.

A Dangerous Invasion.—

The recent attempt of Governor Jonathan M. Davis, of Kansas, who failed to be re-elected last fall to oust Chancellor E. H. Lindley, of the Kansas State University, is a dangerous invasion by politics of democratic education. Chancellor Lindley contested the ouster of Governor Davis, and in the lower courts received an injunction preventing its enforcement, but this decision was not sustained by the State Supreme Court. The court held that Governor Davis was within his province when he ordered Chancellor Lindley out of office. The Governor charged the Chancellor with neglect, and with insubordination. At any rate, the dismissal of the Chancellor has thrown things into a bad state in Kansas. It seems, on the face of things, that Governor Davis is making an effort to create an issue on which he may return to politics two years hence. The students and alumni of the university have presented a seventy-five-foot petition to Governor-elect Ben S. Paulen, requesting the restoration of Chancellor Lindley. If the act of Mr. Davis results in the removal of the university from political domination, he will have made a genuine contribution to his State.

When politics and politicians undertake for political reasons to control the educational institutions, then a stop should be put to their activities. It is a dangerous invasion of the most sacred precincts known to a democratic government, and jeopardizes the liberties of all the people.

NOTES-PERSONALS

"You are giving us a good paper, and we appreciate it very much."—L. F. Johnson, Carversville, Pa.

Dr. W. W. Staley, of Suffolk, Va., preached in the Christian Church at Holland last Sunday, in the absence of the pastor.

Rev. L. E. Smith, D. D., pastor of the Christian Temple of Norfolk, Va., was in Richmond the first of this week and made a welcome visit at THE SUN office.

The excavating for the new South Norfolk Christian Church has been completed and part of the foundation laid. Mev. Mr. Poythress expects active work to be begun in the next thirty days.

Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, of Holland, Va., is conducting evangelistic services at the First Christian Church of Richmond. The pastor, Dr. W. T. Walters, has designated these services as "Kingdom Enlistment Week."

This pays up to January 1, 1925. Thank you for your kindness. I am a widow, seventy-five years of age, but I am enjoying THE CHRISTIAN SUN, so continue to send it to me, and oblige."—Mrs. H. L. Goodson, Henderson, N. C.

Rev. G. O. Lankford, D. D., pastor First Christian Church, Burlington, N. C., has been elected president of the Burlington Pastors' Association. Dr. Lankford is an excellent presiding officer, and the business of the arssociation will be safe in his capable hands.

"I thank you very much for continuing THE SUN, for I surely would miss it. While I have not always been a subscriber, I have always loved it. I well remember reading it far back when Uncle Edwin conducted the "Children's Corner," and would look for the letters the first thing."—Mrs. W. P. Bray, Petersburg, Va.

Rev. McD. Howsare, secretary of evangelism, had a very rainy week of it with Christian Temple, Norfolk. But Dr. Smith, the pastor, writes that sixty-seven members have been received, all but four of the number at the close of the meeting. The Church was much helped by the meeting, and Dr. Smith will tell CHRISTIAN SUN readers about it.

Rev. H. W. Elder, Richland, Ga., is moving in the matter of building a substantial new Christian Church in the town of Richland, Ga. He writes that he has brick on the ground, that all materials are contracted for, and the actual work of construction is to begin at once. Bro. Elder is a Church-builder, and is never so happy as when engaged in seeing and helping a house of worship go up.

The Christian Work, of New York, announces for its issue of February 14th a debate on the question: "Is the Bible the Infallible Word of God?" The affirmative will be presented by Hon. William J. Bryan, the negative by William Floyd, editor of the Arbitrator. Such questions are not settled in debate, but the parties writing will, no doubt, give some interesting reading to Christian Work readers.

Rev. W. H. Denison, D. D., is to be in North Carolina and Virginia for a series of stewardship institutes February 4th to 12th, inclusive. It is expected that the full program, with places and dates of these institutes, can be given in THE CHRISTIAN SUN of next week. There is certainly no scriptural teaching of more vital importance than that of stewardship. Our relations to God are through Him to our fellow-man. Dr. Denison is an expert along this line, and they will be fortunate indeed who may hear him in these institutes.

Uncle Wellons, having happily celebrated his ninety-ninth anniversary, has, in fair health and high hopes, started on the last mile toward the century mark, which he is scheduled to reach, if spared by the grace of God, January 1, 1926. He is our "grand old young man," cheerful, progressive, keenly interested in all that pertains to the welfare of the Church and the kingdom. At present, he is comfortably housed and lovingly cared for in the Old People's Masonic Home, Greensboro, N. C.

"Progress in Race Relations—A Survey," is a booklet for free distribution to those requesting a copy. Such request should be sent to Robt. E. Eleazer, Director, 409 Palmer Building, Atlanta, Ga. The publication is worth while, containing as it does the findings of the Commission on Interracial Co-operation for the year 1923-'24. This item meets the eye and is one of many more of deep interest: "North Carolina's program of negro education continues to lead the South, appropriations for this purpose having increased in eleven years from $225,000 to $4,000,000 a year."

Mrs. W. H. Andrews, Suffolk, Va., writes that a splendid missionary Christmas program was presented on Sunday before Christmas in the Suffolk Church and that ninety packages were dropped in a large box which were later packed into four boxes and sent by parcel post to Rev. M. T. Sorrell, Fancy Gap, Va., for our mountain friends. Also one good brother put in her hands $10 in gold with which to paint the parsonage. This was an exceedingly gracious act, and we are sure that the children and others of the Suffolk Sunday School enjoyed their Christmas the better because of it.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION MEETING.

The twenty-second annual convention of the Religious Education Association will be held in Milwaukee, Wis., April 22-25, 1925. The theme of the convention is "Religious Education and Religious Experience." An effort is being made to determine whether the newer types of religious education can produce a religious experience commensurate with that produced by the older types; and to redefine, if necessary, what is meant by "religious experience."

The Religious Education Association is an international group of professional educators, both in the field of general and Church school education. Its purpose is to inspire the educational forces of the country with the religious ideal; to inspire the religious forces with the educational ideal, and to keep before the public mind the ideal of religious education and the sense of its need and value.

DONALD J. COWLING, President.

WHAT IS EDUCATION?

It is difficult to find a definition of education that is wholly satisfactory. The best of them seem to leave something out. I would like to recommend the defining of education as a profitable exercise for private meditation, says Dr. John Herman Randall. Let each one ask himself what he means by "education"; and if he ponders the question deeply he will discover that in order to answer it he will have to probe down to the innermost meaning of life itself. Thinking earnestly about the meaning of education compels us to face the big fundamental questions of life as we never have before. Such thinking, for example, reveals the fact that religion and education are not two separate things, but one thing; two only on the surface, but one in the ultimate foundations and the final aim. They are not two things that can say to one another: "You go your way and I will go mine," as they are inclined to say today; but things that must move together, and move in the same direction, if each is to attain its highest ends.

GRATIFYING!

To the large number of friends of Elon College in this city and county, it is gratifying to know that there are 134 Alamance boys and girls attending the college this year. The Alamance County people are recognizing the value of this great institution, as shown by this attendance, and next year, no doubt, the number will reach 175 or 200.

There are many advantages of this college to the people of Alamance, especially to those who live in nearby towns and communities. The expense of going is very small, and the parents are always in easy touch with their sons and daughters. But the greatest reason for this increased attendance is the character of the institution. The men at the head of this college are known for their strength of character and their interest in those who are committed to their care and the Christian atmosphere and teaching which is vially important in this day of dogmatism.—Pennington News (January 13th),

BETHLEHEM NOTES.

On the 5th day of January, the doors of Bethlehem College were opened for the second term of the year, and through them happy and cheerful students passed, all anxious and eager to start their college activities with high hopes and bright dreams. This day was one of the happiest days in the history of Bethlehem College, as the students were glad to meet their college-mates and their professors. The president and the faculty extended a hearty welcome to all the students of the college, and wished them great success in their work.

The boys' and girls' literary societies have caught a new vision of the new year, and are busy with their programs with determination and higher aims.

The college band and the glee club have started their new programs, and we believe that these organizations will bring new inspiration and enjoyment to the whole school as well as pleasure and profit to those who participate.

The Christian Endeavor is already in operation, and it is hoped that all the students will take interest in this organization. The leaders of C. E. have been particularly active and helpful in promoting co-operation and unity among the students, and they believe that they can accomplish more.

The boys' and girls' athletic associations are busy with their basket-ball season. The girls' basket-ball team has already defeated the Milltown High School team, with a score of 12-0. This is a great encouragement to the girls' team.

If you are looking for all-round characters, just come to Bethlehem College and you will find them.

VICTORIA E. ADAMS.

Wadley, Ala.

TULLY A. TWIDDY.

THE SUN'S editor learns with deep regret and a sense of personal loss of the unexpected death of Bro. Tully A. Twiddy at his Norfolk home, on January 5th. Bro. Twiddy was a good friend of all that the Christian Church undertook to do in the name of our Lord. He was very faithful as a member of the old Memorial Christian Temple, both as an active member and a loyal and faithful deacon. Then he later transferred to the Third Church, now the Christian Temple, and was one of the loyal and active supporters of that Christian Church.

He was not only a friend to the Church, but a friend of the needy, always turning in every direction that he could to help those in need. His dear wife passed to the spirit land about three years ago, since which time he has not been in the best of health. The following is from the Virginian-Pilot of Tuesday, January 6th:

Tully A. Twiddy, for more than thirty years a prominent business man of this city, with a store on Church Street, died suddenly yesterday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at his home, 216 West Thirty-sixth Street. He had been out driving in his car during the early afternoon. Returning to the home he found the family out and seated himself in the parlor to rest. Upon the return from downtown of his daughter, Mrs. J. A. Moore, she found her father as he had fallen from the chair to the flood with life extinct. Mr. Twiddy retired from business about six years ago on account of ill health. However, he was thought to be improving, and for the last few weeks had shown unusual activity.

Tully A. Twiddy.

He was a faithful and devout member of the Christian Temple, a deacon of the Church, a member of the official board, and a teacher in the Sunday School. He was also a member of the Woodmen of the World.

He leaves two daughters, Mrs. J. A. Moore and Mrs. J. J. Pitt, and two sons, Clarence A. Twiddy and Clyde B. Twiddy, and five grandchildren.

The official board of the Temple, scheduled to meet for business last night, met and adjourned out of respect for their deceased brother.

REST—CURE FOR TUBERCULOSIS.

Rest! I wish I could impress upon the general public the idea that it is rest—systematic rest, and not raw eggs, milk, sleeping-porches or climate—that cures tuberculosis," said Dr. P. P. McCain, superintendent of the North Carolina Sanatorium.

"The State of North Carolina invests thousands of dollars every year in tuberculosis work. But it is not sleeping-porches and food alone that repay the State in arrested cases of tuberculosis for its investment. It is the strict regimen of systematic rest, enforced by the physicians at the sanatorium, that pays the State returns for its money in 'cures' of its tuberculous citizens.

"Pulmonary tuberculosis is an inflammation or ulcertaion in the lung. If you have an ulcer on your hand you use the hand as little as possible until the ulcer heals. It should be the same way with a diseased lung. The more exercise a person takes, the more often he has to breathe. This increased breathing may at any time do serious damage to the ulcer in the lung. The more quiet a person who has tuberculosis can be, the better chance the tuberculosis in the lung has to heal.

"When a patient first enters the sanatorium he is put to bed for complete rest until some weeks after all symptoms subside. Then the patient is allowed to begin sitting up in a reclining chair for an hour a day at first, and his time up is gradually increased until after a few weeks he can sit up a good part of the day. Finally the patient is allowed to take some outdoor exercise, usually walking. The time out of bed and on exercise is taken only by order of the physician, and not until the patient's lung condition has healed sufficiently to allow it. Every patient has to recline so many hours every morning and spend two hours quietly in bed each afternoon.

"When the patient leaves the sanatorium, his period of rest is not over. In order to prevent a relapse, he must rest and continue to rest for a certain part of each day.

"Tuberculosis in the lungs is like a house on fire. Water will put out fire; rest will quench tuberculosis in the lungs. The secret of getting well of tuberculosis is simple—rest, rest systematically and continue to rest. Good food, fresh air and a suitable climate are helpful factors, but alone they will not keep a sufferer from tuberculosis from the grave. They have to be combined with intelligent, systematic rest.

"So far, rest is the only generally effective remedy for tuberculosis. As soon as the general public realizes this and acts upon it, the road to recovery from tuberculosis becomes as certain, easy and secure as it can be made today."—N. C. Sanatorium.

TESTED BECAUSE TRUSTED.

A father who was an officer in the Union Army, with his son under him, wrote out an order, called his son, and said, "Deliver this to the general down on the firing line." The young man placed the message under his belt, mounted his horse and rode away. The enemy's bullets flew thick and fast while he made the dangerous ride. The father stood and watched, and waited, and wondered, while that strange conflict raged in his soul that must take place where the father and the officer are one person, and the son and subaltern the other, and that son exposed to danger by the father's command. At last the son rode back into his father's presence with his foam-covered horse, and dismounted. The father threw his arms about his boy's neck and said, "My son, I did not want you killed, but I had to send a man that I could trust." God's bravest and best soldiers are in the hard places.—Changeless Christ.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES.

Maryland crops benefited greatly from the rains in October and November. The rains were followed by mild weather, and wheat is going into the winter in good condition, contrary to expectations a month ago. Weather during November was ideal for corn-husking, and practically all corn in the State has been harvested. The soil has been in good condition for cultivation, and many farmers have taken advantage of the opportunity to do considerable plowing in preparation for spring crops.

The principal work during the first half of December on Virginia farms consisted of cribbing corn, hauling fire-wood and feed for stock, plowing, and butchering hogs. Weather conditions were generally favorable, and satisfactory progress was reported. In some sections, wet ground delayed fall plowing to some extent. There was considerable complaint about this year's corn crop, many farmers stating that it did not mature well and was difficult to cure. Husking and cribbing have made excellent progress, and probably 75 per cent of the total crop has been housed. Except in Southwest Virginia, the crop is exceedingly short. Seeding of winter grains was rather late in some sections, and the crop in these localities is just coming up. Early sown fields are looking well and have made considerable growth. Late sown crops are not looking so well, and there is some complaint of poor stands. Weather conditions have been unfavorable for ordering and stripping tobacco, and marketing has therefore been retarded. Stocks of hay on the farms are good, and will help to offset the shortage in corn for feeding livestock. Threshing of peanuts has made good progress, but the yield is turning out very poorly, and most farmers will not get more than two-thirds their usual crop. The quality is also poorer than usual. Owing to the late season, only a small percentage of the peanut crop has been marketed prior to the middle of December. Virginia livestock is generally in fine order, but very few cattle are on feed, the price received last season not encouraging garmers to buy cattle for this purpose. It has been generally contended that cattle marketed this fall were sold at great financial loss.

North Carolina soils have been in good condition for crop growth and the planting of small grains, and formers took full advantage of the favorable weather in November and early December. There were no serious freezes up to the middle of December, and winter crops are in good shape for cold weather. Some harvesting remains to be done, especially in cotton and cornfields. Corn grains turned out somewhat better than was expected from earlier prospects. All feed and hay crops are short this year in North Carolina, September rains having ruined much of the hay and forage left in the fields at that time. The wheat crop has been reduced in acreage this fall, and probably the same statement applies to all other small grains. The peanut crop, which looked good until dug, resulted in very poor yields and quality of nuts. The poor returns appeared due to slow development and premature harvesting.

The Egyptian system of writing is perhaps the oldest of the known scripts. This writing was in the form of pictures. The most ancient Egyptian papyrus now known contains accounts of the reign of King Assa (3580-3536 B. C.). The earliest literary papyrus is that known for the name of its former owner as the Prisse Papyrus, now preserved in Paris. It contains a work composed in the reign of a king of the fifth dynasty, and is computed to have been written as early as 2500 B. C.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR.

J. O. ATKINSON, Elon College, N. C.

Contributing Editors.

W. W. STALEY W. A. HARPER
R. C. HELFENSTEIN S. C. HARRELL

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE VIRGIN'S SON.

Because so much is being said and written about the virgin birth of Jesus the Christ, one is naturally inclined to read with reservations and reluctance any volume bearing on the title. On some account, the scholars, so-called, are quite vigorous in their attacks and assailment of this topic. It is, therefore, the more refreshing to be attracted by a volume that shows the evidences in the beginning of sanity and scholarship as touching this subject. There has recently fallen into the hands of the writer a volume of 160 pages by Dr. John B. Champion, of Chicago. This book contains a real virile message, written with a steady hand and with the skill and ability of a scholar. Dr. Champion is not a fanatic, or at any rate, his book shows no sign of it, nor a sentimental emotionalist. Having been a close student of the Bible, he shows the biblical spirit in his interpretation and deals in absolute fairness and squareness, not only with the topic, but with the people he seems to have in mind as he writes.

Any reader will find his book exceedingly refreshing. He has the power of condensation, and packs into a single sentence a whole page of thought, often rising to the height of splendid epigram. This sentence catches the reader's eyes: "Regeneration is the birth of the ability to behold spiritual things." Except the color-blind get new eyesight, they cannot behold the painter's masterpiece." Or this sentence, "As a rule, those who do not recognize God in the Word of God, do not recognize God in God the Son." In another place it is declared, "By inspiration it is given to know the mysteries of inspiration."

Here is a scientific truth, "The reciprocal tendency ever is to be possessed by that which we possess." This fact, which will be attested by any man who has given himself zealously to the persistent possession of wealth, is capable of universal application. Growing out of this fact, the author makes this observation, "In our own day, increased control over the forces and resources of nature has awakened and strengthened faith in them, making men very self-sufficient, and drawing them away from faith in the supernatural; so that finally they lose touch with it, capacity for it, affinity with it and thought about it. The greater our store of riches in the material world, the less are we inclined to feel the need of and to have faith in the imperishable wealth of the spiritual."

That which the author is driving at in these early pages is to lodge in the reader's mind the indisputable fact of the inspiration of the Word of God, and on the other hand to raise the question as to why in our day men are so violently disputing this inspiration. He quotes Coleridge, "I know the Bible is inspired because it inspires me." It is claimed by Dr. Champion that the incompetence of the critic, and not the incompetence of the Scriptures, makes the trouble in our day. The trouble with many of the critics is that they seek to discover through a microscope or a telescope that which is invisible, transcendent, and back of all that can be discerned by the scientific eye or instrument. "One cannot fairly decide that an ocean liner is unseaworthy because it will not float on his teacup." "One must devoutly desire to look into the heart of God to understand the Bible. No one has looked into the real meaning of the Bible who did not find that he was looking into the very deeps of the heart of God." "In upholding the Bible, this declaration is made: "Just because there is so much more of God in it than in any other book, the Bible is bound to be more misunderstood than any other book, when considered apart from the part God had in its making. The secret of the Lord is with him that fear Him."

If, therefore, those who assail the mysteries of God and would destroy them, wish to be entirely scientific and fair in their conclusions, then let them first of all become acquainted with the secrets of the Lord by reposing in Him a trustful faith, and a loving, awesome fear.

With these facts and conclusions in the background, the author proceeds to show that only those who are prepared to question or overthrow the fact of the virgin birth are those who have tested themselves out in the white heat of their approach to God and in the bright light of His countenance reconciled upon them. No scientist or philosopher is believed or credited who does not approach and present his facts as an honest student and as a faithful seeker for truth as it is. Let the experts who have tested God, tried God in their own experiences, bowed reverently and submissively to God and from whom God has, as our loving Father, driven out the cruelty and the curse of sin, speak their mind and heart in this matter.

The virgin birth was prophesied centuries before the event occurred, and then twice after it occurred. It is plainly recorded by authors whose veracity is not called into question in a hundred and one other points. Moreover, Jesus Himself in actual experience, through life and death, proved Himself to be the Son of Man through the agony and suffering which He bore and also the Son of God through the victory and achievement which He won and which He is winning. It is true that the divinity or diety of Christ does not hinge on the validity or invalidity of His virgin Birth since His life and what it has accomplished proves beyond question that He was none other than the Son of God. But the fact remains that scriptural writers testified as to the virgin birth and Jesus lived a life and died a death worthy of such high testimony.

We commend most heartily Dr. Champion's book to any who may be interested in the topic. It will help any candid reader, whatever his views or opinions may be. The book can be secured through the Christian Publishing Association, Dayton, Ohio, the price being $1.25 net. It is neatly and substantially bound and the print is easy to read. It is a joy to read such a volume and a pleasure to commend it to any one who may be interested in a question much in debate.

THE VALUE OF A MAN.

(Extracts from address by Bishop F. F. Reese before Federal Council of Churches.)

The first and most important contribution which the Churches can make towards any matter of right human relations is to preach the gospel of the incarnation. The negro is a man, as God reveals the meaning of manhood. He is within the unity of the race as the incarnation reveals it. The religion of every man or group is fatally defective which does not so regard him.

The negro is not like the white man in every particular. There are striking differences, physical and mental, but he is one with the white man in his essential humanity. When the Churches have converted their own people and have led them to accept that truth and to base their relations to the negro on that principle, there will be cordial co-operation and confidence between the races.

The responsibility rests, first, upon the white race, just in so far as it assumes its superiority in strength and capacity, and just in so far as it has enjoyed advantages and civilization which the negro has not enjoyed. Right relations which constitute morality and true religion will inevitably promote justice and fair dealing and kindness and brotherly conduct toward the negro. It will mean that it will be taken for granted that he is entitled to the opportunity to make, under God, the best of himself of which he is capable, and that no prejudice or contempt or injustice on the part of the white man will hinder or handicap him. Under God, he will have every opportunity and every assistance from his stronger brother to work out his salvation, individually and racially.

Every man's and race's self-respect must be respected and encouraged. This means that we must regard and treat the negro as a man, with the self-respect which every man should feel. Thought and feelings about him and toward him which express themselves in words and acts implying disrespect and contempt as of a superior to an inferior are unchristian.

Christian leaders and preachers must consider it a primary duty to promote sympathy and kindness, justice and charity toward the other race. And the people who call themselves Christians and are members of congregations of the various communions must consider their religion an imperfect and a diluted form of Christianity unless they shall embrace within the range of their Christian duty the sense of Christian brotherhood towards every man, black or white.

A great function was held in the halls of Congress on December 15th, in memory of Woodrow Wilson, but we are not told what was the occasion for this. I read a New York, Detroit, Chicago, and Boston newspaper, and failed to learn why the memorial service was held just at this time. A Wilson memorial is always fitting, but as a newspaper reader I wanted to know why this meeting was held now. I wanted to know badly enough to search four newspapers. None told me why. (I have just met a man from Washington, who tells me that it was the customary memorial service held after a President's death, and that a similar service will be held for Mr. Harding in March or April.)—Dearborn Ind.

KNOWING THE MIND OF CHRIST.

By S. L. Beougher.

Why should we want to know the mind of Christ on the great subjects of religion, which man seems equally powerless to solve or let alone? Because, if the holiest and clearest religious thought is to have supreme weight in the world, we must trace it back to Him. Many are saying, "That what we want is not to believe in Christ, but to believe as He believed, have the same faith He had"; but this is simply regarding the mind of Christ as our mind at its clearest—the purest reading of the human mind on the subject of religion. The source of all wisdom is God; but who can see clearly enough to interpret the divine thought? How does that divine intelligence that is in and through all things throughout the whole universe express itself? We have the mind of God in a lily, a snowflake, and a ray of sunlight; but who shall interpret it? You think you can discern the mind of God as you look at a rose, or feel the glow of sunshine; but what is it in the Charleston earthquake or in the smallest insect? Here is the folly of turning from the so-called imperfect revelation—the Bible—to the grand revelations of nature, for in doing so you will find quite as many perplexing texts in the Bible of creation as in the Old Scriptures.

On the ground of the merest naturalism, that intelligence which is in the universe comes to its clearest interpretation in the mind of Christ. Every Church thinks it has the mind of Christ, and yet the Churches are so different, hold such different creeds; but how could it be otherwise when we think of the great councils that elaborated them, their search up and down the whole Bible in order to find their materials, often basing an entire doctrine upon a single disconnected text. If you want the mind of Moses, you turn to the Pentatouch; if you want the mind of Paul, you turn to his letters and the Acts of the Apostles; and it is a great thing to have the mind of Paul, for he stood very near to Christ, and saw the great light, and it burned in his soul and made all things new to him.

If I want the clearest interpretation of God's purpose and Christ's mission to the world, I go to the gospels. Here are the stories of Christ's life; here are the accounts of His preaching—yet they are incomplete. They do not tell all that He said and did, and what they do tell us has come through the medium of smaller, dimmer minds than His. But here it is that we come closest to Him. Here we see what Jesus went about teaching, what He put foremost in His discourses, what He seemed most to want to persuade people to believe in, and to be, and to do—there is the mind of Christ. And what a deliverance it is to turn from all the puzzling and elaborate systems of the schoolmen to that gracious life of Christ, with its quiet wisdom and holy thought. Not that Christ formally condemns these intricate theologies, but it is with Him that you feel at once that none of these things are the real heart of religion. Religion, as He tried to make men realize it and live it, was a very simple matter. It was a great resting in a divine Fatherly love and care, the upward look of thankfulness and prayer and trust; but hardly a word about God's abstract nature or the particular doctrine men should hold about Him. It was a kind, brotherly, helpful feeling toward men, and a deep concern and sorrow for their sins, with solemn, earnest warning of how terribly sin separates us from God both in this world and the world to come, but never a word of abstract doctrine either about human nature or about sin. It was a wide, large thought of the glorious heaven to come, as not merely intended for His own Jewish people but for all the great family of God, and with a great dread, too, of what it would be to be shut out from the great blessedness by hardened sin. This was the religion of Jesus Christ, and all came to a point in that great word for its realization in life, "the kingdom of God," and in His great effort to draw men into that kingdom, to teach them His own large, blessed faith and band them together for the helping and saving of the world. But what was the mind of Christ about God? His mind was full of a great, possessing sense of God, but you cannot find anything of theological definition; He does not seem to have thought a single "new thought" about God. It was simply the old monotheism of His people—the one Almighty Being, but more spiritual and more loving; the great Providence in all nature, making the lily beautiful, and caring for the birds of the air—not a sparrow falling to the ground without Him—and much more caring for His children; the Infinite Presence, the Holy Spirit, seeing us all in secret, hearing our prayers, and to whom He taught men to pray, as children opening their hearts to the Heavenly Friend. He felt intensely the presence and help of God in the inward life of the soul, so that He spoke of His own dwelling in God and God in Him, and told His disciples that it was the same with them—"He dwelleth in you and shall be in you"—the one Infinite Being, for whom the best word was "Heavenly Father"; that seems to have been the mind of Christ about God, and He Himself prayed to Him, and looked up to Him, just as He taught His disciples to do, as He said: "My Father and your Father, my God and your God."

Perhaps you have been perplexed by some of the doctrines about human nature that you have been taught as the Christian belief on the subject, for you have heard it laid down that a man was created perfect at first, but that through Adam's sin the race fell into utter wickedness, and is totally depraved, so that every child is born corrupt by nature and incapable of any good. Well, if you are ever troubled by such ideas, go to the Master and see how He seemed to look upon those about Him. Watch Him take up the little children with that loving word that His disciples must become like little children, "for of such is the kingdom of God." That does not look as if he thought them quite so lost and evil as the theologians have been apt to make out. And as for older people—well, He had a very deep sense of all the sinfulness there is in men, and no one ever felt the sadness and terribleness of sin as He did, but yet He never seemed to feel that men were all sin and could not be anything else; on the contrary, He always seemed to feel that they could be, and though He never laid down any definite doctrine of a natural goodness in man, He was all the time taking it for granted and appealing to it. And how simple was His appeal—no emphasis on any scheme of salvation or atonement to satisfy God's justice and appease His wrath before man could be received into God's forgiving love, but simply "Repent and leave your sins and turn to the better way, and God was waiting with His free and gracious love to forgive. Watch and pray; do your best and seek the help of God, and God's love and help are with you." No utterance was given to the fine-spun doctrines that preachers and the Churches are quibbling and squabbling about. Every person must answer for his own sins, and not for Adam's; neither can the human race hide behind or blame Adam for its physical and moral defects, for the transgression of God's spiritual laws throughout the past ages has brought the human race where it is today.

But of all subjects, the life which is to come is the one on which we most long to know His real thought; but here the language is so full of parable and figure that it is often difficult to understand—and the difficulty has been increased by interpreting them as literal descriptions of the things to come. Still, I do not think that it is at all impossible to come to Christ's real thought on this subject if we divest our minds of the idea of looking for exact doctrines, and simply try to gather His larger thought. Thus, the main thought of man's immortality stands out clearly all along His teachings. His words are alive with it—with the sense that this is only the beginning of things; that that change which men call death is only a passing on into the higher world. Not all believed in the future life, and those who did believed only in some dim, distant, far-away resurrection, hardly connected with the present life, hardly any living comfort or hope. To Christ it seems to have been so close, so present, divided from this earthly being by a thin veil; He could hardly speak of death except as falling asleep and going to the Father. The moral character of the future was His predominant thought—that all men take on with them into its searching light and judgment just what they have been on earth. His general thought about it was a great wide heaven into which the multitudes of earth should come from all points of the compass; yet, just because the light seemed so wide and bright and glorious, did the shame and anguish of being shut out from it seem the more sad and terrible. And so came those stern warnings against sin; those sometimes piled-up figures of fire and pain, to arouse torpid souls to the awfulness of awakening from the dreams and disguises and deceptions of earth to the light of that greater world where all sin unrepented of would be hell; therefore, he put to men in parable and figure, with all his power, the dreadfulness of passing on hardened and sinful to that great world which might, if prepared, be such a bright and glorious blessedness. In dealing with this all-important subject, I am conscious of having deviated from the commonly accepted interpretations of the three fundamental doctrines of Christianity, namely: God, man and human destiny. I have done so because I feel that the common textual method of parceling out these great thoughts of religion into clear-cut little doctrines is all wrong; it is such formal statements which divided most and keep people apart.

I wish that we all could pass beyond, behind, those old ways of doctrinal statement, and simply look to that wonderful life which eighteen centuries ago touched the world's heart with such a new outburst of piety and faith. We should have our faith cleared and strengthened, and feel how, behind all differences of opinion, men are not so far apart in the real spirit of their seeking for God, and thinking of men, and looking on to the great life beyond. We get little consolation from statements done up in packages and labeled certain doctrines of the Bible. What this weary old world needs is to take Christ's hand, and simply look up reverently toward that great life as he breathes out, "Our Father"; stand by his side, and look with him into the infinite meanings and possibilities that are in the face of the youngest child or poorest man; stand by His cross and catch the great, glad trust and hope of that dying cry, "Father, into Thy hands I commend my spirit," for this is the great hope of man.

Wadley, Ala.

There are two kinds of politeness. One says, "See how polite I am"; the other, "I would make you happy."—Tomlinson.

Only when the song of God's love is singing in our hearts are we ready for the day.—James R. Miller.

While our hearts are pure, our lives are happy and our peace is sure.

CONTRIBUTIONS

MAKING YOUR CHURCH BUDGET.

Every Church budget should be a double budget. It should be made out several weeks before the new year begins by the Church finance department (committee) and pastor together, not by either alone. Time and study should be given to it. It should be a growing and liberty budget.

The current expense budget should include all the items that can be anticipated that are to be used by the Church for itself and all its local work. That is for "ourselves" our worship and that of our families. It should include such items as salaries (pastor, janitor, and others), music, printing, fuel, light, parsonage needs, repairs, insurance on Church and parsonage, telephone, interest, a certain portion of any indebtedness added equipment and a miscellaneous fund.

The benevolence budget should include (a) any local benevolences in which your Church is expected to share, such as may be approved by the individual Church; (b) the Conference apportionments, both for the Conference and the Convention; (c) the denominational benevolent agencies that may not be included in the Conference apportionments, such as the Federal Council of Churches and special calls.

All denominational, Convention, Conference calls to which your Church is expected to contribute. The amounts put in the budget should be the least you should think of giving, and the effort should be to raise more than the budget amount. (d) There may be interdenominational benevolences that you will wish to include, such as Near East Relief. The benevolence budget should be the least amount that you should give "for others."

A fair sense of proportion should be maintained between the two sides of this budget. After this tentative budget is prepared, the finance committee should have it multigraphed, printed or typewritten and send a copy to each family in the Church, with a nice letter, stating that this is the proposed budget for our Church for the next year, and that it will be read at the regular morning Church service, a week from next Sunday, and opportunity be given for amendment and adoption. The people will feel like responding heartily when they are taken into full confidence, and help adopt the budget. It always pays to keep the full confidence of your congregation.

WARREN H. DENISON.

THE KNOWLEDGE OF BEING SAVED.

There is nothing that one ought to know so well as to be conscious that he is saved. We frequently hear members of the Church say they don't know that we are saved. It seems to me that would indeed be a deplorable condition in which to live, not to be conscious of our acceptance with God and at the same time know that God is a consuming fire (Heb. 12:2), and that we have to meet Him face to face. We cannot depend too much upon our feeling; yet there is a sweet experience that comes into the soul of man that makes him conscious that he has been born into the kingdom of God; hence the Apostle John's testimony, "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren" (1 John 3:14). In this article of evidence, we do not intend to offer so much of human experience, but to give evidence from the Word of God, which cannot be questioned by honest-minded men. Jesus Christ told Nicodemus that He must be born again, and told him he must not think strange of it. Marvel not, for ye must be born again, and except ye are born again ye cannot see the kingdom of God (John 3:3). He didn't say to Nicodemus, except you join the Church and take the Communion, or sign a card, or shake the preacher's hand; but he taught him that he must have the Spirit-birth experience.

Now, let us see further evidence. "Now, if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God" (Rom. 8:9-16). We can see that the Spirit of God is the true witness to this wonderful change in our lives. This change in our lives will be so definite that we may know it without a doubt. He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself. "These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God, that ye may know that ye have eternal life" (1 John 5:10-13). If we are truly saved, there will be a radical change in our affections one for another, and for things, for it will take worldliness out of our hearts (1 John 2:15-16), and we stop the sinning business. "Whosoever is born of God doth commit sin" (1 John 3:9). I believe the weakness of the organized Church is caused by unsaved men and women in it. God bless and save the unsaved, so they may know they are saved.

P. T. KLAPP.

THE KEEPING POWER OF CHRIST.

Just as the lifted-up Christ draws us to Him and draws us on and on until we are ready to go anywhere with Him or do anything for Him, He draws us away from the world. Christ nailed to the cross bars the way so we cannot commit the sins we once were guilty of. When we once get a vision of our Lord nailed to the cross, making atonement for our sins, hanging there for you, for me, the precious blood dripping, dripping from those five wounds, it separates us from the world so we cannot do the things the world is doing.

The one who was dishonest becomes honest and upright. He who was untruthful cannot lie. Those whose lives and conversation have been unclean put it all away. The dance, the cards, the theater do not attract, because they have yielded all to their Lord, and the vision of the Christ bleeding, dying upon the cross, stands between.

Jesus said we must renounce all; we must take up the cross and follow Him, or we cannot be His disciples. The Holy Spirit had it recorded we must be separated from the world. The Book says the Lord looks upon the heart and that He knows His own. The Book also says He will keep His own. He keeps in the hour of temptation, for "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way of escape, that ye may be able to bear it." He keeps in the time of trial. "When thou passest through the waters I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned, neither shall the flame kindle upon thee." He hath said, "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee. So we may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me."

We are kept by the resurrection power of Christ. He said He had power to lay down His life and to take it up again. He did take it up again, and He is alive forevermore. And because He lives, we, too, shall live. Best of all, the Christ who on Calvary was "lifted up, that whosoever believeth might not perish, but have eternal life," is coming again. Blessed hope! He is coming for His own; coming as He said He would do to take us to be forever with Him in that place He is now preparing for us; coming to take us to dwell forever in that land where there is no need of sun, because the Lamb is the light thereof.

Oh! Thou, Saviour of our souls, we have seen Thee dying that we might live forevermore. Now we see the keeping day by day. We know Thy grace is all-sufficient; we know Thy strength is perfect in our weakness. We know Thou art able to keep that which we have committed unto Thee against that day. Thou art our Shepherd, keep us unto the end. Keep us in Thy hand until Thou dost come to take us to that place Thou hast prepared for us, and we shall enter in through the gates into the city.

MINNIE LOHR.

Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

Most of us begin a new year with a hope or determination that it shall be a better year and a happier one than the preceding; but so often come to the close of the year disappointed and discouraged. When we review the past, see how little we have done for Jesus and for the sake of humanity, we can but feel ashamed of ourselves as unprofitable servants.

What is the secret of a happy new year? The first thing we must realize is that true happiness does not consist of material things. We may have wealth in abundance and then not be happy. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." Jesus tells us how to be happy in Matt. 5:1-12. So different from the world's idea of happiness! To so many people, this world's goods are a hindrance to growth in grace, while God intends that it should be a help. So, as God prospers us, let us not forget that the earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof; that we are only stewards, and will have to give an account of the things intrusted to us.

May we begin this new year by applying our hearts unto wisdom. The wisest thing we can do is to dedicate ourselves, our time, our means, all the year to God, who has the power to make us happy. Make a full surrender and give Him our best through Christian service.

In the home, where love and happiness should rule, where we entertain our friends by giving them our best, may we not forget our truest and dearest friend, Jesus, who is longing to be entertained as our most loved and welcome guest. In the Church, that is the next place to the home, where we can meet as brothers and sisters to give thanks for God's great love and care. May we come in love and unity, with one accord, and one purpose—that of serving Him by winning souls as a testimony of our love for Him, who has done so much for us. Oh! at such a cost to God are we permitted to be called His children.

Now, then, if we are heirs of God, and joint heirs with Jesus Christ, we have the secret for a happy year. May we, like Paul, "forget the things that are behind," and let our prayers be, "Dear Lord, make me a better man or woman, that this year may be a beginning in my life for greater and better service for Thee."

God has the power to take these old soiled lives of ours and present them new and beautiful before a throne of grace. The year 1925 has wonderful possibilities for those who will give God a chance to walk, talk, and work with them. In so doing, they may attain the highest degree of happiness, through Christian service.

The key to a happy new year.

MRS. R. J. NEWTON.

NEED OF NATION-WIDE EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN.

By F. W. Heckelman.

Is the time ripe for a nation-wide evangelistic campaign? For various reasons we say emphatically, yes; because—

First, Japan is passing through a reactionary period following the World War. Her accumulated wealth has largely disappeared on account of extravagance and the appalling losses at the center of the empire due to the earthquake and fire; hence, the times are hard—prices are high, and on account of the luxury tax and the depreciation of the yen will go higher. Moreover, the agrarian and labor circles are manifesting much discontent, which is likely to increase.

Again, there are certain disintegrating forces at work in the nation due to various things, among which are the failure to realize the highest from the World War, many still thinking Christianity failed during the war. The thought is that the war accentuated democracy, but failed there; that some of the European governments, though in form may seem to be democratic or even revolutionary, are really less democratic than before the war; that they are in the hands of practical dictators, whether of the "right" or "left"; and that others are helpless in the face of overwhelming political and economic problems.

Then as to Japan, there has been a large infiltration of undigested socialistic, bolshevistic, and revolutionary ideas. The Japanese government seems to feel this; in any case, the military cast must feel it, for witness the attempt to choke it to death in the strangling of Osugi. Now, we are convinced that these radical social ideas in the political life cannot be choked out in that way; that they must be Christianized, as Erskine has well said in a recent article on the "Christianization of Japanese Loyalty."

These disintegrating forces are being felt in all walks of life, and, as is natural in the family, and especially among the young life of the nation, who are to be the leaders of tomorrow.

Moreover, that there are revolutionary forces at work in the nation is also manifested. The in-rush of so-called "dangerous thoughts"—and the national leaders having no good substitute for them—has greatly affected the heart of young Japan. Marxism, Bolshevism, French and Russian radical literature, and novels with an appeal to free love and lust; the consumption of literature without Christian backing; radical scientific literature not grounded in a true psychology—these are undermining the moral and social moorings. National attempts to arrest these forces have been weak and not constructive. Instead, there has been an appeal to repression and an emphasis on militarism. A Japanese leader has said that there will be a revolution in ten years unless present tendencies are brought to a halt by the Christian dynamic. The attack on the crown prince must not be taken too lightly, and the increasing number of robbers and revolutionists in prisons is significant.

Again there are isolating forces at work. These began with the taking of, and the repressive measures exercised in Korea; with the "twenty-one demands" upon China; the giving up of the alliance with Great Britain, and the extreme emphasis upon militarism and national ambition, until the Washington conference arrested these for the time being. But the most humiliating and harmful isolating force is the recent exclusion act of our American government. Nothing has so damaged the prestige of this proud, ambitious, forward-looking, progressive people as this needlessly unfair and unchristian legislation. The great quake and the fire terrifically tested the very heart of the nation, but the exclusion legislation has brought the nation to its very knees. The blow was a staggering one to the best national leaders. One of the national dangers is that because of the apparent failure of the conservative leaders the future of the nation will be in the hands of radicals. This calls for a restraining force which only Christianity can supply, and emphasizes the need of a nation-wide Christian campaign.—Japan Evangelist, Tokyo.

Evergreen plants are moved at such times as root growth is most likely to take place rapidly. They must be moved with a "ball" of earth about the roots. The time for transplanting begins just as deciduous plants are coming into leaf, continuing for a month, or until growth of the evergreen is well started, and again in late summer or fall after fall rains begin until about a month before it is cold enough to freeze the ground at night.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The Illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the Number and prices.

TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Minion Bold-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4 7-8x 7 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

India Paper Edition, Size 4 7-8x7 Inches, 1 1-10 Inches Thick.

2152X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$6.00

Bourgeois Type, Size 5 3-8x8 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2167—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.00

2172—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.50

India Paper Edition, Only 1 1-8 Inches Thick.

2172X—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$8.50

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3¾x2⅝ inches, and 1 inch thick; with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black.

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations. Special book for Sunday Schools 95c

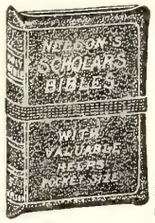
Ruby Type, Size 3¾x2⅝ Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps $2.50

Minion Type, Pocket Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ inches Thick.

With 32 full-colored illustrations; also 25 outline maps through the text and 12 colored maps.

133—Bound in cloth, round corners, red edges, title stamped on side in pure gold $1.60



135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 15-16 of an Inch Thick.

135X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.75

Minion Black-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4¾x 7 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick.

Printed from clear, large, black-face type, 32 full-page illustrations in Sepia and colors, 4,000 Questions and Answers, Harmony of the Gospels, How to Study the Sunday School Lesson, 25 outline Maps, 12 full-page colored Maps.

4152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold.....$3.25

TEXT BIBLES—AMERICAN STANDARD VERSION.

Printed from Easy-Reading Type, on Good Bible Paper, for Sunday School and Church Use.

Minion Type, Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick, 25 Outline Maps, Bound in Black.

101—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, title stamped on back in pure gold..$1.10

112—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title on back in pure gold $2.75

India Paper Edition, Only ⅞-Inch Thick.

112X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

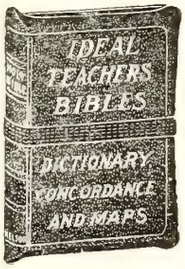
Reference and Text Bibles also in minion, brevier, bourgeois, long primer, pica and English type.

Thumb index cut on edge, 50c extra; name printed on any Bible in gold, 40c extra; extra wording, 40c per line.

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (v vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3-8x 8 1-2 Inches and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.



Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red;other parts of the book are printed in black. With concise Bible dictionary, combined concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.75

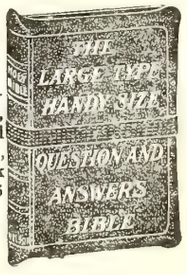
RED LETTER EDITION

With all the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.



1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands, title stamped on side and back in pure gold $3.25

Any of the above Bibles sent post paid. Address

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street, - - - Richmond, Va.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

Forward Movement Receipts.

October	$3,479.85
November	3,175.66
December	3,610.67

We cannot stress too emphatically the necessity of the following matters:

(a) The payment of subscriptions now due.

(b) Making at least partial payment on subscriptions in arrears, and designating time when the balance may reasonably be expected.

(c) If no payment can be made just now, please write and tell us that it is your intention to make good your subscription as soon as possible.

(d) That if you have completed your subscription, kindly sign a "continuation annual pledge," so that the work be not retrenched and crippled. It may mean sacrifice, but we must not lessen our work. Send in your card today and save us writing you again.

From One Day's Mail.

"I know the Forward Movement has been a wonderful help to the cause, and wish I might be able to do more." Indiana.

"It will be possible for me to send $100 about March 1st, and the rest about August 1st. Am sorry conditions have been such I could not pay it when it came due." Illinois.

"You will find incloesd money-order to apply on my pledge to the Forward Movement. I hope to complete the obligation later." New York.

"I am inclosing check for our pledge. I am very glad that we have been able to do a little toward the work." New Hampshire.

"It is next to impossible for me to meet this obligation for some months yet. I hope the Lord will prosper me during this year, as I very much want to meet this obligation." Ohio.

"Now, about the payment of my subscription: I hope to reach that about April or May." Indiana.

"Inclosed you will find check for the remainder of my Forward Movement pledge. I am not all caught up yet from my long, enforced illness. I am glad to pay this, even a year late." New York.

It has been this kind of loyalty and co-operation that has made the Forward Movement a great success. What a difference in spirit these are from some that seem to use every possible excuse to get rid of paying the obligation the Church received from them in good faith.

Taking Responsibility.

Dr. M. E. Melvin, Nashville, Tenn., president of the United Stewardship Council of Churches of Christ in America, declared at the stewardship conference at Louisville last month—

"That the tendency of modern life is to paralyze the sense of personal responsibility. Today, one-third of the members of the Church are carrying all the load, and the other two-thirds are taking a joy-ride.

"This indifference in the Church is due largely to the measuring of duty in the terms of groups. Business organizations and corporations have led to this tendency. The object of the stewardship movement in America is to teach personal accountability and individual responsibility to the Church.

"History shows that the Church, during periods of prosperity, has always grown weak and flabby. According to predictions, we are in for an unparalleled era of prosperity, and the stewardship revival stands in line to make every man, woman and child accountable to the Church in time, talents, money, energy."

Dayton, Ohio. W. H. DENISON, Sec'y.

STEWARDSHIP AND THE BIBLE.

(For reference and study.)

(1 Pet. 4:10.) According as each hath received a gift, ministering it among yourselves, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God.

(Luke 16:10-13.) He that is faithful in a very little is faithful also in much; and he that is unrighteous in a very little is unrighteous also in much. If, therefore, ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches? And if ye have not been faithful in that which is another's, who will give you that which is your own? No servant can serve two masters, for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will hold to one and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon.

(Psa. 1.) Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the wicked, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scoffers; but his delight is in the law of Jehovah, and on his law doth he meditate day and night. And he shall be like a tree planted by the streams of water, that bringeth forth its fruit in its season, whose leaf also doth not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper. The wicked are not so, but are like the chaff which the wind driveth away. Therefore, the wicked shall not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous, for Jehovah knoweth the way of the righteous; but the way of the wicked shall perish.

Jesus and Stewardship.

In the synagogue, Jesus heard the solemn truths of God's regal ownership: "In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth" (Gen. 1:1). "The earth is Jehovah's, and the fullness thereof" (Psa. 24:1). "Every beast of the forest is mine . . . the cattle . . . the birds . . ." (Psa. 50:10-12). "The silver is mine, and the gold . . ." (Hag. 2:8). "All souls are mine" (Ezek. 18:4). He learned, too, of man's authority and responsibility and of the sure rewards of faithful stewardship: "Let them have dominion over . . . all the earth . . ." (Gen. 1:26:30).

"What is man? Thou hast made him but little lower than God. Thou madest him to have dominion. Thou hast put all things under his feet" (Psa. 8:3-9).

"It is He that giveth thee power to get wealth" (Deut. 8:18). "The tithe . . . is Jehovah's" (Lev. 27:30-34).

"Blessed is the man. He shall be like a tree" (Psa. 1:1-6).

"No good thing shall be withheld from them that walk uprightly" (Psa. 84:11).

"Honor Jehovah with thy substance. So shall thy barns be filled" (Prov. 3:9-10).

"Will a man rob God? yet ye rob me . . . Bring ye the whole tithe . . . and prove me . ." (Mal. 3:8-10).

"Beware, lest thou forget Jehovah, thy God . . . and . . . say in thine heart, My power and the might of mine hand . . ." (Deut. 8:11-20). Often at Mary's knee and at Joseph's family altar, Jesus doubtless listened to the story of faithful Abraham, of Abel's meek obedience, of Dreamer Joseph's integrity, of Moses' great decision, of Joshua's fidelity, of Samuel's unselfish patriotism, of David's princely loyalty, of Elijah's unflinching courage, of Daniel's long life of rectitude and piety, of Mordecai's dogged determination, and Esther's queenly daring; and of many a national hero whose name has perished from history, but "Who, through faith, subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the power of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, from weakness were made strong, waxed mighty in war, turned to flight armies of aliens." All these were stewards of a lofty quality.

So Jesus goes forth to His ministry to give the world a new and still broader conception of stewardship than "the fathers" had given Him. We get it in the Golden Rule, the good Samaritan, the talents, in "Consider the lilies," "Seek ye first the kingdom . . . and all . . . shall be added; "It is more blessed to give than to receive"; in the widow's mite, "These ought yet to have done"; "Render unto Caesar . . . and unto God."

We find it in His promises: "No man hath left house . . . or lands, for my sake, and for the gospel's sake, but he shall receive a hundredfold." Lands? Yes! with trouble enough, but with "life." We hear it in His warnings: "Be not anxious . . . No man can serve two masters." "He that is faithful in little, be faithful in much." "Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the . . . Pharisees, ye cannot enter the kingdom"; "Watch"; "When the Son of Man shall come in His glory" he shall judge them according to their stewardship. The 'rich fool" who might have served man and God with countless stores, and the "rich young ruler" who was steward of vast treasure, time and talent, but made the "great refusal," both sink in pitiful oblivion.—Dr. L. E. Lovejoy, in Stewardship for All of Life.

MISSIONARY-STEWARDSHIP INSTITUTE.

While in the South, after attending the quadrennial meeting of the Federal Council of Churches at Atlanta, Ga., Dr. W. P. Minton, secretary of foreign missions, and Dr. W. H. Denison, secretary of stewardship and promotion, held a combined missionary and stewardship institute for the Alabama Conference at the Wadley Christian Church and Bethlehem College; and one for the Georgia and Alabama Conference, at the Lanett Christian Church, Lanett, Ala. Quite a number of the Churches were represented, several of the pastors were present, and a deep interest was manifested throughout the services.

These men made a long journey to deliver to us the messages that lay heaviest on their hearts and that engage their supremest attention.

On the evening of December 9th, Drs. Denison and Minton gave addresses at the college auditorium, which were very interesting and instructive to the students and others who were present. On the morning of December 10th, Dr. Minton addressed the pupils of the public school and Dr. Denison gave an address to the students at Bethlehem College. Three institute meetings were held at the Wadley Church the same day, both speakers presenting in a very efficient way their respective lines of work.

Dr. Minton, in his most forceful way, presented our missionary task in Japan and Porto Rico. In Porto Rico we have five missionaries, namely: Rev. and Mrs. D. P. Barrett, Miss Olive G. Williams, and Mr. and Mrs. Bruce W. Morton. There are five main stations and twelve outposts. Our field is on the southern coast about thirty-five miles long and five to seven miles wide. The Christian Church is responsible for seventy thousand souls in this field.

We have ten missionaries in Japan, namely: Rev. and Mrs. A. D. Woodworth, D. D., Rev. and Mrs. E. C. Fry, D. D., Rev. and Mrs. C. P. Garman, Rev. and Mrs. Wm. Q. McKnight, Miss Martha R. Stacy, and Miss Angie Crew. We have sixteen pastors and several teachers. We are directly responsible for a million souls in Japan. He emphasized the fact that we, as members of the Christian Church, should have a genuine interest in all our missionary undertakings, expressing this interest in earnest prayer for the work, in giving financially for its support, and, if needs be, offer our lives to its service.

Dr. Denison, the man who knows his subject, who is full of his subject, and who knows how to present his subject, spoke, in the main, on the "Larger Stewardship," of personality, talents, calling, influence, opportunity, time and substance. The stewardship of personality involves a consciousness and acknowledgment of God's ownership and the making the most of oneself. The stewardship of talents embraces life's resources and powers. Recognizing the stewardship of calling, we will ask ourselves the question, "Is this the thing God wants me to do?" The stewardship of influence will lead us to feel that we are our brother's keeper; "that none of us liveth to himself."

In the text "As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good toward all men, especially toward them who are of the household of faith," is set forth the stewardship of opportunity. Time and life are alike given us of God to use as His stewards for Him. We are also taught to honor the Lord with our substance and with the first fruits of our increase. The speaker said, "When we recognized our partnership with God in all our living, tithing and giving, and used the every-member canvass method of raising money, we had solved the problem of Church finance."

The meetings at Lanett were as equally helpful, and while the attendance through the two institutes was as well as we expected, yet our one deep regret is that there were not more folks out to hear these much-needed, interesting and instructive messages. It was surely a treat of a lifetime to have these brethren with us in our work in these extreme Southern conferences. A rare opportunity made use of by two few of our folks has passed by, but the good seed sown will continue to grow and bring forth a harvest not many years hence.

We certainly appreciate their every effort and the good impression they had of Bethlehem College as expressed in the words of Dr. Minton and concurred in by Dr. Denison: "I cannot tell you how encouraging it is to me to think of the splendid group of young people you have gathered about you and of the possibilities of Bethlehem College in the future"; and he added, "May the Lord bless you in the excellent service you are rendering both to the young people and to the denomination." A cordial invitation is extended to both these brethren to be with us again, and especially do we request that Dr. W. H. Denison be given a place on the program of our next Chautauqua and School of Methods, to be held at Bethlehem College in August, to discuss the question of stewardship from the Bible standpoint, as I feel that this is the biggest thing needed in our Southern work. Brethren from the North, remember that you are welcome, thrice welcome, to Bethlehem College and our Southern work.

S. L. BEOUGHER.

Wadley, Ala.

MEETING OF WOMAN'S BOARD.

The Woman's Board of the Southern Christian Convention met in Burlington Christian Church November 14, 1924, at the call of the president, with the following members present: Mesdames W. H. Carroll, J. A. Williams, W. T. Walters, and C. H. Rowland. Drs. J. O. Atkinson and G. O. Lankford were present, and were asked to seats as deliberative members. Dr. Lankford led in a devotional service, reading from Isaiah 35.

1. Mrs. Boyd Richard's resignation was accepted, and Miss Gertrude Browne was elected superintendent of literature and mite-boxes.

2. Mesdames Sellars and Carroll appointed to audit treasurer books.

3. Voted that in 1925 and each alternate year thereafter the secretary of the Woman's Board of the S. C. C. instruct presidents of various Conference boards to elect delegates to Woman's Missionary Conference that meets in May following.

4. Mrs. Williams was to write to the presidents of various woman's conferences to push life membership in societies.

5. Treasurer's books showed $8,224.08 for the China fund, same to be transferred to Japan field.

6. Secretary instructed to write Miss Coghill as to when her resignation was dated.

7. Voted to pay Mrs. Patton's expenses to the Valley Conference.

8. Voted to employ Miss Gertrude Browne as corresponding secretary of our Convention. Beginning January 1, 1925, that we pay one-half of her salary; that her work be directed by Dr. Atkinson, Mrs. Carroll and Mrs. Rowland, and that she make monthly reports to Mrs. Carroll.

9. Mrs. Carroll instructed to procure stationery for board members, getting 2,500 sheets of paper and 1,200 envelopes.

10. Voted that corresponding secretary prepare, for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, monthly programs for societies.

11. Moved that Miss Browne, Mrs. Carroll and Mrs. Rowland be a committee to arrange programs for district rallies.

12. Carried that traveling expenses of board be allowed.

13. Voted that all checks drawn by our treasurer shall be countersigned by president.

14. Moved and carried that the secretary write and thank the ladies of the Burlington Aid Society for the lunch provided them.

15. Voted that we adjourn to meet on or before August 1, 1925, at the call of the president.

MRS. W. H. CARROLL, President.
MRS. C. H. ROWLAND, Secretary.

DISTRICT MISSIONARY RALLY.

(Suggested Program.)

Theme—"One Head, one Body, one Blood."
Call to Order by Superintendent.
Devotional.
Song—"The Church's One Foundation."
Scripture—Col. 1:13-20; 1 Cor. 12:12-20; Acts 17:24.
Prayer—(a) That Christian fellowship and the spirit of co-operation may increase and prevail; (b) that each member of the body may realize its own responsibility; (c) that our missionaries in the field may have health and courage for their task, and that other missionaries may be reared amongst us; (d) that our Mission Board may have wisdom and courage for their task.
Enrollment of and Reports from Societies.
Superintendent's Message.
Messages from Missionaries.
Special Music.
Appointment of Committees.
Address.
Special Offering.
Adjourn for Lunch.

Afternoon Session.

Call to Order by Superintendent.
Devotional Service.
Open Discussion:
Cradle Roll—By .....
Willing Workers—By .....
Young People—By .....
Woman's Societies—By .....
(In this discussion, problems and suggestions are requested.)
Election of Officers.
Special Music.
Plans for Coming Year.
Brief Play, Pageant, or Demonstration. (Suggested, "The First Church Missionary Society," leaflet.)

The above is submitted as a tentative program for the Woman's Missionary rallies in the various districts this spring. Suggestions will be appreciated.

MRS. C. H. ROWLAND,
MISS GERTRUDE BROWNE,
J. O. ATKINSON,
Committee.

INVESTMENT IN PUBLIC HEALTH.

North Carolina now ranks sixth among the States in the amount of money expended in the protection and promotion of the health of its people. This State has the enviable distinction of having established the first county health department in the United States. It now stands second in the number of such agencies, Ohio having the honor of first place. In view of the money and energy that is being spent in the State, it is pertinent to review the results that are being achieved.

In 1922, the general death rate of the State was 11.6 per thousand of population, as compared with a rate of 11.9 for the registration area. This showed a slight increase in both the State and the registration area, as compared with the previous year. The birth rate for the State for the same period was 30.9 per thousand of population, while for the registration area the rate was 22.3 per thousand. This was a decrease of 3.4 per thousand for the State, and 2.1 per thousand for the registration area.

In 1923 the death rate for the registration area increased, moving up to 12.3 per thousand of population. The death rate of the State remained the same as the previous year, 11.6. Birth rates were generally lower, being one per thousand of population less in the registration area than for the previous year. In the State, the birth rate was 30.0, or 0.9 per thousand less than for the previous year. For the two years, the State again maintained its lead of the highest birth rate in the Union.

The system of protected water supplies, the enforcement of sanitary laws, and the large number of citizens taking the typhoid vaccine, have combined to bring the death rate from typhoid fever to the lowest point in the history of the State, the rate for 1923 being 9.9 per 100,000 of population. The tuberculosis rate continues to show a gratifying decrease, the death rate for 1923 being 94.7 per 100,000 of population, a reduction of more than one-half in ten years.—N. C. State Board of Health.

HELP NEEDED.

The East LaGrange Christian Church is making a desperate effort to raise $1,550.00 during 1925. This will pay our building debt off in full. Any help will be highly appreciated. You may pay your subscription either weekly or monthly. Send all subscriptions and money to W. M. Crowder, 230 Spring Street, LaGrange, Ga.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

February 1, 1925.

Subject: "The Vine and the Branches."

Golden Text: "He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same beareth much fruit."—John 15:5.

Lesson: John 15:1-27.
Devotional Reading: Psa. 119:9-16.

Jesus got ideas for sermons every where and from every thing. This "talk" on the Vine and the branches is an example. He took a simple thing like a vine. It may have been suggested by the cup, the fruit of the vine, or by a vine that had grown up the side of the wall and had put its tender tendrils through the window into the room, or by vines growing along the path which they trod on the way to the garden, or even by the odor of the vines which the vine-dressers were burning. However the suggestion came, Jesus took it and made it the basis of an immortal talk. Ye call me Rabbi, or Master, or Teacher, and ye do well, for such I am.

Every Christian ought to read this chapter at least once a month, for it is fundamental to Christian living. And as he reads he ought to become a doer also, for unless he does he deceives himself. Dwight L. Moody used to write in the fly-leaf of every Bible he got these words, "This Book will keep you from sin or sin will keep you from this Book." These words apply with special force to this chapter. He who reads these words and lives them will keep from sin; and sin will keep you from reading and living these words.

Jesus asserts in the first place that the relation between a disciple or a Christian and Himself can best be expressed in terms of the relation that exists between the vine and the branches. Christianity is not a set of creeds, although it may have creeds. Neither is it necessarily good works, although it issues in good works. Christianity, or rather Christian living, is a matter of intimate personal relationship between Christ and the believer. Just as the branches are bound to the vine and derive their life from the vine, just so is a Christian to be bound to the true Vine, Christ Himself, and to derive his life from the spirit of Christ flowing through his life. This view of Christianity gives discipleship a dignity and meaning that is at once satisfying and challenging.

Jesus intimates and practically asserts that God needs every branch of the vine. He expects fruitage from the vine as a whole by fruitage from the individual parts of the vine. Therefore, if a branch does not bear fruit, it is cut off and cast away and men gather them and burn them. A bad branch must not encumber the good branches. But if the branch is good and bears fruit, the husbandman, the Father, prunes it and trains it so that it may bring forth more fruit. It is significant that Jesus implies progress in fruit-bearing. He uses the words "fruit," "more fruit," and "much fruit." The Christian can always be more. The reward of bearing fruit is the capacity to bear more fruit. Let no Christian think that it is enough to be merely good; he must strive to become the best that it is possible for him to become.

Jesus announces a truth that every one knows. He says that the branch cannot bear fruit of itself. It is only as it is in vital, life-union with the vine that it can bear fruit. We know that. But we often forget it. May it not be that the reason we do not bear more fruit or even fruit, is the fact that we are apart from the Vine. Fruit-bearing depends upon abiding relationships. Apart from Christ, we can do nothing.

But the law has another side. He that abides in Christ shall bear fruit. The actual presence of Christ's life in our lives is a guarantee of fruit-bearing. And the more of His spirit we have, the more fruit we shall bear; and the more fruit we bear, the more God is glorified. The fact of the matter, Jesus says, is that we are ordained or set apart for that very purpose—fruit-bearing—and herein is the Father glorified that we bear much fruit, the kind of fruit that abides.

Just as fruit-bearing depends upon abiding, just so does abiding depend upon obeying. If we keep the commandments we shall abide. He that hath set his face toward Jesus Christ and who makes it his dominant purpose to serve Him, is abiding in Him. Abiding is not wholly a matter of feeling, and we are not to depend upon feeling. But if we abide we shall have the joy that remains, and we shall have it in a way that is full to the overflowing.

Abiding depends upon obeying. And obeying is a matter not of law, but of love. If we keep His commandments we shall abide in His love. "This is my commandment," said Jesus, "that ye love one another."

Jesus transfers the figure at the end. The central fact in Christian discipleship is friendship. He calls us not servants, but friends, and as His friends we are to go forth and bring forth fruit in life—the embodiment of His character in our character and the expression of His spirit in our conduct.

Fruitful Thoughts on Fruit-Bearing.

1. God works through the spirit of Jesus Christ in man.
2. Fruitlessness is uselessness in the Christian life.
3. Discipline helps just as pruning stimulates fruit-bearing.
4. The Christian must abide, i. e., be at home, in Christ.
5. Christianity is a matter of intimate and vital relationship between man and God through Christ.
6. The fruitful life should be progressive—fruit, more fruit, much fruit.
7. God needs every vine bearing fruit at its best.
8. Abide in Christ is a guarantee of what we need and ask in Christ's name.
9. Obedience brings not only fruitfulness, but joy.
10. Real Christian fruitage abides forever.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

February 1, 1925.

Topic: "Christian Endeavor as an Expression of Friendliness."
(Christian Endeavor Day—Decision Service.)
Scripture Reference: Philip. 2:1-11.

Suggestions.

Have the meeting announced by the Christian Endeavor president or Sunday School superintendent in the regular Sunday School assembly. This may be done by reading a short poem, story, or reading on friendliness or friendship, and announcing that the Christian Endeavor meeting will be a continuation of this subject, and giving the time, place and leader of the meeting.

Plan the meeting so those who attend, but are not members, will decide to join the society. Show them the place of Christian Endeavor in the Church as a means of fellowship for the young people for closer friendship with Christ. Is your society meeting the needs of the young people of the Church and inspiring them to love and serve Christ?

Points for the Leader's Talk.

Christian Endeavor is a means of friendliness first, because of the fellowship with Christ. "If there be any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any bowels and mercies, fulfill ye my joy, that ye be likeminded, having the same love, being of one accord." The members of the society find fellowship with Christ through prayer, praise, song and meditation. It inspires individual love and reverence for Him and at the same time gives a chance for worship of Him with others.

Secondly, a means of friendliness, by association with each other. "Let each esteem other better than themselves. Look not every man on his own things, but every man on the things of others." Planning special meetings, officers working together and doing things in committee meetings, afford a splendid opportunity for co-operation, kindliness, and practicing the Golden Rule.

Third, in working together for others. The Christian Endeavorers who do kind things for less fortunate people, as the Orphanage, missions, poor people, the sick, prisoners, and so forth, learn sympathy, understanding of the needs of others, and the joy of helping. The first Christian Endeavor Society was based on friendliness for others and the desire to promote the cause of Christ.

The leader's talk may be followed by some Endeavorer reading John 13:23, 19:26, and 20:2, the friendship of Christ and John, and this prayer: "O Thou great friend of all the world, we would walk the way of friendly hearts with Thee. Teach us thy way of loving, for we can be true and loyal friends only as we learn of Thee. Make us to know that the glory of love is to give, not to gain. Give us the grace of love that serves and counts no cost. Give us love unshadowed and unmarred by strain of self. Touch Thou our eyes, that we may see the loveliness beneath the unlovely, the beauty beneath the unbeautiful. Make pure our hearts that those we love may be the stronger, finer, truer, for our friendship. Shine through our lives, that every friend of ours may find it easy to be a friend of thine. Love us, our Father, and love through us. In the name of the Master Friend, in whose footsteps we would follow. Amen.

Suggested Hymns.—"What a Friend We Have in Jesus," "O Master, Let Me Walk with Thee," "Lord, Speak to Me, that I May Speak," Jesus, Thou Divine Companion," "God of the Strong, God of the Weak," "He Leadeth Me," "Saviour, Like a Shepherd, Lead Us," "O Love that Will not Let Me Go."

From the "Personal Friendship of Jesus."

We should learn from Jesus that the essential quality in the heart of friendship is not the desire to have friends, but the desire to be a friend; not to get good and help from others, but to impart blessing to others. Many of the sighings for friendship which we have are merely selfish longings, a desire for happiness, for pleasure, for the gratification of the heart, which friends bring. If the desire were to be a friend, to do others good, to serve and to give help, it would be a far more Christ-like longing, and would transform the life and character.

Christian Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

This report closes our books for 1924. Our financial income from January 1st to December 31, 1924, amounted to $24,162.59. We had set our goal for $27,000. We had hoped to raise at least $25,000, but we fell short of what we had hoped to do. This is the first time since we have been in this work that we failed to reach our Thanksgiving goal. We close our year's work a little disappointed because we did not reach what we expected to do. We thought we had done our best, but perhaps we could have done more. We take all the disappointments on our part and thank the Churches, Sunday Schools and friends who have stood by us and have made it possible for us to give one hundred and eight little children a home. While we have our disappointments and discouragements, yet we have much to be thankful for.

While we had much sickness during the first part of the year, we did not have a death in our family during the year. We did not have any serious accidents among our children. The children all did well in school, and stood well in their classes. More than forty joined the Church during the year, so in looking back over the year's work we have much to make us feel good and to rejoice over.

The following has been sent in since our last report: Waverly Christian Church, Waverly, Va., white gifts; United Christian Sunday School, Lynchburg, Va., 16 stockings filled with candy, toys, etc.; Seagrove Church, N. C., 8 cans fruit; J. H. Cates, Burlington, N. C., 1 doz. jars canned apples.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR JANUARY 22, 1925.

Amount brought forward		$23,682.76
Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
North Carolina Conference:
Durham	$ 5.00
N. Clayton, 6 mo.	3.97
First Church, Greensboro	27.25
		36.22
Thanksgiving and Christmas Offerings.
Antioch, Ala.	$ 3.00
First S. S., Norfolk	95.00
Union, Halifax Co., Ea. Va.	10.00
Durham, N. C.	100.00
Baracca Class, Suffolk, Va.	55.00
Shiloh, N. C.	3.00
Greensboro, First Church	20.50
Oak Grove, N. C.	2.00
Christian Temple, Ea. Va.	35.75
Sallie E. Holland, Va.	2.00
Johnson's Grove, Va.	4.00
Burlington Church	100.00
		430.25
Special Offerings.
Citizens Bible Class, Elon, N. C.	$ 3.36
Stella Sharpe	10.00
		13.36
Grand total		$24,162.59

FAITHFULNESS OF MISSIONARIES.

During the week of prayer, observed by the Woman's Missionary Society of Elon College, the above topic was assigned to Mrs. O. W. Johnson, who responded in the following fitting words:

First, we can show our thanks for the courage and brave efforts of our missionaries and missionary enterprise by and through prayer, public and in secret. We are advised by missionaries on the field that nothing aids them more than the outpouring of the hearts of the people at home before a throne of grace in their behalf. We sustain our brave missionaries and we keep our missionary enterprise going first and foremost of all through prayer. Robert E. Speer, the great missionary statesman, says that the greatest single asset and the most needed in the missionary enterprise is prayer. All of us know that the great Hudson Taylor carried forward and developed the Inland China Mission through his faith in God and the work, expressed almost constantly in prayer; that he supported on the field 100 missionaries or more and built up one of the greatest missionary enterprises solely through fervent, consecrated, agonizing prayer. Our missionaries, in returning from the field, often tell us that what they need first and foremost of all is a praying constituency. God hears and answers prayer, and seemingly is moved to mighty results and consequences in behalf of mission work when those at home were interested or willing to pray, pray, pray. This is the first word, as well as the most important, in the missionary enterprise, and is the word that we certainly need to learn and put into practice, not only in our missionary societies, but in our personal and private devotion.

Second: The second best thing we can do to show our thanks for the faith that those display who have gone out to the mission field, is by manifesting a kindly and friendly personal interest in them and in their work. The reason why some of us today here in this society are not on the mission field is because we did not have the saving faith, the prevailing patience and the unflinching courage to dare in our Master's name to carry out His great commission, "Go ye and teach all nations, and, lo! I am with you." Since we ourselves failed in this faith and courage, can we not with some grace and graciousness show, by personal courtesy and kindness, by individual effort and enterprise, that we do appreciate those who have gone out and who are this very day risking their lives and giving them unselfishly in our stead and in our behalf out on the firing line, where the battle is hottest and thickest. We should know personally the names of our missionaries. If this is deemed too great a task, then we should pick out two or three or four of them as chance or acquaintance may direct, and from time to time write them personal letters. Send them personal tokens and remembrances to let them know that we are personally interested in them.

Missionaries frequently say that their hearts grow sick and faint sometimes because the people in missionary societies who publicly profess their interest in missions never show any direct personal and individual interest in them and their efforts. Sisters, let us make a new year's resolution that we will pick one or more names of our missionaries each this year, and from time to time write them a line or send them a personal token of appreciation and love.

Third: Another way we can show our thanks is by our hearty co-operation at home in their behalf in supporting them financially, and by keeping up a live and wide-awake missionary society. The impact of our society with its activity upon the life of the missionary enterprise will mean much. This we can certainly give, and will give, if we are as thankful as we should be for the devoted and unselfish lives who are making our missionary enterprise worth while and operative in building up on earth the kingdom of our Lord and His Christ.

The books are still open for subscription to THE SUN.

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

These Pens are of standard make, and will give good service. If you are in need of a Fountain Pen, order from us.
MEN'S PENS ..... $2.00 LADIES' PENS $2.00
Postage paid, and Pens guaranteed by the manufacturer.

LIMITED COMBINATION OFFER.—To a new subscriber, or for renewal (if not in arrears), $3.25, either Gentleman's or Lady's Pen, with guarantee of manufacturer. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 EAST BROAD STREET, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Mission Study Books.

Official List for 1924-1925.

ORDER BY TITLE OF BOOK.

FOR ADULT CLASSES.

For Home Mission Classes:
"The Romance of Home Missions," by S. L. Morris, D. D.. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... $ .75

For Foreign Mission Classes:
"Ming Kwong—the City of Morning Light," by Mary Ninde Gamewell. Paper, 50c; cloth .75
"In China," by H. F. Williams, D. D. ..... .25

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

For Intermediate Home Mission Classes:
"The Land of All Nations," by Margaret F. Seelbach. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... .75

For Intermediate Foreign Mission Classes:
"China's Real Revolution," by Paul Hutchinson. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... .75

For Junior Foreign Mission Classes:
"Chinese Lanterns," by Minna McEwen Meyer. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... .75

LEADERS' HELPS.

Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Adult Classes) ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Young People's Classes) ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Land of All Nations" ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Ming Kwong" ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "China's Real Revolution" .. .15
Leaders' Helps for "Chinese Lanterns" ..... .15

Send all orders to—

THE CHRISTIAN SUN,
1536 East Broad Street - - Richmond, Virginia.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

HEAVEN IS LOOKING.

"Study to show thyself approved of God a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."

Are you considering some shady little transaction by which you might make some easy money? The longer you consider it, the weaker your scruples may grow against it.

But what would be the result if you should come under the hand of the law and have to pay the penalty for its infraction?

Would the money you could make recompense you for serving a prison sentence? Would that illegal gain pay you for the suspicion which you would be placed under by every person with whom you came in future contact?

Suppose you do get away with your plans, can you respect yourself? If you were successful in carrying out your criminal intentions, could you ease your conscience?

All you could make would never assure you that your conscience would not some time suddenly wake up and lead you the life of the damned. Are you not better off as you are, without much of the world's goods but with the respect of all, than you would be with a bank account acquired dishonestly? (Copyright, 1924, International Feature Service, Inc.)

Prayer.—Dear Lord, at the beginning of another week, we look to Thee that we may be strong in faith and loyal to Thee, and forsaking all else but Thee, cling to Thee forever. Amen.

TUESDAY.

HASTENING THE COMING OF THE LORD.

"What manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy living and godliness, looking for and hastening unto the coming of the Lord."—2 Peter 3: 11-12.

Do we wish things were better? Do we wish for everybody to be righteous? Do we wonder why the Lord does not stop evil and sin and cause His will to be done?

How soon the millennium would come if the good things people intend to do tomorrow were only done today! Let us do our part. There is no joy known to human hearts so glorious, so imperative, as the joy of a heart in the gladness of finding his efforts for good crowned by the achievement of something better. The supreme joys of life come of a great law. It is to do good, abide in Christ, and bring forth fruit, and then comes the joy of your hopes.

Prayer.—Our Father, touch us with the flame of the Holy Spirit to say, "Here am I, send me," and enable us to do now all the noble things possible of the promptings of the Holy Spirit. In His name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

POINT IN THE PARABLE OF THE PRODIGAL SON.

Read the entire chapter of Luke 15, and you will notice that Jesus spake three parables to His critics in justification of His acts of eating with publicans and sinners and receiving them. Jesus was friendly to the lost publicans and sinners, for He was seeking them that He might save them.

He, therefore, spoke the parable of the lost coin and the lost sheep, that His critics might be prepared to understand the parable of the lost boy.

In all three of the parables, there is something lost—a coin, a sheep, a boy. Great emphasis is placed upon the seeker in the first two parables, and this critic could not refuse to commend the dilligent seeking of the woman for the coin, and the man for the sheep.

Then, as Jesus told the story of the lost boy, they were prepared to see that a man is worth more than a piece of money or a sheep. They must have seen that the lost boy, too, ought to have had a seeker. That there was no one in the parable searching for him must have been a great surprise to the Pharisees. By intentionally omitting this, Jesus made it so emphatic, by the very omission, that they could see that He was justified in His acts in seeking the lost.

Their faces must have turned red as He spoke of the elder boy, for He knew all the time where his younger brother was and how he was living, yet he never made a single effort to seek him and bring him home again.

Prayer.—That we may not think and seek more for things than we do for lost men and women.—T. E. White.

THURSDAY.

GOD'S WONDERFUL LOVE FOR US.

"For God so loved the world."—John 3:16-21.

Paul speaks of "the breadth and length and depth and height" of God's love. "God so loved the world." That is the breadth of it. "That He gave His only begotten Son"; that is the length of it. "That whosoever believeth in Him should not perish"; that is the depth of it. "But have everlasting life"; that is the height of it. But even after we have given the passion of the divine this content of mere words, it remains that "the love of God passeth knowledge."

The mine has no bottom; the storehouse is inexhaustible. No writer has ever done the theme justice; no preacher has ever been eloquent enough to depict it. No life save that of Christ has ever succeeded in fully living it. Innumerable men and women through the ages have tried in divers ways to tell the world just how much God loves, but while some have done better than others, all have fallen far short of the desired goal. The best anybody can do is to say, "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son." Like a child strolling on the seashore picking up here and there a pretty shell or a fancy pebble, we wander through life while the great ocean of God's love lies undiscovered all about us.

"To tell the love of God alone
Would drain the ocean dry;
Nor would the scroll contain the whole,
Though stretched from sky to sky."

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

FRIDAY.

THE SECRET OF PEACE.

"For He is our peace."—Eph. 2:13-19.

Peace is life's greatest boon. The soul is tossed upon an ocean of desires. A thousand restless aims distract it. Amid this clamor of passions, how shall it find the key to the secret of fullness of satisfaction, quiet of soul-peace? It cannot be found in the ways the worldly are striving for it.

True peace can only be found in the quest for God. In "searching the Scriptures," we find those living truths which quench our fiery moods. "Great peace have they who love Thy law." "Christ is our Peace." Sin is the real enemy that assails us. It separates us from God, and we are as the earth bereft of its sun. "But now, in Christ Jesus, ye who some time were far off, are made nigh by the blood of Jesus." Through Christ, God looks upon us again in love, and our souls have "the peace that passeth all understanding."

This is the true, the deep, the only secret of peace. When once we have gained this priceless boon, how shall we keep it? By faith in divine guidance. "Show me the way in which I should walk." In the devious, danger-beset paths, we know not when we may fall, unless our hand is held in that of a loving Heavenly Father. It must be found by doing the will of God. It is well to seek peace by retirement, meditation and prayer. We are not made to lead cloistered lives. We are to go forth amid the world's trials, temptations and needs to help to save it. Only by imparting our peace to careworn souls, can we keep it alive in our own hearts.

Do this, and be lifted up to the mountain-tops of communion with God and Christ always.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

SATURDAY.

HIDING FROM SIN.

"They heard the voice of the Lord, walking in the garden . . . and the man and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the Lord God amongst the trees."—Gen. 3:8-9.

This is the record of the first blush of sin and a concealment from it. Sin is so common today that it is difficult to realize that there was a time of innocence, yet in the beginning man enjoyed unclouded communion with his Creator. But in an hour of temptation, disobedience unclothed the conscience, and the garment of innocence was lost. The fig-leaf aprons were their first vain efforts to hiding, but as God approached they found that this was not sufficient, so they sought the shelter of the trees; but even here, God followed them with mingled words of justice and love.

Man was made for fellowship with God. Sin breaks that fellowship. God seeks to restore it. The whole theme of the gospel is the cry of a loving parent looking for his lost children to guide him through the darker depths of judgment to the glorious heights of an eternal salvation. "Why will ye die?" "As I live, saith the Lord, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked."

Prayer.—Our Father, bring us to realize more clearly how much Thou dost love us. Forbid that we shall sin or do wrong, but endow us with divine gentleness of spirit. In His name we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE DAY WHICH THE LORD MADE.

"This is the day which the Lord made; we will rejoice and be glad in it."—Psa. 118-221.

Sunday is a repetition of the solemn truth, "The Lord is risen." It brings to the world the glad tidings of the victory of the Lord, and it is a time for thanking God for the victory we have over sin, or either it is a glorious opportunity to seek and achieve that victory.

"Hail, festal day! for ever more ador'd;
God conquer'd hell, and upward soar'd."

Prayer.—Our Father, Lord Jesus, shine now into our hearts today and forever. Cheer our hearts and give us boundless hope for every day of the future, and forbid that we should desecrate Thy day in any way; and at last may we awake satisfied in His likeness. In His name we ask it. Amen.

The number of words found in old English literature does not exceed 30,000, while the new dictionaries today have listed more than 400,000, mostly of foreign origin. It is strange to note, however, that most authors use mainly English words. Shakespeare used 90 per cent, and the English Bible contains 94 per cent.

A Church wedding does not constitute full legal marriage in Germany. It is preceded by a ceremony at the office of the justice of peace.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

KIDDIES:

Next week look out for a story about an orphan Crow! Who ever heard of such a thing? But it is the truth—this Crow was a real orphan; some one had killed his father and his mother. Yes, sir-ee! Oh, it was terrible! Look out for the story, Kiddies. I hope you will write me how you like it, too. Good-by now.

YOUR EDITOR.

GOD'S WAY.

When God wants an important thing done in this world, or a wrong righted, He goes about it in a very singular way. He doesn't release his thunderbolts or stir up his earthquakes. He simply has a tiny, helpless baby born, perhaps in a very obscure home, perhaps of a very humble mother. And He puts the idea or purpose into a mother's heart. And she puts it in the baby's mind, and then—God waits.

The great events of this world are not battles and earthquakes and hurricanes. The great events of this world are babies. They are earthquakes and hurricanes.—Selected.

THE TIGER HUNT.

By Ina E. Lindsley.

When all the grown-ups gather
Around the reading-lamp,
I put some chairs together
And make a hunting-camp.

And then I hunt for tigers
In jungles in the hall,
And where it is the darkest
I very slowly crawl.

But once when I was hunting
I met some fiery eyes;
Though I was after tigers,
They took me by surprise.

I didn't know I shouted
(The grown-ups told me that),
And then I saw my tiger
Was just our old gray cat.

LITTLE DOLLY.

Little Dolly was the youngest child of a clergyman, and was eight years old. She got up the day before Christmas, and finding everybody busy, felt a little neglected and hardly knew what to do with herself. She played with her dolls until she was tired, and then thought she would go to the Church, which she knew was being trimmed for Christmas.

She put on her hat and coat and dressed her doll in a warm shawl and hood and started out and went through the gate down the road. By this time, it was late in the afternoon and getting a little dark. She trudged along until she came to the Church, which was lighted and people busy and chatting within. She went slyly in and let herself into a pew, and after a while fell asleep. When she awoke she was alone, and no lights were in the Church. Fortunately, she knew where the rope was that pulled the bell, and groping her way to it, she gave some loud peals, which soon brought her father and sister, who had been searching the house to find her.

They were all delighted to find her, and she concluded that her adventure was enough for some time to come.

IF AND SUPPOSE.

By Livingston B. Morse.

Does it seem fair that centipedes
Should have a hundred feet
When you and I have only two—
Yet call ourselves complete?
We could run fifty times as fast
And fifty times as far;
We need not ever take the train
Or use the motor car.
But when it came to getting dressed,
A problem we should face,
Just think how dreadful it would be
A hundred shoes to lace!

MINDING.

How do you make him go where you want him?" asked Henry, who had come from the neighbor's yard to see the new goat and cart.

"That's easy. If I pull the right rein, he turns to the right; If I want him to go to the left, I pull the other rein. That's all. He always minds," replied Jimsie.

"And can you teach a goat all that?" asked Uncle Wesley, who came up from the other side.

"Sure," answered Jimsie.

"Queer that boys aren't as smart as goats," said his uncle.

"They're heaps smarter," answered Jimsie, indignantly.

"So?" questioned his uncle. "Seems to me I heard somebody's mother say this morning that her small son never came when she called him, and she didn't know what she was going to do to teach him to mind. Guess she'd like to be able to pull a rein to have her boy go where the rein told him to!"

"Humph!" said Jimsie slowly, "I guess I'll go and do that errand right now." And before Uncle Wesley could answer, the goat team had turned off down the street.—Exchange.

A BUSINESS MAN.

Today my mother gave to me
A bright new penny.
I put it in the bank because
I haven't many.

THE BUSY BEE.

Dear Children, I am to tell you about a nice little girl, called Busy Bee.

Sibyl is her real name; and shall I tell you the reason why we call her Busy Bee? Because she is always busy. She is never idle like some little girls I know; she never whines out in a peevish tone like some little friends of mine: "I haven't got anything to do!"

Our little Busy Bee is quick and clever in all that she does. She gives not trouble to nurse when she gets up in the morning, but helps to dress herself; and as soon as she is dressed, without waiting a moment she says her prayers. Then Bee comes into Mamma's room before her breakfast looking fresh and sweet as a little pink rosebud.

One day I went to see Sibyl's Mamma, and when we had talked a little while, I said: "Where is darling Bee?"

"Oh," said Mamma, "come into the kitchen, and there we shall find Bee busy as ever."

And so we did, for on opening the kitchen door the first thing we saw was our little girl standing by the table with a bowl and spoon, helping cook stir up some sauce for dinner.

Sweet Busy Bee! what a pretty picture she made with her sleeves rolled up and bright, earnest look on her rosy little face.

My darling little Busy Bee, I can see you in the years to come, a grown-up woman, making hearts glad with your cheerful spirit, busy brain and clever fingers.

LAWN MOWERS.

By Robert Palfrey Utter.

The sheep eat grass upon the lawn;
They eat all day from early dawn.
If father owned but three or four,
He'd have no need of any mower.

THE TESTING TREE.

By Daisy D. Stephenson.

When painting time comes round at school, we get our paints and brushes out and fold our hands while monitors pass little water cups about. A bit of paper we must use to test our colors just for fear we get a messy red or blue, and then our painting's mostly smear!

I think the fairies of the frost that paint our autumn trees at night try out their colors at the start to get the tints exactly right.

Just see this maple up the road! It's prettier far than all the rest—gay red and russet, green and gold. They used it for their color test!

THE PUDDLE.

By Ethel Romig Fuller.

I stepped into a puddle,
Not knowing it was there;
My eyes were on the sunset,
My head was in the air.

At first it made me angry
And spoiled the glorious view
Until I saw the puddle had
Its feelings ruffled too.

But when the pool was quiet,
I had a glad surprise,
For all the lovely colors were Reflected in its eyes.

A HOMELESS BOY.

There was once a little boy named Tom, who had not a friend in the world. His father and mother were dead, and he lived with his grandmother, who grumbled very much because he had to live with her, and said he was a great burden. The parish allowed her every week some bread and money, but she said it took more money than that to feed and clothe him. It was not possible, however, for the poor little fellow looked as if he was starved and his clothes were all in rags.

One dull night, when it was raining quite hard, a gentleman passed him, and Tom ran after him and asked him to please give him a penny. The gentleman stopped, and said: "My boy, you are very wet; why don't you go home and get dry and warm?"

" 'Cos Grandma's cross, and don't like me to stay in the house."

The gentleman said: "Come to my home Sunday morning as early as you like and I will see if you can't be made comfortable."

"Yes, sir," said Tom; "I'll come."

The next day was Saturday, and Tom thought he would go to the pump and wash his face. But there were several little boys and girls there, who laughed at him because he was so dirty and ragged, which made him ashamed and he ran away.

Sunday morning, he was awake bright and early, and making himself look as well as he could, started for the gentleman's house, but there was not a window open, so he waited outside until he saw the housemaid, then went to the house, when the gentleman gave him his breakfast and some better clothes and told him to come to his store the next day, where he gave him a situation and helped him along until he became a good and useful man.

MINER—TERRELL.

On Christmas Eve, 1924, Mr. William R. Miner and Miss Laura E. Terrell were married by the writer. They came from Caswell County, N. C., accompanied by a few relatives and friends to witness the ceremony. Mr. Miner is an industrious farmer in his community, a member of Concord Christian Church, and a well-thought-of young man. Likewise, Miss Terrell is very popular among the young people of her acquaintance. She is the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Terrell.

Mr. and Mrs. Miner will make their home in Caswell County, N. C., near the groom's mother's home. May peace and happiness be theirs as long as they both shall live. L. L. WYRICK.

Danville, Va.

SIMMONS—RUDD.

On December 24, 1924, Mr. Roy T. Simmons and Miss Bertha E. Rudd motored here from Caswell County, N. C., accompanied by a few relatives and friends, and were united in matrimony by the writer. These young people energetic, industrious, and highly esteemed by those who know them. They were reared in the community near Concord Church, where the writer is pastor. They will reside in Caswell County, N. C., at the home of the bride's mother.

May many years of peace and happiness be theirs. L. L. WYRICK.

Danville, Va.

DISCOVERIES IN SCIENCE.

Use of the large 36-inch reflecting telescope at the Stewart Observatory of the University of Arizona to photograph a house six miles away was described here by Dr. A. E. Douglass, director of the observatory. These experiments were made to test a new photographic plate sensitive only to infra-red rays invisible to the human eye. Comparisons were made of the results obtained with the usual types of photographic plate, and it was demonstrated that while the latter exaggerated all the haze of the atmosphere, those taken by infra-red light produced a result as distinct as that taken a short distance away.

These plates were also used by Dr. Douglass to photograph Mars during the time of its close approach last summer, and it was found that they showed the markings on the planet far more distinctly than those of the usual kind. In view of these results, the opinion has been expressed by Dr. D. H. Menzel, of the University of Iowa, that it seems evident that Mars itself has an atmosphere which, like that of the earth, cuts out most of the blue light which affects the ordinary plate and transmits the red and infra-red radiations.

Dr. E. C. Slipher, astronomer at the Lowell Observatory at Flagstaff, Ariz., and a leading authority on Mars, told of somewhat similar experiments. In an effort to test the accuracy of drawings of Mars made with the aid of their large telescope, an enlarged photographic copy of a drawing was taken to a point a mile and a half from the observatory and photographed with the telescope in the same way as the planet itself.

The result, as it appears on photographs shown by Dr. Slipher, shows the straight lines of the drawing representing canals as indistinct patches, on account of the distance of the drawing. Most striking, however, is the similarity of these photographs to ones made at the same time of the planet itself and which show similar markings. This, in the opinion of Dr. Slipher, is convincing proof of the presence of the canals, the very existence of which have been doubted by some astronomers.

GOOD HARDWARE NECESSARY.

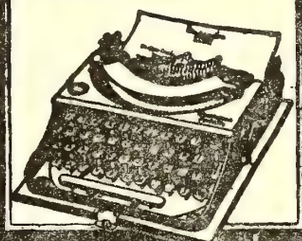
Good hardware on the small house makes it a more comfortable place in which to abide. The feeling of security is of inestimable value. Good locks and hardware mean economy in the long run, since they obviate the necessity of frequent repairs and replacements.

Good hardware on the house will enable the owner to dispose of it much more advantageously should he desire. Summed up, the small house equipped with good locks and hardware is a better house in which to live.

Remember that clean milk, properly cared for, is one of the best foods obtainable. It is nourishing, digestible, and usually economical.

Some one asked Diogenes why people gave money to beggars and would not give it to philosophers. He replied, "Because they think they are much more likely to become beggars than philosophers themselves."

Something You Have Been Waiting For



Remington Portable Typewriter

—with Standard Keyboard and every other feature common to the larger machines. Case only four inches high.

Price, with case, $60.

Send Your Order to THE CHRISTIAN SUN Richmond, Va.

WINTER TOURIST TICKETS

—ALL RESORTS—

SOUTH AND SOUTHWEST

CALIFORNIA

Via New Orleans and "Sunset Limited."

INFORMATION, ITINERATIES, RESERVATIONS Furnished in Detail Upon Request.

Apply to Local Agent, or Address

F. H. POSTON, Division Passenger Agent,

Southern Railway System,

809 East Main Street, - - Richmond, Virginia.

V. E. MAREAN

Pipe Organ Expert

TUNING — REPAIRING

REBUILDING

Motors Installed Yearly Contracts

P. O. Box 864, - Richmond, Va.

Phone, Boulevard 7011-J

WINSTON-INTERNATIONAL

TEACHERS' BIBLES

SELF-PRONOUNCING

Containing References, a Concordance and the most authoritative Aids to Bible Study. Printed in Black Face Type. Beautiful Bindings

Send for Illustrated Catalog

THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO., Publishers

American Bible Headquarters

429 Winston Building Philadelphia

Get rid of constipation by internal cleanliness

HEADACHES, biliousness, sleepless nights, heaviness, are Nature's warning that intestinal poisons are flooding your system. If this is allowed to continue, you may become a victim of serious organic disease.

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favour Lubrication

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

Nujol

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

For Internal Cleanliness

HIGGS.

Henry Higgs, of near Luray, Va., died suddenly Saturday, January 10, 1925, being 89 years, 9 months and 13 days old. He was very active, and read without the use of glasses until the very last. He had been a member of Leaksville Christian Church for at least six or seven years. He is survived by a sister, twelve children, twenty-five grandchildren, and twenty-eight great-grandchildren.

The funeral services were conducted and interment made at Leaksville on Tuesday, January 13th. The writer, a former pastor, officiated.

Linville, Va. R. P. CRUMPLER.

SATURDAY'S ECLIPSE.

Observers in the path of the total eclipse are wondering whether there will be in the southeastern part of the sky a little clear patch for a few minutes after sunrise next Saturday morning. Some of them have gone to such expense in setting up instruments that they have insured themselves against cloudiness at this time.

It is not particularly encouraging to know that the eclipse will occur at one of the cloudiest times of the year, and that its path over the Great Lakes and northern Appalachians to the New England coast will pass through one of the cloudiest sections of the country. Moreover, in winter there is in general less chance of a clear sky during the early morning hours than later in the day. The Lake region, east to the Catskills, is especially cloudy in January, and there is considerable cloudiness eastward to the highlands of western Connecticut. From there to New Haven there is a fairly rapid decrease in cloudiness.

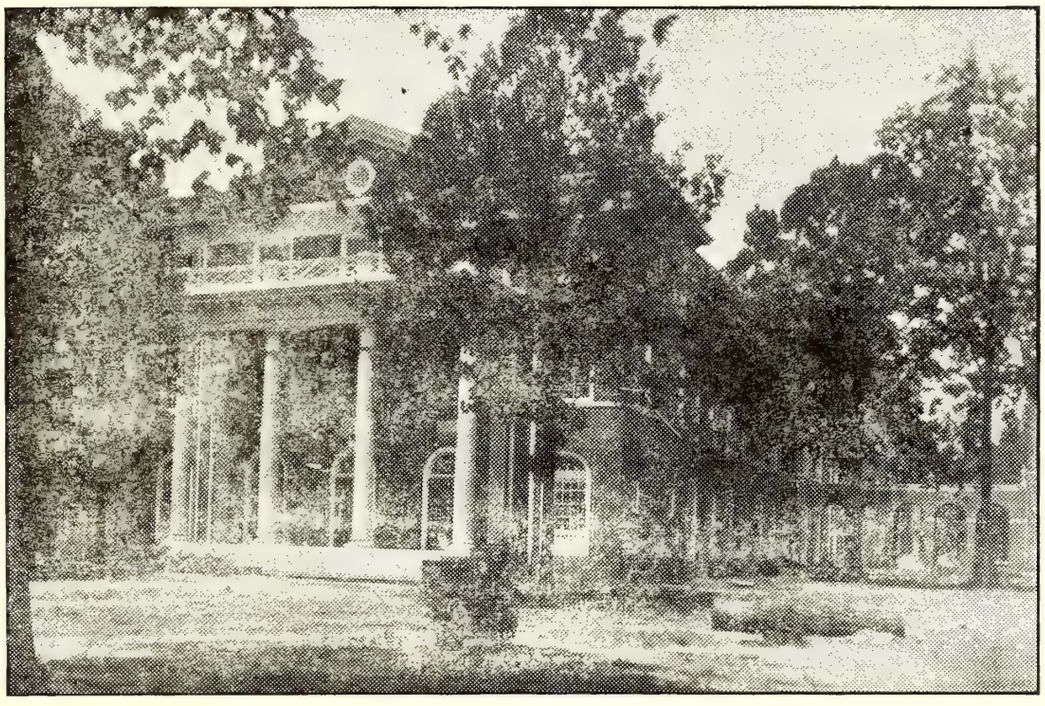
New Haven has the least average cloudiness in January of any weather bureau station in or near the path of totality. New Haven also has a better chance than inland stations of being clear shortly after sunrise, as fogs more often envelop the interior. The 8 A. M. relative humidity at New Haven is below 80 per cent on the average in January, while stations to the northwest have averages over 80 per cent, and near the Lakes over 85 per cent at this time of day.

East Rock and West Rock at New Haven, furthermore, are high enough to afford observers viewpoints well above the city smoke and the lowland fog of a winter's morning.

PRETTY LEGEND OF CROSSES.

Near the place where the Blue Ridge and the Allegheny Mountains unite, there is, in Patrick County, Va., a spur of the Blue Ridge called "Bull Mountain." On the side of this mountain, and nowhere else in the world, there are found the famous "fairy stones." The mountaineers explain it by legends worthy of the myth-making Greeks. One story says "that ages ago, when the red men were masters here, these stones were showered down by the Great Spirit as a sign of salvation coming to the savage race." But the generally accepted legend—that one from which the name comes—is this: "When Christ was crucified on Calvary, elfin messengers carried the news to all parts of the world. When the tidings of woe reached the fairies in the rugged mountains, they ceased their merry-making, and at once began to make these crosses as mementos of the sad event."

ELON COLLEGE---CO-EDUCATIONAL



WHITLEY AUDITORIUM BUILDING
One of the Group of Five New Buildings now Completed.

Elon, in her rebuilding program, has been looking to the future. Ten buildings, new and modern equipment, and a highly trained and efficient faculty are at the service of the future leaders of our Church. The phenomenal growth of Elon in the past two years indicates a larger growth throughout the whole denomination in the years just ahead. Make Elon your own Church College in a personal way by your patronage and prayerful co-operation.

OPPORTUNITY.

Young men who haven't examined the records—who are just badly informed—like to point out his or that profession or trade in which they say there is no chance for promotion. It has been said a thousand times that there is poor chance for promotion in railroading. This is said in the face of facts. Railroad executives all over the United States have risen from the ranks—from clerks and brakemen. Some men spend their lives in the army service and never get anywhere. But the fact remains that sixteen generals listed today in the American Army Register rose from the grade of "buck private in the rear ranks." It isn't the business—it's the man!

"The Bible is a Book of faith, and a Book of doctrine, and a Book of morals, and a Book of religion, of special revelation from God; but it is also a Book which teaches man his own individual responsibility, his own dignity, and his equality with his fellow-man."—Daniel Webster.

Double monasteries were religious houses comprising communities of both men and women, dwelling in contiguous establishments, united under the rule of one superior and using one Church in common for their liturgical offices. Ireland presents only one known example—Kildare.

The oldest of all pyramids antedating the great Gizeh group by between 300 and 500 years, is the step pyramid of Sakkara, twelve miles south of Cairo.

According to one eminent literary authority, the best descriptions of children and of child-life have been written by bachelors.

MONEY TO LEND ON IMPROVED FARMS--FAVORABLE TERMS

Write for Details

SO. BOND & MORTGAGE CO.

627 E. Main St. - - Richmond, Va.

Medical College of Virginia

Medicine Dentistry
Pharmacy Nursing

New Buildings. Well-equipped Laboratories, under the direction of full-time, competent teachers.

The Memorial Hospital, Dooley Hospital, St. Philip Hospital, are owned and controlled by the Medical College of Virginia, and offer every facility for thorough clinical teaching.

Staffs composed of the Faculty of the College. Additional clinical facilities are offered through other institutions in Richmond.

For full information and catalogue, address—

J. R. McCAULEY, Secretary.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D.....Editor
W. W. STALEY, D. D.....Associate
W. A. HARPER, LL. D.....Associate
R. C. HELFENSTEIN, D. D...Associate
REV. S. C. HARRELL.....Associate
REV. S. M. LYNAM.....News Editor
P. J. KERNODLE....Managing Editor

Subscription Rates.

One Year $2.00
Six Months 1.00

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post-Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows the date of expiration. Please renew at least two weeks in advance.

Change of Address: Give both old and new post-office when asking that your address be changed.

When subscriptions are made for friends, state whether paper is to be stopped at end of the year.

Remittances: Make all remittances to "The Christian Sun," 1536 East Broad Street, Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and Marriage Notices, limited to 100 words, are published free of charge. All over 100 words, published at 1 cent a word. Remittance should accompany copy. Write names distinctly.

Advertising Rates: "Want Ads," 2 cents a word an insertion. Display Rates quoted upon request.

BRITTLE.

Buried in the family section in Riverview Cemetery, with her husband, John W. Brittle, Mrs. Nannie R. Brittle. Funeral was conducted by her pastor, Rev. Dr. W. T. Walters, assisted by Rev. R. Aubrey Williams, of Tabernacle Baptist Church. "Asleep in Jesus" was sung at the grave.

Entered into everlasting rest and blessed sleep in Jesus, after several years of earthly affliction and being an invalid for over six years, Mrs. Nannie R. Brittle, widow of John W. Brittle, died December 17, 1924, at the home of her son, Herbert E. Brittle, where she had been for about ten months. Though an invalid, Mrs. Brittle lived with her three sons and daughter for the last seven or eight years, spending about three years with Fred G. and his family, and between two and three years with Boykin Brittle and his wife, Catherine, who, though being only a daughter-in-law, could not have been any kinder, sweeter or more helpful to her than she was, always a willing and cheerful Christian comforter and help to her while in their home.

Mrs. Nannie R. Brittle survived her daughter, Irma (Mrs. E. L. Kay), nearly two years. She entered into her home beyond in January, 1923, leaving her husband and three children—Laura Lee, Lorenzo, and Leslie Kay—to mourn their loss. Mrs. Brittle leaves three sons and one sister, Mrs. Fannie O. Wilkinson; two brothers, Jim T. Boykin and June E. Boykin, of Ivor and Wakefield, Va., her home before she moved with her family to Richmond about twenty-three years ago.

The following sons and grandchildren mourn their loss, and are hoping we do, and always will, trust in Jesus as she did through all her suffering. Not being able to attend her Church—First Christion, of Richmond—of which she was a charter member, her pastor, Rev. Dr. W. T. Walters, never overlooked her at home, and he and his wife were a great comfor to her. Children: Fred G. Brittle, Herbert E. Brittle, Boykin Brittle, and Mrs. E. L. Kay (deceased). Grandchildren: Gladys T., M. Virginia, Sadie E., Fred G., Jr., Ardys A., Aubrey B., Kent Heath, and Irving Luke Brittle, and Boykin, Jr., and Laura Lee Kay, Lorenzo Kay and Leslie Kay.

FRED G. BRITTLE.

WEBSTER.

Bro. William B. Webster was born July 16, 1862; died December 23, 1924. He had for many months been a great sufferer, and death came as a sweet relief. For many years he had been a faithful member of Turner's Chapel. He is survived by his wife, one son, C. D. Webster; three daughters—Mrs. C. S. Arnold, Misses Mabel and Macy Webster—besides many relatives and friends who rejoice with them in the blessed hope of meeting him again. He expressed his readiness to depart. Funeral was conducted by Rev. J. D. Wicker and the writer.

R. L. WILLIAMSON.

WHICH IS THE
BEST INVESTMENT?

It is that one best suited to the requirements of the individual purchaser.

For example: What is best for the millionaire, whose income is in the high brackets, and to whom income is no object, is obviously not the best for the investor who must have the maximum income consistent with safety.

We offer to our clients individual service.

. . .

ESTABLISHED 1874

John L. Williams & Sons

INVESTMENT BANKERS

Phone: Randolph 244 Seventh and Main Streets

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

A Co-Educational School

LOCATED AT

WADLEY, ALABAMA

This School offers the last two years of Academic work and the first two years of College work.

The following Courses are offered in the—

COLLEGE DEPARTMENT: English, Bible, Religious Education, Latin, French, History, Education, Mathematics and Science.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENTS: Music—Piano, Voice; Commercial Department—Bookkeeping, Typewriting, and Shorthand.

Due attention will be given Athletics, such as Tennis, Basket-Ball, Baseball, Football.

The government of the School is mild, but firm, endeavoring to create a home atmosphere as much as possible, not merely to maintain discipline, but to cultivate Christian character.

This is our own School, located within reach of all in this section, and the cost is less than any other College within reasonable distance of those who would attend School from this section.

Send for a Catalogue giving full description of Courses and entrance conditions.

S. L. BEOUGHER, President

Wadley, - - - - Alabama.

OXFORD TEACHERS' BIBLES

An Oxford Teachers' Bible has references and 300 pages of helps that are a mine of information to Bible students. The helps are arranged in alphabetical order, like a dictionary. They are accurate, comprehensive and up-to-date. A few styles are listed here. Many others are described in our Bible catalogue, mailed upon request.

04403 [This size print] Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 6⅞ x 4¾ inches $4.00

0623x [Same Bible as 04403] Printed on Oxford India paper. Only 1 inch thick..... $6.00

04453 [This size print] French Morocco leather binding, overlapping covers, 7¼ x 5 in. $4.35

0773x [Same Bible as 04453] Printed on Oxford India paper. A remarkably thin and light Bible. (Only 1 inch thick) $7.75

05453 [Same Bible as 04453] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $6.25

05453x [Same Bible as 0773x] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $8.75

04523 [This size print] A self-pronouncing Oxford Bible. Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 8½ x 5½ inches... $5.50

0923x [Same Bible as 04523] Printed on Oxford India paper, only 1⅛ inches thick... $9.75

ORDER FROM
"THE CHRISTIAN SUN"
1536 East Broad
Richmond, Va.

FOR GOOD HOME COOKING
MRS. COOK'S CAFETERIA
805 East Grace Street.

Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Official Organ of the Southern Christian Convention

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY. IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY. IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXVII. RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JANUARY 29, 1925. NUMBER 5.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

The Eclipse.—

From tests made of the behaviour of the ether of the air during the total eclipse Saturday, officials of the Radio Corporation of America deducted that a short-wave length follows the sun; that static is not entirely a local condition because it was affected by general conditions, and that a long wave irregular before the eclipse became noticeably regular during totality.

An Earthquake.—

Boston newspapers did not conceal the fact that Boston had an earthquake. The Boston Transcript began the story with deep headlines. It appears that Boston and vicinity are no strangers to earthquakes. For the period between 1638 and 1870, there are records of 208 quakes. The incompleteness of the records since 1870 is not accounted for.

Mussolini to Issue Call for Election.—

Premier Mussolini has decided to call another general election in Italy, but only after the present Parliament has passed a new electoral law, so it probably will be late in April before the people go to the polls. This step, however, has failed to placate the opposition, and they threaten to boycott the election, since it is deemed certain that Mussolini either will have a firm majority in the new Parliament or a minority block strong enough to make him the master of the government.

Postal Pay Veto Upheld.—

The President's veto of the postal salary increase bill, pending for months, was upheld in the Senate only by the narrowest of margins, for the switching of one vote would have provided the two-thirds needed to override it. In the transaction of various businesses, certain contingencies must be provided for. Losses or risks may be reckoned at from 5 per cent even up to 50 per cent. In government jobs, no loss need be considered. Therefore, if wages or salaries are paid at a rate of 10 to 25 per cent less by the government they are assured.

The Child-Labor Amendment.—

Americans, attention! There are 115,000,000 people in the country, and 7,403 members of State Legislatures. The Constitution of the United States can be changed by a majority of the Legislatures in three-fourths of the States. That majority happens to be 2,316 members. Therefore, 2,316 men can change the Constitution of the United States. Did you know that? The latest proposed amendment concerns the children of the nation—not the children out West or down South or up North, but yours and mine. And we have nothing to say about it—not a vote, not even a vote of instruction to the men who will vote.

Congress Speeding Up.—

There has been a decided speeding up of the legislative mill, and the leaders now are confident that enough of the President's program will be carried out before March 4th to make a special session unnecessary. In one burst of speed, in fact, the Senate set a new record, for in 100 minutes it put through bills appropriating $888,309,014 for the agriculture, post-office and the treasury departments—nearly $9,000,000 a minute. Then, too, the Senate is near the end of its long debate over the Muscle Shoals bill, so that other measures will have a chance. By a vote of 48 to 37, the Senate decided to substitute for the Norris government operation bill the Underwood bill, which provides that the President is to have until September 1st to lease the property; failing a favorable lease, he is to work out a plan for Federal operation.

The Officer's Personality.—

There is a great deal of talk about that old bromide called law enforcement. It is a good guess that few people ever read an article with that in the headline. The reason is, they have no confidence in the methods or men engaged. Law enforcement is as simple as A B C. If the officers of the law personally wanted law enforcement, it would come. They get anything else they want. It is not police stupidity, it is police indifference, or even connivance, that permits such an oversaturated condition of law violation as we now have. The trouble is, our law-enforcing agencies feel no moral opposition to much that goes on. Does any one pretend for a moment to believe that when a converted naval cruiser is captured five times by the government, and each time sold back again to the rum-runners, it is due to police stupidity? You give the police and other law officials a grievance against bootlegging, and see how quickly it will vanish!

Valuable Scientific Data Secured.—

Saturday's scientific observation of the solar eclipse was one of the most successful ever made, according to a report from Dr. E. E. Free, head of the Scientific American's expedition at East Hampton, L. I., over a special telephone wire to the New York studio of station WOR. The corona, said Dr. Free, was larger and more beautiful than had been expected. Two prominences were visible to the astronomers at East Hampton.

Weather conditions were absolutely perfect, Dr. Free reported, and a series of photograph, hand-motion, pictures was obtained, which it was expected, would be very good. So far as the scientists could judge, he said, the Buffalo and East Hampton worked perfectly. "All of the astronomers kept their heads," he added.

Dr. Free said no important announcements of the effect of the eclipse on radio transmission and reception would be made for a week.

Radio reception was much louder and clearer during the period of the eclipse, according to telephone reports from persons listening in on WOR. This station, co-operating with other radio stations and the Scientific American, had made elaborate plans for studying the effect of the eclipse on wireless.

Prof. H. H. Sheldon, of New York University, one of the observers at East Hampton, Dr. Free said, reported a small change in temperature as the eclipse went by.

New Cabinet Members.—

In forming first impressions of President Coolidge's new Cabinet appointments, it is perhaps advisable to take into account what might be called the Cabinet disappointments, the men who were urged for appointment and refused. The sole regret rising out of the appointment of Attorney-General Stone to the Supreme Court is that it cuts short, for the time at least, a very promising administration of the Attorney-Generalship. Mr. Warren, who succeeds Mr. Stone, does not at first blush promise so much in his aspect as a lawyer, but he has solid achievements behind him in private and public life, and for the present he seems to be of that class whose absence of flying colors upon entering office may be atoned for by the superior fortune of winning his colors and popular approval by service. The same may be said of Mr. Kellogg. There is no disposition anywhere to judge these gentlemen disapprovingly in advance, but it is distinctly felt that their reputation, if any, is ahead of them. Those who wish their country well must wish for the success of all her servants.

One thing is certain: President Coolidge could have appointed less-qualified men; indeed, men of lesser promise were strongly urged upon him. So that, for the present, this must be the substance of public opinion, "Whether the President could have done better is a question; it is not a question that he could easily have done, and was urged to do, worse." He certainly did not play into the hands of any coalition of politicians who swarmed to dictate or influence the appointments.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., is attending the missionary conference in Washington, D. C., this week.

The managing editor desires to make grateful acknowledgment to all for their gracious response to his recent circular letter.

Why not make up your mind today that, by the help of the Lord, you will pay your Men and Millions pledge before another month rolls around!

Each year more than $6,000,000 of Church property in the United States is destroyed by fire, and on the average there are five Church fires a day throughout the year.

We are in receipt of the proceedings of the eighty-sixth annual session of the Eastern Indiana Christian Conference. It is a neatly printed booklet of thirty-two pages. Thank you, Mr. Secretary.

If the many would only make the sacrifice that the few are making to meet their Men and Millions pledges, the entire Church would be blessed indeed and would go forward in all its good work more rapidly than it does.

Rev. James H. Lightbourne, of Holland, Va., who preached and conducted the "Kingdom-Enlistment" services last week at the First Christian Church of Richmond, is this week attending the missionary conference at Washington, D. C.

The British Isles ranks next to the United States in Christian Endeavor strength, and the British Christian Endeavor Union has recently listed 4,506 societies, with a total membership of more than 150,000. Australia ranks third, with every one of the six States well organized and enthusiasm increasing. Germany is fourth, with 1,453 societies, an increase of 142 over the previous year.

Said a man recently: "There are only two birthdays universally celebrated—one of them falls on the 25th of December, the other on the 25th of January." Candidly, we had to ask what the latter date signified. The birthday of Robbie Burns, of course! An American abroad sent an illustrated description of the Burns country as he saw it to the Dearborn Independent, and a Scottish journalist told how Burns refused to pledge the British Premier, saying, "I propose the health of George Washington, a better man."

The corner-stone of the Mooney Memorial Christian Education Building of Elon College was laid with simple and impressive ceremonies Saturday, January 24, 1925. President W. A. Harper was in charge and made appropriate explanation of the occasion. Prof. Bennett, of the Christian education department, read the Scripture lesson; Dr. Alexander, pastor of the college Church, led in prayer, and at the conclusion Dr. J. U. Newman led a brief prayer. Next issue is to carry a full account of the event and the building. Bro. M. Orban, Jr., and wife are donors of this building, and the college is hoping for their presence at a formal dedication service in April or May.

Rev. D. A. Long, D. D., writing under date of Florence, S. C., January 21st, says: "Joseph, my sick son, is much improved. So is my granddaughter, Josephine. Mrs. Long will remain in Florida until spring. If the sick continue to improve, I will be back in North Carolina looking after my work there by the third Sunday in February, if not before." His people in North Carolina will be delighted to have their pastor back in their midst. They say in his congregation, however, that they would rather have him for pastor even nine months in the year than to have some other pastor twelve months, and they know what they are talking about and how to appreciate a good and great man when they have one.

In THE SUN of last week, Bro. C. D. Johnston, superintendent, made his report of the Orphanage for the past year, and while he seems to have been disappointed, the report showed a remarkable achievement and wonderful results, from our point of view. The financial income for the year 1924 was shown to be $24,162.59. This, it will be understood, was in cash donations, and says nothing of the several hundred dollars worth of goods and gifts in kind—foodstuffs, etc.—which were donated by willing hands and liberal hearts. Bro. Johnston came within less than $1,000 of his goal, and it seems to us has occasion for rejoicing and a new taking of heart and hope. To house and care for 108 children without having any serious accident or a death amongst them should certainly serve as a source of gratitude for the whole Church. "That our children did well in school and stand well in their classes, and that more than forty joined the Church during the year," are certainly matters of great moment. Gov. McLean, in his message to the Legislature of North Carolina last week, said that all material matters that went into the make-up of North Carolina were secondary; that the primary matters were character, moral and spiritual make-up of manhood and womanhood. Evidently, the superintendent of our Orphanage feels the same toward those in his charge as Governor McLean does toward the people of the whole State, and that, we think, is a noble and praise-worthy sentiment.

DANVILLE.

The Third Avenue Christian Church, Danville, Va., organized the Christian Endeavor Sunday, January 18, 1925. For our first meeting we had quite a crowd, considering the weather. We elected our pastor, Rev. L. L. Wyrick, as president; Mrs. W. H. Ramsey, vice-president; Miss Worth Herndon, treasurer, and Miss Elizabeth Allen, secretary; prayer-meeting committee, Mr. J. E. Jones, Miss Iva Stephens, and Mr. W. W. Stephens. Our first meeting was a very successful one. We had fifteen members to join, and also had a good program. The program consisted of a number of songs, a Scripture reading by Mr. J. E. Jones, a prayer by Mr. W. W. Stephens, and a talk by Rev. L. L. Wyrick. Our pastor then read our Christian Endeavor pledge.

The ushers took a free-will offering, and we were dismissed by Mr. P. H. Ricketts. Each of us hope that God will use us in His service, and we all may please Him in our work, and we may make our Christian Endeavor more popular every meeting that we hold.

MISS ELIZABETH ALLEN, Secy.

RURAL MAIL-SERVICE HISTORY.

It was Postmaster-General John Wannamaker who first officially suggested, in 1891, the rural-mail idea to Congress. The plan was fought in the legislative branch of the government for five years before it was given a try-out.

The first bill authorizing the establishment of the service was introduced in the House by Representative James O'Donnell, of Michigan, January 5, 1892. It carried an appropriation of $6,000,000, but failed of passage. A year later, Congress was induced to appropriate $10,000 for experimental purposes, followed in 1894 by $20,000 more. Mr. Wanamaker, believing the amount insufficient even for experimental service, declined to use the money.

On January 9, 1896, $10,000 was added by Congress, and on October 1st, the same year, the first experimental rural delivery service was established simultaneously on three routes in West Virginia—one from Charleston, one from Uvilla, and one from Halltown. From this small beginning, nine months later found the service operating of 82 routes, emanating from 43 post-offices in 29 States. Twenty-eight years later, or June 30, 1924, the rural mail service had grown to 44,260 routes, with a total mileage of 1,205,714.

In comparison with the insignificant appropriation of $10,000 made by Congress more than a quarter of a century ago to inaugurate the service, it now requires an annual expenditure of $89,250,000 to keep it functioning.—P. O. Dept.

OUR MOUNTAIN WORK.

This is the first report to THE CHRISTIAN SUN of our mountain work. We are only going back for about two months. From now, there will appear a report in the paper each month of what has been sent in to us. In this first report it may be possible that we will fail to name just what class or society sent donations in every case or to get in every donation. You will do me a favor, however, in case I have failed to give any one credit, to write me, and same will appear later.

We are very grateful for the donations that have come to us. They have helped us wonderfully not only for the Christmas tree, but in our work.

A box of candy and a large number of gifts for Christmas from Raleigh Church, by Mrs. Parry; two boxes from Circle No. 1, First Church of Greensboro; one box from Mrs. Sellars, Burlington; one bucket of candy from Burlington Church, by Mrs. Carroll; fifty pounds of candy and one box from Mrs. M. L. Bryant, Norfolk; one box from Franklin, Va., Young People's Missionary Society, by Mrs. E. L. Beale; one box of books from Mrs. Bullock; one large box including many small packages from River Dale Sunday School and C. E.; one large box of clothing and Christmas gifts from Suffolk Sunday School; a large donation of Christmas gifts from the Young People's Society, Crown Point, by Miss Alice Denson, Dayton; two large boxes from Mrs. Geo. Garrett and her class, Franklin, Ohio; three large boxes from the Young Woman's Guild of North Christian Church, New Bedford; three boxes from New Bedford, by Mrs. H. M. Hainer; two boxes from the Young Ladies' Sunday School, Elkhart, Ind.; one box from Shallow Ford Sunday School, by W. E. Walker; a package from E. S. Hainary, Greenville, N. Y.; one dollar for a burned home from Mrs. Annie Nerby, Virgilina, Va.; two boxes from Miss Alice Marquart, Springfield, Ohio; underpinning of parsonage about sixty dollars, from the Christian Endeavor Societ yof Durham Christian Church; some religious literature, Miss Alice Marquart, Springfield; about eight copies of the Journal of Christian Education for twelve months, by Dr. Harper; the Progressive Farmer for twelve months, by Miss Summers; fifty dollars' worth of Bibles by the Win One Bible Class of Winchester, Va.; one box from Berea Church, Driver, Va.

M. T. SORRELL,

Fancy Gap, Va.

FROM MAYSVILLE.

DEAR CHRISTIAN SUN:

Watching with keen interest all the field news and excellent articles in your valuable paper, I thought a few lines from out here in West Virginia might be of interest to your many readers. I came to this field October 16, 1924, and have a fine charge here of 875 members. The charge has some wealthy people. Hon. J. L. Rexroad, a member of the State Legislature, is a member of my Church. The people are a refined, cultured and educated people. They make a preacher feel as if he was preaching to a big city Church of doctors and lawyers. Have held revival meetings at Lahmansville, Mt. Hebron, and Maysville since I came here, with forty-three conversions, doing all the preaching myself, with aid of our loyal and faithful choirs and workers. In all my ministry I have never been among a people who are so appreciative of my sermons and work. In fact, they tell me they never expected to get such an able preacher, which makes a man study and do his best to deliver the goods and hold Sunday after Sunday the type of sermon which he began to deliver.

The people have been nice to us, in donations of valuable articles, which have kept our larder filled for several months, and which have been highly appreciated by pastor and wife.

A new business system has been introduced into the Church for financing the work, and there was about 50 per cent increase in the budget the first three months. We have a number of students in college from this charge, and will celebrate "Educational Day," with cash offering for the good work. We have a class of fifty studying the book, "Partners in the Conquering Cause," that I may help this fine people to catch a vision of the great privilege to be a partner with Christ in kingdom work. We are highly pleased with our new charge. Have fine roads (State roads), finished with shale, which make driving automobiles easy and less expensive, tires give hundreds of miles more service on these roads. We are nine miles from Petersburg, W. Va., and twenty-eight miles from Keyser, W. Va., and fifty miles from Cumberland, Md. We are ninety miles from Harrisonburg, Va., by automobile road.

I will visit the Valley next summer; perhaps will meet the good editors and readers of THE SUN about Conference time. Only about a half-day's drive with a "John Henry" from here to Valley. In this part of the country one don't see many Ford cars; people ride in high-priced automobiles. Fifteen miles from here is Oak Dale Christian Church, where Rev. Z. J. Powers is the pastor. He is the son of the beloved Rev. A. G. B. Powers, who one time lived at Concord, in the Valley. Am planning to visit the old home place of Elder Powers at the Corners in the spring.

We have not had much snow; the biggest one fell to a depth of six inches, and the coldest weather we have had was during the Christmas season. During the spring or summer I am to hold a revival for Rev. E. R. Kesecker, at Antioch, W. Va., and perhaps others. I have preached 100 sermons since October, and visited over 100 homes, having only begun to visit homes on a charge with large membership like here.

May the God of all grace give to all the editors health, happiness and spiritual power, that THE SUN may shine more brilliantly into the homes of her readers, and many new ones during this year.

S. L. BAUGHER.

See that your label has been changed. It is your receipt.

RICHMOND LETTER.

"Kingdom-Enlistment Week" closed at the First Christian Church of Richmond last night. The services were conducted by Rev. James H. Lightbourne, of Holland, Va. He gave a strong series of sermons, and by his congeniality and fine spirit of co-operation, he won a warm place in the hearts of our people. The service was conducted on the plan outlined by the Board of Evangelism of the Christian Church. It is a well-worked-out plan, and cannot fail to bring results wherever the Church takes hold of it and works it.

Our meeting resulted in twenty decisions, and received seventeen into the Church. However, this does not measure the good accomplished. We secured a lis otf over 100 names who are interested in our Church, and our membership campaign will be continued and we expect several more additions soon. We had received eight members this Conference year before our meeting, making a total of twenty-five new members to date. We have had a good increase in the Sunday School, the Christian Endeavor and the Woman's Missionary Society.

The Christmas pageant, "Following the Star," written and conducted by Mrs. W. T. Walters, drew one of the largest congregations at its rendering Sunday evening before Christmas that we have had in our Church. Over fifty characters took part on the program.

The Sunday School children rendered a most enjoyable program the evening of December 23d. Gifts and treat were distributed to the children, and they in turn brought toys for the children at the Christian Orphanage. The outlook for the work hree is very hopeful.

W. T. WALTERS.

PARENTS' OBLIGATION.

H. L. Mencken, in the Baltimore Evening Sun, makes a profound remark on education. He says: "Every child goes home after its day's school is done. What it is taught there, and, in particular, what it overhears there, colors its ideas infinitely more powerful than the platitudes emptied upon it in school."

Every parent, especially every father, ought to lay these words well to heart. They are appallingly true. There is a popular belief that education is a thing of the school-room and the Sunday School, but frequently, perhaps usually, the real education is in the home.

The only effective teacher is character. The school-room teacher may impart information and fill the child's mind with facts, items of grammar, history, biology, but the molding of the child's mind is done by the parent, unconsciously maybe, but none the less surely.

The education does not come through the ponderous homilies on morals sometimes propounded by the father when he is trying to impress some moral lesson by a wordy preachment. The child is quick to detect any pretense, and unless the sermon is re-enforced by the conduct and character of the parent, the exhortation falls upon deaf ears. The child might well say, with Emerson: "What you are, speaks so loud I can't hear what you say."

Happy the father who so bears himself in the home as to call out the virtues he desires in his children—frankness, manliness, generosity, fair-dealing in his boys, gentleness, modesty, delicacy in his daughters.—New Age Magazaine.

RADIANT IN TRIBULATIONS.

A woman, until her eighteenth year, was so beautiful in face and form that no one could pass her by unnoticed. I saw her on her wedding day and she seemed the most exquisite of brides. She went to the home of her husband and entered into society and became a leader in a refined and intellectual circle. One day in Church, at worship, she was suddenly attacked by sharp pain. From that moment, so long as she lived, she was never free for an instant from a torturing agony that confined her to her couch day and night. A strange malady had attacked the spinal marrow. Her poor hands were so twisted that she never liked any one to see them; but her beautiful face grew more and more radiant in its spirituality, so that it was like the face of an angel. Her home, of which she could see only one room, was perfectly appointed, and she directed its movement and its ordering with entire serenity so long as she lived. She kept in touch with her child's education, always knowing what he studied and sending for his teachers and professors that she might confer with them, from the time of the primary school until he was graduated by the university. No one ever heard her complain, and it was her husband's summing up of her years of physical anguish that they had been years spent so near to Jesus that the house had been like heaven.—Margaret E. Sangster.

BETHLEHEM NOTES.

Great improvement has been made on the streets of Wadley, which has helped the appearance of the city a great deal.

Our basket-ball teams are doing fine work. The girls' team defeated Milltown High School team on our court Thursday, January 15th, by a score of 6 to 12.

The boys' team defeated Dadeville, at Dadeville, with a score of 11 to 26. This is great encouragement to our teams.

Our literary societies and religious organizations are doing splendid work.

The students of music department are conducting chapel this week. A very interesting program has been presented so far. This department is also preparing a special musical program to be given at the high school auditorium on Saturday evening, January 24th, at 7:30. One of the great features of the program will be Mrs. Virginia Carte-Reapke, voice and piano instructor at Alabama School for the Blind. She will be accompanied by her husband, who is a well-known musician.

The railroad crew worked all day Sunday in order that they might prevent the river bridge from being destroyed. The Tallapoosa River is higher than it has been since 1919, being about twenty feet above average depth.

V. E. ADAMS.

NOTICE.

At the last session of the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference, held at Apple's Chapel, it was decided to organize a Convention for the young people. This was done as a result of the division of the Conferences, and the North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions into three groups.

The first meeting will be held at Shallow Ford Christian Church, one mile north of Elon College, Saturday and Sunday, July 11th and 12th, 1925. All young people and teachers of the same, of our Sunday School and Conference, are urged to begin making their plans to be present. Your presence and suggestions will help make the meeting a success. We trust that both the adults and young people will be much in prayer for the success of this work.

Further announcements in reference to this meeting will be made later.

JOSEPH E. MCCAULEY,
Elon College, N. C. President.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR.

J. O. ATKINSON, Elon College, N. C.

Contributing Editors.

W. W. STALEY W. A. HARPER
R. C. HELFENSTEIN S. C. HARRELL

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

ARE WE WILLING TO PAY THE PRICE?

Nothing comes without its price. This must be paid. Emerson says God constructed the universe on this basis. There is an even balance. Every advantage exacts the price and enlarges the obligation. No mortal or number of mortals ever get superior advanatges, enjoy superior privileges without paying the price.

Such thoughts come home very seriously to CHRISTIAN SUN readers who consider for a moment our present situation.

Here in the South four splendid Church plants have been opened to the public and are now in use—Richmond, Raleigh, Norfolk (Christian Temple), Dover. Add to this two Churches organized in Carroll County, Va., a Conference begun in North Alabama, to say nothing of a score of intervening points of recent and rapid development. The whole denomination takes a pardonable and praiseworthy pride in all this. They belong to us. They are a part of us, and we of them. All of this has given us denominational prestige, power and position. And they mean not less, but more, to keep them up and carry them on.

Are we willing to pay the larger price for this larger power, privilege and prestige? Some one must do it. We cannot have the glory unless we make the sacrifice—pay the price.

Or again. We now have a greatly enlarged and beautified plant and equipment at Elon College. Five beautiful and commodious and fireproof buildings stand where one was burned two years ago. The one burned was not equal in cost or in proportions to either one of the five new ones we now have. This means a large outlay not only for building, but for maintenance. And it means power, prestige, privilege to our Church.

Are we as individuals willing to pay the price? Somebody must pay! We cannot have the advantage, the opportunity, the added privilege without paying the price. Jesus the Christ purchased the crown with a cross. God was not more cruel to His Son than to any of the rest of us. He is not cruel to any one of us, but He made this universe in balance, and since creation He has not allowed it to be or go otherwise. We wanted a better, greater Elon. It is a denominational and an individual asset to each of us. Are we willing to pay the price?

A few months ago we enlarged our Christian Orphanage by adding another building to our plant. Already that added building is running over, and not fewer but more orphans are knocking for admission to our doors. The Orphanage is the heart, the center of our compassion, our pity, our love. An enlarged Orphanage doing a greater work in behalf of the fatherless and motherless ones is a source of joy, of pride and of prestige for us. Are we willing to pay the price? Somebody must pay. If one does not share the task of pay, one cannot share the joy of praise, of prestige, of profit. No cross, no crown; no pay, no praise. We share the glory of conquest by and through conquering.

We are having a much larger and more costly CHRISTIAN SUN for our families and our firesides. It costs to do this. Are we willing to pay the price?

There must be very sane and very serious work done along these lines shortly. Our mission work must have more money, for this means more and larger Churches. Our Elon must have more and still more money, for we have taken the plunge; we have leaped forward by a tremendous bound. Our Orphanage must have more money. We have more children to support than ever before, and still others want to come. Our CHRISTIAN SUN cannot bear the expense and burden of its own being at its present size and quality. Are we willing to pay the price? Unless we are, there must be, there inevitably will be, retrenchment, stagnation, humiliation before all the world. Are we willing to pay the price? By a law of God, and of this universe, as inexorable as fate, the price must be paid.

THE CHURCH MUST AWAKE.

"We do not know the cause of the falling off in the support of benevolent causes. We only know that every denomination seems to be facing the same condition.

"The great Methodist Church is facing the appalling truth that of the two million members of that Church only three hundred thousand subscribed, and of that subscription only one-half of the pledges due to date has been paid.

"Our Baptist brethren are facing the same condition of affairs.

"In our own synod, it is reported that of the million dollars subscribed several years ago there is still a deficit of $200,000.

"Then in the Synod of Virginia, according to the Presbyterian of the South, it was found necessary for their work to raise from the Churches $173,950. Up to this time they have raised only $43,714, leaving a deficit of $130,236.

"Our assembly committees report a great falling off in their receipts, and they are confronted with the necessity of curtailing their work and checking progress along every line."

The above quotation is from the Presbyterian Standard, and reveals a situation not only in the communions noted, but that of our own Church as well. On some account, there seems to be a tremendous falling off in the liberality of the people to the current expenses and the benevolences of the Churches. The fact is that a few are having the burdens of the Church to carry and the many are paying nothing.

It is declared in the same issue of the Standard from which the above facts and figures are taken that last year, with a membership of 70,838, there were 38,068 persons in the Synod of North Carolina that subscribed nothing to benevolent causes and 35,502 who subscriber nothing to the current expenses. It is declared in a Methodist paper that of the $18,000,000 to be paid through a series of five years, only 15 per cent of the membership subscribed or paid anything.

It would seem, therefore, that the situation confronted by the Churches in their efforts to finance and carry forward the work of the kingdom is that of enlisting a larger and still larger number of the Church membership among the contributors. It is not good business, much less good religion, for the few in the Church to do all the giving. Not that any one claims that the few are giving too much. The Church member is yet to be found who has hurt himself or herself by too much giving to the Lord's work. But the injury is twofold, nevertheless. First, no individual who has a spark of human nature can or will love the Church and be loyal to the Church, as one should be, until such a one has sacrificed, even through the sacrificial service of giving for the Church.

Secondly, the unbalanced burden is that which always does harm. Not that the few are hurt by what they give, but when they realize that the many around them are not bearing their part of the burden, the uneveness and the injustice of the burden bears down the more heavily. To use a homely illustration: it does not hurt Tom to bring in all the wood for the family fire. What does hurt Tom is that Bill, who should be helping him, will not help, and leaves all the work for him to do. If there were no Bill in the case, Tom would never open his mouth in complaint. What Tom wants is to be made to feel that the one who should share the task is doing so.

All of this simply means that the Churches, if they are to function in kingdom's service, must secure a larger number of those who are willing to help in the financial task of the Church. No Church has done its duty to its members until, by a united and concentrated effort, it has given every member of the Church an opportunity of continued and systematic support of the Church. The Churches will certainly never do their duty by their membership until they have put on the every-member canvass, or shall have employed some equally wise, systematic plan of giving the membership the opportunity of contributing systematically and constantly. The Church's redemption in this materialistic time depends very largely upon its power and ability to spiritualize our attitude to all our pursuits and all our possessions. The spiritualization of the modern mind in its attitude toward the longing for wealth is the big task of the Church of our day.

THE CHURCH UNIVERSAL.

It may surprise some readers that the word Church is not found in the Old Testament. The origin of the word Church is obscure, if not unknown.

It is used but twice in the gospels, and that by Matthew only. "Upon this rock, I will build my Church" (16:18), and (18:17) "If he neglect to hear them, tell it to the Church." In all other cases Matthew uses "The kingdom of heaven," thirty-six times. Mark, Luke and John never use "kingdom of heaven," but "kingdom of God." Luke does use the word Church in Acts 2:47, "The Lord added to Church daily such as should be saved"; and in twenty other places in Acts, Luke uses the word Church. It is used 107 times by five other writers in the New Testament.

Pentecost was the birthday of the Christian Church. From that day until this, the word Church has been used to designate the body of believers in Jesus Christ, the place of worship, and a denomination. At one time, in Rome, it was a co-ordinate part of the State.

The history of the Church is the history of missionary evangelism, autocratic domination, and divisions. The missionary period was most fruitful of spiritual results; the autocratic period, of oppression; and the divisive period most wasteful of means, opportunity, and Christian effort. A definition of the Church is difficult, if not impossible; but all children of God are members of the universal Church. It is invisible and spiritual. Protestantism is usually in our minds when we think of the Church; but Jews and Roman Catholics are a part of the universal Church. We would have no Bible and no Saviour without the Jews. Luke is the only writer of the sixty-six books of the Bible who was not a Jew; and Church doctrine and Church history would be meager but for Rome. Jesus Himself was a Jew—born a Jew—and "He came unto His own and His own received Him not." Rome put Christianity in all the world, wrote its history, preserved its doctrines, and the Church universal has always been one in prayer and praise. In spite of the present divided state of the Church, we must still recognize "Christ as the Head of the Church," and that He loved the Church and gave Himself for it" (Eph. 5:23-25).

Independent movements, as evangelical alliance; Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., Christian Endeavor, Interchurch Conference, and Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, all indicate a common desire for closer co-operation in missions, Christian activities, and the salvation of mankind. The Anti-Saloon League is really the Church at work for temperance, and the eighteenth amendment is the result of united Christian effort.

The trend of missionary enterprise, Church literature, and Christian benevolence, like Near East and Japan relief, prove the felt need of the unity for which Christ prayed; and His prayer suggests that it can be achieved only by prayer and co-operation. It cannot be reached by doctrinal agreement, and it need not be done that way. The unity of railroads and the great success of co-operation illustrate Christian unity. Forty years ago, railroads had narrow-gauge, wide gauge, standard gauge—but transportation was slow and difficult. A universal demand brought all roads to the one standard gauge. It met opposition and was slow, but it finally came, and was a blessing to all the roads and the public. Now trains are made up of cars from all companies, adjustments are made in charges, officials work in harmony, and the business prospers. Churches can do the same; and it remains for the people of God to co-operate in local, national, and international service for the kingdom. Let us begin in our own lives.

RADIO RAISED.

Owners of radios have been deeply conscious of the baneful effects on their musical sense of the rag and jazz which have literally infected the air. The managers of the great artists declared they would not permit their clients to perform for the radio, that it would injure the opera and the concerts these artists would give.

Everybody knew this was a great error, that hearing the best cultivates a taste for the best; that hearing a great artist over the radio and acquiring a taste for high-grade music must inevitably incline one to hear the artist or company in person, and that per contra hearing rag and jazz will lead those who endure it to seek cheap vaudeville instead of grand opera when the opportunity is offered to go to the music house itself.

In despair, some radio enthusiasts, when the novelty of the invention wore off, either disposed of their radios or kept them as a sort of social bric-a-brac, assigning them such a place in the family life as the time-honored family Bible.

All this is to be changed now, and the greatest artists in the musical world will give concerts over the radio. The genius who has made this possible is Mr. Eldridge R. Johnson, president of the Victor Talking Machine Company. Mr. Johnson thus at once becomes philanthropist and educator. Here is hoping that his ministry to the culture and refinement of the public will bring a splendid return to him in increased sales of Victor records and talking machines.

His decision thus to make available to shut-ins and children as well as to all users of the radio the best there is in the world of music we have referred to as a philanthrophy and also as an educational force. It is both, and as such the man who has deliberately decided to serve his day in these two important directions is deserving of every consideration on the part of a grateful public.

Mr. Johnson, we may incidentally remark, was very liberal to our Dover (Del.) Church in their recent great remodeling and enlarging program.

Mr. Johnson has raised the radio. He has also raised himself to a high place in the popular estimation. He is really a statesman of the highest order in the realm of business, culture, education, and philanthrophy.

WHO OWN THE RAILROADS?

"There is a persistent rumor, frequently fostered by railway executives, that stockholders own the railroads. Nothing could be further from the truth. There are multitudes of owners of railroad securities, but that they own the railroads is a complete misconception of the facts. Ownership implies the right to manage and dispose of property at will, or at least subject to limited restrictions; but what control do the stockholders have over the roads it is alleged that they own?

"In the first place, no man, or body of men, can build a railroad, or even an extension of an existing road, without an adjudication by a public body that 'public convenience and necessity require' such construction. When the road is built it cannot be sold, mortgaged, or leased without the consent of such body; neither can it, or any part of it, be discontinued or abandoned, even temporarily, without such consent. Moreover, in the operation of the railroad, the public dictate the rates that may be charged, the wages to be paid, the hours the employees shall work, and the number of employees who shall operate trains. The public direct the establishment of new stations and spur tracks, control the changes of grade, overhead or depressed crossings, and may direct the distribution and supply of cars and locomotives and various details of car and locomotive design. Even in corporate transactions such as purchasing supplies, the issue of new securities, the consolidation with, and acquisition of, other railroads, all are subject to public control in a greater or less degree, and, finally, no one may be a director or officer of more than one railroad without the consent of the public.

"This enumeration is not inclusive of all the elements of public control, being but a part of what the Supreme Court has called 'this vast body of acknowledged powers,' but it is sufficient to indicate that if the stockholders have any ownership in the physical properties of a railroad it is of the shadow and not the substance. These 'powers,' now exercised by the Federal government, were earlier the prerogatives of the several States.

"It is frequently said that these limitations are burdensome restrictions imposed upon the owners of the railroads, but in fact they are the very attributes of ownership, and that ownership is in the public. There is, of course, a distinction between beneficial ownership and a bare title. The railroad corporation holds the title to the railroad property, but its beneficiaries are not the stockholders, but the public."—Edmund A. Whitman, in Scribner's Magazine.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE SIGNIFICANT.

A large percentage of parents are making sacrifices so that their children may enjoy the benefits of a more complete education than ever before. In 1870, six children of every ten from five to eighteen years of age were enrolled in a public school, says the Los Angeles Times.

Not only are more children enrolled, but more of those enrolled are attending regularly. In 1870, all public elementary and secondary schools provided 539,503,423 days of schooling. In 1922 they provided 3,022,822,932 days of schooling. If the general population of the United States had increased as rapidly as school attendance between 1870 and 1922, we would have 216,227,633 people in the United States at the present time.

Part of the increase in school attendance is due to the enactment and better enforcement of compulsory attendance laws. But these laws are but the reflection of a public confidence. In fact, it is in the high schools, where attendance generally is not compulsory, that the increase has been most rapid.

In 1920 there were more children enrolled in the public schools of New York State than in all public high schools in the nation in 1890. In 1920 each of the five States—California, Illinois, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania—had more children enrolled in public high schools than were found in all the public high schools of the nation in 1880.

The statistics in this editorial are taken from reports of the United States Bureau of Education.

The growth in public school enrollment is a clear indication of a growing realization of the value of the service rendered by the public school both to the individual and to the nation.

"Lines to a Friend."

When I have needed sunshine you have brought it,
When I have needed help you gave it to me,
Sharing my battle, fighting as I fought it,
Giving your strength to win my victory.

That which I lacked when doubt and danger tried me—
Courage and faith and hope to carry on;
You, with your friendly graces, have supplied me,
Always you stood for me to lean upon.

Yours are the ways of friendship rich with giving,
And when at last I stand before the throne,
Telling the story of my years of living,
There I shall make your deed of kindness known.

—Edgar A. Guest.

A valentine formerly meant a young lady betrothed to a man on the first Sunday in Lent. The agreement was annulled if he did not give her a present on the 14th of February.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

After the close of Federal Council, in Atlanta, Ga., December 9, 1924, I went to Wadley, Ala., on the 10th. Drs. W. P. Minton and W. H. Denison were holding a mission and stewardship conference, or institute, in the Wadley Christian Church, which was well attended and greatly enjoyed. I spent the night with Rev. E. M. Carter and family, after visiting Bethlehem College, of which Rev. Dr. S. L. Beougher is president. On the 11th, Revs. Carter and Beougher drove us over to Lanett, Ga., where Drs. Minton and Denison held another institute in the Christian Church. At this point I left them and took the train at West Point, Ga., for Enterprise, Ala., to visit Uncle Jobes Rawls and Jesse Rawls, uncle and brother of Dr. J. E. Rawls, of Laweview Hospital, Suffolk, Va. I spent a pleasant night in their home and met again Maggie Jones (now the wife of Jesse Rawls), who was the daughter of Benjamin Jones and once an Elon student. It is in this town where I saw the monument to the boll-weevil. The greatest day Enterprise has ever had was when the memorial was unveiled. The reason for such action was the fact that the failure of cotton after the weevil invaded the fields, the farmers diversified their crops and this improved agricultural conditions in Alabama. Now, the weevil has passed on and the cotton crop in 1924 was very fine.

On the 12th, I left Enterprise and went to Tuskegee, where I spent the night and visited the agricultural department the next morning, met Prof. Geo. Washington Carver, the great negro chemist, who has produced wonders out of peanuts, sweet potatoes, and native rocks. He has been made a fellow of the Royal Society of Great Britain for his contribution to science. Thomas A. Edison offered him a presidential salary to join him for five years in his laboratory at Orange, N. J. He thanked Mr. Edison in a letter, but declined the offer, and said: "Booker Washington put me here nearly thirty years ago, and said: 'Let down your bucket where you are.' I did as I was told, and my bucket has always come up brimful and running over." This is a good lesson for dissatisfied people who are always hunting a better place and never finding it.

On the 13th, I returned to Wadley by way of La Grange, Ga., spent the night again with Rev. E. M. Carter and family; went to Sunday School Sunday morning, preached at 11 o'clock, took dinner with Dr. J. M. Welch, preached again at night, spoke Monday morning at the public school and Bethlehem College, preached Monday night, spoke to Bethlehem again Tuesday morning before leaving for Newman, Ga., where I visited Mr. T. S. Parrott, who married Miss Nannie Carlton, of Richmond. I spent the night with them and their three nice children, and they carried me to Atlanta the next morning in a fine car. After spending the day in Atlanta and enjoying the hospitality of the Parrotts, I left for home. I took supper in Wadley with Rev. S. M. Lynam and his wife, spent Monday night with Rev. C. W. Carter, and spent time and ate with Dr. Beougher and his college family.

Bethlehem College is in the manger yet, but doing fine work. It was not what Bethlehem in Judea was, but what came out of Bethlehem. That is the hope for Bethlehem College. It has all the students it can accommodate, is doing fine work, has an earnest, aspiring body of students, and, like all young institutions, needs money to pay debts, erect new buildings, and increase its efficiency. Dr. Beougher, his wife and daughter, and the loyal faculty are doing all in their power to help the anxious students and the people of Wadley and that section of country.

W. W. Staley.

ELON LETTER.

Statistics tell us a great many things. They are facts as related to the past and present. They constitute a safe basis for generalization as to what will happen in the future. The great life insurance business is built on the basis of statistical prophecy as to the length of human life. Out of every thousand people, so many will die at a certain age, and so on. Fire insurance, likewise. All sound business is built on statistics.

It is a known fact that 60 per cent of the students of a college will come from within a radius of fifty miles of its campus. Just what students will come to it in any particular year, statistics cannot forecast, but it can safely predict that for the average normal college 60 per cent of those who do attend will live within fifty miles. When it is otherwise, there is some very special reason to change the mass or group habits of young people with reference to their higher education.

Elon College has 134 students from Alamance County, 29 from Guilford, and 65 from Rockingham, Forsyth, Randolph, Chatham, Caswell, Durham, Orange, and Person Counties; a total in all of 199 students from the counties within the fifty-mile radius. This is 54 per cent of her enrollment. It goes to show that the constituency nearest the college appreciates it. We fall 6 per cent below the expectancy. The explanation is that we draw rather heavily from Virginia for denominational reasons. Our people's loyalty to their own, though their college is more than two hundred miles away, gives us fifty-three students from Virginia. No other college in North Carolina enrolls so many Virginia students. It speaks volumes, convincing volumes too, for the loyalty and devotion of our people.

Commenting on the fact that Alamance County is so largely represented at Elon, the Burlington Daily Times, under date of January 12, 1925, has this fine thing to say:

"To the large number of friends of Elon College in this city and county, it is gratifying to know that there are 134 Alamance boys and girls attending the college this year. The Alamance County people are recognizing the value of this great institution, as shown by this attendance, and next year, no doubt, the number will reach 175 or 200. There are many advantages of this college to the people of Alamance, especially to those who live in nearby towns and communities. The expense of going is very small, and the parents are always in easy touch with their sons and daughters. But the greatest reason for this increased attendance is the character of the institution. The men at the head of this college are known for their strength of character and their interest in those who are committed to their care, and the Christian atmosphere and teaching which is vitally important in this day of dogmatism."

W. A. Harper.

BETHLEHEM LETTER.

The time has come that our preparatory schools and universities are offering a liberal education almost at the door of every boy and girl.

It is not necessary to be born rich in order to secure an education, as the poorest boy or girl can get an education, if he or she desires, without investing much money; but somebody must pay the fare. Every student costs the college vastly more than he puts into it, for it is generally conceded that 31 per cent of his expense comes from gifts, and 30 per cent from endowment, while he pays the other 39 per cent.

The world is demanding every day better educated men and women to meet the needs of this rapid progressive time in which we are living. The Christian Church has established a school at Wadley, Ala., which will do wonders in the next twenty-five years if our people will give it their loyal support.

Our general appeal for one thousand persons who would give $5.00 or more to the emergency fund for Bethlehem College has, up to this time, had but one response, and this was from a young student who is in school at Elon College and is having a hard struggle to get through school, but his heart is in the work at Bethlehem College—he wants to see it grow.

This young man, whose name is Rev. J. H. Dollar, wrote me a very complimentary and inspiring letter, and enclosed a check for $5.00. In order that the readers of this letter may know the sentiment expressed in the letter and take up its spirit, I will give a few extracts from it.

"I have just finished reading your splendid letter in The Sun. I read them all with a great deal of interest and pleasure. I thought of that long-looked-for day when this grand old Church of ours would make possible a college in the heart of our Far Southland. Our fathers prayed and labored for years for it, with the hope that some day they would have an institution fostered by the Church to which they could send their children to receive a Christian education.

"Your letter was very appealing, and it should stir us all up; but I wonder if it will! Would it not be a wonderful revelation and joy to us all if our people would only wake up to the great needs of so worthy an institution. We must awake and rally to its needs if we would share its possibilities and benefits. May God open our ears to the cry for help and our eyes that they may see the possibilities. 'He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.'

"When you called for one thousand men to give $5.00 each, I took it as a personal appeal. I wonder how many others did the same. I believe, as a rule, our people in the Christian Church are the slowest people to take a hint I ever heard of. I feel that in sending $5.00 that I am not giving anything, but I want to pay a few dollars on a big debt I owe Bethlehem College, much of which is far past due.

"We are in school, with heavy expense, and Bethlehem is just in the making, with no endowment. When we struggle, we know how to sympathize with those who are in need. If we would put forth a little more effort, sacrifice a little more for Bethlehem College, we would appreciate her more. I hope that one thousand persons will hear the cry, and you will get $5,000 for Bethlehem College."

Let us pray that our entire Southern Church may have the interest and enthusiasm for Bethlehem College that this young man has set forth in his letter; for prayer is the only instrument which can change information into inspiration, transmit interest into passion, crystalize emotion into consecration, and coin enthusiasm into dollars and lives.

All offerings made on the above appeal will be mentioned in The Sun.

Wadley, Ala. S. L. Beougher.

Subscribe for The Christian Sun.

SICK IN THE VIRGINIA VALLEY.

DEAR EDITOR:

When I wrote THE SUN last, I thought I would have written again before now, for I thought when I closed the meeting at New Hope Church in September, I would hold evangelistic meetings at two or more of my other Churches before Christmas. A severe illness, however, prevented me from holding any more meetings while the weather was favorable. Now, since winter is here in earnest, I shall have to wait until spring brings us more favorable weather. I regret very much having lost all that valuable time. But then, one cannot help being sick. My health was then, as is always, in the hands of my Lord. I am glad to be able to say that He was mighty kind to me, and that my health is better now than it has been in several years.

While it is always bad to be sick anywhere, I cannot help but think that surely this must be the best section of country on earth for one to be in when one is sick. These people are so thoughtful, kind and considerate, so good to visit the sick, so willing and ready to help in any way they can whenever any one is sick. During the forty days that I was confined to my bed last fall, more than one hundred and thirty different people came to see me at least once each. Many of them came many times. They did not stop at coming to see me. They showed their kindness and Christian love in still more concrete ways than that. I received a great many more beautiful flowers than I have any idea will be placed over my grave after I am gone. Many people of the Linville, New Hope and Antioch communities brought or sent my family and me great quantities of good things to eat. Others brought or sent gifts of money. The good people of Linville did many other favors for us. These visits, gifts and favors were not made or shown by the members of my own Churches only, nor by members of the Christian denomination only, nor by people of Rockingham County only, but people of various denominations, including Roman Catholics, of the city of Harrisonburg, of other sections of this county, and of other counties, including friends in Winchester, had a part in them.

The Sunday School of Bethlehem Christian Church (one of Bro. Andes' Churches) sent me a generous donation of money. The people of the Mt. Olivet section, representing different denominations, sent me another very liberal gift of money. Different people of the city of Harrisonburg manifested their spirit of munificence in the same way. Then, too, some of my former members and other friends in Page County came to see us and gave us money and other good things. Several ministers of different denominations came to see me also. Most of my preaching appointments were filled by two brother-ministers of the Presbyterian Church and by members of the band of Christian workers, composed of laymen of various denominations of Harrisonburg, known as Cadle's Crusaders.

These deeds of kindness and generous gifts did not cease when I ceased to be sick, but they have been continuously showered upon us ever since. So it is not so bad to be sick after all, especially in this community. For all of these favors, my family and I are exceedingly thankful. We cannot find words adequate to express to all of these good people and deep sense of heartfelt gratitude and appreciation. Furthermore, we are profoundly grateful to our Heavenly Father not only for restoring my health and for His countless other blessings He is ever pouring upon us in such a lavish way, but also for bringing us to this, one of the most beautiful sections of country on earth, to live and labor among some of the finest people to be found. This is not only o good country to be in when one is sick, but a mighty fine country to live in all the time.

R. P. CRUMPLER.

Linville, Va.

In the General Assembly at Raleigh, N. C., according to figures compiled by Henry M. London, State legislative reference librarian, the religious affiliations of the legislative bodies are as follows: Methodists, 43; Baptists, 35; Presbyterians, 30; Episcopalians, 23; Christians, 3; no Church affiliation, 28; Roman Catholic, none.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The Illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the Number and prices.

TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Minion Bold-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4 7-8x 7 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

India Paper Edition, Size 4 7-8x7 Inches, 1 1-10 Inches Thick.

2152X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$6.00

Bourgeois Type, Size 5 3-8x8 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2167—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.00

2172—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.50

India Paper Edition, Only 1 1-8 Inches Thick.

2172X—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$8.50

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3¾x5⅝ inches, and 1 inch thick; with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black.

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations. Special book for Sunday Schools 95c

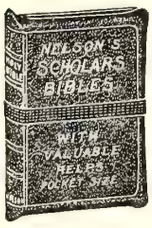
Ruby Type, Size 3¾x5⅝ Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps $2.50

Minion Type, Pocket Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ inches Thick.

With 32 full-colored illustrations; also 25 outline maps through the text and 12 colored maps.

133—Bound in cloth, round corners, red edges, title stamped on side in pure gold $1.60



135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 15-16 of an Inch Thick.

135X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.75

Minion Black-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4¾x 7 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick.

Printed from clear, large, black-face type, 32 full-page illustrations in Sepia and colors, 4,000 Questions and Answers, Harmony of the Gospels, How to Study the Sunday School Lesson, 25 outline Maps, 12 full-page colored Maps.

4152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold.....$3.25

TEXT BIBLES—AMERICAN STANDARD VERSION.

Printed from Easy-Reading Type, on Good Bible Paper, for Sunday School and Church Use.

Minion Type, Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick, 25 Outline Maps, Bound in Black.

101—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, title stamped on back in pure gold..$1.10

112—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title on back in pure gold $2.75

India Paper Edition, Only 7/8-Inch Thick.

112X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

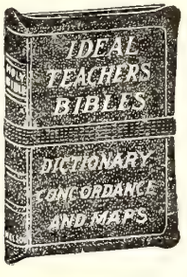
Reference and Text Bibles also in minion, brevier, bourgeois, long primer, pica and English type.

Thumb index cut on edge, 50c extra; name printed on any Bible in gold, 40c extra; extra wording, 40c per line.

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (v vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3-8x 8 1-2 Inches and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.



Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With concise Bible dictionary, combined concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.75

RED LETTER EDITION

With all the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands, title stamped on side and back in pure gold $3.25

Any of the above Bibles sent post paid. Address

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street, - - - Richmond, Va.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

BY WARREN H. DENISON, Secretary.

The Single Budget—Single-Envelope System.

The single budget, single-envelope system is unworthy. Some Churches still use it, but your Church is worthy of better ways. It fails completely to develop a world vision in the congregation. We all have a world responsibility. The command is, "Go ye into all the world." Every person needs to actually divide the money he contributes between his local Church responsibility and his world-wide responsibility. We must always be reminding our selves of that responsibility. A pastor is handicapped in developing a world-wide vision when all the money his members contribute is put into one envelope. Even when they have special offerings, it makes the matter spasmodic and occasional.

This system has a tendency also to produce distrust in Church officers. Many Churches have had sad experiences when they have mixed benevolent and local funds or left them to Church officers to separate.

In the most of cases the practical working-out of this system is the payment of the current expenses and giving the balance, if any, to the benevolent causes. Usually the balance is small.

This system also lacks appeal. There is one thing that should be borne in mind, and that is the universal experience in raising Church budgets is that when the appeal is placed upon benevolences it is easier to raise the current expense budget. You can always make a stronger appeal for "others" than for "ourselves." The Churches that have the hardest time to raise their current expenses are those that make the emphasis of the appeal for their own Church. The Churches that do the most for the benevolences and place the emphasis of their appeal there are those that succeed better with their current expenses. The spirit of sacrifice is the spirit of liberality, sacrificing for others. The hard times to raise Church and benevolent funds are not because the people are not able, nor because they will not give, but because the system is wrong. No, we cannot approve the single-budget system, nor the single-envelope plan. Where it may work successfully in some Church it is not a safe plan to recommend for the majority of Churches. Where it may work in some respects in a given Church under certain pastors and certain Church officials when those Churches change pastors or officials, an unsafe system is established and trouble follows. Avoid this system for the one that is so much better. We know of no denominational stewardship men who approve it.

Stewardship Emphasis.

Many denominations are stressing stewardship this year and next as their major emphasis. Our Church is one of those bodies. Our women have made this their stewardship year, too. We hope that all of our summer schools will see that stewardship is studied this year, and that it has reasonable consideration on their programs.

Every Church should make a generous offering this month for the work of the General Convention. We must heartily and generously support the executive forces of our work.

STEWARDSHIP YEAR.

At the biennial meeting of the Woman's Mission Board, at Muncie, in October, it was voted that this year shall be stewardship year—a year when we shall really seek to understand and practice Christian stewardship in prayer, personal service and possessions. In order to make this work more effective, a committee was appointed to suggest plans of work along this line. The committee is as follows: Mrs. C. W. Johnson, Mrs. Alice V. Morrill, Mrs. W. P. Minton, Mrs. Emma S. Powers, Mrs. W. R. Denison.

The committee makes the following suggestions which were adopted by the board of trustees at its regular monthly meeting in December:

1. That a letter be sent to each local society, setting forth a number of ways in which they can help make stewardship year effective:

2. That a letter be sent to the superintendents of literature of the Conferences, asking their co-operation in getting stewardship literature distributed.

3. That we urge a wide use of the book "Woman and Stewardship" in missionary society and group meetings and in all organizations of women as well as for personal reading among women. (Price 25 cents.) A helpful little leaflet on how to use this book, is also to be had for 5 cents.

4. That we urge the wide use of the book, "Using Our Heavenly Father's Gifts," by leaders, teachers and all workers with children. This is a book prepared by Mrs. Maud Junkin Baldwin and is a splendid series of stewardship lessons for juniors. (Price, 30 cents.)

5. That the new book of "Stewardship Stories for Children," by Miss Margaret Applegarth, which will soon be off the press, be introduced into homes where there are children and to all workers with children as far as possible.

6. That leaflets of stewardship be secured or prepared for sale and distribution and that they be stressed in certain designated periods, viz: one on the stewardship of service, for distribution in April; one called "Tithen Eggs," to be distributed in July (we recommend that this one be used in Sunday School for reading in the monthly missionary services as well as in missionary societies); one to be sent out in October leading up to the thankoffering, called "Stop! Look! Listen"; the last one to be sent out in January, 1926, and that it be along the line of the stewardship of prayer.

We are very desirous that we shall have the co-operation and help of every woman, every group of women and every missionary society, so that the year's work may mean much to us all in the way of a deeper prayer life, more consecrated service and a realization that we are God's stewards, and that at least a tenth of all we possess belongs to Him.

A list of stewardship books for individual reading will be furnished gladly to any one applying to our Woman's Mission Board office or to Dr. Denison, Superintendent of the Bureau of Stewardship and Promotion. Address either office, C. P. A. Bldg., Dayton, Ohio.

Dayton, Ohio. MRS. W. H. DENISON.

STEWARDSHIP INSTITUTES.

Rev. W. H. Denison, D. D., secretary of stewardship of the General Convention, and J. O. Atkinson, secretary of stewardship for the Southern Convention, aided by the pastors and other local talent, will conduct a stewardship institute at the following Churches on days named:

First Church, Greensboro, Dr. C. H. Rowland, pastor, Wednesday, February 4th; Burlington, First Church, Dr. G. O. Lankford, pastor, Thursday, February 5th; Durham, First Church, Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, pastor, Friday, February 6th; Raleigh, First Church, Rev. W. D. Parry, D. D., pastor, Saturday, February 7th; Henderson, First Church, Rev. A. H. Hook, pastor, Sunday, February 8th; Holland, Va., Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, pastor, Monday, February 9th; Franklin, Va., Rev. F. C. Lester, pastor, Thursday, February 10th; Suffolk, First Church, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, pastor, Wednesday, February 11th; Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., Rev. L. E. Smith, D. D., pastor, Thursday, February 12th.

All pastors and members of Christian congregations, particularly Church officers, should take advantage of these institutes and give themselves the benefit of the information and the inspiration that thtey will afford. Dr. Denison has made thorough study of stewardship from the Bible point of view, and is conversant with his topic and will deliver at least three great addresses at each institute. The following program will give an idea of the subjects to be treated and addresses to be delivered:

A one-day get-together and study of a spiritual and biblical truth.

Three sessions—forenoon, afternoon, evening.

1. Exercises begin at 11 A. M., in charge of pastor.
2. Aims and objectives of this institute, Dr. W. H. Denison.
3. Spiritualizing Our Gift to the Church—an address.
4. The Scope and Principles of Stewardship—a discussion.
5. How to make a Church Budget.
6. What is the Work of the Finance Department or Committee?
7. Ten Points in Successfully Financing a Church.
8. Tithing—a Bible reading.
9. How to Put on the Every-Member Canvass Successfully.
10. Teaching Children Stewardship.
11. Paul's Financial Plan.
12. How to Put a Stewardship Program into the Local Church.
13. How to Develop the Grace of Giving.
14. Stewardship and the Scriptures.
15. Stewardship Helps.

Round-Table Questionnaire.

Speakers: Local pastors; W. H. Denison, D. D., Dayton, Ohio, stewardship secretary, General Convention; J. O. Atkinson, secretary stewardship Southern Convention.

Three services—one full day and evening. Stay through.

Pastor will be in charge.

Conference Stewardship Committee will co-operate.

Pastors, officials, workers, members, young and old, men and women should be present with notebook and pencils and a desire to know what the Bible teaches about stewardship.

It will certainly be worth the while of our people and all CHRISTIAN SUN readers within the reach of these institutes to attend one of them, and we sincerely trust, for the sake of the Church and the kingdom which we seek to serve, that there will be a large delegation at each of these institutes.

J. O. ATKINSON,
Secretary Stewardship S. C. C.

Webster's Dictionary, first published in 1828, was preceded over 900 years by a Latin dictionary, compiled by Varro in 116 B. C.

When Roman numerals were used, before the use of figures, all calculation was done with the abacus.

TWELVE INTERNATIONAL MOVEMENTS.

By Rev. R. F. Brown, M. A.

IV. THE MAGNITUDE OF MATERIALISM.

Like any other fanatical movement, materialism should be condemned—not condoned. In the writings of the learned and the scribblings of the ignorant we find worthless discussions of the origin and processes of thought, definitions of human automation, and distinctions between matter and force. And the influence of this doctrine is reflected in ancient and modern life. The explanations, desertations, and teachings of materialism constitute one of the darkest chapters in the history of mankind. So disastrous has been its effect on civilization that the leading teachers and writers are ashamed of it.

From the doctrine of materialism as taught in popular literature, men are turning to that more tangible form of materialism as seen and practiced and experienced in modern life. It is this form of materialism that constitutes the greatest peril of our times. Underneath our social, moral, commercial, political, and spiritual life may be heard the muttering and rolling of this new form of materialism—devising subtle theories for gain and pleasure, scoffing at all moral and ethical codes, obscuring the ultimate aims of life, and changing the whole spiritual landscape. Its slimy form broods over life like a huge eagle over a carcass, and its influence is felt in the ideals, judgments, decisions, and actions of men. From its subterranean path issue its clouds of doubt and confusions which upset our modern life; and from it come the streams of iniquity which poison the very fabric of our civilization. It is a monster to be condemned and feared; a foe to be fought and foiled. Much of the insanity of human conduct and much of the sting of unfair competition issue from this terrible foe to human life and happiness. It lifts from man's shoulders the mantle of joy, silences the music in his soul, and robs him of all spiritual culture in the school of life.

Materialism has two points in its creed. The first point has to do with things. The movement of the world is in the direction of material prosperity. Now, there is no argument against material prosperity if the motive is unselfish. But therein is the crux of the whole question. Without doubt, man's attitude toward things determine his attitude toward man and God; and this being true, the world has long since been brought to the parting of the ways. The person who is swayed by the lure of materialism has two fears. He never gets away from the fear that he will lose what he has, and he is haunted by the fear that he will never be entrusted with more. Modern man, like Louis XI, is willing to execute a deed conveying his holdings to another, but he reserves for himself all revenues. Such an attitude vitiates the very purpose of stewardship, and instead of one's holdings becoming more effective in the purchase of worth-while possessions, they serve to buy trouble and push man a little further from God. Judging from the trend of things, the world is at its greatest danger point. There are literally thousands of men in this country who are the helpless victims of heartless materialism. Just the other day Senator Brandegee killed himself because he lost money in real estate. He was thought of as a powerful man in Congress, a leader of his party, and a splendid citizen. The magic appeal of materialism caused him to lose his balance, and he had rather die than be branded as a failure in a business transaction. The pity is that no higher motive possessed him than that of prosperity, or material gain. Had his motives been different, he would still be living to render service to his country. But his case is not singular. There are many cases just like this one. And until men are responsive to the challenge of the great altruistic movement of life, and actuated by a higher motive than material gain, the world will continue to bow to the sceptre of materialism. This is a tragic situation, but it is true.

The second point in the creed of materialism is pleasure. There is nothing wrong with the right kind of pleasure, but the type of pleasure that is sought today necessitates large expenditures of money. The expenditures by the American pleasure-seekers are alarming. The outlay for automobiles alone is a tremendous item. When it is remembered that in this country there are nearly sixteen million automobiles, the enormity of expenditures is readily seen. Added to the expense of the original purchase is the expense of upkeep and operation. The owner of an automobile must pay a government sales tax, a personal property tax, a license tax, and a tax on accessories. This outlay amounts to millions of dollars annually. And about nine out of every ten of these automobiles are used purely for pleasure. Judged according to the measure of necessity, nine out of every ten automobiles could be eliminated; but judged according to pleasure, within ten years the present number of automobiles will be multiplied by two. There are hundreds of people who own and operate an automobile and cultivate rented land, or live in rented houses. These people manage to get money enough to buy gas and operate their automobile, but are not able to meet their grocery bill on time or pay the rents as they come due. Almost any of them can spend from ten to twenty dollars for repairs and accessories, but cannot give one penny to the Church or benevolence.

Indeed, the accusation that the people of America are pleasure-mad is true. No movement has ever struck this nation that so completely swept the people off their feet as the wave of pleasure. It is contageous. It touches every type and condition of life—the rich and the poor, the high and the low, alike. The magnitude of materialism is seen in the changed attitude of people. There are thousands of people riding in automobiles today who, only a few years ago, frowned on people for hiring a conveyance for business purposes. There are others who make trips and spend large sums of money today who would frown on people a few years ago for such action. Conditions have changed their attitude.

The great outlay of money by the American tourists is appalling. There are more people arranging and taking trips to Europe this year than ever before in the history of this nation. Three hundred thousand people made trips to Europe this summer, spending $300,000,000. Then add to this the large sums spent by the tourists and pleasure-seekers in this country, and something of the enormity of the situation will be seen. But the greatest tragedy is not in the outlay of money itself, but in the spirit that actuated the acquisition of the money and the purpose for which it was spent. At the bottom of the whole thing there is the question of how much pleasure a dollar can purchase; and with such a low conception of money there is little wonder that so much of it is stained by the processes of greed and graft. The very spirit of the times has caused people to think of money in terms of an automobile, a radio, and a good time. People pay a million dollars to see two brutes batter each other to pieces. They give $130,000 to see one contest between two sets of hired hands on a baseball diamond. In four days, people will give $197,000 to see an air race, and when it is all over they say, "It was worth every penny it cost." There is something wrong with people's sense of proportion when such conditions obtain. It would take the city in question twenty-five or thirty years to raise that much money for a benevolent institution—if they ever raised it.

Extravagance is an outstanding characteristic of the American people, and the practice of extravagance is a contributing factor to our present-day degeneracy. When people make money and spend several hundred times as much for pleasure as they spend for Church purposes, it is perfectly plain that there is something wrong with the heart as well as the head. During a recent year while the world starved, we spent for joy-riding, automobiles, luxurious living, tobacco, chewing gum, jewelry and other unnecessary luxuries $22,700,000,000. During the same period we spent $37,886,040 to promote the work of the Church abroad. It is nothing less than a shame that we spent $600 for luxuries for ourselves to $1.00 to evangelize the world! The trouble is, the world has become intoxicated from an overdraught of materialism. It was thought that the World War would have a sobering effect; but it seemed to add fuel to the flames. Our second state is far worse than the first.

Looking at the whole question from the standpoint of common sense, two convictions are greatly strengthened. First, any tendency to exclude the spiritual element from material prosperity and personal pleasure reduces the whole thing to a materialistic basis. This tendency has produced a mysterious complex in society. There are certain people who still believe that underneath all tangible and visible things there is an infinite Spirit, and through the varying degrees of prosperity and in spite of adverse forces, there is an eternal purpose perverting the whole of life. On the other hand, there is the view that things are self-dependent and wholly material. But the fact that God is back of all things, as well as Creator of man, and is exercising supremacy over material and spiritual things, is satisfying. While this conception has in it the element of mystery, it also has in it an element of satisfaction. Materialism may satisfy the superficial thinking of a pleasure-mad world, but it is incapable of reaching the depths of man's spiritual nature. It cannot comprehend the mystery and the majesty of the heart; the spiritual element is perfectly at home in the midst of the secrets of the heart.

The second observation is this: Materialism's creed is unworthy because it vitiates the highest aspirations of mankind and destroys the finest hopes of humanity. It is perfectly clear that in the heart of man there is "pleasing hope, a fond desire, a longing after immortality." Aspiration which spurs man to higher endeavor and elevates his life is chastened, chilled, and crucified by the vicious creed of materialism. It not only leaves a great void in the heart, but grants immunities to evil. But under the regenerating power of God man may look for the creed of materialism to be changed, and wait for the universal establishment of righteousness.

HELP NEEDED.

The East LaGrange Christian Church is making a desperate effort to raise $1,550.00 during 1925. This will pay our building debt off in full. Any help will be highly appreciated. You may pay your subscription either weekly or monthly. Send all subscriptions and money to W. M. Crowder, 230 Spring Street, LaGrange, Ga.

The "fly-paper women" of Paris streets wear fly-paper hats when they call their wares.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

February 8, 1925.

Subject: "Christ's Intercessory Prayer."

Golden Text: "Holy Father, keep them in Thy name which Thou hast given me, that they may be one, even as we are."—John 17:11.

Lesson: John 17:1-26.

Devotional Reading: Eph. 3:14-21.

Reference Material: Matt. 6:9-13.

He had lived for others. He "who went about doing good" had spent and been spent for others. And now He was about to die for others. On the morrow, He was to suffer and die on the cross for others. It was in keeping with this spirit that He should pray for others. The seventeenth chapter of John is a matchless prayer for others by Him who lived and died for others. He had told His disciples on an earlier occasion that they should pray for others, for said He, "When ye pray, say 'Our Father,' 'give us this day our daily bread,' 'and forgive us our debts,' 'and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil.'" The emphasis on prayer was social. And the Master-prayer practices what He preached. His prayer is intercessory; it is for others.

Before taking up the outlines of the prayer, it might be well to touch upon the matter of intercessory prayer. For it is a real problem for many. They do not understand how it helps to pray for another. They do not understand how prayer for others works. They would like to pray for others if they thought it did any good. But does it? There are, of course, many mysteries about intercessory prayer. But there are many mysteries about many things in our everyday life. But we use these things in spite of the mystery. We do not understand how electricity works or the radio works, but we use them just the same. The same argument ought to apply to intercessory prayer. We may not understand how it works, but we may prove by practical demonstration that it does work. And the fact that Jesus who was the final authority on moral and spiritual matters prayed for others ought to be enough to convince us that it was vital to Christian religion and ought to stimulate us to practice it. The best argument for prayer is prayer. He that doeth the truth, cometh to the light. He that prays for others will know the value of praying for others.

Jesus prays first for Himself. But He prayed for Himself only to the end that God might be glorified. "Glorify Thy Son, that Thy Son also may glorify Thee," He said. And this glory was to the end that men might know God and Christ, whom to know aright is life eternal. He who had power over all flesh, i. e., all humanity, had had glory before He came to earth. But that glory had been enhanced by His life and ministry, and especially by the revelation of God which the Son had given. Thrice happy is the man who can say, "I have glorified Thee on earth: I have finished the work which Thou gavest me to do."

The Master then prays for His disciples. He prayed that they might be kept through the power of God, both from worldly things and from the evil. It is significant that He does not pray that they might be taken out of the world. Jesus knew that the way to become strong was not to be kept from trouble, but to overcome trouble. Goodness that has not been tried is not goodness at all; it is simply innocence. Those whose robes are whitest in the picture in Revelation are those who have come up out of great tribulation. The Master wanted His disciples to live in the world, but not to be of the world. He wanted them to life the world up and not to allow the world to drag them down, or, what was just as bad, to withdraw from the world. The world is never going to be saved by monks who live in seclusion, but by men and women who live down where their fellow-men are sweating and striving and suffering. We are to be in the world, but not of the world.

Jesus finally prays for all those who should believe on Him. He had confidence in these eleven men, and He knew that because of their testimony many would believe on Him. He prays for them. He asks that they might be one. He emphasizes this unity. In fact, He says that it was as His followers became one that the world would know that God had sent and loved them. The tale of disunity, and even of bitterness, is a long one. And even yet we are far from being one. But a new day has dawned, and thank God we are becoming more and more one in spirit, if not in thought. And if God be God, some day there will be unity and men shall resolve to love even if they agree to differ. One is your Lord or Master or Teacher, and all ye are brethren.

Teaching Points on the Lesson.

1. Jesus Christ is Master of life and death.
2. Jesus Christ manifested God.
3. God is glorified in His followers.
4. Real life is to be found only in God, through Jesus Christ.
5. Life is a journey with a goal, not a pleasure jaunt.
6. "To know Jesus Christ is to have His will, and to have His love, and to have His life, and to be like Him."
7. As God sent Christ to reveal Himself and to reconcile the world unto Himself, even so does Christ send us.
8. The fact that a man lives is evidence of the fact that God can use him.
9. The most Christ-like prayer is the prayer for others.
10. The way to become strong is to overcome.
11. Jesus Christ makes it so much easier to believe in God.
12. He who prays most for others will help himself most.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

February 8, 1925.

Topic: "The Conquest of Selfishness."

Bible Readings: Rom. 15:1-7; Matt. 16:22-17.

Worship Service: Stand with bowed heads and sing softly "Lord, Speak to Me, that I May Speak," or some other appropriate hymn.

Prayer: Our Heavenly Father, Thou great Friend of all, Thou hast so graciously cared for us through the past week; for Thy loving care, we thank Thee. We worship Thee, the Maker of all, the Giver of every gift, and we ask that we may so live that our friends may see Thy spirit in us and worship Thee. Help us to love Thee more. Amen.

Devotional Leader: Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ.

Second Speaker: Read 1 Cor. 13:3-7.

Devotional Leader: For the Son of Man came not to be ministered, but to minister.

Second Speaker: Read 1 Cor. 13:9-13.

Scripture Reading: Matt. 16:22-27.

Chain of sentence prayers closed by singing softly two verses of "Have Thine Own Way, Lord."

Points for Leader's Talk.

Sometimes we think so much about helping the poor and needy that we are blinded to the needs of our friends whom we see so often. Perhaps they don't need physical help, but they may need friendliness, kindness, a good word of cheer, a word of encouragement or a smile. Did you ever try singing a cheerful song in the early morning and noticing how many people picked it up during the day?

In order to help those who need our help we must first see that our own hearts are right. Let every member of the society examine his or her own self and see if you are true to yourselves. Do you think happy thoughts? Do you speak kind words? Do you "radiate sunshine?"

Are you selfish with your friends? Do you expect all from them but give nothing in return? Perhaps the greatest injustice we can do people is to flaunt our own opinions without giving them credit for having any of their own. Sometimes we selfishly ignore the opinions or suggestions of our friends instead of encouraging them.

Thoughts for the Meeting.

What is selfishness? It is being interested in ourselves to the exclusion of all others who do not contribute to our own happiness. It is being self-centered, over-rating our own ability and under-rating the ability of others. Some people are unselfish in the big things of life, but extremely selfish in the small things which make us either agreeable or disagreeable.

What is unselfishness? It is, above all things else, tolerance, and this is one of the greatest of Christian virtues. It is consideration for others, a willingness to share, generosity, patience, gentleness and kindness.

What is a selfish Christian Endeavor Society? One with a few leaders who want to "run the whole thing"; one which says we will do all for ourselves, but nothing for others; one which continually bores its members with the same kind of meetings.

What is an unselfish Christian Endeavor Society? One which knows it is a part, and only a part, of the Church work, always ready to promote the work of the Sunday School and the Church, especially interested in every member of the society, works hard to interest and please those who attend its meetings, gives each one something to do, helps its Church orphanage and mission work, and those who need its help, when ever possible.

How may we conquer selfishness? By rendering service rather than thinking always of self; by putting the most important things of life first; by a spirit of sacrifice; by working hard and being happy.

The subscription books to The Sun are still open for new subscribers. Good returns; value given for value received. The Church paper should be in your home.

Christian Orphanage

DEAR FRIEND:

This report is our first for 1925. It always takes a few weeks at the first of the year to get in all the delinquent offerings for the year past and get our books balanced up for the year; hence the report for January is somewhat delayed.

This report is our starting-point for 1925, and considering conditions, I guess we have a fair beginning, so we start off in the new year with bright hopes and expecting greater things for 1925 than we had in 1924. The opportunities were never greater to do a larger service through our Orphanage department of our denomination than it is today. In the history of our institution, the demands upon our Orphanage have never been greater. Little children, eighty strong, are pleading for a place in our institution. We are compelled to turn them away because we have no more room. Our present capacity is for 100 children. We have cared for 108 during the year 1924. We were a little crowded, but had some applications that we could not turn away. I tell you, friends, it is hard to deny a little fellow who has lost both father and mother and has no home. No one to take him and give him a home. We need another building to meet the crying need of the fatherless, and we need it now. We ought to build it this year. We ought to make this one of our New Year's resolutions.

Several years ago, when we commenced to build the new building we now have for the smaller children, a noble-hearted young lady, who teaches school for a living, subscribed $100.00, to be paid in five yearly payments of $20.00 each. She paid her fifth payment the first of the year, and wrote me to put her down for $100.00 on the new building we are contemplating building this year, provided we would let her pay it $20.00 per year till paid. I wish we had ten thousand girls with such a noble spirit. We could build a new building every year and give a happy home to so many of the little homeless tots.

When you read this letter, won't you please give it just a few minutes of prayerful consideration and ask God to help you to make use of the opportunity to help the little fatherless ones? Then, won't you be so kind as to write me a letter and tell me how much you would like to invest in this new building for the fatherless? Just in the same spirit of the young lady mentioned above. We would like to receive a thousand letters this month in regard to this matter. Let us hear from you.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR JANUARY 29, 1925.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

North Carolina and Va. Conference:
Ingram	$ 5.00
Palm Street, Greensboro	5.30
Pleasant Ridge (G)	1.74
New Lebanon, Baracca Class	2.00
Bethlehem (A)	2.64
Third Avenue, Danville	3.93
Mt. Bethel	1.95
Reidsville	5.91
		$ 28.47
Western N. C. Conference:
Randleman	$ 2.50
Ramseur	5.91
Seagrove	.93
Pleasant Hill	1.18
		10.52
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Sanford	$ 2.66
Wake Chapel	5.15
Durham	10.04
Shallow Well	1.75
Mebane	1.00
First Church, Raleigh	5.05
Chapel Hill	2.40
Plymouth	4.00
Turner's Chapel	3.85
Catawba Springs	11.34
		47.24
Eastern Virginia Conference:
Oakland	$ 1.95
Rosemont	4.95
Wakefield	1.85
Waverly (Dec.)	5.00
Suffolk	25.00
Holland	12.00
Portsmouth, First Church	7.16
Berea, Nansemond	10.00
Portsmouth, Elm Avenue	4.25
Bethlehem	6.00
Berea, Norfolk	6.00
Franklin	5.00
		89.15
Valley Virginia Conference:
Leaksville	$ 2.50
Dry Run	2.13
		4.63
Alabama Conference:
Pisgah	$ 1.72
Rock Stand	2.70
Zion	.68
Rock Springs	2.00
		7.10
Georgia & Alabama Conference:
Richland	$ 2.87
		2.87

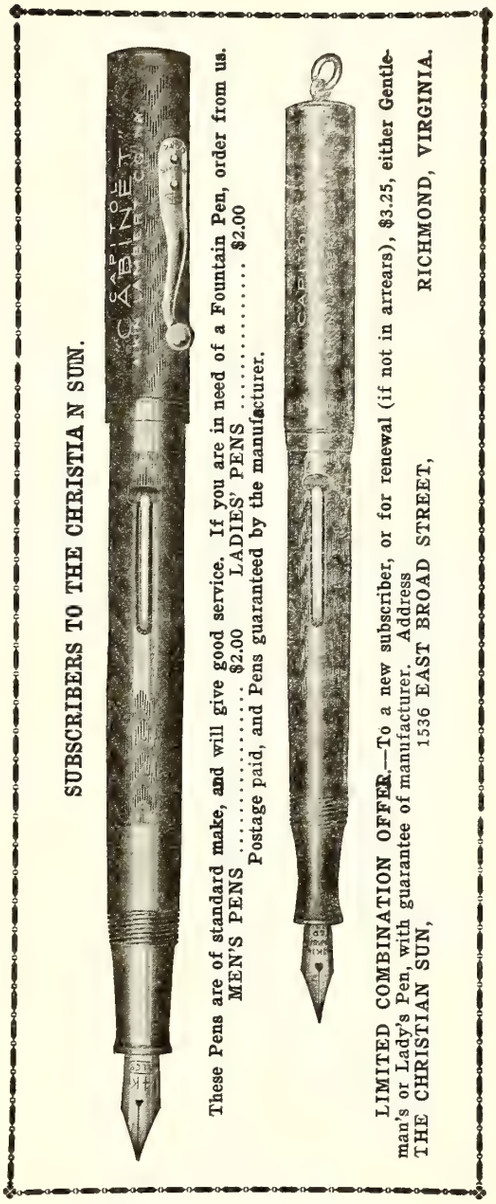
Thanksgiving Offerings.

Bethlehem (A), N. C.	$ 2.87
Anna Helfenstein, Mont.	5.00
Monticello Church, N. C.	2.20
Mrs. T. W. Parks	2.00
New Hill Church, N. C.	10.00
First Church, Raleigh, N. C.	14.30
		36.37

Special Offerings.

E. M. Davenport	$ 75.00
Edgmont Baptist Phil. Class	14.00
Celestia Penny, Baby H. pledge	15.00
Reidsville, birthday offering	13.80
Mike Clapp, support of children	20.00
Oakland Ch., birthday bank	10.00
Interest	30.00
W. W. Brown	15.00
Lawrence S. Holt, endowment	150.00
Pleasant Hill Church, Ohio	10.95
		353.75
Total		$ 580.10

Rev. Alva M. Kerr, D. D., editor of the Herald of Gospel Liberty, who has been away some weeks health-seeking and taking an overdue rest at a sanatorium, has, we are happy to say, returned to the editorial chair at Dayton and again picks up his pen for the great task in which he is engaged. The Church is to be congratulated that he is permitted to take up the task where he laid it down, and the hopes and prayers will be given that his strength will be multiplied and many years added for the high and holy services which he is rendering to his day and generation. Somewhere tugging away at his task, there may be a greater soul and a nobler heart than Bro. Kerr, but up to date this writer has not discovered him. Here indeed is a hero of Christian grace and fortitude. God's blessings upon him and His bounty and beneficence attend his days.



SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CHRISTIA N SUN.
These Pens are of standard make, and will give good service. If you are in need of a Fountain Pen, order from us.
MEN'S PENS ..... $2.00 LADIES' PENS $2.00
Postage paid, and Pens guaranteed by the manufacturer.
LIMITED COMBINATION OFFER.—To a new subscriber, or for renewal (if not in arrears), $3.25, either Gentleman's or Lady's Pen, with guarantee of manufacturer. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 EAST BROAD STREET, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Mission Study Books.

Official List for 1924-1925.

ORDER BY TITLE OF BOOK.

FOR ADULT CLASSES.

For Home Mission Classes:
"The Romance of Home Missions," by S. L. Morris, D. D.. Paper, 50c; cloth..... $ .75
For Foreign Mission Classes:
"Ming Kwong—the City of Morning Light," by Mary Ninde Gamewell. Paper, 50c; cloth .75
"In China," by H. F. Williams, D. D..... .25

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

For Intermediate Home Mission Classes:
"The Land of All Nations," by Margaret F. Seelbach. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75
For Intermediate Foreign Mission Classes:
"China's Real Revolution," by Paul Hutchinson. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75
For Junior Foreign Mission Classes:
"Chinese Lanterns," by Minna McEwen Meyer. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... .75

LEADERS' HELPS.

Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Adult Classes) ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Young People's Classes)..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Land of All Nations"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Ming Kwong"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "China's Real Revolution".. .15
Leaders' Helps for "Chinese Lanterns"..... .15

Send all orders to—

THE CHRISTIAN SUN,
1536 East Broad Street - - Richmond, Virginia.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

FAITHFUL TO THYSELF.

"Well done, good and faithful servant. Thou hast been faithful over a few things; I will make thee ruler over many."—Matt. 25:14-30.

When you have time to rest and relax, do you seek the society of persons who are expertly versed along certain lines to get useful information? You say you are willing to acknowledge that you move in a small circle. But in that circle, do you include any one who knows more than the limit of your own knowledge and experience?

If you do not seek others who know more, you are moving along the line of the least resistance and you are stagnating. Those who cease to read books of useful facts in history, science or some development of art are retrograding unless they can make up for it through the company they keep.

If you cannot give out any useful information you have gained in the past five years aside from the knowledge which you had to gain to make a success in your business, you are missing the best part of living. For you will find that there are men and women who are studying to increase their knowledge which will make them sought before you, if you do not keep up.

As opportunity comes, they spring to take advantage of it, while you are too indifferent to bestir yourself, and in consequence you lose out. (Copyright, 1924, International Feature Service, Inc.)

Prayer.—Our Father, show us how to so work and improve in our talents that we may acquire the profit of goodness to His and faithfulness to ourselves, raising our abilities to the fraction of the highest power, be it ever so little. In His name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

DOING WELL.

"What thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest."—Eccl. 9:10.

We are living only while we are doing. We have been given a vineyard wherein to dig the soil and sow the seed from which to reap a harvest, and that work is born in us.

What we can do is a small thing; but we can aspire to great things. We may not be great, but we can be good in our wills and efforts, and what we, with a whole heart and mind, love and desire, will and strive to be, that without a doubt we most truly are.

Prayer.—Our Father, endow our souls with the Holy Spirit in our daily tasks, inspire our wills to noblest ends, strengthen our efforts to the best we can do, that we may keep every faculty in us alive and at its best. Be it ever so small, in the end may it be "well done." In His name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

CHARACTER OF THE EARLY CHURCH.

"And they, continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meals with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God and having favor with all the people."—Acts 2:46-47.

This text is a picture of Christianity in its first stages, and in it we see the spires of the early Church. Note its chief characteristics—steadfastness, beautiful and rare, constance unwavering, strict adherence to what they had been taught by Christ and held together by loyalty to Christ.

Another element entered into their character—joyful fellowship. Praises were never absent. Their new life gave them a new sense of brotherhood. This was to be their strength when persecutions broke upon them.

The Holy Spirit in the human heart "stablishes," strengthens and settles our souls, endows us with God, His love and His gospel, and makes us see God's goodness. These things never exhaust themselves in benevolence, but find their highest expression in serving one another forwarding redemption.

Prayer.—Our Father, bring us and Thy people everywhere into the friendship of Christ, and may we follow the "covenant" of mutual service and sacrifice. May our love for Thee be such a consecrated thing that we may withstand every crisis of trouble. Soften and hollow our spirits by Thy love. Lift us into the chivalry of unmoveableness and melt us into the tenderness of enduring love. In His name we ask it. Amen.

THURSDAY.

ALL GOD'S CHILDREN.

"God hath showed me that I should not call any man common or unclean."—Acts 10:25-31.

While living in New York, there came to me a desire to know more about the foreign element in the city. After a rough-hewn course in Italian, there came a whole winter and spring of living with several different Italian families in the Five Point section. There was no measuring my surprise when I found that the people of "Little Italy" were just like the rest of us; that is, they were folks. Some good, some bad, some mediocre.

One man there was who had been deprived of an education. How hard he worked; how frugal he was, his noonday lunch a slab of "black" bread and the ever-present spray of garlic. One summer day I met him. Then his lunch was bread and two raw tomatoes! He was stinting himself so that he could educate his children. And how he loved his wife and family! It was good to see. Then also, there was the young man who was working night and day trying to accumulate sufficient funds to bring his parents to America. On the whole, the people were sober, hard working, thrifty, honest and law-respecting.

It is hard for us to grasp the fact; but learn that lesson we must. We all are God's children! A special revelation was necessary to convince Simon Peter.—Rev. John Harrison Allen.

Prayer.—For all those who are striving to enforce law and make the State honored and revered for citizenship, we pray that they have the support of Thy people who ahve vowed to be true to Thee. Make of our citizenship a thing of daily honor, in obedience to the constitution of the country, and a willingness to suffer if need be in defense of its integrity. In Jesus' name. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE PARENTAL TOUCH OF LOVE.

"And put forth His hand and touched him . . . and immediately his leprosy was cleansed."—Matt. 8:1-4.

The multitudes were around Christ. A leper was among them. He had probably witnessed the healing of others. But others had their friends; they were not repulsive like himself. People avoided him. Though without friends and an outcast, he pleaded, "If Thou wilt, Thou canst make me clean." He admitted the power, he doubted the willingness; yet the willingness of Jesus is the one thing of which man should be confident.

Jesus left the beauty and harmony of heaven to rescue the needy and the repulsive. So He not only answered the call of the leper with the command to be healed, but He stretched forth His hand and gave Him the touch of love. Because the leper was in distress and lothsome, because others avoided him, Jesus showed him kindness. The evil in us attracts Him. Jesus comes to us because of our sickness and distress. When one cries to Him, "I am poor and needy; make haste and help me, O God!" He hears, He comes, His willingness is sure. "To every one that thirsteth, come unto me, and your soul shall live." He will change repulsiveness into beauty, paralysis to strength, decay to life. "O taste and see that Jehovah is good."—J. H. Mills.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

SATURDAY.

JESUS THE TRUTH.

"I am the way, the truth, and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me."—John 14:6-7.

This is one of the notable, insistent and constant teachings of Jesus.

In this lesson it is the "truth" we aret hinking of. When Jesus was before Pilate, the latter asked Him rather contemptously, "What is truth?" That is a burning question today. Some say truth is anxious; others, it's an event; the scientists say it's a law; the theologian, a creed; and there is an extent of truth in all, but Jesus said truth is moral goodness in a person, and acted as in life the things that one does every day.

By this truth our ideas are tested, such as in regard to God, prayer, doing good, sacrifices, the Church and His kingdom; and these ideas are brought constantly into judgment by it. From this truth we receive our power to build up truth in the world.

Prayer.—We beseech Thee, our Father, for blessing on us that we may know our Saviour, whom to know is life eternal. That we may embody His truth and be builders of that truth in this world. In His name we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE DAY WHICH THE LORD MADE.

"This is the day which the Lord made, we will rejoice and be glad in it."—Psa. 118-24.

If Christ means anything to us, His day means all that He was. As the Sabbath is a reminder of His resurrection, it is a call unto us to the newness of life and hope.

It is a call to the sinner and the wayward to awake from sin, "arise from the dead" and Christ shall give thee light. "Receive that newness of life and hope," then follow Paul's advice, "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above."

These were the thoughts and feelings of the first believers. They were saved from sin and strengthened in His holy love; and they lived as men to whom the world was nothing except a place to live bodily, where they might love and serve one another and await patiently for the coming of the Lord.

Prayer.—Our Father, call us to the Christ-life and help us to go on with it with renewed zeal and carefulness. As our Saviour endured and conquered all, give us strength to conquer. If we have only to come to Thee for it, may we have it now. In His name we ask it. Amen.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

Good morning, Fairies! Was it you that brought the sunshine out again? Where has the old sun been so long, and what has he been doing? Resting? But after all, the rain brings days that are good—yes, sir-e-e! Big sister can stay indoors and read her new book, and sew too, and little brother can play the puzzle-peg game that Santa brought—and oh! it's nice inside the warm room, too, when outside the window-pane the rain drops are splashing, and splashing. And did you know that there is a tiny rainbow in every rain drop? Look for it next time, Kiddies, for sure!

Oh, the party! Yes, indeed, we had the party, and it was so interesting, too. You see, there were six little Kiddies' Kirner Kiddies that dressed to represent one of our holidays, and her table was dressed up, too, to look like the holiday she had chosen. Then a game was chosen for each table—maybe two games. Yes, the guests played at the tables until a wee bell rang; then away they would hop and skip to play at the next table, until all the Kiddies had played at all the tables. Then a little boy with big brown eyes showed your editor his score-card, and it had the most punches in (that means he played the games the best)—so we gave him a box of beautiful water-colors. And the two little girls that were Martha and George Washington, their table was voted the prettiest of all, so they got a prize, too—that was a box of candy.

Couldn't—oh, please have one, too—couldn't your teacher help you have a party just like ours? Ask her, Kiddies, do; and write me all about it. Can you?

I feel Jack Frost biting my fingers, so here we go to the fire—my fingers and I. So long, dears.

YOUR EDITOR.

A SWAN BOAT.

By Robert Palfrey Utter.

What fun to be a baby swan,
With mother's back to ride upon,
In the placid pond afloat
Like a fleece-lined motor boat.

TRAVELING LIGHT.

By Minnie Leona Upton.

Master Robin and his wife have started South once more.
They didn't shut a window, and they didn't lock a door!
They didn't take a traveling-bag, or lunch, or anything!
Just took themselves, and said, "Cheerup! we'll be back next spring!"

THE CROW THAT TRIED TO THROW STONES.

The crow that tried to throw stones was an orphan. He was a nestling of the Mackinaw woods, and lived happily enough at first in his nest in a tall Norway pine with his brothers and sisters. Then one day his father and mother were shot by some one who, let us hope, didn't know about the helpless family in the tree-top.

Any way, a boy climbed the tall tree one day and looked into the nest. He found one little crow that had not starved to death. The boy was so sorry for the poor little starving crow that he talked to it all the way home. Of course, he carried it home tenderly and fed it and gave it water and a warm, safe place to sleep. That good boy's name was George Davis.

The little crow grew and thrived, and had many adventures. It was given away saveral times before it was strong enough to take care of itself and go flying wherever it chose.

This crow seemed to like the company of boys and girls, and stayed where they were long after he might have gone to live with other crows. He liked to perch on a certain woodshed room and watch the doings of a group of children with whom he was well acquainted. When they shouted in their play, he used to add his voice to the merry din and call aloud, "Caw! caw! caw!"

One time, to tease him, a child picked up a pebble and tossed it upon the woodshed roof. The crow picked it up, went to the edge of the roof and dropped it to the ground.

That was the beginning of a new game between the crow and the children; they kept on tossing pebbles upon the woodshed roof and thought it great fun to watch the crow pick up the pebbles and drop them to the ground.

At last the children began throwing bigger and bigger stones to scare the crow; they didn't intend to hurt him, but he had no way of knowing that.

It was Catherine Griffith, a dear little girl, who wouldn't have hurt a Christmas mouse if she found him nibbling the toe of her bulging stocking right after Santa Claus had made his visit—it was Catherine Griffith who picked up a big, flat stone and sent it slidin gup on the crow's roof.

The crow put his head on one side and thought a minute before he did something different. He picked up the big, flat stone in his bill, but instead of dropping it over the edge of the woodshed roof, he began flying after the children with it.

Catherine turned and ran, and all the children ran with her, laughing and screaming. One little boy, Pat, lost his slipper as he ran and didn't dare go back to get it. They were really frightened because the crow did his best to throw the stone at them. It fell, bump! on the ground behind Catherine.

Back went the crow for more stones to drap on the children if possible. And ever after, until he flew away to the forest where he belonged, to live with the crow folks, he had more fun than the children did when they played the stone-throwing game. When they tossed stones, they never tried to hit him; they tried not to—but when he dropped stones from the air he certainly tried to hit them. When he scared little baby chicken, he used to go back on his woodshed room and laugh about it—"Caw! caw! caw!"—Frances Margaret Fox, in Banner.

HER FAVORITES.

By M. L. H.

My favorite dress, I must confess,
Is not my red, or blue, or pink
(They're fine, I think);
But I like climbing trees and walls—
My favorite dress is overalls!
My favorite hat has nothing on it;
It's just my every-day sunbonnet.
My favorite summer shoes, you say?
Ha! I go barefoot all the day!

Notice.—Read the Crow Story, and see if you like it. Then remember, if you can, some children, one time, who threw stones at an old, old man. What happened to the children?

Jack Frost visited town last week. He brought some new paint brushes, and put them on display in all the windows.

Peter Rabbit has been quite ill for a long, long time. Mother Rabbit has been so distressed! But Dr. Wise Owl said it was only the Croup. Castor oil was prescribed. We hope little Peter will be out again very soon.

A short note from Santa Claus suggests that all girls and boys make the honor roll during this next year. Some didn't come up to Santa's expectations last year. We regret this very much, but hope Santa will not be disappointed again.

Ponjola Dan, the wee puppy we have heard of before, attended a grown-up party last week. His mistress was distressed because he wiggled and capered around during the party. But it was only his little doggie way. The guests thought he was awfully pretty and cute.

Mrs. Marilla and her small doll-daughter, Matilda Ann, have been on a short vacation to Florida. They returned by the fast express—chair train—last Monday night. After the chair train arrived, it was turned into the regular places at the dining table, and a small tea was served, consisting of bread crumbs, brown sugar, and cold water, served in small tea cups. Matilda Ann's yellow dress was not even soiled, and Mrs. Marilla is very proud of her doll's neat habits.

MUTUAL ASSISTANCE.

By Mattie Lee Hausgen.

"Dear Little Miss Muffett," sighed Little Bo-Peep,
"I wish you would help me to find my sheep."
"I will," said Miss Muffett, her blue eyes stared wider,
"If you will first help me to frighten the spider."

THE CHRISTMAS DOLL.

Dolly, with the painted hair,
Sitting on a small, red chair
By a stocking hung for you;
Dolly, with round eyes of blue,
With your dress of ruffled lace,
And your rosy, baby face,
Tell me, are you fit for life?
For the children's play, and strife?
Fit to stand the wear and tear
Waiting for you, Painted Hair?

Dolly, is your temper sweet,
When you're carried by your feet?
You'll be rocked, and sung to sleep,
Kissed and spanked and made to weep.
But, when voices call, "Come play,"
All forgotten, cast away,
In a corner you'll be flung,
Trash and dust to lie among;
Cold neglect, or ardent care,
Waiting for you, Painted Hair.

Dress pulled off, and not put on,
One arm lost, your slippers gone,
Dim and dingy, dented nose,
Paint all scraped, and ragged clothes!
Ah, but Dolly! when it's night,
Little arms will hold you tight,
Little body warm your cold,
Tender love about you fold—
Compensation, sweet and rare,
Waiting for you, Painted Hair.

An agreement has been reached in Paris by which, beginning in 1927, the United States is to get 2¼ per cent of the German reparations payments to cover her war damage claims against Germany, and also $13,750,000 annually on the costs of the army of occupation until $240,000,000 has been paid.

DAVIS.

Lillie J. Davis was born May 29, 1897; died January 16, 1925. She leaves three sisters, three brothers and mother, father. She joined the Church at New Center when a child. She was a good girl. She loved her Church and was faithful to it. She always met one with a smile. Lillie will be missed at home and at Church. Her favorite song was sung, "Waiting the Boatman." Her last words were rich. She said she was ready and willing to go.

May the Lord bless the dear mother in her declining days, and all her sisters and brothers. May they put on the robe of righteousness and be ready when that great day comes. May the Lord bless the boy at home as he is left to take his father's place. Tillie was laid to rest in the cemetery at Christian Union. The service was conducted by the writer, her pastor.

W. J. EDWARDS.

Steeds, N. C.

APPLE.

Julius H. Apple was born May 25, 1859, and died January 8, 1925, age 65 years, 7 months and 14 days. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Michael. He leaves to mourn their loss a wife, three children, three brothers, one sister and a number of relatives and friends.

The funeral was conducted by the writer at Apple's Chapel, and his body placed in the Church burying-ground. He joined Apple's Christian Church about forty years ago, and remained a member until his death. He was a good neighbor, and lived a quiet, honest, Christian life.

May the Lord bless the bereaved ones and help us all to love as he would have us live.

J. F. APPLE.

Elon College, N. C.

DICKEY.

Robert Chesley Dickey departed this life at his home in Burlington, N. C., January 11, 1925, in his seventy-second year. His wife and six children survive him.

Bro. Dickey was a member of Union Christian Church, and had been for a number of years. He served Alamance County as county treasurer some years ago.

In home, Church, and community he was kindly disposed. He was deeply attached to his home, his family, Church, and his friends. He died suddenly. His death was a great shock. He will be missed. But we are glad that years ago he accepted Christ and made preparation. He has fallen asleep, and sweet be that sleep till the Master awakes him. The funeral services were from Union Christian Church by the writer, and his body laid to rest in the Church cemetery.

P. H. FLEMING.

Burlington, N. C.

UPCHURCH.

On January 14, 1925, Mrs. Jeanette Upchurch, wife of the late J. C. Upchurch, departed this life, being almost 56 years of age. Mrs. Upchurch first united with the Methodist Church at Olive Branch, Harnette County, but later moved her membership to Pleasant Union Christian Church, where she was a faithful and loyal member at the time of her death. She was a splendid woman and was held in high esteem by the people who knew her.

The interment was beside that of her husband, in Nul's Creek Cemetery. Services were conducted by the writer. May God's richest blessings rest upon the bereaved, and prepare every one for the great reunion on the other side.

J. LEE JOHNSON.

FOX.

J. W. Fox was born November 18, 1857, and died at Ramseur, N. C., January 18, 1925, aged 67 years, 2 months. He leaves to mourn their loss a son, Eugene Cutler, and Oleta Fox, and two sisters, Mrs. W. T. Hobson, of Sedan, Kas., and Mrs. A. V. Williams, of Ramseur, N. C., and a host of relatives and friends.

He was a kind and loving father and a friend to all who knew him. Funeral services were conducted at Pleasant Ridge Church by the writer.

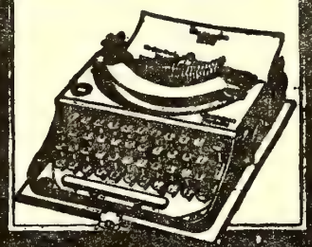
JOHN M. ALLRED.

The Federal Council of Churches has designated February 8th as "Race Relations Sunday," and is asking the Churchest o dedicate it to the promotion of mutual understanding and good will between the races.

A recent examination of more than 10,000 employees in factories and commercial houses showed that the eyes of 66 per cent were defective.

Divers have recovered a $600,000 cargo of copper which was lost in 1869 off the Chilean coast when a British freighter went down.

Something You Have Been Waiting For



Remington Portable Typewriter

—with Standard Keyboard and every other feature common to the larger machines. Case only four inches high.

Price, with case, $60.

Send Your Order to THE CHRISTIAN SUN Richmond, Va.

WINTER TOURIST TICKETS
—ALL RESORTS—
SOUTH AND SOUTHWEST

CALIFORNIA
Via New Orleans and "Sunset Limited."

INFORMATION, ITINERATIES, RESERVATIONS
Furnished in Detail Upon Request.

Apply to Local Agent, or Address
F. H. POSTON, Division Passenger Agent,
Southern Railway System,
809 East Main Street, - - Richmond, Virginia.

Use CARO-CO COCOANUT OIL SHAMPOO

V. E. MAREAN
Pipe Organ Expert
TUNING — REPAIRING
REBUILDING
Motors Installed Yearly Contracts
P. O. Box 864, - Richmond, Va.
Phone, Boulevard 7011-J

Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste and are carried to all parts of the body. Headaches follow. Biliousness, insomnia, lack of energy, all result from constipation, which if unchecked will lead to serious results.

Avoid Laxatives—Say Doctors

A noted authority says that laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

Nujol
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
For Internal Cleanliness

FROM WALTERS.

We passed a very quiet Christmas at Walters, with many things to remind us that it was Christmas. Our people began to pound us before Christmas and have not stopped yet. Tuesday night after Christmas we had a very interesting Christmas program, gotten up by Mrs. C. K. Barnett, Mrs. Virgie Carr, Miss Doris Joyner and others. After the program they gave out presents, I think, to very nearly every member of the Sunday School. The pastor did not receive any present that night, but it was announced by the superintendent, Bro. Otis V. Joyner, that his box (the pastor's) was too heavy, and would be delivered later. And the next day Bro. Richard Joyner drove up to our door with quite a large box filled, and some more. This consisted of sugar, coffee, flour, a pair of shoes, canned goods and many other things that are good and helpful. But the pounding did not begin nor end here, for just before Christmas, Bro. and Sister J. B. Bland sent us a nice box of fresh meat. Saturday before Christmas, Sister N. V. Bradshaw brought us a nice bacon ham.

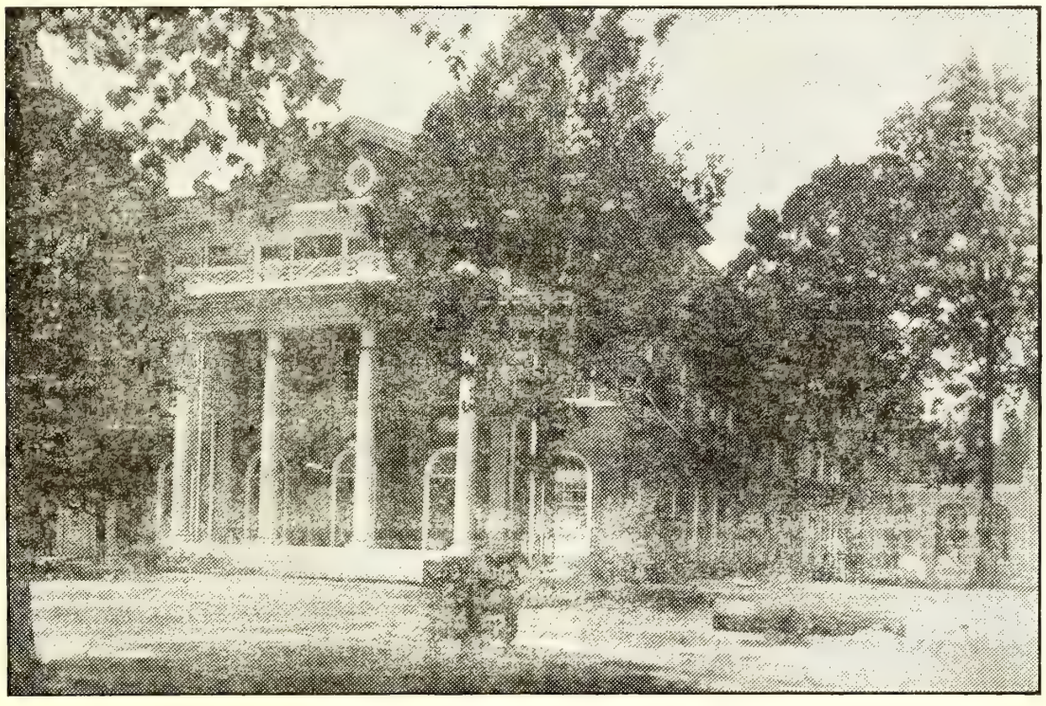
Christmas Day being passed, the pounding did not stop, for just a few days after Christmas Bro. Elihu Lankford brought us a nice bag of fresh meat, Bro. W. D. Lowe a nice pair of silk hose; Sister N. B. Gay, a bag of fresh meat; Bro. Willie Carr, a nice fountain pen; Bro. Walter Cox, $4.00 on fixing car. And so many other little things such as potatoes, greens, etc., that we cannot mention here.

For all of these tokens of love and consideration, we cannot find words to expresso ur feelings of appreciation, but pray that God's richest blessings may rest and abide with each one.

May the Lord help me to be even more faithful in prayer for them and in preaching the truth to them than I have in the past.

ELISHA BRADSHAW.

ELON COLLEGE---CO-EDUCATIONAL



WHITLEY AUDITORIUM BUILDING
One of the Group of Five New Buildings now Completed.

Elon, in her rebuilding program, has been looking to the future. Ten buildings, new and modern equipment, and a highly trained and efficient faculty are at the service of the future leaders of our Church. The phenomenal growth of Elon in the past two years indicates a larger growth throughout the whole denomination in the years just ahead. Make Elon your own Church College in a personal way by your patronage and prayerful co-operation.

NOTHING NEW UNDER THE SUN.

The Royal Geographical Society of England, the American Geographical Society of New York, and the Museum of the Indian Heye Foundation have combined in the dispatch of an expedition to explore a hidden ancient city in the heart of Brazil. Colonel P. H. Fawcett is the leader of the expedition, and believes that in this region there existed an advanced civilization of an unknown white race, perhaps 10,000 years old, antedating that of Egypt. He believes that these people had a good working knowledge of sciences that we are pleased to call "modern," including the secret of a mysterious kind of light possibly derived from knowledge of basic atomic forces.

The discoveries which have already been made in Mexico and in various parts of the United States of vast ruins prove thatt here at one time existed on this continent a people whose knowledge of architecture, engineering, astronomy and the fine arts equaled, if not surpassed, that of the best periods of Egypt or Assyria, the part of the world which is generally regarded as the cradle of the human race.

One of the assumptions of the modern mind is that the world has steadily advanced in wisdom and understanding, and in knowledge of all descriptions, from the beginning to the present day. This may be true of some peoples, but it is not true of the world as a whole. Some races lost the civilization they won. The reason seems to have been that moral culture did not keep pace with intellectual. It, therefore, seems probable that manyo f the so-called discoveries of the present day are not discoveries at all, but rediscoveries.—Dearborn Independent.

AN UNUSUAL OFFER OF TITHING LITERATURE.

35 Pamphlets, over 350 pages, by about 40 authors ..... $ .40

For 40 cents, we offer to send to any address, post-paid, a package containing 37 large page, closely printed tithing pamphlets by about 40 authors of various denominations. This package includes a tithing account book and three playlets; and pamphlet No. 38, "Winning Financial Freedom," outlines an attractive partnership plan and offer of great value to any Christian worker.

We make the stipulation that if, after examination, you prefer not to keep the sample package, you may return it and we will refund the money you paid, together with the amount of return postage.

Please mention THE CHRISTIAN SUN and always give your denomination. The Layman Company, 35 North Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

(We most highly recommend the above to any and all readers who may be or desire to be interested in tithing. A real bargain is offered, and we trust many SUN readers will take advantage of it.—Editor SUN.)

There is certainly no reason to believe that just because a man named his son "Eclipse" that he will be a shady character. On the other hand, he may have a great deal of brilliance concealed about him.

MONEY TO LEND ON IMPROVED FARMS--FAVORABLE TERMS

Write for Details

SO. BOND & MORTGAGE CO.
627 E. Main St. - - Richmond, Va.

Medical College of Virginia

Medicine Dentistry
Pharmacy Nursing

New Buildings. Well-equipped Laboratories, under the direction of full-time, competent teachers.

The Memorial Hospital, Dooley Hospital, St. Philip Hospital, are owned and controlled by the Medical College of Virginia, and offer every facility for thorough clinical teaching.

Staffs composed of the Faculty of the College. Additional clinical facilities are offered through other institutions in Richmond.

For full information and catalogue, address—

J. R. McCAULEY, Secretary.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D.....Editor
W. W. STALEY, D. D.....Associate
W. A. HARPER, LL. D.....Associate
R. C. HELFENSTEIN, D. D...Associate
REV. S. C. HARRELL.....Associate
REV. S. M. LYNAM.....News Editor
P. J. KERNODLE....Managing Editor

Subscription Rates.

One Year $2.00
Six Months 1.00

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post-Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows the date of expiration. Please renew at least two weeks in advance.

Change of Address: Give both old and new post-office when asking that your address be changed.

When subscriptions are made for friends, state whether paper is to be stopped at end of the year.

Remittances: Make all remittances to "The Christian Sun," 1536 East Broad Street, Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and Marriage Notices, limited to 100 words, are published free of charge. All over 100 words, published at 1 cent a word. Remittance should accompany copy. Write names distinctly.

Advertising Rates: "Want Ads," 2 cents a word an insertion. Display Rates quoted upon request.

FOGLEMAN—LASLEY.

Married by the writer, at his home in Burlington, N. C., Miss Mildred Lasley and Mr. Slocum H. Fogleman, January 10, 1925, in the presence of a few friends.

It was a very quiet, but beautiful, marriage. The happy couple has many friends who wish for them a long, happy and prosperous life.

P. H. FLEMING.

MELTON—TATE.

Mr. Elbert Melton and Miss Nellie Tate, both of Fancy Gap, were united in marriage by the writer on January 14th at the home of the bride's sister. The marriage was quiet, with only a few nearby friends present.

The writer and their many friends wish them a long and happy life.

M. T. SORRELL.

Fancy Gap, Va.

COLE.

Flemie Lee Cole, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Cole, of Washington, N. C., was born June 28, 1911, and died on December 31, 1924, age 13 years 6 months and 3 days.

The funeral was conducted at Bethlehem Christian Church, and the remains were placed in the Church cemetery. She was a good girl, and leaves to mourn their loss her parents, two brothers and one sister, with many relatives and friends.

May the Lord bless and comfort them.

J. F. APPLE.

WARNING

Why you should take organic iron to enrich your blood instead of metallic iron —how to tell the difference.

While iron is absolutely necessary to your life and health always remember that your blood contains organic iron and not metallic iron which people usually take; therefore when you take iron always take organic iron like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. Metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron and is an entirely different thing from organic iron. Organic iron may be had from your druggist under the name of Nuxated Iron.

Millions of people annually are using Nuxated Iron. It will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. A few doses will often commence to enrich your blood, help revitalize your wornout exhausted nerves and give you new strength and energy. It costs about eighteen times as much to make organic iron, like Nuxated Iron, as it does to make metallic iron, though it costs you but little more. Always insist on having genuine organic iron —Nuxated Iron. If you are not feeling quite up to the mark, telephone for a package today. In tablet form only; look for the letters N. I. on every tablet and refuse to take substitutes. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain perfectly satisfactory results. At all druggists.

NUXATED IRON
For Red Blood, Strength and Endurance

WHICH IS THE
BEST INVESTMENT?

It is that one best suited to the requirements of the individual purchaser.

For example: What is best for the millionaire, whose income is in the high brackets, and to whom income is no object, is obviously not the best for the investor who must have the maximum income consistent with safety.

We offer to our clients individual service.

. . .

ESTABLISHED 1874

John L. Williams & Sons

INVESTMENT BANKERS

Phone: Randolph 244 Seventh and Main Streets

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

WINSTON-INTERNATIONAL
RED LETTER BIBLES
SELF-PRONOUNCING

Bibles and Testaments that Emphasize Christ
All the Prophetic Types and Prophecies in Old Testament and Words of Christ in New Testament are Printed in Red.

Send for Illustrated Catalog
THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO., Publishers
American Bible Headquarters
429 Winston Building Philadelphia

OXFORD TEACHERS' BIBLES

An Oxford Teachers' Bible has references and 300 pages of helps that are a mine of information to Bible students. The helps are arranged in alphabetical order, like a dictionary. They are accurate, comprehensive and up-to-date. A few styles are listed here. Many others are described in our Bible catalogue, mailed upon request.

04403 [This size print] Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 6⅞ x 4¾ inches $4.00

0623x [Same Bible as 04403] Printed on Oxford India paper. Only 1 inch thick..... $6.00

04453 [This size print] French Morocco leather binding, overlapping covers, 7¼ x 5 in. $4.33

0773x [Same Bible as 04453] Printed on Oxford India paper. A remarkably thin and light Bible. (Only 1 inch thick) $7.75

05453 [Same Bible as 04453] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $6.25

05453x [Same Bible as 0773x] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $8.75

04523 [This size print] A self-pronouncing Oxford Bible. Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 8½ x 5½ inches... $5.50

0923x [Same Bible as 04523] Printed on Oxford India paper, only 1⅛ inches thick... $9.75

ORDER FROM
"THE CHRISTIAN SUN"
1536 East Broad
Richmond, Va.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

A Co-Educational School

LOCATED AT

WADLEY, ALABAMA

This School offers the last two years of Academic work and the first two years of College work.

The following Courses are offered in the—

COLLEGE DEPARTMENT: English, Bible, Religious Education, Latin, French, History, Education, Mathematics and Science.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENTS: Music—Piano, Voice; Commercial Department—Bookkeeping, Typewriting, and Shorthand.

Due attention will be given Athletics, such as Tennis, Basket-Ball, Baseball, Football.

The government of the School is mild, but firm, endeavoring to create a home atmosphere as much as possible, not merely to maintain discipline, but to cultivate Christian character.

This is our own School, located within reach of all in this section, and the cost is less than any other College within reasonable distance of those who would attend School from this section.

Send for a Catalogue giving full description of Courses and entrance conditions.

S. L. BEOUGHER, President
Wadley, - - - - Alabama.

FOR GOOD HOME COOKING
MRS. COOK'S CAFETERIA
805 East Grace Street.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY, 1956.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Official Organ of the Southern Christian Convention

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY. IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY. IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXVII. RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1925. NUMBER 6.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

Food Products.—

Inspection of food products intended for shipment from Hawaii to the United States is one of the duties of our Bureau of Entomology. Last year more than 216,000 bunches of bananas, 14,000 crates of pineapples, and 5,000 crates of taro were brought in from this island, to say nothing of the cocoanuts, lily root and ginger root that were passed.

New French Minister Arrives.—

Emile Daeschner, the new French ambassador to the United States, arrived in Washington on January 25th. He will succeed Jules Jusserand, who has served his country as its American representative for the past twenty years. M. Daeschner will take an apartment in the embassy section of the city to await further arrangements. The new minister is accompanied by his wife and two daughters.

Influenza Again.—

An epidemic of influenza, one of the most serious ever known, is sweeping Greater Tokyo, Japan, and 4,700 persons have died since the outbreak twenty days ago. The epidemic is also sweeping the Southwestern States. Seventeen have died in one small Texas town, and other parts of Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and Missouri are feeling touches of the epidemic. It is mixed generously with pneumonia, and is as serious as the scurge which swept the country in 1918. Every effort is being made to stay the tide of the disease before it gets headway, and the health authorities feel that they have it under control so far.

Cigarette Smoking Increasing.—

According to the figures of the Internal Revenue Department, there were seventy-five billion cigarettes smoked in the United States during 1924. This is an increase of twelve billion over 1923. In 1913, only fifteen billion cigarettes were smoked. This shows that within eleven years cigarette smoking has increased 500 per cent. Cigars, too, show a substantial increase from 491 million in 1923 to 511 million in 1924, an increase of some twenty million. The post-war period and women smokers are given as causes for this alarming increase in the tobacco-using habit.

For New York Law Enforcement.—

In an effort to secure regulations for better law enforcement in New York, the Woman's Committee for Law Enforcement have called a meeting to convene in Albany on February 16-17th. This organization is participated in by a large number of woman's organizations, including Jews and negro women. Wherever the homes of the country are menaced, we can usually count on the women to exert themselves in their defense, and as they come more and more into their own, their power for service in this field will be greatly enhanced. Let us trust that they shall always keep the vision, the love, and the loyalty that is now theirs.

January 16th Again.—

January 16th marked the fifth anniversary of the eighteenth amendment. In view of the fact that so many are contending that the amendment is a failure, it might be well to recall that the 1910 census showed 700 million dollars invested in the legalized business of manufacturing poison for the American people.

For this business, 443 million dollars were paid in taxes to the Federal government; over one thousand breweries and 236 distilleries supplied 177,000 saloons with alcoholic beverages to supply to men and women for the purpose of making them more vulgar. The eighteenth amendment has done much. All this of which the 1910 census took account is gone. It has done much, but much remains yet to be done, and only strict law enforcement by the American citizens can finish the task.

Newman Smyth Dies.—

Newman Smyth, a liberal-minded minister and a writer on theological subjects, as well as pastor of one of New England's historic Churches, died on January 5th. Dr. Smyth was eighty-two years old. He had been an advocate of liberal theology and free thought in the religious world for a half-century when the words modernist and fundamentalist became current. He strongly advocated Church unity, and proposed a plan for that purpose which was found insuperable because of old association's power over human minds. Newman Smyth was for twenty-six years pastor of old Center Church, New Haven, Conn., and for almost an equal number of years he was a fellow of Yale University. His father, William Smyth, was a professor at Bowdoin College, and his brother, Egbert Smyth, taught both at Bowdoin and at Andover, founding the Andover Review.

What Would Christ Think?—

After a controversy of several weeks' duration, the Rev. Thornton Anthony Mills, pastor of the famous old New England Congregational Church, resigned on January 25th. The trouble grew out of the pastor's inviting Dr. Ben S. Reitman's hobo colony to attend the services of the Church en masse. The trustees felt that they should have a right to say with whom they should worship, and requested Dr. Mills' resignation. He refused to resign at first, but later changed his mind in order to preserve harmony in the Church.

And what would Christ think of those trustees who think themselves above going to prayer with others of God's children? We think that God loves all men alike, and they should at least be able to worship Him together. How sad a commentary it is on Christianity's so-called believers when they will not pray with a brother.

A Japanese Colony in Arkansas.—

Plans for the definite planting of a Japanese colony in one of the richest portions of Arkansas, between Marion and Joyner, began to take form some days ago in Memphis, Tenn. According to Dean Adams, a Memphis realtor, the Japanese have incorporated and propose to buy several thousand acres of land between Marion and Joyner on which they will plant a colony of fifty thousand Japanese. Two families have already moved on to this vast acreage. The plans for this colony began some time ago when two Japanese came to Memphis to make arrangements back in the fall, according to Mr. Adams. The Japanese will come from California, and railroads which run into the territory are making efforts to secure the contract for transporting these colonists from California. This migration from California is probably caused by the strict land laws of that State against Japanese ownership of land.

Restore Lee Mansion.—

A bill in which Southerners in particular will be interested in was passed by the House a few days ago authorizing the Secretary of War to restore the Lee mansion, the home of Robert E. Lee, at Arlington, across the Potomac River in Virginia from Washington, to the condition in which it existed when General Lee and family lived there at the outbreak of the War Between the States. The secretary is directed to, as far as possible, obtain the original articles of furniture and return them to the mansion, so that it may be restored to its original state as nearly as is Mount Vernon, the home of General Washington, if possible. The favorable committee report on the bill was made in the House by Representative Cramton, of Michigan.

Also the public buildings and grounds committee of the House reported favorably during last week the bill for the construction of the Arlington Memorial Bridge across the Potomac, from the Lincoln Memorial to the grounds of the Lee Mansion at Arlington. The bridge will involve an outlay of $14,750,000.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. W. J. Edwards has recently changed his address from Seagrove to Steeds, N. C., R. F. D. 1. His correspondents will please address him accordingly.

We should seek and sacrifice to meet our Men and Millions' obligations with the same honesty and sincerity that we would any material or earthly obligation.

In remitting for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, the managing editor would rather you would send post-office money order or check. When mistakes occur they can be traced and corrected.

If the means are to be supplied for the prosecution of the work in foreign fields, the home fields must be cultivated. This thought seems to come up for emphasis from the great missionary meeting just held in the city of Washington.

Rev. B. J. Earp, pastor of the Newport News Christian Church, on his return from the Missionary Conference in Washington, D. C., made THE SUN office a welcome visit the past week. He reported the conference as a great meeting.

Rev. Albert Godley, Tenafly, N. J., is giving his life to purity work. Any member of the Christian Church addressing him will receive helpful literature free of cost. Bro. Godley is a most pious and devout minister, and one of the sweetest-spirited men of our day.

We dare say there are some of our readers who look at the Family Altar page and say, "Oh, that is always just the same!" Did you ever hear the saying, "Apples of gold in pictures of silver?" If so, you will find some of this fruit on the Altar page. The variety is great!

Dr. W. P. Lawrence attended a meeting of the Commission of the General Convention to study the status of the Christian Divinity School. The Commission met in Washington last week. Dr. Lawrence was the only member on the Commission from the Southern Christian Convention.

The readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN will regret to learn of the death of Mr. J. R. Elliott. Mr. Elliott passed away at the Presbyterian Hospital, at Charlotte, N. C., Friday morning, January 30th. He was buried from the Pleasant Grove Christian Church, News Ferry, Va., Saturday afternoon, January 31st, at 3 o'clock.

Senator Simmons will fight the higher rate on second-class mail matter. Senator Simmons knows that the measure is aimed at the farmer. The man who lives in the city receives his papers by carrier boy. It is the farmer who must keep in touch with the world by the second-class mail service bringing the news sheets of the day.

"The Christian Annual" for 1925, edited by Dr. I. W. Johnson, Secretary of the Southern Christian Convention, is off the press and is being mailed out this week. It contains 184 pages of matter closely packed together. The price is 50 cents per copy, post-paid. Order through THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 East Broad Street, Richmond, Va.

Mr. W. F. Corwith, of Brooklyn, N. Y., his many friends will regret to learn, has been confined to his home for three weeks with illness. Here is praying that he may be spared for many years yet of useful service in the Church and community. Mr. Corwith is the type of layman that really adds luster to the Church by his consistent Christian life.

The Mooney Christian Education Building at Elon College was used for the first time on Sunday, February 1st. The Sunday School of the Elon College Christian Church quite appropriately had the first opportunity to use the building. The week-day school of religion, under the directorship of Prof. S. A. Bennett, began its work on Tuesday, February 3d.

Dr. Atkinson is attending the Missionary Conference at Washington this week. He reports a great assemblage from all parts of the world. Many of the leaders of our Church are present. From the South, among those present, are Dr. G. O. Lankford, Rev. James H. Lightbourne, Rev. F. C. Lester, Dr. W. P. Lawrence, Dr. W. W. Staley, and Dr. L. E. Smith.

Miss Katherine Nolan, on February 8th, at 4 P. M., is to give her regular monthly organ vesper service in the Whitley Auditorium at Elon. Music lovers in reach of the college and those who are able to find God in the melody of sweet and uplifting music, have already learned to appreciate these vesper services and to look forward to them from month to month.

Dean A. L. Hook represented Elon College at the North Carolina Teachers' Assembly, and was to speak before the higher education section. His address will be printed in the records of the assembly. Coach Corboy and Prof. O. W. Johnson also attended the assembly as representing Elon. Dr. Amick, an officer of the assembly, because of Mrs. Amick's illness, was unable to attend.

We acknowledge the following invitation to the first birthday service of the Webster Community Christian Church: "A most cordial invitation is extended to yourself and friends to attend our first birthday service. Every member is urged to be present and place in the offering a real birthday gift for the Church. Sunday, February 1, 1925. Holy Communion 11 A. M. The Webster Community Christian Church."

It is to be hoped that every one in reach who can possibly do so will attend one of the stewardship institutes whose program is presented in this week's SUN. Dr. Denison is Stewardship Secretary of the General Convention, and Dr. J. O. Atkinson is Stewardship Secretary of the Southern Convention. The discussion and consideration of the all-important subject of "Stewardship" should be, and doubtless will be, helpful to all who attend.

The "Kingdom-Enlistment Week," conducted by Rev. James H. Lightbourne, was the most successful evangelistic effort since the organization of our Church. Seventeen members were received last Sunday, and three others made decisions. Others will join later. Rev. Mr. Lightbourne did a splendid work in our midst, and made a fine impression on our people. The results of the meeting were more far-reaching than was evidenced by the open decisions.—Bulletin First Christian Church, Richmond, Va.

NEW INDUSTRIES IN THE SOUTH.

Continued industrial development in the territory served by the Southern Railway System is shown by the annual report of the Southern's development service covering the year 1924.

The report lists a total of 132 new industries placed in operation during the year, 28 new industries under construction on December 31st, 84 enlargements of existing industries placed in operation during the year, and 8 enlargements under construction at the end of the year; a total of 253 new industries and enlargements.

As in former years, the greatest activity was in the building and enlarging of textile plants. New installations of textile machinery in new mills and in enlargements at points served by the Southern included 172,473 spindles, 4,307 looms, and 1,380 knitting machines.

WINDSOR, VA.

Editorial mention has been made in THE SUN of the death of R. A. Rhodes, a prominent citizen and Churchman of Windsor. My acquaintance with him had been just a short time, since coming on this field until his going on December 30, 1924. My impression of him, gotten from being with him in his home and meeting with him at Church and in the town, accords with what I have heard from so many who knew him intimately and for a longer time, that he was an upright citizen and Christian gentleman. He had the respect and esteem of the people in the community.

His widow, who was Miss Carrie Watkins, a former Elon student, is a faithful worker in our Church here, and the three children attend our Sunday School. The husband and father was a member of the Baptist Church, and held the position of superintendent of the Sunday School, but he seemed much interested in our Church and was faithful in attending its services and helping in its support.

I pen these lines as a tribute to his memory, and with a prayer in my heart, shared by many others, too, that God's promise to the widow and fatherless may be graciously verified.

W. D. HARWARD.

ELM AVENUE, PORTSMOUTH.

During the month of January, quite a large number of the members of the Elm Avenue Christian Church have been kept away from Church services on account of illness. Our pastor, Rev. V. T. Crawford, has also been ill and was obliged to stay indoors for about ten days, but he has now recovered and is able to be about his work again.

The work of the Church has started off nicely, and it is hoped that this year will be the very best in the Church's history.

During the last few weeks there have been several more additions to the membership of the Church, and the writer is indeed glad to be able to report that several of the persons who joined the Church during our last revival have taken upon themselves the responsibilities of the various official positions in the Church and Sunday School work, and they seem to be doing splendid work.

An effort has been put forth to secure a more systematic and intensive study of the Bible by the Church members, which, it is believed, will be of much value to the Church; and already it seems to have been of value to those following it and to the Church.

During the recent campaign for new Sunday School scholars, many persons have been reached who could not have been reached otherwise, and the Church should ever keep before it the fact that when a Church ceases to go out and find those who are out of the Church and Sunday School and seek to bring them to love the Church and to give themselves to Christ, that Church must fail in its usefulness, because it has neglected or forgotten its God-given mission and its purpose in the world. As we try to carry forward the work of the Church at Elm Avenue upon a distinctively evangelical basis, we earnestly desire the prayers of our brethren.

CORRESPONDENT.

ORANGEPORT NOTES.

The people of Orangeport had the pleasure of listening to Miss Martha Stacey on December 21st. She spoke at the morning service, made a talk to the Sunday School and to the Christian Endeavor in the evening. All her talks were very interesting.

At the annual meeting of our Church, the reports from the Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, Missionary Society, W. C. T. U., and Ladies' Aid Society showed encouraging work being done in all these departments. We hope to make the present year the best yet.

Last fall the Church installed a new furnace in the parsonage to replace the old one, which had about served its time. This keeps the parsonage comfortable during this cold winter through which we are now passing. The thermometer has been but little above freezing point, and that only a few times, since early in December. Several snows have fallen during this time, but the snow-plows have kept our roads open for travel about all the time, though at times they have been quite icy. One who has never driven an auto on icy roads can hardly appreciate the thrill of joy(?) that comes from such experience. Sometimes, before one realizes what has happened, the machine has slipped on the ice, left the road and plunged into a snow-bank made by the snow-plow when the road was opened. Or, perhaps, the back end will slip around and one finds himself facing in the opposite direction from which he was going. Many people, including the writer, have had these experiences during the present winter.

R. H. PEEL.

MARYLAND.

The Webster Community Christian Church, which is about four miles from Havre de Grace, is the first Christian Church to be in the State of Maryland, and while we have had many drawbacks, we are going ahead. Next Sunday, February 1st, we will be one year old, and we will have Holy Communion, and are asking our friends for prayers. We are asking our members to make a birthday gift by giving gifts of money.

We find and fully realize that a Church cannot be run altogether by prayer; while it helps a long way, we must also have money. But all put together with the Spirit of God, our Church will succeed. We have only been in our Church since August. Before that, we worshiped in an old Church until spring; then we held tent meetings.

The Sunday School is in a flourishing condition under the direction of our splendid superintendent, Mr. Wilbur W. Walker. We are now planning to hold an indoor picnic the last Saturday of each month for our Sunday School scholars. We hold a parish social every Thursday evening, which is well attended and enjoyed by all. The choir will give a very amusing entertainment this week called "The Spoon Orchestra."

The most impressive service was held in our Church last Sunday night week when our minister, the Rev. Milton W. Sutcliff, preached a his sermon, the lights were extinguished and an electric star which is in the front of the Church shone forth, while the organ played softly. An invitation was given for any who wished to unite with the Church. All was still, when a little boy twelve years old came forward; then seven more came, all young people. Every one seemed to feel God's presence.

Last Sunday night the sermon was preached from the text "They Shall See His Face." At the finish the lights were again turned out and the electric star shone forth. Some saw the vision, and four came forward and united with the Church.

We ask the prayers of all our Christian friends in our behalf.

HARRIETT E. COOLEY.

Havre de Grace, Md.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The Illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the Number and prices.

TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Minion Bold-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4 7-8x 7 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

India Paper Edition, Size 4 7-8x7 Inches, 1 1-10 Inches Thick.

2152X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$6.00

Bourgeois Type, Size 5 3-8x8 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2167—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.00

2172—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.50

India Paper Edition, Only 1 1-8 Inches Thick.

2172X—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$8.50

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3¾x2⅝ inches, and 1 inch thick; with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black.

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations. Special book for Sunday Schools 95c

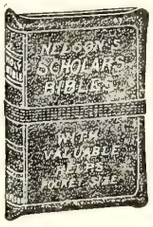
Ruby Type, Size 3¾x2⅝ Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps $2.50

Minion Type, Pocket Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ inches Thick.

With 32 full-colored illustrations; also 25 outline maps through the text and 12 colored maps.

133—Bound in cloth, round corners, red edges, title stamped on side in pure gold $1.60



135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 15-16 of an Inch Thick.

135X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.75

Minion Black-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4¾x 7 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick.

Printed from clear, large, black-face type, 32 full-page illustrations in Sepia and colors, 4,000 Questions and Answers, Harmony of the Gospels, How to Study the Sunday School Lesson, 25 outline Maps, 12 full-page colored Maps.

4152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold.....$3.25

TEXT BIBLES—AMERICAN STANDARD VERSION.

Printed from Easy-Reading Type, on Good Bible Paper, for Sunday School and Church Use.

Minion Type, Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick, 25 Outline Maps, Bound in Black.

101—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, title stamped on back in pure gold..$1.10

112—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title on back in pure gold $2.75

India Paper Edition, Only ⅞-Inch Thick.

112X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

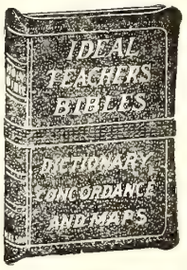
Reference and Text Bibles also in minion, brevier, bourgeois, long primer, pica and English type.

Thumb index cut on edge, 50c extra; name printed on any Bible in gold, 40c extra; extra wording, 40c per line.

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (v vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3-8x 8 1-2 Inches and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.



Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red;other parts of the book are printed in black. With concise Bible dictionary, combined concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.75

RED LETTER EDITION

With all the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands, title stamped on side and back in pure gold $3.25

Any of the above Bibles sent post paid. Address THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street, - - - Richmond, Va.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR.

J. O. ATKINSON, Elon College, N. C.

Contributing Editors.

W. W. STALEY W. A. HARPER
R. C. HELFENSTEIN S. C. HARRELL

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE MEANING OF MISSIONS.

On the opening day of the great North American Missionary Conference, Washington, D. C., January 28th, the Washington Post carried the following editorial:

"The great foreign missions meeting in this city will be an event of genuine significance from more than one point of view. It will be impressive in numbers and in variety. We are told that it will be the largest gathering of the kind ever held, and will include representatives of more different Church organizations than any other. That so many people come together for such a purpose, and that so many different faiths find agreement on it, must be regarded as indicative of the vitality of the missionary spirit.

"There will also be a noteworthy exposition of the changed, or at least the greatly expanded, character of that spirit. Taking its rise from the divine injunction, "Go ye and teach all nations, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you," missionary endeavor has become an agency for teaching not alone religious truth, but also all the useful arts of civilization, and for the ministering unto the health of the body as well as of the soul. Some of the most splendid names in the annals of human progress, in exploration and discovery, in the development and practice of the sciences, and in the extension of all the blessings of civilization, have been those of religious missionaries. Formerly such were exceptional. Now they are the rule. That is to say, the average missionary enterprise today concerns itself with service to all the interests of man.

"Mission work has thus been, and indeed is today, a material aid in statesmanship and to commerce. And on the other hand, it has often been greatly indebted to statesmen for its protection and promotion. Perhaps this thought will be pertinent for at least a moment's consideration at the present time. Spokesmen of some of the Churches most interested in missions have lately been inveighing against the government for "militarism" and demanding the immediate abolition of army and navy. But we can recall many occasions when their foreign missionaries have been glad of the protection afforded to them by the militant arm of the government, and indeed when the government has been clamorously importuned to send ships and troops to their rescue. It was a satirist who said that civilization does get forward, sometimes, on a powder cart; though in fact there was serious truth in his biting words, and we judge that thoughtful workers in the foreign mission field will testify that the teaching of the nations has more than once or twice been made possible only through the strong arm of government."

THE N. A. MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

If one doubts that missions is the biggest business of mankind, let one attend such a conference as Washington held and witnessed last week. The great city auditorium, with a seating capacity of 7,000, was taxed to its utmost again and again during the conference of a week to hear addresses, songs, prayers bearing on the world-wide topic of missions. The President of the United States opened the great conference with a studied and comprehensive address; Secretary of State Hughes, statesmen and diplomats of note, honor and rank, representatives from boards, denominations and societies, men and women from all corners and continents of the earth assembled for a week to discuss and consider foreign missions —how Christ, the message of Christ, the gospel, may be carried to all the earth. Such a picture brings to the mind only partially and quite inadequately the dignity, the worth, the weight, the scope of the missionary idea as it has gripped the minds, the imaginations and the lives of men and women of our day.

President Coolidge was inclined to be practical as well as ideal, specific as well as general in his address. Outside of relating at length the real contribution Christian missions had made to civilization, the President said, in part:

"Not everything that the men of Christian countries have carried to the other peoples of the world has been good and helpful to those who have received it. Our civilization is yet far from perfect. Its aims are liable to much distortion when it comes in contact with peoples not yet equipped through generations of race experience to absorb, to understand, to appreciate it. One of the greatest things that a missionary movement could do for the less-favored communities would be to assure that all who go out from the Christian to the non-Christian communities should carry with them the spirit, the aims, the purposes, of true Christianity.

"We know that they have not always done this. We know that the missionary movements have repeatedly been hampered, and at times been frustrated because some calling themselves Christians and assuming to represent Christian civilization have been actuated by un-Christian motives. Those who have been willing to carry the vices of our civilization among the weaker peoples and into the darker places have often been more successful than those who have sought to implant the virtues."

Practical and Spiritual.

Christianity, the President said, is a "highly practical as well as a profoundly spiritual mode of life."

"It loses nothing of its spiritual quality because of its practical helpfulness; but it touches all its practical workings with the spirit and purpose of lofty aspiration," he added.

"Our confidence in it is justified by our knowledge of its accomplishments," the President continued. "Wherever it has been carried and made a force in the affairs of men, it has wrought for their good. But we must recognize also that it has added greatly to the complexity of human life and problems. Its encouragement to education, to knowledge, to scientific advancement has created new forces in the world.

"The spirit of our organized, industrialized, machine-made and inter-related world has touched men wherever they live, and profoundly affected their modes of life and thought. It has aroused in them new yearnings and new aspirations. It has truly converted this planet into a brotherhood of races and nationalities, interdependent in a thousand ways, tending more and more to develop a common culture, a common thought and purpose toward the great business of living. The problems which, in this new order of life, present themselves, will not be solved except through a greater and constantly greater projection of the spirit of neighborship and co-operation."

The President said that the missionaries could also learn much of "industry, of humility, of reverence for parents, of respect for constituted authority, which may quite conceivably become adornments to our own social fabric."

But there are other and more striking addresses even than that of the President, because there are men and women at the conference whose lives are being lived out in the missionary field and under the breath and burden of the missionary idea. Some of the more outstanding of these we want SUN readers to have in these columns next week and the week following.

FOREIGN MISSION INFORMATION.

In his illuminating address before the Washington Missionary Conference, Dr. Arthur J. Brown, an authority on missions and author of several epoch-making missionary books, gave these statistics:

"There are now 28,000 Protestant foreign missionaries in non-Christian lands, and 2,408,900 adult communicants, with an enrolled Christian community of 5,145,236 persons. In 36,610 Sunday Schools, there are 2,000,000 pupils, 703 hospitals and 1,234 dispensaries, treating over 3,000,000 patients a year; a total of 245 orphanages, 25 institutions for blind and deaf mutes; 39 leper asylums, 21 homes for untrained children and lepers, and 21 rescue homes for fallen women. The educational work includes 109 colleges and universities, 2,114 boarding and high schools, 36,478 elementary schools, 376 kindergartens, 30 medical colleges, 98 schools and classes for nurses, 406 theological and Bible-training schools, 209 industrial schools and 240 normal schools.

"The Christian people of Europe and America gave last year for the maintenance of these varied activities $44,448,000. A movement so vast, representing such a great constituency of intelligent people in Europe and America, and recognized by the governments of the world as a force of the first magnitude, challenges the attention of all thoughtful persons."

Among the reasons he advanced for foreign missions were the command of Christ to His disciples to His gospel to all men; because a true Christian experience should prompt Christians to seek the world's embrace of Christianity; because all men need the gospel of Christianity, and because "we have passed the age of provincialism and entered the age of cosmopolitanism."

At this convention, where thousands were gathered from all over the world to discuss the world's biggest problem—that of winning the world to Christ—many interesting incidents are related. It is declared the convention has brought together the largest gathering of missionaries, authors, clergymen and lay workers who have ever met at any similar convention anywhere in the world.

"We hear a great deal in this country about 'the yellow peril,' declared Rev. Dr. Herbert Welch, bishop of the Methodist Episcopal district of Japan and Korea. "But in Japan they talk of 'the white peril.' They have been exploited by the white races until the 'white peril' has become extremely real to them. They have seen the white races conquer the red race, the brown race and the black race, and feel sure that there is now a definite movement on foot by the white people to subdue the yellow people of the world.

"From the time of the discovery of America and the discovery about the same time of an ocean passage to the Far East, exploitation of Eastern people was carried on until the Russo-Japanese War. That was the first successful step made by the Japanese to prevent the loss of their territory, their trade and their civil right.

"The waves of the seas formerly separated the continents. Now they link them together. I am not in favor of admitting great numbers of Japanese to the United States, but to prevent trouble in the future there must be a closer bond of brotherhood between these two great nations. The future peace of the world depends on just that relationship."

Bishop Welch stated that the missionary movement was growing steadily in Japan and Korea, and surprised his hearers by adding that a great many of the principles of Christianity are now being embodied in the religions of the Far East. They are copying what they consider to be better than what they now have, but at the same time are holding to their own faiths.

Bishop Charles H. Brent, of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Western New York, who has just returned from the International Opium Conference at Geneva, drew tremendous applause from the convention when he made a plea for the League of Nations. "While making an address recently, I was amazed to find that only about 8 per cent of my audience had ever read the covenant," said the bishop. "I told them frankly that they had no right to oppose any measure which they had not even read.

"I am convinced that the strongest opposition to the covenant of the league is due to ignorance and indifference," Bishop Brent added. "The covenant may not be perfect. It is not perfect. But it is the greatest attempt ever made to bring about amity between the nations of the world. Until something better is produced, it is worthy of support of the entire civilized world.

"The World Court is the next best attempt ever made to bring about international brotherhood. The third great effort toward the same end is the Geneva protocol. In this country the Church and State are separate. They are separated, but not divorced. They should not be divorced. It is the duty of religious people the world over to take an active part in politics. Citizens all over the land should write, telegraph or see in person their Senators and register their opinions on all great questions. It is said that these letters are thrown into the wastebasket. They are not. They are studied very, very closely," the bishop asserted.

Bishop Brent is convinced that the only two things worth living for are a closer brotherhood between nations and Church unity. He says both will take time, but both are coming. During the last war he was a member of the American board of chaplains in Europe and came in very close contact with the American soldiers. But he insists that law, rather than war, must settle future international disputes.

Prof. John Jesudason Cornelius, a native of India, who is now studying at Columbia University, charmed the convention with his address on "Movements Toward Christ in India." He declared that in some sections of India there have been as many as 2,000 converts a week for thirty years. He paid a remarkable tribute to Ghandi and his application of Christ's principle of overcoming evil by good, by soul force. He asserted that Ghandi's non-resistance policy had prevented untold bloodshed and chaos in his native land.

Prof. Cornelius gave some startling comparisons in denouncing war and its costs in lives and blood. "Let me use some figures to show the real cost of the World War," he said. "The total cost of the war in money is equivalent to the expenditure of $20,000 per hour for every hour since the birth of Christ!

"And what of the cost in human life? Let me take the sinking of the Lusitania, which so startled the entire world, as an example. To bring about the loss of as many lives as were wiped out in the war, it would be necessary to sink a Lusitania every day for seventy years!"

Prof. T. Dwight Sloan, M. D., of the Peking Union Medical College, stated that the medical mission must pave the way for the Church. Highly trained doctors are a vital necessity, but they are almost useless unless the best equipment is sent with them to the foreign lands. Nevertheless, if the entire output of the medical colleges and nurses' training schools of the United States were brought to China they could touch but the outer fringe of her crying needs. Therefore, an indigenous body of doctors and nurses is the only solution for China's ever-increasing demand. These must be trained in our mission schools.

Rev. Dr. H. C. McDowell and Rev. Dr. C. E. Hurlburt gave graphic accounts of their work among the primitive peoples of Africa. Dr. McDowell spoke of going among the wild tribes of Angola and climbing trees to gain a vantage point from which to speak to the natives. He has had many thrilling experiences among the barbarous tribes.

Dr. Hurlburt was in Africa when Theodore Roosevelt made his famous expedition to that country.

"I took Mr. Roosevelt to see one of the schools where African workers were being educated, and the former President was greatly pleased with what he saw.

" 'I would like to see your finished product,' he said to me.

"I then took him to several homes which were the result of mission training. The occupants were living in a civilized way amid clean, attractive and comfortable surroundings.

" 'I like your finished product and believe you are doing a great work,' Mr. Roosevelt observed enthusiastically at the conclusion of the tour."

Miss Margaret E. Burton, of New York, graphically illustrated the interdependence of nations. "The women of China are seriously affected by the American fad of hair-bobbing," she humorously explained. "The hair-net industry is being ruined and in one district of China which I visited recently the women workers have been reduced from 18,000 to 2,000, due to our present fashion. Much distress has resulted from this unemployment.

"Child exploitation exists to such an extent that it even reaches down into the cradle. Children five years of age are worked in the factories for twelve and fourteen hours a day. You can understand, then, why the ultimate outcome of child labor legislation in the United States is being watched with such concern by child lovers in China, for it will have tremendous effect on future conditions there."

Dr. T. Kagawa, a native Japanese missionary worker, made a lasting impression on the convention. He has worked a great deal in the slums of Tokyo. He has taken a deep interest and organized several labor unions. For his exceptional activities he was arrested and kept in prison for sixteen days. He drew storms of laughter when he said he liked the jail because it was so much quieter than the slums. He was glad to get away from the excitement attending his work and spent all his time reading the gospel of St. Mark. Dr. Kagawa often has more people outside his Church than are able to get in.

"Ten years ago there were forty divorces out of every 100 marriages. Today there are but ten. That is lower than the percentage in America," he commented.

"I want to say that we do not like your exclusion act. But there is going to be no war. We will keep the Pacific blue, and not turn it red with blood. That great ocean stands for peace, and even now in Japan we are disbanding some of our military forces and in that way saving enormous sums of money."

SHALL WE RETREAT?

But the emergency confronting the Christian Church is larger than just that of the foreign mission field. Christendom is now suffering from a wide-extended retrogression in financial giving. Other denominations have already felt this falling off in gifts far more than have we. The great Methodist Churches, North and South, are the most conspicuous, the foreign debt of the former amounting to more than $3,000,000, and that of the latter to nearly $1,000,000—and both of them driven to the necessity of making great retrenchments in their foreign work. Several other denominations are suffering in a similar way. Many local Churches in our own and other denominations have fallen off 50 per cent or more in the last year in their mission gifts and other benevolences. Writers have pointed out the fact that there is a very acute and perilous "ebb tide in Christian giving." Our own denomination has been caught in this ebb tide and is going to suffer great injury thereby if our pastors and our laymen are not quickly aroused to the seriousness of the situation. Our home missions receipts have steadily declined this year compared with the preceding year. Appropriations have been cut to the danger point, and still the receipts are far below even these reduced appropriations, so that there is a debt of $9,315.33 now in our home mission fund. Some of the other departments of our general work are suffering in like manner from this ebb tide in giving, and the most serious consequences stare our denomination in the face unless this falling off of gifts is immediately checked. Debts must not be permitted to pile up, and the boards will not allow them to do so. But it will be even more disastrous to the future of our denomination to discharge workers and to call missionaries home and cut down activities. —Editorial in Herald of Gospel Liberty.

Dr. Chas. L. Goodell, secretary of evangelism of the Federal Council, 105 East 22d Street, New York City, says that 400,000 copies of the "Fellowship of Prayer" will be issued for distribution this year. Any minister who addresses a postcard to Dr. Goodell will receive a copy free of the "Fellowship of Prayer," and also a copy of "A Call to Prayer," to be used in connection with the Easter season. We trust that many of our ministers will take advantage of this opportunity.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Many organizations are trying to feed the hungry at home and abroad. That is in accord with the teachings of Scripture: "Whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" That phrase, "seeth his brother have need," means investigation to be sure that there is necessity before helping; but most of the charity is doled out upon doubtful evidence. Such charity does not benefit the giver nor the recipient. It often makes paupers out of those who might be self-supporting, and false benefactors out of those who imagine they are rendering service in the name of the Master. The truth is that the most difficult Christian service in this field filled with beggars and would-be helpers. Christians and others often help those not in need and overlook those who are really destitute. The sympathetic do too much, and the unsympathetic do too little. "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth," is usually considered as a message to ministers; but it can be applied to all believers, and there is no field that requires more careful study and finer judgment than charity.

But there is another side to human experience beside feeding the hungry and clothing the naked. We cry over the starving, when more people kill themselves by excessive eating than perish. It is time for teachers, preachers, medical men and organizations to carry the temperance lesson into the daily life of the people. If I were going to shed tears over the needs of mankind, I would make my first tear a contribution to those who eat intemperately. Very few people starve to death; many new graves are marks of excessive indulgence. We have not carried the temperance idea far enough. We pray over the drunkard and dope-fiend while we suffer from overeating. We overlook Scripture declaration, which says: "Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things"; and the emphasis should be placed on all. We have not treated the drunkard as fair as he deserves. He is to be pitied. He is to be persuaded. He is to be instructed. "The drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty; and drowsiness shall clothe a man with rags." Excessive eating is classed with excessive drinking. One may be drunk with meat as well as drunk with wine. Overeating stuperfies; overdrinking excites. The difference is in the manifestation.

But eating is beyond the power of the Constitution. It can be corrected only by intelligent instruction and moral appreciation. It is so insidious. It is so universal. It is so social; and the more palatable the food is prepared, the greater the danger. The most difficult thing in Christian life is self-control. Eating is not the only indulgence to which human nature is exposed. All the passions and appetites are in danger. The tongue is the electric element in most people—to control it requires the grace of God and a sensitive conscience. The tongue is a little member, a fire, a world of iniquity; it defileth the whole body, and is set on fire of hell." It is the untamable member. Bible temperance is a big subject, and includes the whole life of man. The eighteenth amendment is here to stay, and much more must be added by Christian living.

W. W. Staley.

ELON LETTER.

The Mooney Christian Education Building gives Elon an unparalleled opportunity to serve the future leadership of our Church. Not every one who comes here will profit by this building, because not every student will take courses in religious education; but those who do will return to their home communities experienced in practical lines of modern Church work and qualified to lead in it successfully.

The Christian Education Building provides a completely graded week-day school of religion. Children from our Orphanage and from the town graded and high school attend it and are taught by the students in the department according to the most approved methods. These same methods apply to Sunday School work, and also to daily vacation Bible school work, and so the young people will have the very training they will need most effectually to serve in their home Churches and communities.

The building is not only closely graded, but it is departmentalized as well, so that it leads itself either to the group graded or the closely graded type of school. Each department has its separate assembly-room for the worship period and its individual class-room for each grade in the department, and beginning with the junior department, there are class-rooms for each sex in each grade. This is the ideal arrangement the specialists recommend, and we have it in most practical form. When the young people who work in this building here begin to have Church plants erected ten or fifteen years from now, the practical value of this building will be amply justified.

In addition to these services, this building affords the students a social and religious center, two items of the modern life that need especially to be conjoined. It also supplies the local Church here a magnificent plant for their Sunday School. The Chautauqua will use this building for its classes during the summer. A more serviceable building Elon does not have, and no other college has one like it.

We are given this great building by two generous-souled friends of Whittier, Calif.—Mr. and Mrs. M. Orban, Jr. They have given it to perpetuate the noble life of Mrs. Orban's distinguished father, the Rev. Isaac Mooney. They have erected it and furnished it complete, and they are happy to have done it. May the Lord bless them for their gracious deed.

The building is now completed. Its cornerstone was laid on January 24, 1925—two years from the day the trustees met in extraordinary session to launch the greater Elon program. Our hearts rejoiced to see what two wonderful years had wrought in the physical equipment of our college. And may the years that lie ahead see the college ripening spiritually in keeping with its physical progress.

W. A. Harper.

MONEY TALKS.

By Rt. Rev. Wm. P. Remington, D. D.

Money is the chief interest of about nine-tenths of us; it grips our imagination and dominates us with its power. It is nothing in itself but a medium of exchange, its purchasing value fluctuates, and it may be gold or silver, or mere paper, backed by a government's guarantee. In days gone by it used to be the shells of the South Sea Islanders, the beads and wampum of the Indian, the pounds of tobacco of our colonial ancestors. At any moment the medium of exchange may become altogether different, but ever back of money, in order to give it value, must stand a commodity to be traded, a productive capacity which can be trusted.

When Soviet Russia tried to finance its government, it resorted to the printing press, and turned out rubles by the billion; so did Germany and other nations after the World War. With what result? Bankruptcy and insolvency. Their money talked, but the talk was in vain, because it was not backed either by real gold or the goods and commodities which had value in a world market.

Every intelligent American knows these facts, and yet we are nearly all of us under the spell of money, as dollars and cents; we get it into our heads that we are rich because our yearly income is three thousand, whereas before the war it was only twelve hundred. Out come statistics informing us that the present purchasing power of a dollar is hardly 40 cents in comparison with what it was in 1924. It makes no difference; we go blithely on buying things we know we cannot afford, but feeling rich, because we can rub three dollars together where only one jostled about in a flat pocket-book in the days before the great war.

This article on money is not going to be economics—never fear. I'll get to religion in a minute, but we must clear the air of misapprehensions first. This is the thing to be made clear. Money itself is nothing—just a medium of exchange. Don't let it hypnotize you. It only has real value when back of it are resources and production, the bent back and colloused hand of the farmer or men in the shops, the wrinkled brow and graying hair of the business man, the spent energies of all who think and work and create in this world. Consequently, what we do with our money is what we do with ourselves. When we spend it, we spend ourselves, because it is the stuff of our lives.

Now, all this makes a great deal of difference to us. If money is the chief interest in life of nine-tenths of us, is it not true also that the vast majority are taking thought as to means of acquiring wealth and giving scant attention to the way we spend it? Here is where Christian teaching must come in. I have a certainty that Jesus was far more interested in expenditures than income, in gifts than in receipts. I have the idea that the measure of your life will be taken by the great and just Judge, when He examines the debit rather than the credit side of the ledger. I think I can hear the Lord say, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Yes, money talks; but what does it say when it talks? Does it speak of covetousness and self-indulgence, of foolish waste and lustful pleasure, or does it sing of love and good will, of mercy and lovingkindness, of progress and the alleviation of suffering and want? Remember when you spend money you are expressing yourself. You have put your mind and body into a trade, a business, a farm, and what you get out represents yourself. That isn't simply a silver dollar or a piece of paper; it is you, and like a radio message, you can send it to the ends of the earth for good or for ill, for death and destruction, or for life and peace. For a little while that money is in your possession and you can direct its movements, control its power.

And yet, ever since I have been in the ministry, I have been taught that I must not speak about money from the pulpit. "Stick to spiritual things, Parson," said the man in the pew, "and let the laity look after the financial arrangements. You preach about God, and we'll keep an eye on mammon." How stupid and ridiculous! Is not God concerned with the way you spend your life, and your money is just your transmuted life, your power and energy turned into a medium of exchange.

The Christian Churches have suffered many things at the hands of former generations of teachers, and never so much as from those who tried to separate the secular from the religious, what a man did on Sunday from what he did on the other days in the week. Witness the pious look on this man's face when he repeats "All things come of Thee, O Lord, and of Thine have we given Thee," and then look at him now as he grabs his weaker neighbor by the throat and shouts, "Pay me that thou owest." Is it one and the same man? Yes, but he divides his life into compartments, one for business and one for the Church, and one for home. Much of this kind of hypocrisy has gone. Winston Churchill's "Inside of the Cup" would not hit as many pious hypocrites as it did when it was written. We are franker in the pulpit today, and less afraid, and one of the reasons why new freedom has come is that we are talking about money, the acid test of a man's character and life.

Instead of damning money as evil, the Christian Church is trying to show the world that it is "the love of money which is the root of all evil." In other words, the love of power which comes with possession, the temptation to self-indulgence and dissipation, which are the frequent accompaniments to the song of the dollar—these are the real roots of our evil. Money rightly spent is a source of untold good; the way we spend it determines the amount of progress the human race makes.

Use it to build schools and Churches, hospitals and libraries, settlements and playgrounds, and you have a better and finer world. Spend it on wars and preparations for wars, on dreadnaughts and gas bombs, and you reap what you have sown in terms of the strife and hatred you have raised up by your covetousness and love of money power. Waste and dissipate it in self-indulgence, and the lust of the eye and the pride of life, and you have turned an engine of good into a machine of destruction.

Sometimes I laugh at the values which we Americans place on things; other times I am tempted to weep. In a small town in Pennsylvania, I dropped into a drug store once to greet a friend of my father's. "Isn't it a queer world, Bishop?" he remarked. "Yes," I answered; "and what's wrong with it now?" "Well," he replied, "it's my business to sell anything that I have in the store, but sometimes I wonder. The other day a sixteen-year-old girl came in and ordered six dollars' worth of face preparations—rouge and lipstick, and pencil and all the rest. She had it charged to dad; but sometimes I wonder whether either daughter or dad are getting real face value." "Yes, I've wondered about that, too," I replied; "and probably when Margaret asks dad for a contribution of ten cents for her mission box, dad will say, 'Margaret, don't you think you are going a little strong on that mission stuff?' Six dollars to spread on your face, and ten cents to spread the good news of God's love all over the earth! It is a queer world."

How many of us ever stop to examine the amounts of money we simply waste and get absolutely no return for? No; the American people do not love money in the sense that they hoard it or keep it. The fact of the matter is that any other nation without our tremendous resources would have gone bankrupt long ago if they spent money the way we do. We are prodigal of everything we have—our forests, our lands, our coal, our oil—and when we turn these resources into money we are prodigal of that too. Just ask the people who make a handsome penny from salvaging the wastes of the American dump-heap; just question the business man who engages in what might properly be called non-essential industries.

It's rather startling to discover the high cost of some of our amusements and luxuries. The other day I heard of a man in New York who spent thirty dollars apiece for some seats in a popular musical comedy. Thirty dollars would feed a starving child in China for the best part of a year. I don't think I am a puritan, and I don't want to take all the joy and fun out of life, but I do wonder whether we always get our money's worth, and I feel a sense of responsibility in expressing what I am by spending the money God permits me to make.

The Christian Churches are always protesting against the wrong use of money, and much of their scolding goes unheeded. Why? Because people are saying everywhere, "It's none of the parson's business; haven't I a right to do what I wish with my own money? Why doesn't he stick to his text and preach the gospel?" But stop a minute. Do you own all the money you have? Is it all yours? I think not! All of it has been made in partnership with the God who created all the resources of this earth and gave you power to develop them and turn them into gold. Another large share of it has been made in partnership with other people, the town, the community in which you live. Some of your earnings you should spend to help your neighbor. It is the business of the parson to speak to you about the uses of money, because you and your money are tied up together, and what you do with your life, with yourself, is the supreme interest of the Christ, whose gospel the parson dispenses. Too often the preacher confuses the people by an appeal for the support of his own Church, and they discount what he says because they believe it is entirely self-interested. Of course, the minister must live, and unfortunately he is forever being put into the beggar's class, because he has to appeal for money support. This is the wrong method. No minister should ever beg; he should tell people about the work the Church is doing, he should preach on money, its uses and abuses. If he can make the congregation see Christ's teaching about wealth, an enlightened conscience will make the people spend a proper proportion of their means in the Father's business, particularly when they can be shown that the parson is prosecuting the Father's business effectively. I believe always that adequate support for all worthy enterprises will come when these methods have been carried out faithfully.

It is no wonder that America has gotten into her present attitude towards money and its power. Since the sailor on the Santa Maria cried "Land" and a new world was discovered, the Western mind has concerned itself with the acquisition of that land, its subjection and development. Who could blame us for having our minds centered on material things? The time has come now, however, when things alone will not satisfy us. We have acquired, now we will spend.—Southern Churchman.

MODERN USE OF THE BIBLE.

This book, "The Modern Use of the Bible," is by Dr. Fosdick.

Any thing from the prolific pen of Dr. Fosdick is assured of a hearing, partly because of his reputation as a doctrinal iconoclast, but also because of his literary charm.

On the cover page it is intimated that he, by his teaching concerning the modern use of the Bible, is going to do for this country what Jonathan Edwards did for Massachusetts. It was with a doubting mind that we began the reading of this book in order to see this claim established.

The claim is also made that the Bible, under proper manipulating, can do for the country what Knox made it do for Scotland, Martin Luther for Germany, and John Wesley for the people of England.

In his preface he confesses that his position in this book "will of course be distasteful to those bound by a theory of literal inerrancy in their approach to the Bible."

As one who belongs to this last class, we have to acknowledge that Dr. Fosdick predicted the truth when he estimated what our feelings would be when he, with the cocksureness of youth, plows through the Old Book and disposes of truths that have been the comfort of God's people in all ages.

That he is sincere in believing that he is doing God's service, we have no doubt. He really believes that he is helping our faith in the Bible by cutting out what staggers reason, and that by doing away with the supernatural he makes the book more acceptable to the natural mind.

Some miracles he can believe, while there are others that are incredible, and these he quietly lays aside, and still insists that he is helping men in their faith.

We must be differently constituted in our mental make-up.

If a part of the Bible record is myth, a part allegory, a part popular tradition, and a part true, we could never be certain to which class we ought to assign any statement. It tells me that Christ died on the cross, and that my salvation depends upon my belief in His work. How am I to tell whether this record is a myth, an allegory, a tradition, or a truth?

Between the "ancient" use and the "modern" use of the Bible, we, without hesitation, take the old use.

The old use of the Book, a firm belief in its inspiration and its inerrancy, has soothed troubled hearts in the past, and we are willing to trust our hope of salvation in that plan laid down there.

We cannot understand the zeal with which this new propaganda is pushed, nor can we understand why men are willing to accept one part of the Book and then reject another part.

It may be that this growing attack against an inerrant word is due to what logicians call a non sequitur.

They find this world seemingly out of gear. Everything is in confusion. Vice grows bolder, and men, especially the young, grow desperate, and reject old truths.

These men imagine that this apparent collapse of God is due to a strict interpretation of the Bible, and that the remedy is to be found in toning down part of it, rejecting what reason cannot accept, and then turn over to men this emasculated Bible, thinking that it will set the world straight.—Presbyterian Standard.

POUNDED.

On Saturday after the third Sunday in December, 1924, at the conclusion of our first quarterly conference at Isle of Wight Courthouse Christian Church, I was informed by one of the sisters that they were not through with me yet. I was then invited to one of the Sunday School rooms in the rear of the Church and was delighted to see a nice pounding of good things to eat brought together by the members of the Church for the pastor and wife.

It was another one of those happy occasions when the pastor fails to find words to express the deep gratitude of his heart for such thoughtfulness on the part of his people.

W. D. HARWARD.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

BY WARREN H. DENISON, Secretary.

The Best-Known Financial System for Every Kind of a Church.

1. It is the annual every-member canvass, the double budget, the double envelope, the weekly offering, and the two-treasurer system.

2. The General Convention, in its quadrennial session, did a wise thing in endorsing and urging all our Churches to adopt and use the system.

3. The General Board, at its last session in October, asked every Church in the denomination to adopt it and begin carrying it out this year.

4. The General Board also urged the Churches of each Conference to conduct the canvass simultaneously, beginning this year.

5. We have prepared a manual which is available for any Church free. It will show any Church clearly how to conduct the canvass successfully.

6. We hereby urge the President, Secretary and Stewardship Secretary of each Conference to take such immediate steps as are necessary to carry out the wise action of our Church. We regret exceedingly that some Conferences have not yet elected stewardship secretaries. However, the Conference officers should seek to carry out the Convention and Board actions.

7. This Bureau of Christian Stewardship and Promotion stands ready to assist the Conferences in any way possible.

8. The every-member canvass is really the only worth-while plan known and approved by Christian leaders. It should be carefully planned for at least six weeks before the Sunday of the canvass. Said canvass should be made one or two weeks before the Church year begins.

9. This plan is not only a successful way to provide funds for your local current expenses, and your part of the denominational benevolences it will do that, but that is not its greatest good to your Church—it is a scriptural plan and full of spiritual power and blessing. It is a great means of blessing as well as pleasure to the men who go out in teams of two to make the canvass. They become actual personal advocates of all the work and causes of your Church. Their training is the crux of the success of the canvass. They interest and enlist the men, women and children in the program of the Church.

This canvass, or visitation, in your Church is the presentation of the financial needs of the Church to all the constituents of the Church on a given Sunday afternoon between 2 and 5 o'clock by laymen of the Church in teams of two. The canvassers really enjoy the work when trained to do it, and the people like the plan.

10. The Stewardship Secretary and pastor should urge it upon the official board for adoption as the policy of your Church. Representative laymen going to your homes greatly strengthen the work of the pastor.

STEWARDSHIP INSTITUTES.

Rev. W. H. Denison, D. D., secretary of stewardship of the General Convention, and J. O. Atkinson, secretary of stewardship for the Southern Convention, aided by the pastors and other local talent, will conduct a stewardship institute at the following Churches on days named:

First Church, Greensboro, Dr. C. H. Rowland, pastor, Wednesday, February 4th; Burlington, First Church, Dr. G. O. Lankford, pastor, Thursday, February 5th; Durham, First Church, Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, pastor, Friday, February 6th; Raleigh, First Church, Rev. W. D. Parry, D. D., pastor, Saturday, February 7th; Henderson, First Church, Rev. A. H. Hook, pastor, Sunday, February 8th; Holland, Va., Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, pastor, Monday, February 9th; Franklin, Va., Rev. F. C. Lester, pastor, Thursday, February 10th; Suffolk, First Church, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, pastor, Wednesday, February 11th; Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., Rev. L. E. Smith, D. D., pastor, Thursday, February 12th.

All pastors and members of Christian congregations, particularly Church officers, should take advantage of these institutes and give themselves the benefit of the information and the inspiration that thtey will afford. Dr. Denison has made thorough study of stewardship from the Bible point of view, and is conversant with his topic and will deliver at least three great addresses at each institute. The following program will give an idea of the subjects to be treated and addresses to be delivered:

A one-day get-together and study of a spiritual and biblical truth.

Three sessions—forenoon, afternoon, evening.

1. Exercises begin at 11 A. M., in charge of pastor.
2. Aims and objectives of this institute, Dr. W. H. Denison.
3. Spiritualizing Our Gift to the Church—an address.
4. The Scope and Principles of Stewardship—a discussion.
5. How to make a Church Budget.
6. What is the Work of the Finance Department or Committee?
7. Ten Points in Successfully Financing a Church.
8. Tithing—a Bible reading.
9. How to Put on the Every-Member Canvass Successfully.
10. Teaching Children Stewardship.
11. Paul's Financial Plan.
12. How to Put a Stewardship Program into the Local Church.
13. How to Develop the Grace of Giving.
14. Stewardship and the Scriptures.
15. Stewardship Helps.

Round-Table Questionnaire.

Speakers: Local pastors; W. H. Denison, D. D., Dayton, Ohio, stewardship secretary, General Convention; J. O. Atkinson, secretary stewardship Southern Convention.

Three services—one full day and evening. Stay through.

Pastor will be in charge.

Conference Stewardship Committee will co-operate.

Pastors, officials, workers, members, young and old, men and women should be present with notebook and pencils and a desire to know what the Bible teaches about stewardship.

It will certainly be worth the while of our people and all CHRISTIAN SUN readers within the reach of these institutes to attend one of them, and we sincerely trust, for the sake of the Church and the kingdom which we seek to serve, that there will be a large delegation at each of these institutes.

J. O. ATKINSON,
Secretary Stewardship S. C. C.

All our delegates, and then some, attended the great North American Missionary Conference in Washington last week.

MEN AND MILLIONS MOVEMENT.

The Men and Millions' fund total amount collected to December 31, 1924, was $131,809.33. This is 24 per cent of the amount subscribed, and 17 per cent of the goal of $750,000.

I congratulate the following Churches, which have paid at least 20 per cent of their quota. On May 1, 1925, another list will be published of all Churches which have 20 per cent at the end of five years. Let us hope that every Church will appear on the list, and that many will be 100 per cent. Fifty-six Churches are on this roll. If yours is not, why not?

North Carolina Conference.

Church.	P. C. of Quota.	Quota.	Amount Pledged.	Amount Paid.
Danville	25	$3,050	$3,146	$ 755.41
Mt. Zion	25	1,205	1,527	334.55
New Elam	25	2,829	2,829	762.40
New Providence	33.3	1,772	1,772	627.15
Zion	33.3	4,200	4,200	1,432.05
Bethel (W)	20	1,850	1,121	383.90
Catawba Springs	25	2,948	3,101	795.00
Chapel Hill	25	800	1,066	206.40
Graham	20	2,960	2,705	892.30
Elon College	100	926	7,750	1,443.74
Henderson	49	3,360	4,860	1,647.45
Mebane	20	1,100	773	254.40
Monticello	25	1,825	1,920	528.00
Mt. Auburn	50	5,400	5,715	2,903.00
Pleasant Grove, Va.	100	150	800	495.50
Raleigh	100	955	3,502	1,244.60
Sanford	60	3,900	5,165	2,643.00
Turner's Chapel	25	1,900	2,125	471.90
Wake Chapel	50	2,450	2,700	1,237.75

Eastern Virginia Conference.

Burton's Grove	25	$2,450	$2,700	$1,237.75
Third, Norfolk	20	5,000	5,133	1,000.00
Union, Surry	14	4,550	3,589	714.00
Antioch	20	10,790	10,790	2,462.86
Berea, Nansemond	100	1,700	5,287	2,942.50
Dendron	25	6,390	7,065	1,603.38
Franklin	38	10,440	16,440	4,044.19
First, Norfolk	35	8,975	9,773	3,165.44
Holy Neck	32	15,225	16,731	4,976.60
Isle of Wight	25	610	3,110	155.00
Ivor	50	1,400	1,600	705.00
Johnson Grove	33.3	850	1,449	302.20
Mt. Carmel	25	9,200	9,200	2,466.70
Newport News	66.6	3,710	7,592	2,227.66
Oakland	20	7.450	7,475	1,440.98
Rosemont	30	5,325	8,250	1,638.29
Suffolk	50	49,450	50,604	24,851.62
South Norfolk	45	3,075	7,166	1,404.77
Waverly	57	7,550	7,718	4,369.01
Wakefield	45	2,875	2,927	1,308.46
Windsor	41	2,882	3,000	1,203.58

Virginia Valley Conference.

Winchester	20	$2,100	$1,271	$ 431.05
Antioch	25	5,400	1,945	1,214.90
Dry Run	20	950	571	228.08
Mayland	75	375	912	286.57
Timber Ridge	100	375	455	434.75
Washington	100	400	1,249	620.00

Georgia and Alabama Conference.

Kite	15	$ 500	$1,350	$ 90.80
Providence	15	1,301	1,301	247.50
Rose Hill	20	1,550	3,130	378.00
Ambrose	33.3	850	3,300	321.00
Richland	35	785	1,007	278.30
Vanceville	25	550	1,280	192.00

Alabama Conference.

Beulah	15	$1,550	$1,200	$ 291.50
Cragford	60	550	1,250	331.00
New Hope	20	3,150	1,645	590.10
Wadley	100	795	2,165	968.50

J. E. WEST, Chairman.

SUNDAY SCHOOL MISSIONARY OFFERINGS FOR JANUARY.

Shallow Well, Jonesboro, N. C., $1.59; Shallow Ford, R. 1, Elon College, N. C., $3.55; New Lebanon, Wentworth, N. C., $4.42; Mt. Auburn, Manson, N. C., $1.77; New Elam, New Hill, N. C., $4.62; Wakefield, Va., $2.72; Elon Christian S. S., $5.00; Palm Street, Greensboro, N. C., $4.15; Turner's Chapel, Colon, N. C., $1.50; Pleasant Hill (A) Liberty, N. C., $1.25; Richmond, Va., $8.69; Salem Chapel, Walnut Cove, N. C., $1.25; Timber Ridge, High View, W. Va., $1.15; South Norfolk, Va., $13.38; Linville, Harrisonburg, Va., $5.01; Union (Surry) Dendron, Va., $2.21; Zion, Moncure, N. C., $1.30; Citizens' Bible Class, Elon College, $3.15; First Church, Portsmouth, Va., $12.21; Antioch, Harrisonburg, Va., $2.72; Pleasant Union, Lillington, N. C., $3.90 ;Liberty, Vance, Henderson, N. C., $3.77; First Church, Greensboro, N. C., $10.93; Franklin, Va., $30.00; First Church, Raleigh, N. C., $2.50; Wake Chapel, Fuquay Springs, N. C., $10.00; Holland, Va., $12.00; Peoples' Christian Church, Dover, Del., $14.66; Waverly, Va., $5.00; Rock Stand, $2.30; Chapel Hill, $1.36; Durham, N. C., $7.53; Reidsville, N. C., $6.14; Graham, N. C., $5.00; Roanoke, Ala., $3.20; Winchester, Va., $6.59; Berea (Nansemond), Va., $4.00; Holy Neck, Holland, Va., $16.00; Hanks' Chapel, Pittsboro, N. C., $4.20; Dry Run, Seven Fountains, Va., $2.00; Bethlehem, Timberville, Va., $4.36; Turner's Chapel, Rt. 5, Sanford, N. C., $2.11; Johnson's Grove, Sedley, Va., $2.19; Liberty Springs, Suffolk, Va., $2.00; Wadley, Ala., $2.33; Ramseur, N. C., $5.48; Windsor, Va., $15.48; Burlington, N. C., $83.07. Total S. S. collections for month of January, $349.73.

We are grateful to these good schools for their liberal offerings to our mission cause. We trust that this number shall greatly increase, as funds are so much needed now to carry forward our missionary work at home in Carroll County, Va., and abroad in Japan. We are happy at what these wide-awake schools are now doing.

Gratefully,

J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary.

MISSIONARY TREASURER'S REPORT.

The first quarterly report of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, December 31, 1924. Amounts received as follows:

Woman's Societies.

Antioch	$ 5.00
Berea, Nansemond	14.80
Bethlehem	4.40
Christian Temple	62.20
Cypress Chapel	12.70
Damascus	14.80
Dendron	16.70
Dover	46.80
Elm Avenue	3.40
First Church, Norfolk	21.60
Franklin	13.45
Holland	17.35
Holy Neck	22.19
Isle of Wight	4.50
Liberty Spring	10.60
Mt. Carmel	9.25
Newport News	9.45
Portsmouth	8.20
Rosemont	35.79
Richmond	15.50
Suffolk	75.80
Waverly	23.00
Wakefield	10.30
Windsor	3.80
		$ 461.58

Young People's Societies.

Antioch	$ 7.20
Berea, Nansemond	12.00
Bethlehem	1.95
Christian Temple	4.60
Dendron	6.55
Damascus	10.00
First Church, Norfolk	8.80
Franklin	5.00
Holland	20.00
Liberty Spring	10.65
New Lebanon	5.55
Portsmouth	11.80
Richmond	9.86
Suffolk	24.00
Waverly	28.00
		165.96

Willing Workers' Societies.

Berea, Nansemond	$ 1.47
First Church, Norfolk	1.80
Franklin	2.35
Holland	9.00
Holy Neck	9.95
Mt. Carmel	2.70
Rosemont	3.10
Suffolk	10.00
Windsor	1.50
Waverly	.85
		42.72

Cradle Roll.

Christian Temple	1.50

Mrs. W V. Leathers, Treasurer.

Holland, Va.

DELEGATES TO F. M. CONVENTION.

The following were present all or a part of the time as delegates to the Foreign Missions Convention, held in Washington, D. C., January 28th to February 2d: Rev. W. P. Minton, D. D., C. P. A., Bldg., Dayton, Ohio; Rev. W. H. Denison, D. D., C. P. A. Bldg., Dayton, Ohio; Mrs. W. H. Denison, C. P. A. Bldg., Dayton, Ohio; Rev. L. E. Smith, D. D., 4312 Colonial Street, Norfolk, Va.; Rev. W. P. Fletcher, D. D., 162 Westmount Avenue, Toronto, Ont.; Rev. E. A| Watkins, D. D., Urbana, Ill.; Mrs. Alice V. Morrill, 20 College Place, Defiance, Ohio; Miss Marian Morrill, C. P. A. Bldg., Dayton, Ohio; Rev. Omer S. Thomas, D. D., C. P. A. Bldg., Dayton, Ohio; Rev. A. G. Caris, LL. D., Defiance, Ohio; Rev. F. G. Coffin, D. D., Albany, Mo.; Miss Martha R. Stacy, 20 College Place, Defiance, Ohio; Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Elon College, N. C.; Mr. A. F. Foor, Everett, Pa.; Rev. A. W. Sparks, Everett, Pa.; Rev. W. M. Jay, D. D., Everett, Pa.; Rev. W. G. Sargent, D. D., 215 Bucklin Street, Providence, R. I.; Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., Suffolk, Va.; Rev. G. O. Lankford, D. D., Burlington, N. C.; Rev. J. F. Morgan, Winchester, Va.; Rev. John G. Truitt, 129 Hardy Avenue, Norfolk, Va.; Rev. F. G. Lester, Franklin, Va.; Mr. J. M. Darden, Suffolk, Va.; Rev. A. W. Hirby, 312 Edgar Avenue, Dayton, Ohio; Rev. R. G. Clark, Huntington, Ind.; Rev. A. E. Kemp, D. D., Troy, Ohio; Rev. I. W. Johnson, D. D., Suffolk, Va.; Miss Martha Denison, Dover, Del.; Rev. F. E. Rockwell, Warren, Ind.; Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, Holland, Va.; Mrs. W. V. Weathers, Holland, Va.; Mr. Hermon Eldredge, C. P. A. Bldg., Dayton, Ohio; Rev. W. J. Hall, Rt. 1, Dayton, Ohio; Miss Florence Case, 21 Marlborough Avenue, Providence, R. I.; Mrs. Athella M. Howsare, 1535 N. Euclid Avenue, Dayton, Ohio; Mr. H. E. Sims, 709 Broadway, Piqua, Ohio; Rev. P. V. Harris, 238 Buffalo Street, Conneaut, Ohio; Rev. J. T. Brooks, R. R., Farmer City, Ill.; Mrs. A. W. Sparks, Everett, Pa.; Mrs. A. F. Foor, Everett, Pa.; Rev. J. M. Kaufman, Piqua, Ohio; Prof. W. P. Lawrence, Elon College, N. C.; Dr. D. B. Atkinson, Albany, Mo.; Mr. Fenner C. Brownell, Chevy Chase, Md.; Mr. Morton Etheridge, Norfolk, Va.; Mr. L. W. Townsend, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. James Lightbourne, Holland, Va.; Mrs. M. L. Bryant, Norfolk, Va.

QUESTIONS FROM INDIA.

One of the prominent speakers at the North American Missionary Conference, in Washington last week, was Prof. Jesudason Cornelius, a native of India, who, however, puts us Americans to shame in the handling of our own tongue and language. Among many other things said in his great address, he asked four questions:

"The East," he declared, "challenges Christian America with the following questions:

"Is there more race hatred and bitterness in America?

"Is there selfishness strong enough to stand in the way of America's making her contribution in the greatest effort ever made to help human families live in peace?

"Is the American civilization tending to crowd religion out, and is it really incapacitating Americans for religion?

"Is America making economic and scientific advances to these ends in themselves?

Asks About Moral Progress.

"Is the material advance making Americans forget the moral progress, without which society will go to pieces?

"Has not the time come for Christian Americans to stop, think and face the facts to see if the movement in the United States is towards Christ?"

Prof. Cornelius, who addressed the meeting, wearing a turban, declared the world "is looking to America for leadership, for the uplift of humanity and for bringing about a Christian social order."

FEBRUARY MISSIONARY PROGRAM.

Porto Rico.

Call to Order by President.

Hymn—"I Love to Tell the Story."

Scripture—Romans 10:10-15.

Prayer—Call for Sentence Prayers for our Missionaries in Porto Rico.

Roll Call; Dues Collected.

Business; Minutes.

Reports of Officers.

Reports of Committees.

Solo—"Porto Rico's Call" (write Mrs. Emily S. Powers, C. P. A. Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, for copy).

Missionary Topics—"Burden-Bearers" (leaflet).

"How Race Enriches Humanity (chapter 3 "Of One Blood").

"To be born into any race, to be a worthy member of it, lifting it to its true character and its true duty, is glory and honor for any man."

"Working with God to the making of humanity."

"God bids us to work out our own salvation."

Hymn—"Blest Be the Tie that Binds."

Prayer.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S PROGRAM.

China.

Call to Order by the President.

Devotional—Song: "I Love to Tell the Story."

Bible Lesson—Read First Psalm.

Prayer.

Roll Call—Respond with verse of Scripture.

Dues Collected by Treasurer.

Business; Minutes; Reports; New Business.

Special Music.

Lesson—Chapter 5, Ming Kwong "The City of Morning Light."

You will notice that the chapter for the lesson study consists of letters written by Mrs. Gladden to a friend in America.

Hymn—"Jesus Calls Us O'er the Tumult."

Announcements.

Benediction.

Gertrude Brown,
Field Secretary.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

February 15, 1925.

Subject: "Jesus in Gethsemane."

Golden Text: "Not that I will, but what Thou wilt."—Mark 14:36.

Lesson: Mark 14:32-42.

Devotional Reading: Psa. 22:1-8.

Reference Material: Matt. 26:36-46; Luke 22:39-46; John 18:1-2.

A man has written a book about the decisive battles of the world. It deals with those battles which marked turning points in the destinies of nations and which turned the stream of civilization into new channels. But the writer omitted the most decisive battle of all time—the one which has most profoundly influenced the history of the world, and the one from which all other movements and events take their significance. The world's most decisive battle was fought in Gethsemane by a Man alone, deserted by His friends and betrayed by his enemies. And although it lacks much of the color of usual warfare and has none of the glamour of modern, "front-page" stuff, it has the element of the heroic in it, and much of the eternal about it. For after all, the real battles are not fought on battlefields, but in the hearts of men. And here was fought in the heart of a Man a battle for all the world and for all ages.

"Then cometh Jesus with them unto a place called Gethsemane." It was a garden or "an enclosed piece of ground." What an appropriate and suggestive place for the struggle! He had said, "But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret." One after another doors had closed behind or in front of the Master, until on this fateful night He had only eleven with Him. He took them into the garden, but only three of them were allowed to enter closely into His struggle. And even they were not permitted to go into the holy of holies—He withdrew about a stone's throw from them. When a man goes into Gethsemane, he goes alone; he must go alone. Luke says that it was his custom to come to this place. Here where He had met God before, amid associations that would help Him, He prayed to the Father who seeth in secret.

"He was greatly amazed" and he was "sore troubled." In spite of the fact that the shadow of the cross had been looming before Him, He did not realize its horror until it actually confronted Him. His soul was exceeding sorrowful even unto death. The burden of the world's sin, the hardness of the human heart, the yearning of an infinite love mingled in his emotions and made it possible for Him to enter sympathetically into our lives in such experiences. If ever a heart ached and if ever a man suffered, it was in the garden that night.

"And He prayed." He prayed that if it were possible, the hour or the cup might pass from Him. He prayed three times. And He prayed so earnestly and in such agony that the sweat on His blow was as great drops of blood. But He did not pray that His own will might be done. He had come down from heaven not to do His own will, but the will of Him that sent Him. He prayed that He might do the will of God. Indeed, for that cause had He come unto that hour. Here is the heart of prayer—to prepare ourselves to do the will of Him that sent us.

"And He cometh and findeth them sleeping." While the Master was going through one of the great experiences of His life, the disciples, only a stone's throw away, were sleeping. It is a parable of life. While God in Christ yearns over a lost world, we quibble over non-essentials and become dull and unresponsive, even unconscious to the pressing needs of our fellow-men. It was perhaps disconcerting to the Master, but even in the critical hour He loved them unto the end. He did not rebuke them, but He did warn them. He was the Good Shepherd, who careth for the sheep.

"Arise, let us be going." The Master had fought a good fight. He had conquered self. Why should He be afraid of men! He had understood what the will of the Lord was to do it. He would not wait until His enemies came to take Him. He would go to meet them. Like many of His followers, because He feared God, He did not fear His fellow-men. And as He started on the course that led on the morrow to the cross, He was strengthened in the inner man, for angels had ministered unto Him, and He had in His heart an abiding joy and the peace of God which passeth all understanding.

There are several practical and helpful lessons in the story of Christ in Gethsemane for us.

1. It helps wonderfully to have a stated place for prayer.
2. Prayer will help us to meet and overcome life's battles.
3. Gethsemane is not an isolated event in life; it is a process.
4. There are some burdens we can share with others; there are some burdens which me must bear alone.
5. Jesus Christ knows how to help and is able to help, because He has lived a life in the flesh.
6. The heart of prayer is communion with God; its object is to prepare us to do His will.
7. If Jesus Christ had saved Himself, He could not have saved others.
8. Real prayer makes heavy demands on the prayer.
9. Men sleep while God sorrows.
10. He who sleeps through duty may just as well keep on sleeping.
11. One of the best ways to deal with trouble is to meet trouble.
12. The answer to prayer often comes in unexpected ways.
13. He that really wants to know the will of God shall know it.
14. Persistency in prayer is as essential as piety.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

February 15, 1925.

Topic: "Striking Instances of the Friendliness of Jesus."

Bible Reference: John 11:1-11.

Scripture Reading: Luke 19:1-10.

Worship Service.

Sing softly the first three verses of "In the Cross of Christ I glory," and repeat in unison the fourth verse.

Sing softly and prayerfully, "Saviour, Like a Shepherd, Lead Us."

Prayer.—"For what thy friendship means, our Master, we know not how to thank Thee. We praise Thee for the joy of it, adding new beauty to every gift Thou sendest us, glowing even through hours of darkness and pain, and making loneliness forever impossible. We bless Thee for the peace of it, guarding us ever from all real anxiety, and giving us to face all unknown ways with gallant spirits, unafraid, since we walk with hands in Thine. We thank Thee for the glory of it, shining on the level stretches of our daily lives and making them splendid with opportunity, touching every common task and rendering it radiant with meaning. Amen."—Girls' Year-Book.

Song, "He Leadeth Me."

Sentence prayers, ending with one verse of "I Need Thee Every Hour."

Suggestions for Leader's Talk.

Study carefully the parable of the Good Samaritan and tell the story to the society, giving the lessons which Jesus meant to teach. (Luke 10:27-37.) Jesus would have us help the needy, regardless of who they are and where they are. "Go, thou, and do likewise."

Suggested Topics for Four-Minute Talks.

1. "The friendliness of the Boy-Christ." If possible, use Hoffman's picture of "The Boy-Christ" or his picture of "Christ in the Temple." These pictures reveal to us in a visual way the quiet, simple sweetness of His face. People must have loved Him wherever they saw Him.

2. "Jesus' concern for the weak and the needy." The four gospels are filled with instances of His healing the sick, being kind to the poor and giving messages of comfort and peace to those who needed encouragement. The parable spoken to the sinners and publicans (Luke 15:1-7) tells of the concern of the Father over the repentance of one sinner. Jesus cares for each and every one with tenderness and love.

3. "The friendliness of Jesus with His disciples." His love for John is mentioned in the Bible several times, and especially in John 13:23 and 19:26. Peter denies Christ and receives the greatest rebuke of any of the disciples, and later the greatest commendation from Christ of any of the disciples. The friendship of Christ for His disciples inspired them to greater service. On the day of Pentecost, Peter spoke boldly and with great success of Christ. Three thousand believed and accepted Christ.

4. "Jesus' love for little children." He said: "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Even though Christ had been journeying a long way, was tired, and other people would not have the children bother Him; He blessed them. Illustrate this with the picture of Christ blessing the little children or the picture in which He is holding gently a little lamb.

5. "What the friendship of Jesus should mean to us." He cares for us when we are happy and rejoicing, even though many of us come to Him only when we are discouraged and need help. The happy, cheerful life must be the kind of Christian that Christ would have us be. When we are happy, do we just stop and thank God for the joy of being alive and for an opportunity for service? When we are sad, He loves us and cares for us. May our faith and love be strengthened.

Make out some good questions to ask during the meeting and have the members answer them without having seen the questions before the meeting.

Christian Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

The cold weather seems to have us in its grip this the 28th day of January. The ground is covered with snow and ice, and of course all the children would be delighted to go out on the snow. Who ever knew a little fellow who did not like to play in the snow; but our former experience has taught us the lesson that a little preventative used in time often saves trouble for us, so it has been our policy this winter to keep the buildings warm and comfortable and keep the children indoors. So far, we have had no sickness—not even a bad cold. We are hoping and praying that we may be spared this year, since we had so much sickness last winter.

The children have concrete sidewalks from the Orphanage to the school-house, and it has been a great convenience to them this winter. Our children are doing well in school. We have one young boy who is making "A" on all his studies this year, and another boy a close second, and we have two girls in high school who are doing their best to make two grades, so they can enter college next year.

One of our boys who graduated at Elon College two years ago and has held a splendid position with the State Highway Commission, has been given a fellowship at the State University of North Carolina for one year to further his special course in his special line of work.

We feel proud of our children, and we know that it is a pleasure for you to lend a helping hand in the work.

How about the suggestion in our letter last week! Write us a letter and let us know your opinion in the matter. This is your institution. We are just trying to be your faithful servant.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR FEBRUARY 5, 1925.

Amount brought forward		$ 580.10
Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
N. C. & Va. Conference:
Mt. Bethel	$ 1.03
Elon	2.50
		3.53
Western N. C. Conference:
Burlington	$ 73.44
Salem Chapel, N. C. & Va.	1.43
		74.87
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Henderson	$ 5.55
Liberty, Vance	5.00
Christian Chapel	8.40
		18.95
Eastern Virginia Conference:
Windsor	$ 54.63
Johnson Grove	2.81
Holland	24.00
Cypress Chapel	5.30
Isle of Wight	2.50
Mt. Zion	2.29
		91.53
Valley Virginia Conference:
Winchester	$ 6.56
Mayland	3.23
Concord	4.80
Palmyra	.88
		15.47
Georgia and Alabama Conference:
Wadley	$ 1.92
Roanoke	2.50
North Highlands	1.92
		6.34

Baby Home Pledge Fund.

C. D. Harton	$ 5.00
Lillie Smithy Joyner	5.00
S. F. Coghill	5.00
C. A. Piland	5.00
		20.00

Special Offerings.

Mr. Pervis Tilley	$ 30.00
Boone Bible Class, Sanford	15.50
Omer S. Thomas, Sec.	20.00
Winchester Ch. Xmas offering	1,00
		66.50
Grand total		$ 877.32

JEWS IN AMERICA.

Jews cannot enter the life of America without harm to themselves. Rabbi Franklin is the latest to say so. In his "Sunday" sermon at Detroit, he said that he always discouraged intermarriage and, where it occurred, always insisted on the Jewish education of the offspring, and then went on to say that it is the misfortune of the Jew that he finds himself in the midst of a money-grubbing, pleasure-mad civilization which has infected him and pulled him down from his true heights. The Jew, in other words, is the victim of America. This is the authorized Jewish claim every where. Even Justice Brandeis, of the United States Supreme Court, said that the looseness of Jews in America is due to the loss of protection afforded them by the ghetto. The ghetto which, on the one hand, is flung at us as an instance of Christian persecution, is, on the other hand, glorified as the salvation of the Jews. Americans say that it is the alien elements introduced by aliens into the theater, business, politics, literature and art that account for the looseness in America; and Jews say it is due to Americans themselves, and that the Jews are the unconscious and innocent victims of it. The contention is thus resolved to a case of fact which can easily be determined by considering, for example, what kind of a city New York was before the Jews captured it, and what kind of a theater America had before it came under Oriental influence.

The salary of the keeper of the Tower of London during the reign of Queen Elizabeth was about $500 a year. He also received all the government allowances made to offenders of high rank who were too proud to accept it. All cattle that slipped off London Bridge, all carts that fell into the moat, all flotsam and jetsam in the Thames, two flagons of wine from every vessel arriving from Bordeaux, and many other things were included in his fees.

The National Flag Code Committee, representing more than 200 patriotic societies, are up in arms, charging that "flags made in Japan are of such cheap material that, when they become wet, the colors run, and the result is something that looks more like the red flag of Bolshevik Russia than the flag of the United States."

Thousands of miles of highways in France and Germany are shaded by rows of fruit trees planted on either side of the road. Some of them are State-owned and others are privately owned.

"What do you mean by an eight-day clock?"

"One that will run eight days without winding."

"Huh! Then how long will it run if you wind it?"—Good Hardware.

Subscribe for THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

These Pens are of standard make, and will give good service. If you are in need of a Fountain Pen, order from us.
MEN'S PENS ..... $2.00 LADIES' PENS $2.00
Postage paid, and Pens guaranteed by the manufacturer.

LIMITED COMBINATION OFFER.—To a new subscriber, or for renewal (if not in arrears), $3.25, either Gentleman's or Lady's Pen, with guarantee of manufacturer. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 EAST BROAD STREET, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Mission Study Books.

Official List for 1924-1925.

ORDER BY TITLE OF BOOK.

FOR ADULT CLASSES.

For Home Mission Classes:
"The Romance of Home Missions," by S. L. Morris, D. D.. Paper, 50c; cloth..... $ .75

For Foreign Mission Classes:
"Ming Kwong—the City of Morning Light," by Mary Ninde Gamewell. Paper, 50c; cloth .75
"In China," by H. F. Williams, D. D..... .25

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

For Intermediate Home Mission Classes:
"The Land of All Nations," by Margaret F. Seelbach. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75

For Intermediate Foreign Mission Classes:
"China's Real Revolution," by Paul Hutchinson. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75

For Junior Foreign Mission Classes:
"Chinese Lanterns," by Minna McEwen Meyer. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... .75

LEADERS' HELPS.

Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Adult Classes) ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Young People's Classes)..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Land of All Nations"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Ming Kwong"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "China's Real Revolution".. .15
Leaders' Helps for "Chinese Lanterns"..... .15

Send all orders to—

THE CHRISTIAN SUN,
1536 East Broad Street - - Richmond, Virginia.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

SELF-CONTROL, a GREAT ASSET.

"He that is soon angry will deal foolishly."—Prov. 12:7.

What do you gain when you get angry, talk loud, unthinkingly and say cruel things? In other words, what do you gain when you lose control of yourself.

As a result, you usually lose the point you are trying to gain.

When you are at the point where you are merely talking and not thinking, you lose.

The calm, collected person, the one who weighs his words, is victorious. The next time you become angry and you raise your voice to a high pitch, realize that your temper is getting the best of you and calm down. Getting "fighting mad" does not get you what you want. Iit merely lets off steam.

You have lost your punch and your case when you take this method. Self-control wins, and that is what you really wish to acquire, isn't it? Think of the many times you have lost your temper and you will be convinced that calm, self-control is a most valuable characteristic to cultivate?

The sooner you begin to practice it, the better it will be for you. (Copyright, 1924, International Feature Service, Inc.)

Prayer.—Our Father, may the peace of God which kept Christ sweet at all times keep us too, today and forever. Amen.

TUESDAY.

HOW OLD ARE YOU?

Every view of life these days presents a picture of humanity searching for youth. The conversion of barber-shops from a place for men only to a place of the haunts of women in search for youth; the multiplication of "beauty shops" everywhere indicates the anxiety of the people to preserve youth, and as man realizes that youth has slipped from him and age approaches, he sighs, "I am headed for the grave every day, and can't stop myself."

There are lots of things we can do to retain youth. Some of them, like cosmetics, are superficial and soon leave us. Others are of a more inherent nature and contribute vitally to youthful feelings and appearances. Consider the following as good recipes for perpetual youth:

1. Sympathy and association with young people.
2. Looking for the good and the hopeful in everything.
3. Exercise constructive, rather than critical, faculties.
4. Welcome new tasks and eexrcise yourself in doing something new.
5. Youth is spirit; live the spirit life.
6. Cultivate the spirit of adventure. The exercise of faith is the greatest adventure.
7. Exercise daily the virtues of religion.

Thus we may preserve the spirit of youth and a mutual attitude and habitude which is characteristic of youth at its best.

WEDNESDAY.

ABOUT TROUBLE.

"Let not your heart be troubled."—John 14:1.

Trouble comes from various sources. It is sometimes purely imaginary, or better: a real trouble, arising from an imaginary cause. It always comes from wrong-doing by ourselves or by others. There are times when it appears that it cannot be avoided, and no one is directly responsible for it. A lack of confidence, or faith, is the cause of much trouble in this world. When faith is shaken between husband and wife, trouble immediately starts in the home. It is so in business, in the Church, everywhere. Trouble follows close upon the heels of doubt.

But if doubt is the cause of trouble, faith is its cure. Jesus knew this. The disciples were beginning to doubt and were troubled. To comfort them, He said: "Believe in God; believe also in me." Had they believed in Jesus, they would have been spared much of their trouble which they had while Jesus was in the tomb. A belief in His early resurrection would have given them so much joy that the horrors of the crucifixion and His temporary absence would have been overshadowed by the hope of His glorious appearing.

Prayer.—Our Father, increase our faith in Thee, in Thy Son, and in Thy Word. In every trouble may we have Thy comfort, so that where trouble abounds, faith may much more abound. Amen.—T. E. White.

THURSDAY.

GOD'S PLOWMAN.

"No man having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom."—Luke 9:57-62.

A minister has written a book in praise of his mother and the title is "The Lady of the Chimney Corner." Rev. Dr. Fullerton, of England, tells how the Spirit touched this minister one day when he was but a lad and how he went to his mother in her little cottage to tell her of his experience.

"Shut your eyes and stand by the table," said the mother, and he did. Then she took two pieces of wood, put them in his hands and called them furrow; now you have the plow in your hands, and you have to go on and on and you cannot see the end of the furrow. Now open your eyes; you have put your hands to the ploy, you must never take them away; you will have to go on and on. Sometimes you will meet with a stone, sometimes your plow will stick. You will have to go on by yourself and you must not turn back. You are God's plowman." Today in New York City this man is a plowman for God in a great mission.

We, to be plowmen for God, must take hold of the plow handles, look straight before us unto Jesus the Author and Finisher of our faith. What a task! What power we must have to keep from looking about or turning back; hands cannot be in pockets, eyes cannot be everywhither, but hands must be upon the plow handles, eyes looking straight before, plowing the furrow for God.

Prayer.—"We would remember this day and always the heroes of the world. Not those who contend in the physical games, but those who battle against the powers of darkness to win the victory over inward passion. We beseech Thee, exalt in glory those who overcome the inner foe. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE CONFLICT OF THE AGES.

"And I will put enemity between Thee and the woman . . . it shall bruise thy head, and thou shall bruise his heel."—Gen. 3:15.

This is the Bible's first gospel. The metaphor is that of a man crushing a serpent with his feet and the serpent fastening his teeth in the man's heel. The crushing of the head is more than bruising the heel. That is the gospel of the Lord in trampling down Satan and at last gaining the victory, though he may be crushed in the struggle himself.

There is with us an age-long conflict of wrestling against influences of sin. Man with his gift of choice struggles with principalities and powers in the satisfaction of lower desires.

This gospel promises us the nerve and power to deal the death blow to our adversary. Let us picture ourselves standing in the image of God, with Jesus in our souls, stamping these enemies of our souls and in Him victors.

Prayer.—Our Father, give us a full consecration today and everyday, and power to overcome. Turn our victories into facts and so may we always be identified with Thee. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE JOYS OF CHRISTIAN WORSHIP.

"Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together."—Heb. 10:22-25.

Church-going strengthens every other good habit. In the main, the Church-going people of America are the people who obey the law, keep the peace, and promote right living and right thinking.

Regular Church-going helps to promote regularity in everything else. It tends toward moral steadiness, dependability, and sanity. The regular Church-goers of every community are among the most industrious and thrifty.

An hour or two spent in God's house on God's day promotes that frame of mind and quality of judgment which enables us to look out upon life's problems with a proper sense of proportion. One of the psalmists said that there came a time when he fell into an envious frame of mind. He envied the apparent prosperity of the wicked. And his mind was not readjusted on that issue until he went into the house of the Lord. "Then," he said, "I understood their end."

There are many ways to spend Sunday, but the best way of all is to go to the house of the Lord.

Prayer.—Our Heavenly Father, in the moment of our consecration, as we realize the joy of worship in Thy house, as we dedicate heart and life to Thee, reveal again Thy tenderness and make clear to us the unceasing flow of Thy affection toward us. In His name. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE DAY WHICH THE LORD MADE.

"This is the day which the Lord made, we will rejoice and be glad in it."—Psa. 118:22.

Because it is the day of the Lord, it does not promise us tranquility. Sickness, poverty, misfortune, death, necessary labor, sin, remorse, worldness and many other things may engage and so distress us that we may be very unhappy. But in it all we can say, this is the day which brought us salvation. It is the day which has made us greater than we know. In it there is stillness that speaks, in which the voice of God is heard. In it we will put off the world and put on Christ. This is the day to grow in grace and the knowledge of the Lord, until He takes us to Himself.

Prayer.—Our Father, give us faith to recede from the din of the world and approach Thy life today. In His name we ask it. Amen.

Florida is like California, and every State in the Union, in this: Every section has its citizens ready to prove that where they live is not only the best spot in the State, but the best spot on earth. That local pariotism is building up this nation, little villages and huge cities, as the tiny creatures, dead long ago, built up the coral reefs on which Florida rests.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

This morning when you waked up didn't you see the sunshine first thing? And didn't it seem like spring had come? It does feel so good to remember that it will soon be summertime again. And do you know the best way to have a good time all summer long? Listen, then, Kiddies: study hard now, and make your grades, and when the time comes for the holidays you won't have a single thing to do 'cept run and play. Did you ever build a playhouse up in the apple tree? It's the most fun in the world!

Before long, you will be making your valentines. Who will write a short little Valentine story for me? You, and you, and all the other yous! Please, dears, write a story for the Kiddies Korner, all about St. Valentine's Day. Why are valentines made heart-shaped, anyway? Oh! it's so much fun to cut 'em out and write little love verses on 'em all!

Here is a teeny-tiny verse you may use, Kiddies:

"Kind and dearest mother mine,
Here is my heart for your valentine."

"Mother" can be changed to father, brother, sister—just as you wish. Sometimes it's best to make the hearts out of colored blotting-paper; and I know you can make beautiful ones, so I won't tell you how. Next week you will have a story about a Little Old Woman's First Valentine. It's a good story.

Thank you for all the letters. Oh! I just get covered up in them, and read, and read, and read till I read my way out! Some of the ones that I can read the easiest—those that are written plainly—are going to appear in your Korner.

Hurry your story to me—oh, please! please! write it with ink! Good-by now; you are my little valentines, so I'm sending my heart full o' love.

Your editor,
MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT.

FROM THE KIDDIES.

Had a Happy Christmas.

January 17, 1925.

DEAR MISS MOFFITT:

I am having a real good time playing in the house these rainy days.

I had a very happy Christmas. My little brother and I had a nice little Christmas tree. Some of the things old Santa brought me were a toy piano, bracelet, and handkerchiefs, and you may bet a lot of good things to eat.

Miss Moffitt, if I had two Fords I would give the little lost Ford away and keep the little shiney new one, for maybe it won't run away and get lost.

Yours truly,
Wakefield, Va. ELIZABETH CRUTCHFIELD.

Choosing the Five Stones.

The story of David is a very old one, but just as interesting today as it was away back in our Saviour's time, or hundreds of years before that.

We know of the great giant Goliath, who was so large and strong that the King and all his soldiers feared to meet him; and we know, too, of the gentle shepherd, boyish in form, and as pure and innocent as the lambs in his father's flock, which he tended on the plains at Bethlehem. The lad loved God, and trusted in Him; and it was that love and trust that gave him the power which the great warriors lacked.

When he took the ten loaves of bread and the measure of parched corn to his brothers, who, fighting in King Saul's army, no one would have dreamed that the slender lad, with soft, curling brown hair, would slay the fierce giant, encased in his impregnable armor; he who for forty days had called upon Saul to send forth a man to fight with him. Indeed, perhaps David himself did not know it.

The stones for his sling he chose from the neighboring brook—only five—but, as you all know, the first of these slung by the shepherd lad as he ran toward his enemy, sunk into Goliath's forehead, and the dreaded giant fell to the earth.

"I come to thee, trusting in the God of Israel," were David's words.

Let them be our motto in all the undertakings of our lives.

(Age 12.) ALMA MCGEE.
Willow Spring, N. C.

THE LITTLE FEET.

Frank and Nannie have several little boats which they made themselves out of flat chips whittled round at one end and pointed at the other. They had sails and masts. When the fleet was out one day, a storm came on, the wind blew a gale, the rain fell in torrents, and the waves were very high. Some of their boats were wrecked, which was not strange, considering their construction, and the others were somewhat damaged; but this gave them employment in putting them in sailing order again.

Frank and Nannie lived near a seaport town, and one day they made a visit with their mother and went on board a yacht. They had never been on board a vessel before, and were delighted when they saw how pretty she was. The name of this yacht was "Sunshine." Everything about it was in the best order. There were little windows and doors in the cabin which had crimson curtains, and the ceiling was of the same warm color. On both sides were long seats, covered with crimson, too, and under these were books, dishes and all sorts of things, for every place has to be made useful, as there is no room to spare.

They went on deck and saw the sailors running up and down the rope-ladders. There was a large dog named Jack on board the "Sunshine" which belonged to one of the officers. He had once jumped into the water and saved a child which had fallen overboard, and the crew all thought a great deal of him for his bravery, and made a great pet of him.

The children thought they should like to make a trip on board the "Sunshine," and their mother promised them they might make a short one some time.

LAZY CHARLIE.

"Make haste, Charlie! make haste!" cried Tom Evans, as he rushed out of the house; "we have only five minutes to reach the school-house in in, and sha'n't we catch it if we're late?"

"All right," answered Charlie, an obstinate little fellow of nine years, "I'm coming; but I just want to spin my new top. I'll be there as soon as you are."

"Charlie! Charlie!" called his mother; "you must hurry. You can spin your top after school. Run along, like a good boy."

Charlie picked up his books and slate and went slowly on; but as soon as he was out of sight of home, down went slate on the ground, and out came his top, and he forgot all about school, but after a while thought he would go, even if it was late, so picking up his slate and satchel, he went to school and walked quietly in.

"Why are you so late?" asked the master, looking very sternly at him. Charlie hesitated, and then answered: "Please, sir, baby was sick, and I had to run for the doctor."

If Charlie had only gone directly to school, as his mother told him, he would not have had to tell a lie to shield his disobedience.

Tom looked up as Charlie answered the master and colored. When they were going home from school he was very angry, and said: "I'm ashamed of a brother who will tell a lie."

Charlie replied, "I should have been punished if I had told the truth."

Tom shook his head and said, "It will be fortunate for you if you escape now." They said nothing about the matter when they reached home, but in the evening the schoolmaster, who thought something was wrong, called Charlie's mother and found that he had told a willful lie; so the next day he was severely punished before the whole school and kept after the others had gone home. So you all see the sin of disobedience, and how one is punished sooner or later.

THE MOST VALUABLE THING.

What is a lost thing worth? Sometimes when we read about long lost valuables being found, or rediscovered, and the vast fortunes which the finders receive, we, too, stop and wonder if we all ought not go treasure-seeking.

There is the lost continent, and the lost kingdom, the lost jewels that are worth hundreds of thousands, and lost ships that rest on the bottom of the seas. There are lost mines, lost books, which, if any of these we should find, would mean our fortune; for instance, we should discover a lost mine, or jewels of the Orient.

But hearken, brethren, there are some things more precious than mines and jewels lost all about us—that is a man's soul. Let us read together the words of Christ (Mark 8:36), "For what shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

If some one of our country gets lost, we are all volunteers to search; the nation is ready to send out ships and airplanes to help find the lost; the man that is worth hundreds of dollars per day cheerfully leaves his desk to help in the search. But, alas! my brethren, we are careless and unconcerned about the lost soul. No one can count the cost of one human life, but the soul is worth far more than that. Jesus said (John 6:27), "Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that which endureth unto everlasting life." Brethren, Christ needs our help in saving the souls of men; that is the work that He considers most important of all, and that was His mission to earth. He has left the work to us, and in preparing to leave this earth for heaven, He said to His disciples, "Verily, verily, I say unto you: he that believeth on me, the works that I do, shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto my Father."

Brethren, let us pray that God may make us soul-seekers for Him. Let us ask ourselves this question: "Have we helped?"

Danville, Va. P. H. RICKETTS.

The American Council on Organic Union, Dr. Rufus W. Miller, 409 Schaff Building, Philadelphia, Pa., has just sent out an action of the National Council of Congregational Churches on the plan of union proposed by the American Council on Organic Union in which the Congregational Churches notify the other Churches of the country that they approve in substance the proposed plan. The Congregational Churches announce further that they are ready to undertake by conference of correspondence measures looking to union with other Churches. This is good news to those who love the cause of Christ.

PIERCE—PIERCE.

In the afternoon of December 30, 1924, at the home of the bride, Mr. Jeremiah Pierce and Mrs. Anna Virginia Pierce were united in matrimony by the writer in the presence of a few friends and relatives. They are both members of Antioch Christian Church and live in this community.

They have the best wishes of their many friends. W. D. HARWARD.

WHY JOIN THE CHURCH?

Because the Church is the mightiest agency on earth for human help and progress.

Because the Church is God's way of saving, conserving and keeping humanity from moral degeneration.

Because you are human and need the divine help which God has committed to the Church in trust for you.

Because it stands for the highest thinking and the greatest sacrificial doing in the whole world.

Because the Church is the tabernacle of the Most High God, and He asks you to meet Him there.

Because you need the help the Church affords, and others need the help your example affords.

Because the fellowship of the Church is the best fellowship on earth.

Because without the Church, ourselves, the community, the nation would soon lapse into barbarism.

Because you will be happier, wiser, healthier in spirit, more honest with God and with your brethren, with Jesus Christ and with your own soul, if you form and maintain the good habit of regular attendance at Church.

Because your family and neighbors are reading you more than they are reading their Bibles, and what you think of Christianity is shown more by what you do than by what you say.

Because God cannot say to you, "Well done," if you have not done well—it is impossible for God to lie.

The doors of the Church are open for the reception of members at all services. A warm welcome and a friendly fellowship awaits you. An opportunity of service in building up a new organization is offered you. The only test of membership or of Church fellowship is Christian character. Men and women are wanted who are interested in the work of the kingdom.

"Come, thou, with us, and we will do thee good."—Bulletin, First Christian Church, Richmond, Va.

THE ECLIPSE.

The great eclipse is over. Everywhere along the path of visibility it has been viewed by countless multitudes of spectators. It has been photographed from every conceivable angle, and even from airplanes at high altitudes. It had so wide a path, affording so many opportunities for favorable observation, that it would be strange indeed if the cameras do not bring to us new and wonderful revelations of the brilliant radiance which science has called the corona, the dazzling streamers of which project themselves hundreds of thousands of miles.

That the event will mean new revelations to the scientific world can hardly be doubted. Meanwhile, we must wait patiently for the astronomical verdict. In the oldest of books—the Book of Job—we learn how the ancients wrestled with the problems of the skies and left them, in the main, still unsolved. May we not hope to be led, under divine direction, to wider knowledge, and to glorify the Creator in His handiwork!—Christian Herald.

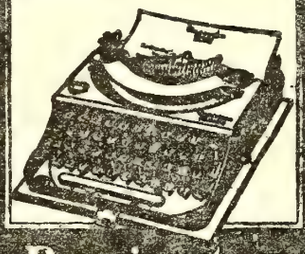
The largest pueblo ever found on the continent was recently discovered in the untraveled recesses of Nevada. Thus far, forty houses and eleven bodies, ten of them women, have been excavated. Ancient pottery, estimated to be 2,000 years old, was found.

Clothes worn by Sir Walter Scott about 140 years ago are shown. Now curious-minded people will want to know whether or not the coat was the latest style at the time good Sir Walter used to sport around in it.

Since weather observations have been taken in Alaska, the highest and lowest temperatures recorded were 100 degrees above zero at Fort Yukon and 76 below at Tanana.

Sales of artificial gas in the United States last year totaled 405,344,000,000 cubic feet, an increase of about twenty billion cubic feet over 1923.

Something You Have Been Waiting For



Remington Portable Typewriter

—with Standard Keyboard and every other feature common to the larger machines. Case only four inches high.

Price, with case, $60.

Send Your Order to
THE CHRISTIAN SUN
Richmond, Va.

WINTER TOURIST TICKETS
—ALL RESORTS—
SOUTH AND SOUTHWEST

CALIFORNIA
Via New Orleans and "Sunset Limited."

INFORMATION, ITINERATIES, RESERVATIONS
Furnished in Detail Upon Request.

Apply to Local Agent, or Address
F. H. POSTON, Division Passenger Agent,
Southern Railway System,
809 East Main Street, - - Richmond, Virginia.

Use CARO-CO COCOANUT OIL SHAMPOO

V. E. MAREAN
Pipe Organ Expert
TUNING — REPAIRING
REBUILDING
Motors Installed Yearly Contracts
P. O. Box 864, - Richmond, Va.
Phone, Boulevard 7011-J

75% of disease avoided through internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons are formed in the accumulated food waste, and reach all parts of the body. The first results, headaches, biliousness, a feeling of "heaviness", etc., serve as warnings of graver diseases to follow if this intestinal poisoning continues unchecked.

This is why intestinal specialists state that constipation is the primary cause of three-quarters of all illness, including the gravest diseases of life.

Physicians Advise Lubrication for Internal Cleanliness

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste, and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless. Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

Nujol
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
For Internal Cleanliness

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father, in His wisdom and mercy, has seen fit to call from our midst and to Him our faithful and devoted teacher and friend, Bro. T. A. Twiddy; therefore, be it resolved:

First, That while we believe and know that God doeth all things well, and humbly bow to His will, we realize that our class has lost a faithful and loyal teacher and member; we shall surely miss him from our class, and we feel we have been benefited by his example and guidance.

Second, That we extend to his family our heartfelt sympathy, and pray that God may sustain them in this hour.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, to The Christian Sun for publication, and to be spread upon our minutes.

MRS. R. B. WOOD.
MRS. G. W. HAUGHWOUT.
MRS. A. R. GREENE.

SILSBY.

The Orangeport community was made sad on the afternoon of January 22d when it was learned that our young brother J. Kelton Silsby had passed away. He was a promising young man of 18 years, and bade fair to be useful in his community. He conducted the Christian Endeavor January 18th, was taken sick with scarlet fever on January 19th while on high school examination at Lockport, and died on the 22d.

He became a member of the Orangeport Church Easter, 1923. He was the eldest son of John K. and Ethel Silsby. He will be missed at his home and in the community. Our sympathy extends to the bereaved home and friends. Burial services by the pastor.

R. H. PEEL.

WHITLEY.

Mrs. Mollie L. Whitley, widow of Leonard H. Whitley, departed this life January 22, 1925, at the age of 74 years. She was the mother of two sons—L. Homer Whitley and M. Turpin Whitley, who survive her.

She was also the stepmother of Mrs. Viola Darden, wife of J. M. Darden, of Suffolk, Va.; Mrs. Lizzie Beale, of Isle of Wight County; Mrs. Ida Fulgham, of Nansemond County, and George F. Whitley, county attorney of Isle of Wight, Smithfield, Va.

She was a charter member of Isle of Wight Courthouse Christian Church, and was faithful in supporting its enterprises.

The funeral services were conducted at Antioch Christian Church by her pastor, assisted by Rev. J. M. Roberts, of Windsor, Va., after which the body was laid away in the Church cemetery beside that of her husband.

W. D. HARWARD.

HOLLAND.

On December 6, 1924, John D. Holland departed this life at the age of 74 years. He leaves one daughter, Mrs. Gavin Lawrence, and one sister, Mrs. Benjamin Stringfield. He was for a number of years a member of Antioch Christian Church, but on account of affliction had not been able to attend in quite a while.

The funeral service was conducted by the pastor at the home of his daughter, after which the body was laid away in the family cemetery.

W. D. HARWARD.

STOUT.

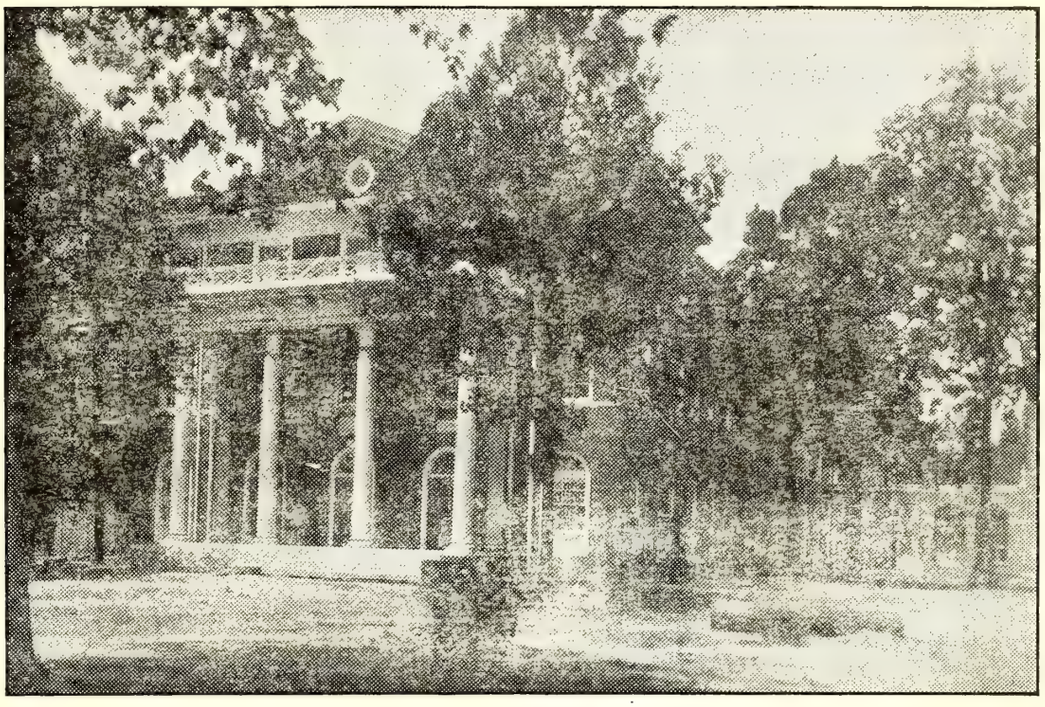
Mrs. Eliza Goley Stout was born on October 17, 1860; deceased January 26, 1925; was married to W. G. Stout 1881. To this union were born nine children, seven living and two dead. She professed faith in Christ when sixteen years of age, joined the Christian Church at Shiloh, and remained a member until her death.

Funeral services were held at Holly Springs Church, conducted by the writer, assisted by Bro. Rufus Moffitt. May the Lord bless the bereaved family and enable them to imitate her many virtues.

A. K. SCOTTEN.

Subscribe for THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

ELON COLLEGE---CO-EDUCATIONAL



WHITLEY AUDITORIUM BUILDING
One of the Group of Five New Buildings now Completed.

Elon, in her rebuilding program, has been looking to the future. Ten buildings, new and modern equipment, and a highly trained and efficient faculty are at the service of the future leaders of our Church. The phenomenal growth of Elon in the past two years indicates a larger growth throughout the whole denomination in the years just ahead. Make Elon your own Church College in a personal way by your patronage and prayerful co-operation.

Holman Self-Pronouncing

VEST POCKET TESTAMENTS

Clearest Print in Smallest Size

4⅜x2¾x⅜ inches

Specimen of Type.
AND the third day there was a marriage in Cā'nā of Gāl'i-lee; and the mother of Je'sus was

2133K. Bound in durable Morocco Grain Semble Leather, flexible limp, gilt titles ..... .60

2113. French Morocco, genuine leather, flexible limp, gold titles, rounded corners, gold edges..... .70

2115P. French Morocco, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, with the Book of Psalms included $1.10

ILLUSTRATED VEST POCKET TESTAMENT

With Pictures of Holy Land Scenes

2814. French Morocco, limp, gold side title round corners, red under gold edges ..... .85

RED LETTER VEST POCKET TESTAMENT

With all the words of our Lord printed in red.

13RL. French Morocco, flexible limp, gold side title on red panel, gold edges. .85

15RLP. French Morocco, overlapping covers, flexible, gold side title on red panel, red under gold edges, with Book of Psalms included $1.25

INDIA PAPER VEST POCKET TESTAMENT

Thin as a Wafer

2136XP. Fine Grain Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lined to edge, with Psalms included $2.25

MONEY TO LEND ON IMPROVED FARMS--FAVORABLE TERMS

Write for Details

SO. BOND & MORTGAGE CO.
627 E. Main St. - - Richmond, Va.

Medical College of Virginia

Medicine Dentistry
Pharmacy Nursing

New Buildings. Well-equipped Laboratories, under the direction of full-time, competent teachers.

The Memorial Hospital, Dooley Hospital, St. Philip Hospital, are owned and controlled by the Medical College of Virginia, and offer every facility for thorough clinical teaching.

Staffs composed of the Faculty of the College. Additional clinical facilities are offered through other institutions in Richmond.

For full information and catalogue, address—

J. R. McCAULEY, Secretary.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D.....Editor
W. W. STALEY, D. D.....Associate
W. A. HARPER, LL. D.....Associate
R. C. HELFENSTEIN, D. D...Associate
REV. S. C. HARRELL.....Associate
REV. S. M. LYNAM.....News Editor
P. J. KERNODLE....Managing Editor

Subscription Rates.

One Year $2.00
Six Months 1.00

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post-Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows the date of expiration. Please renew at least two weeks in advance.

Change of Address: Give both old and new post office when asking that your address be changed.

When subscriptions are made for friends, state whether paper is to be stopped at end of the year.

Remittances: Make all remittances to "The Christian Sun," 1536 East Broad Street, Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and Marriage Notices, limited to 100 words, are published free of charge. All over 100 words, published at 1 cent a word. Remittance should accompany copy. Write names distinctly.

Advertising Rates: "Want Ads," 2 cents a word an insertion. Display Rates quoted upon request.

PRICE.

Mrs. Anna Elizabeth Price departed this life December 25, 1924, after a short illness in the home of her daughter, Mrs. O. J. Cookes, of Elberon, Va.

She was 78 years old, and since her girlhood days had been a member of the Methodist Church. The funeral service was conducted in New Lebanon Christian Church by Rev. W. B. Fuller and the writer.

She leaves to mourn their loss one brother, two daughters and three sons. She bore testimony to blessed assurance in the salvation of Jesus.

W. D. HARWARD.

STRICKLAND.

Reginald Barrett Strickland, the five weeks' old infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Strickland, died at the home of the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Barrett, January 27, 1925. The stay in the home was brief, but the tendrils of love had found their way around the hearts there, and the going brought a sense of vacancy and the falling tear.

After a brief service, in which we commended the thought of another parent, who said: "But now he is dead, I shall go to him; but he shall not return to me," the little body was laid away in the cemetery at Antioch.

W. D. HARWARD.

HOLMAN BIBLES

NEW BLACK-FACED TYPE TEACHERS' BIBLE

The very latest and newest Teachers' Bible published, and it includes every possible improvement in Bible making. The type is a clean, clear, sharp Black Face, which is printed on the finest paper obtainable. Easy to read (can be read in the dimmest light), and is just the page for those suffering from impaired eyesight. Compact in size, light in weight, easy to carry.

Absolutely flexible binding. Contains Old and New Testaments, Treasury of Biblical Information, Practical Comparative Concordance, Oriental Light on the Bible, Four Thousand Questions and Answers, Fifteen New Maps in Colors, about 1500 pages in all.

Size, 5¼ x 7¾ inches.

Specimen of Type

THE LORD is my shephe not want.
2 He maketh me to lie green pastures: he leadeth the still waters.

No. 4412. Bound in Seal Grain Morocco, with overlapping covers, rounded corners, red under gold edges. Silk head bands and silk marker.

Price—Post Paid..... 4.20

No. 433X. Holman India Paper. Algerian Morocco, Leather Lined, Silk Sewed, Divinity Circuit, round corners, carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and Helps as above.

Price—Post Paid..... 9.35

WHICH IS THE BEST INVESTMENT?

It is that one best suited to the requirements of the individual purchaser.

For example: What is best for the millionaire, whose income is in the high brackets, and to whom income is no object, is obviously not the best for the investor who must have the maximum income consistent with safety.

We offer to our clients individual service.

. . .

ESTABLISHED 1874

John L. Williams & Sons

INVESTMENT BANKERS

Phone: Randolph 244 Seventh and Main Streets

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

WINSTON-INTERNATIONAL RED LETTER BIBLES

SELF-PRONOUNCING

Bibles and Testaments that Emphasize Christ

All the Prophetic Types and Prophecies in Old Testament and Words of Christ in New Testament are Printed in Red.

Send for Illustrated Catalog

THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO., Publishers
American Bible Headquarters
429 Winston Building Philadelphia

OXFORD TEACHERS' BIBLES

An Oxford Teachers' Bible has references and 300 pages of helps that are a mine of information to Bible students. The helps are arranged in alphabetical order, like a dictionary. They are accurate, comprehensive and up-to-date. A few styles are listed here. Many others are described in our Bible catalogue, mailed upon request.

04403 [This size print] Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 6⅞ x 4¾ inches $4.00

0623x [Same Bible as 04403] Printed on Oxford India paper. Only 1 inch thick..... $6.00

04453 [This size print] French Morocco leather binding, overlapping covers, 7¼ x 5 in. $4.35

0773x [Same Bible as 04453] Printed on Oxford India paper. A remarkably thin and light Bible. (Only 1 inch thick) $7.75

05453 [Same Bible as 04453] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $6.25

05453x [Same Bible as 0773x] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $8.75

04523 [This size print] A self-pronouncing Oxford Bible. Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 8½ x 5½ inches... $5.50

0923x [Same Bible as 04523] Printed on Oxford India paper, only 1⅛ inches thick... $9.75

ORDER FROM
"THE CHRISTIAN SUN"
1536 East Broad
Richmond, Va.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

A Co-Educational School

LOCATED AT

WADLEY, ALABAMA

This School offers the last two years of Academic work and the first two years of College work.

The following Courses are offered in the—

COLLEGE DEPARTMENT: English, Bible, Religious Education, Latin, French, History, Education, Mathematics and Science.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENTS: Music—Piano, Voice; Commercial Department—Bookkeeping, Typewriting, and Shorthand.

Due attention will be given Athletics, such as Tennis, Basket-Ball, Baseball, Football.

The government of the School is mild, but firm, endeavoring to create a home atmosphere as much as possible, not merely to maintain discipline, but to cultivate Christian character.

This is our own School, located within reach of all in this section, and the cost is less than any other College within reasonable distance of those who would attend School from this section.

Send for a Catalogue giving full description of Courses and entrance conditions.

S. L. BEOUGHER, President
Wadley, - - - - Alabama.

FOR GOOD HOME COOKING
MRS. COOK'S CAFETERIA
805 East Grace Street.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY. 1956.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Official Organ of the Southern Christian Convention

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY. IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY. IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXVII. RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1925. NUMBER 7.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

One Way to Make Them Prompt.—

St. Philip's Episcopal Cathedral, Atlanta, Ga., is making heroic efforts to get its children to Sunday School on time. A time-clock has been installed which every child must punch as he enters. If on time, the clock registers in one color of ink; if late, in another. The Church reports marked improvement in prompt attendance since the installation of this drastic measure.

Both Episcopalians.—

It is a most interesting coincidence that both Mrs. Nellie T. Ross, recently inaugurated as Governor of Wyoming, and Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, new Governor of Texas, are both Episcopalians, and yet women in that Church are not recognized by convocation! What would happen should the women agitators of the Church nominate to convocation these two, of whom the voters of their States have thought so well?

Tomb of Watts Repaired.—

Representatives of the dissenting Churches of England have recently restored the tomb of Dr. Isaac Watts, the father of modern hymnology, in Bunhill Fields, London, where so many of the great men of British Protestantism lie buried. The tomb had fallen into disrepair, as did the tomb of John Wesley in the yard of the near-by Wesley's City Roll Chapel some time ago. Isaac Watts is well known by his many beautiful hymns.

What God Can Do.—

Thirty years ago John Callahan, bum, was asked to vacate the city of Minneapolis for the good of the city. The other day John Callahan, head of the Hadley Rescue Mission of New York, returned to Minneapolis to be greeted by the applause and laudations of the multitudes. He spoke on "Evangelism" in the Westminster Presbyterian Church.

When we think of the man who was asked to leave the city and the man who was welcomed back to it, we marvel anew at the wonderful power of God to redeem mankind.

More Storms.—

The New York Presbytery seems to have been having more stormy sessions. Failing in an effort to bring up the case of the Rev. Carlos G. Fuller, who was admitted to the presbytery some time ago in spite of some strictures as to his orthodoxy, the fundamentalist element attacked the program of installation of a new pastor of Emanuel Church which is supported by the First Presbyterian Church, where Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick is special preacher, when it was learned that Dr. Fosdick would preach the installation sermon. After a stormy session, the program was approved by a vote of the presbytery.

Training in Religious Journalism.—

A significant step has been taken by the University of Missouri in introducing a course in religious journalism. It means that religious journalism is assuming a standard and that the field is becoming a recognized one. The course will be under the direction of Prof. Milton C. Towner, of the Missouri Bible College, which is on the same campus with the university. This is a step which is certainly needed. It has been presumed by the large majority of the Church that anybody who could preach could edit a Church paper, and the Church papers, as a rule, reflect this attitude. They have not been read, even when subscribed to, and hence have not wielded the influence which should properly be theirs because of the lack of ability among the editors. This course augers well for the future of Church publications, if the Church will allow it to assist.

Germany's New Government.—

On January 19th, Chancellor Luther made his bow to the Reichstag, and on January 22d the new German government received its first vote of confidence. The names of the new Cabinet were greeted with jeers by the Socialist and Communist members of the Reichstag. The Socialists and Communists of Germany regard the new government as reactionary, and Kaiser-loving. They have heaped upon the new ministers the vilest of epithets, but Chancellor Hans Luther promises that the peace of Europe shall be his chief concern, and also he endorses the Dawes plan of reparations, and promises relief to many sufferers in his country. He believes that by the peaceful and persistent persuit of industry only can the reparations be met, and the business and stability of Germany be revived. Herr Luther typifies the new benevolent capitalism arising in Germany, and is, therefore, most distasteful to the Socialists and Communists.

Germany needs at its head a man competent to lead in a policy of restoration, and one who will accept the inevitable and cope with it. In the new Chancellor it seems Germany has found such a leader.

Trotzky Deposed.—

It is interesting to note that on January 20th, Leon Trotzky was deposed by the Communist central committee by a vote of fifty to two. He was ill and did not attend the meeting of the committee, but sent a letter, declaring that he was not attempting to revive Leninism. Leon Trotzky was with Lenine in 1917 and aided him in the great Russian revolution. It was due to his indefatigable energy that the Red army became so efficiently organized, and succeeded in quelling all attempts at counter-revolution. His book, "The Mistakes of the Revolution," has been suppressed as nearly as possible. For the past year he has been out of harmony with Zinoviev, Stalen and Kamenev, the triumvirate now ruling Russia. It is a commentary on the strength of the present party in power to note that Trotzky was removed without a demonstration anywhere, not even in the army, whose idol he was supposed to be. It is safe to presume, however, that had such a demonstration been made, it never would have passed the censor. Trotzky is a Russian Jew, and has a tremendous ability as an organizer. He was accused of having turned Menchevik by the Communist government.

To Save St. Paul's.—

For some time it has been believed that St. Paul's Cathedral in London is unsafe, and this belief has been made official in a recent report of the London authorities, and one of them has ordered that the dome be torn down. This order has been treated as an insult by the nation. For several years the dean and chapter of St. Paul's have realized the need for repairs, and the greatest skill has been employed. The examinations reveal that radical measures must be taken to save the great cathedral, but that no immediate danger of collapse need be feared. The present excitement over the matter has very materially increased the fund for repairs. The London Times has raised about six hundred thousand dollars for the purpose. Whether the repairs cost a half million, a million or five times that sum both the skill and the money will be available. The preservation of St. Paul's has become a national issue.

The present St. Paul's occupies the site of a former Christian Church which stood there some twelve centuries ago. The second St. Paul's was a noble Church edifice, about 600 feet long. This building was destroyed in the great London fire in 1666. The present building is a monument to Sir Christopher Wren, and its construction was begun in 1675, and the edifice was completed in the lifetime of the architect. The cathedral, in style, is cold, and not so perfect in line and design as are some of the smaller Churches by the same architect, but it has a supreme majesty, and is the largest Protestant place of worship in the world. In it are monuments to soldiers, architects, painters and a few statesmen and others, but, of course, in this respect it does not compare with Westminster Abbey, and many of the monuments lack taste in design and execution.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Dr. W. H. Denison, Department Secretary of Stewardship of the General Convention of the Christian Church, will preach at First Christian Church of Richmond, Va., for the pastor at both morning and evening services next Sunday.

"No reform would be effected if tip-taking were forbidden and salaries raised, for the ban would be ignored by both employes and patrons of hotels. The public will tip, and tips will be taken, no matter what the salaries and wages are."

Rev. D. A. Long, D. D., Franklinton, N. C., writes, February 4th: "The services at Franklinton Christian College this week, conducted by Dr. Fletcher and Mrs. M. T. Morrill, have been very successful and helpful to the faculty and students. It was fortunate that Franklinton could have the benefit of these fine workers for a week in religious education.

"I have been a subscriber and reader of THE SUN since 1896, and enjoy reading it more than any other paper or magazine. We have just recently built a Church here, and Bro. Atkinson was here and organized the congregation, and they called Rev. M. F. Allen, a former Presbyterian minister, as pastor."—A. S. Dunn, Lynchburg, Va., R. F. D. 1.

How different are people! We give the following as an illustration: "I owe for two years straight out, at $2.00 per year, which is $4.00, so I am sending $4.00 for the two year's subscription, which is past due, and also $2.00 for my subscription for the year 1925. I will make an effort to get as many new subscribers for THE SUN as I can." Then follows best wishes for a prosperous year to all associated with THE SUN.

"Thanks for greeting and good wishes for the coming year. I see by the label on my CHRISTIAN SUN, the balance due on my paper up to January 1, 1925, is $4.00. Inclosed please find check for $6.00 in payment of same, also renewal subscription for year 1925." The managing editor has never met this lady, but was acquainted with her husband, a fine-spirited man. His widow allows none of the Church's good works to go unsupported.

Dr. W. T. Walters, Richmond, says: "We had a good day last Sunday. The largest Sunday School in our history, and Church congregations far above the average. Our 'Kingdom-Enlistment Week' is bearing fruit." We counsel as many of our Churches as possible to put on "Kingdom-Enlistment Week." It always bears fruit. Elon College, at an early date now, is to have Dr. Howsare and "Kingdom-Enlistment Week."

Rev. J. M. Roberts, Windsor, Va., we are glad to say, is acting secretary for Bro. Sam Davis and wife in the endeavor to make dates and engagements for these evangelistic workers with any of our Churches that may desire them. Bro. and Sister Davis are certainly very great assets in evangelistic work, and it is deeply desired that our pastors, in planning their evangelistic meetings, will take under consideration the advisability of having them. Any pastor interested should address Rev. J. M. Roberts, Windsor, Va.

ELON'S LATEST FIRE LOSS $5,000.

Fire, with its ravaging destruction, again visited Elon College within the short space of two years, and with the memory of the former conflagration still fresh in the minds of the students and community, threw a scare into the little town as they saw the red flames once more licking at the college buildings last Friday morning, February 6th.

About 1 o'clock, fire started under the boiler roof of the power plant. It was discovered at 1:15, after the blaze was shooting up through the roof, by boys rooming nearest to the power plant in the alumni building. Heroic efforts on the part of the students checked the fire with chemical extinguishers and the college fire-fighting equipment until the Burlington and Gibsonville fire companies arrived.

By 2:30 the blaze was completely out, having burned away all of the boiler house roof and a portion of the second story over the electrical room, doing damage estimated at around $5,000.

After the fire was extinguished, a hasty survey of the boilers and machinery, which showed little damage done the equipment, organization work was started by President Harner, who was on the scene, to get the plant in shape to furnish heat and light in the morning. Charred timbers and debris which blocked the way to the fire-box were cut away, and the litter strewn over the electrical equipment was removed, and by 6 o'clock heat and light were on the buildings.

At 9 o'clock the executive committee met in the trustees room at the college for a brief session and made arrangements for the repairing of the damage by the fire, which repairs are already under way. The estimated loss of $5,000 is partially covered by insurance.—Daily News.

OUR MOUNTAIN WORK.

Report for January, 1925:

A collection of books from Elon College Sunday School, by Prof. Cannon; 1 Bible dictionary, from Miss C. E. Rowell, Franklin, N. H.; B. J. Drewry, 1 box of song-books and a box of clothing, from Wakefield, Va.; by Mrs. Barrett, 2 boxes of clothing, from Elon College Missionary Society; some Sunday School literature, from Manson Sunday School, by Mrs. W. J. Cole; a good collection of Sunday School charts, from Henderson, by Rev. A. L. Hook; a collection of religious literature, from Dayton Publishing Association, by Miss Eldredge; four boxes from Suffolk Sunday School, by Mrs. W. H. Andrews.

Rocky Ford building fund:

Mr. Rich Mitchell, $1.00; Dr. and Mrs. J. T. Clack, $8.00.

Corrections of last report: M. C. Sorrell, $50 instead of $15.00; Mr. K. B. Johnson instead of Mr. E. B. Johnson; Catawba Springs S. S., $100 instead of $10.

M. T. SORRELL,
Pastor.

REIDSVILLE, N. C.

It is not uncommon these days to read an account of some fellow being visited at his home by night-riders and masked parties because of some misbehaviour on his part, and severely dealt with. Therefore, even though one does not recall any act of his that would justify such procedure, he is somewhat surprised to find, upon answering a knock at the door, a great throng of folks on the outside and under the cover of darkness see two or three large, husky fellows advance, and give an explanation of such a visit.

Such was the experience of the writer on Thursday evening last, when his home was visited by a large crowd of people—not a mob, to be sure, but men, women, boys and girls, members and friends of the Reidsville Christian Church—who brought with them on this occasion eighty-seven different articles of food, most of which are a necessity in any preacher's home, although many were luxuries that are being as thoroughly enjoyed as if we were accustomed to them. The old dining-table was not able to bear the burden, therefore it was surrounded after it was piled high with useful gifts, such as flour, meal, sugar, coffee, butter, meat, bacon, fruits and canned fruits, lard and various things too numerous to mention, and so we just concluded after an inventory had been made by this preacher and his family that we would report these folks for their action to you, and try in our feeble way to express our thanks and appreciation for their thoughtfulness, kindness and generous hospitality, and not because of the loaves and fishes alone, but in every relation we are glad that God has placed us with such splendid Christian people that we find willing to respond to the call of the kingdom's need.

We have many sick people in our community. Quite an epidemic of influenza; none seriously afflicted, however, at this writing, and we pray that God may continue to spare us. In spite of our many sick people, our congregations at all of our services, we are glad to note, continue to increase.

I had the pleasure of attending the instictute held at First Church, Greensboro, February 4th, which was not only beneficial in furnishing much instruction on stewardship, but proved inspirational as well. We hope our people will attend these institutes when possible.

I am, Fraternally yours,

PERSONAL LETTER.

February 5, 1925.

Rev. L. Paul Moore, Metet Station, Cameroun, Africa.

My dear Paul:

It is high time I answer the long letter which I received from you a few weeks ago. I shall write to you about the Foreign Mission Convention of the United States and Canada, which I have just attended in Washington, D. C. Remembering the fine times we had together for three brief years at Princeton while you were so ardently preparing for your great work in Africa, and recalling how much we used to think of the high days we had together listening to the speeches of Speer, or Mott, or Wilder, or Eddy, I know you would have enjoyed greatly being a part of so great a convention as this one was. I am indebted to you, Paul, for a part of my present missionary zeal. Let me strive to repay in part with a brief account of the Washington conference.

In the six days of the conference, I attended fifty-five addresses. And I was not alone! I was with more than fifty members from every section of our own denomination; nearly five thousand other official delegates from every quarter of the earth, and several thousand people from Washington. Nor was this all, for over and over again Livingston, Morrison, Carey, Mackay, Judson, Pitkins, Slessor, Martyn, and many others were with us with their works and messages repeated and preserved in our hearts as vividly as if they had been actually there. Yes, indeed, their lives and labors gave a greater grandeur to our gathering than their unfinished work and living physical presence could have given. Nor was this all! you were there, Paul—thousands of your kind were there in our plans, prayers, pronouncements, and remembered in our heart of hearts to give real value to the things that stirred our souls. You and your kind were there because you were not there, but were doing your best in ten thousand places in the ever-growing kingdom and city of God. Nor was this all! Christ was there. Christ was there in such way as I have never seen Him before. He was there with His saints and warriors from all down across the centuries. They were with Him an innumerable host! He was there with His authority, beautiful and strong, to command an invincible army of living men and women. He was there with His power to assure us of His presence all along the way. With His benighted African children, His bleeding European grown-ups, and His hungry prodigals from countless areas He was there. He was there with His love, and I saw Him and loved Him anew! No, I was not alone at that great conference, and I learned better than ever before that you are not alone where you are.

The closeness of things and the oneness of the world got a hold of me there. The seats in the great auditorium were so small and close I could hardly sit in them. Although a few times I sat as far back as a city block, and yet, with the loud speaker, I could hear as though I was in a small room with the speaker. Before me sat a German; with me a Frenchman; by his side a Hindu, and behind us a Chinese and Japanese sat together. We listened to an African and Englishman speak on the same subject. We cheered at the same time and prayed for the same things. Every one felt at home. Selfish patriotism ran at a low ebb, while true internationalism ran at flood-tide. We seemed one great family. Indeed we were often told that we were. We felt that God was our Father, and that His Son Jesus Christ was our Redeemer; that love was the greatest principle on earth, and that it lived even where laws fail and treaties became mere scraps of paper.

One thought filled our minds—a better humanity in our earth; one purpose filled our souls—the building, in the verdant meadows of England, in the streets of German cities and little villages, in the torn fields of France, in the diamond areas of Africa, in the Far East, yea and in our own materialistic America, the city of God! This we hoped to do by releasing the principle of love as set forth in Jesus Christ; by practicing it at home and abroad; by making it native to every land, and the sole possession of none. Never before in so large a place have I seen such unanimity of spirit, such whole-souled proclamation of Jesus Christ as the world's only Redeemer. Still ringing in my ears and resounding in my soul is that grand recital in a climax-making service of the Apostles' Creed. Still living are the thousands of assenting amens that followed the final words of Robert E. Speer as in the great closing address he said: "I believe Jesus walked on water; I believe He fed five thousand with a few loaves and fishes; I believe He raised the dead; I believe He was born of the virgin Mary." However, thank God there was no clashing of theological beliefs, no testing of creedal assents. There was simply the setting forth of the now age-old fact that Jesus is the Saviour of men. Paul, your great faith would have found happy companionship in that great convention.

And, finally, a word about our own President Stevenson, who one day at noon, after we had listened to address after address and everybody was seemingly very tired, held five thousand people in complete sway by quoting choice selections from the Scripture for more than twenty minutes. Never have I seen his face so radiant, his body so calm, nor heard his voice so musical as he went from climax to climax in the quoting of the Word of God. In his intercession, he brought our sinful souls into the cleansing glow of Christ's love and moved us eventually into the very presence of God himself! It is indiscribable. It reminded me of the day when he gathered us for the last time into Miller Chapel and reminded us of the fact that we were going out unto the utmost parts of the earth, and then broke for us the bread and poured for us the wine which symbolized the broken body and spilled blood of Jesus Christ broken and spilled for the nations of the earth to which indeed our class has actually gone! At a future convention, many of you, along with many others, will mold, as was molded yesterday, the thought of the earth around about the bleeding heart of Jesus Christ.

Write me again soon, Paul. Ever your prayer-comrade and friend, JOHN G. TRUITT.

Norfolk, Va.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The Illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the Number and prices.

TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Minion Bold-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4 7-8x 7 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

India Paper Edition, Size 4 7-8x7 Inches, 1 1-10 Inches Thick.

2152X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$6.00

Bourgeois Type, Size 5 3-8x8 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2167—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.00

2172—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.50

India Paper Edition, Only 1 1-8 Inches Thick.

2172X—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$8.50

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3¾x5⅝ inches, and 1 inch thick; with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black.

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations. Special book for Sunday Schools 95c

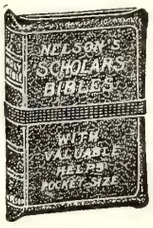
Ruby Type, Size 3¾x5⅝ Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps $2.50

Minion Type, Pocket Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ inches Thick.

With 32 full-colored illustrations; also 25 outline maps through the text and 12 colored maps.

133—Bound in cloth, round corners, red edges, title stamped on side in pure gold $1.60



135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 15-16 of an Inch Thick.

135X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.75

Minion Black-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4¾x 7 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick.

Printed from clear, large, black-face type, 32 full-page illustrations in Sepia and colors, 4,000 Questions and Answers, Harmony of the Gospels, How to Study the Sunday School Lesson, 25 outline Maps, 12 full-page colored Maps.

4152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold.....$3.25

TEXT BIBLES—AMERICAN STANDARD VERSION.

Printed from Easy-Reading Type, on Good Bible Paper, for Sunday School and Church Use.

Minion Type, Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick, 25 Outline Maps, Bound in Black.

101—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, title stamped on back in pure gold..$1.10

112—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title on back in pure gold $2.75

India Paper Edition, Only ⅞-Inch Thick.

112X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

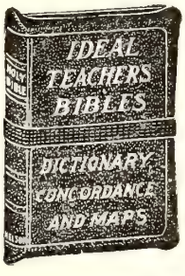
Reference and Text Bibles also in minion, brevier, bourgeois, long primer, pica and English type.

Thumb index cut on edge, 50c extra; name printed on any Bible in gold, 40c extra; extra wording, 40c per line.

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (v vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3-8x 8 1-2 Inches and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.



Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With concise Bible dictionary, combined concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.75

RED LETTER EDITION

With all the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

rocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands, title stamped on side and back in pure gold $3.25

1282—Genuine Leather, Mo-

Any of the above Bibles sent post paid. Address

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street, - - - Richmond, Va.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR.

J. O. ATKINSON, Elon College, N. C.

Contributing Editors.

W. W. STALEY W. A. HARPER
R. C. HELFENSTEIN S. C. HARRELL

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

BELIEF IN GOD.

Two non-Christian religions began without belief in God. Mahavira, founder of Jainism, taught that there is no need of God nor of prayer, and that "knowledge, faith, and right conduct are the true causes of final liberation." His followers now number about 1,250,000. They represent the merchant class and are people of intelligence. They have found it impossible to get along without a god, without prayer, and without places for worship. They have deified Mahavira himself and worship him idolatrously.

The Buddhists, too, started with a repudiation of the belief in God. Gautama, their founder, had no need of God. Salvation was to come by the extermination of desire. When all desires were rooted out, the state of Nirvana would be attained, the state of spiritual nothingness, of passionless peace. Buddhists today number 137,000,000. They, too, have had to have a god, so they have deified their founder, Gautama.

The belief in God is not only reasonable; it is innate. The human heart has in it a spark of the divine, and this divine cries out to have fellowship with its Father, God. Men may think they can order their lives without God, but they will eventually be disillusioned. Men must have religion, and they must have God. Why should they not rejoice in the possession and uplift of both?

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

Christian education, or rather education under religious surroundings, is what the world needs today, and men of means, such as J. B. Duke and Mr. Eastman, are awakening to the fact. Many institutions of learning which have stood for the highest order of education, have been forced to struggle for life for many years, awaiting the day for big business men to consecrate themselves and their means to the elevation of the race in place of amassing a fortune for themselves.

The action of Mr. Duke will bring Southern denominational colleges to the front, for men of great wealth and those of moderate means will be inspired by his example. Those who can give millions for equipment and endowment of these colleges will do so, and those who can give only in a small way will be inspired to do their best. While only a few will be able to give the magnificent sum of $40,000,000, yet it ought to stimulate every man of wealth in the South to do all in his power to advance the cause of education, of religious work, of denominational schools and the building of hospitals, and in helping to care for the aged ministers who, having given their lives to the cause of the kingdom, often find themselves in old age deprived of the common comforts of life.

I am impressed with the wisdom of Mr. Duke's gift because he does not hand over the money to be invested, but gives the investment itself, which is safe and sound, and is destined to grow with the years. Also with his broad spirit, which reaches other institutions other than those of his own denomination. In this, he not only showed his appreciation of the work other denominations were doing, but made a contribution of immense value to their schools in general.

Some have criticised him for seeking to attach the Duke name to the university to be established by Trinity College; but we think they are entirely wrong, for it was Mr. Duke's only desire to honor the memory of his father, a devoted Methodist, in giving the Duke name to the university to be established, and in this he was only following the example of many others.

We believe that every denomination should have its schools and its colleges liberally endowed and managed by the foremost leaders in these denominations, for it is only through these schools that the great truths of religion can be taught. Men who believe profoundly in the great truths of the Bible should feel it incumbent upon them, as far as may be feasible, to send their children to denominational schools, and to assist in maintaining such schools, in order that the education of the coming generations may, to a large extent, be under the influence of religious teachers at a period when every young man and every young woman is groping in the dark for the truth, for according to the way they are taught will their lives be molded.

Let us pray that God will raise up men and women with character and means who will see their opportunity in Bethlehem College and feel their responsibility as well, so as to make an investment in this school that will meet the demands which are being increasingly thrust upon us by the youth of this section; also that those who now have may make a present investment in the preparation of young life for real service.

S. L. Beougher.

CHRISTIAN TEMPLE, NORFOLK.

The week of January 20th brought irreparable losses to the Christian Temple. Tuesday, January 20th, at 10 o'clock in the morning, Mrs. Bettie Portlock Young died at St. Christopher's Hospital, Norfolk. On Monday before, Miss Emmie A. Portlock, an older sister, was taken seriously ill at Mrs. Young's home, and died Saturday at 4:30 P. M. Mrs. Young did not know that her sister was ill, nor did Miss Emmie know that her sister had passed to her reward. They were buried in the Portlock Cemetery. They are the daughters of the late Franklin and Eugenia Portlock, and they are survived by a brother, Frank L. Portlock, and a sister, Mrs. Eugenia T. Butt, both of whom are active members of the Christian Temple. Mrs. Young is also survived by two daughters, Mrs. Frank S. Pace and Miss Fannie May Young; two nephews, Mr. Willie P. Butt and Mr. Frank L. Portlock, Jr., and two nieces, Mrs. Edgar Adsit and Miss Eugenia H. Portlock. Miss Emmie is survived, in addition to her brother and sister, by four nieces—Mrs. Edgar H. Adsit, Miss Fannie May Young, Mrs. Frank S. Adsit, Miss Eugenia H. Portlock—and two nephews, Willie P. Butt and Frank L. Portlock, Jr.

The Portlock family has been prominently connected with the Christian Church for more than 120 years. It was through the efforts of the family ancestors that Old Providence Christian Church was organized. The organization was formed in 1804, and was one of the first Churches of the denomination. The Eastern Virginia Conference was organized at Old Providence. The remaining members of Old Providence Church came in as a part of the present organization constituting the Christian Temple, and they have meant much to this organization.

Mrs. Young and Miss Portlock have both been invaluable assistance to the Church since the trying days of organization and building. They have both been faithful, true, prayerful, and generous. They were the very soul of loyalty and sincerity.

Aside from many liberal gifts to the building fund, Miss Emmie gave the Church the beautiful echo organ which is built in the northeast corner of the Church, and contains the organ chimes and the vox humana.

Both Mrs. Young and Miss Portlock have fought a good fight. They have kept the faith, and, by God's grace, they have entered into their reward. May God, in His love, keep their loved ones who are still with us.

L. E. Smith.

TWELVE INTERNATIONAL MOVEMENTS.

By Rev. R. F. Brown, M. A.

V. TRAGEDY OF THE UNCHURCHED HOME.

Some one has said that the home now is hitched up with the world. That statement explains what has happened to the home. It reveals one of the greatest tragedies of our time, namely: the home is not hitched up with the Church. We have swung away from the family pew and the old-time family worship, and have hitched up our homes with the world. The family meets the world daily, shakes hands with the world, associates with the world, listens in on the world, converses with the world, and gets its instruction from the world.

Physically speaking, we have to admit that the home is a more comfortable place to stay than it once was. We pull a string, push a button, and turn a spigot and those mechanical devices respond to our needs. The home is no longer infested by flies, bugs, dirt, and death-producing germs. It is a place of sanitation, sanity, and satisfaction. But with all these conveniences the thing that really makes a home is absent—the spirit and practice of Christianity and unselfish actions founded on the Golden Rule. And the only reason these elements are absent is because the home has secured its wisdom, its impressions, and its very life from the world instead of the Church.

This indictment does not apply to all the homes. Fortunately, there are many homes touched by the influence of the Church. But about 65 per cent of the homes are not touched directly by the Church. And this is not the fault of the Church. The blame must be placed on the parents in the homes. Early in life the inclinations of the child are turned toward the non-essentials of life. He is taught by precept and example that life consists of clubs, climate, and coin, and these are supplied as rapidly as possible.

The undercutting of the virtues and ideals of the home is the first step in the downfall of civilization. In the sacred protection of the home, virtues and ideals planted and cultivated by the Church rests the security of civilization. International stability can come only when the ministry of the Church pervades the home-life of all the people. While it is true that no nation has tried this simple remedy, it must be acknowledged that the nations that have been most interested in the Church have been most successful in their struggle against the wasting hand of centuries, and the nations that have had the least to do with the Church have died young.

But many individuals and nations want many things that they do not need, and need many things that they do not want. In the matter of fashion, people want everything they see, and persuade themselves to believe that they need everything they want; but in the matter of religion they need everything the Church offers, but persuade themselves to believe that they can get along without it. It is this philosophy that is pulling the multitudes away from the Church and weakening the fabric of our civilization. This great nation was founded upon religion, but it is trying to exist on commerce, clothes, clubs and cash. Last year this nation's income was at a high peak. We had a national income of fifty-nine billion dollars. There are in America today twenty-five million women who belong to clubs. There are equally that many men who belong to clubs and organizations which are calculated to further their social life. Ninety thousand people will go to see two prize fighters bruise each other's noses, while one hundred people go to Church and listen to a gospel message. The people are not giving the Church the place in their thought and life that it should have. Commerce has overtopped the cross, frivolity has undercut faith, the chase for coin has crucified the Christ, and skepticism has gripped civilization. These things magically chiseling into the inner life of man have weakened the possibilities of religion, hampered the ministry of the Church, and lowered the standard of civilization, mentally, morally, socially, and spiritually.

The Church cannot reach the home that closes its doors to the Church, follow the mockers of the world who frown upon the Church, and listens in on radio to men who make a joke of the minister, prohibition, and religion. There is a band of prisoners west of here who entertain more people over the radio every night than the ministers of America preach to every Sunday. Isn't it queer that people who are supposed to be decent and honest had rather listen to a bunch of criminals over the radio than to listen to the minister in the pulpit?

The cross-currents in our domestic life and the schemes of unscrupulous people have thrust the world into a convulsion and set it on the wrong seat. With all my heart I believe that the social instinct was divinely planted in the hearts of men, and for that reason I heartily approve of social life, harmless amusements, joyful diversions, and unquestionable engagements that will bring real joy and sunshine to the people. But I do not believe in allowing the lewd, fast, unscrupulous women, and the vile, designing, lecherous men to set the standard by which the people are to be governed. When a crowd of half-drunken men meet annually and sit around a table, swearing and discussing and fixing the style to which decent women are to conform a year hence, it is time to call a halt.

Conforming to such formulæ and ignoring the Church is the fundamental cause underlying some of our present-day ills. It is evident that we have suffered a dreadful collapse in the last few years (Bishop Hughes to the contrary, however) of our aforetime modesty and our fundamental adherence to the principles of a monogamous life. We have been and are on a social, moral, and sexual spree in this country in open violation of personal and collective chastity, and we are going the gaits which landed medieval Europe in the madhouse of sensualism, and it will do the same for us unless it is checked and cleansed by the influence of the Church. The world is a great big, overgrown, sick patient, and its only remedy is the gospel message proclaimed by the Church. He who helps promote the gospel through the ministry of the Church makes a constructive contribution to the structure of our international life and contributes greatly to the whole world.

To reject the ministry of the Church and absent oneself from the appointed services for worship and prove unfaithful to the needs of the Church is to strike the Church an unkind blow, undercut the virtues of the home and take away the foundation of civilization. No man can do this and still be true to himself, his fellowman, his country and God. This is why our nation is not a religious nation. President Harding said just before he died: "I should like to see America a religious nation. I wish every man in America would attend Church." How gloriously great this nation would become and how blessedly different this world would be if the wish and dream of this great soul could become a reality! We are not a Church-going people, and, therefore, we are not a religious people. By no process of magic or reason can a house become a home, or a nation become religious that habitually stays away from Church. To the extent that the home is unchurched, to that extent will the nation be unchristian.

It is given to the Church to conserve to the uses of civilization the priceless virtues of manhood and womanhood. There is no other institution that can do it. The home has failed, the school has failed, commerce has failed, everything has failed. Why not give the Church a chance? Woodrow Wilson said: "Civilization cannot survive materially unless it is redeemed spiritually." This is the work of the Church. But the Church must touch the home first and make it religious. A house without religion is no more a home than a body without a heart is complete organism. The immediate task of the modern Church is to put heart, hope, and heaven into the houses of the world and transform them into homes. How blessedly rich the world would be if the home would join forces with the Church in bringing to pass this ideal!"

Neither the home nor the Church can be true to their own spirit, genius, and mission unless they teach and inculcate the value and the strength of high ideals. Men and nations are what they are because of their ideals. Ideals are the materials out of which institutions and nations arise. The full strength of a people can never be known until their ideals are brought to their full fruition. A careful and analytical study of the ideals of others; an application of the principles of co-operative work; the inculcation of the right conception and use of riches; the development of true loyalty to the virtue-guarding and power-producing institutions; an immovable devotion to the divinely inspired convictions of life, and an unfolding faith in God should be jealously taught, faithfully guarded, and eternally prodded by the home and the Church. Unfortunately, some of these high ideals have been prostituted by the cankering and poisonous forces of life and stolen away by the thugs, vultures, and thieves of the age. The majority of the ideals that are inspired and fostered by the majority of the present-day institutions are negative and hurtful rather than positive and helpful. And certainly without the vigilance of the home and the hallowed influence and teachings of the Church an appetite for valuable ideals can never be cultivated. The unchurched home cannot accomplish this great task. And the Church without the support of the home cannot do it. But the two working together can accomplish it.

A second thing that these two institutions working co-operatively can foster is the virtue of reverence for things holy. The virtue of reverence is absolutely essential to Christian character. But be it remembered that the virtue of reverence is almost a lost art nowadays. The people of the twentieth century are not a reverent people. An age of jazz cannot be a reverential age. There are only two institutions in this world that can possibly change this condition—the home and the Church. In these may be found those virtues which, if transmitted to the world of jazz, can transform it. Herein is the opportunity of the home and Church. An irreverent spirit and a jazz appetite cannot breathe comfortably and digest immediately the atmosphere of worship and devotion. But this will come through the patient process of inculcation. And then the irreverent mind will be changed to one of thoughtful silence under the influence and pulsating power of holy worship. The virtue of reverence gradually grows into the very fiber of one's being, and the mind and soul are enchanted and absorbed by a reverential sense of the reality and presence of God. The most effective institution we have for the development of reverence is the Church. But faithful attendance upon the worship services does more than develop the virtue of reverence. It increases one's knowledge, encourages convictions, strengthens the judgment, develops the reasoning powers, sharpens the power of perception, quickens and nourishes the soul and enriches the whole being. The most needful campaign in Church work today is a campaign to increase Church attendance.

Only the teachings and influence of the Church can develop the ideal home-life and saturate and seal it with the sweet ministries of love. Only the Church can create a love of home that will find expression in cheery hearts and unselfish deeds; a love that understands the cares, the heartaches, the pain and grief of every member; a love that sees the souls robed in the finer ether of contentment and peace; a love that seals the lips of the husband and father with a kiss as he leaves the home and winds his way to his daily task; a love that kisses away the cares and lightens the burdens of a tired wife and mother; a love that drys the tears of tender hearts hurt by thoughtless words and careless deeds; a love that sees the weary world bending under the heavy and crushing load of poverty and misfortune; a love that ministers to the man who falls among thieves and makes the road safe for other travelers; a love that changes men's fate into fortune; a love that reads into the sheltering trees, the ripen grain, the songs of birds and voices of men the tender melodies of God-love; a love that finds God in the vaulted sky, the twinkling stars, and the heavenly planets; a love that practices the presence of God in the howling storm and the welcomed and cherished smiles alike. Only the Churched home is rich in these virtues. It is a tragedy that so many homes are unchurched!

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Foreign Missions Convention of the United States and Canada, which met in the New Auditorium in Washington city January 28th to February 2d, was really a world convention, as all mission countries and speakers were represented. Three sessions a day, to say nothing of simultaneous meetings between in city Churches. In addition to these, denominations held separate meetings at intervals to consider their own work and obligations. The Christian Church was represented by some forty-five men and women from all parts of the United States and Canada. Our meetings will be reported by Dr. Atkinson in THE SUN.

There were more than two hundred great leaders to speak on all phases of the missionary purpose, conditions, obligations, and outlook. The addresses will be printed ver batim in a volume, to cost $2.50 per copy, and can be purchased through Dr. W. P. Minton, our Foreign Mission Secretary, Dayton, Ohio. The auditorium seats 6,000 and was full at every session, though the weather was very severe most of the time, and Washington does not clear the snow from sidewalks promptly like most cities.

A few outstanding impressions were made upon my mind by this greatest missionary meeting ever held in the world.

The heathen world is ready to receive Jesus Christ, but not American Christianity. It was repeatedly stated that the mission cause can succeed only by preaching Christ and let Oriental nations construct their own Church. They do not want our civilization, but our Christ. The task is too large for any one denomination. It will require the combined effort of the whole Church. Divided Christianity can never carry out the command of Christ. The emphasis of this convention rested on this point. Jesus prayed "that they all may be one," and that is a necessity to save the world. United Christendom would bring international "peace on earth and good will among men." It is vain to hope for international and inter-racial peace without interchurch peace. The heathen world does not need our divided Christianity, but Christ. The convention itself had the spirit of unity, and the great speakers sounded that note from beginning to close; but the real task is to amplify that teaching so it can reach the whole Church. That is our task—to preach it, to pray for it, and to live it in our Churches and our communities; to create an atmosphere that is surcharged with real unity, not union with "our Church," whatever that Church may be.

Another thing that appeared was that all mission boards are heavily in debt. The door is open now to all pagan nations; young men and young women are offering themselves, but the boards need money to pay debts before they can send them. The Churches need to realize their obligation and opportunity to give liberally and promptly to foreign missions; and members who have means should not wait to be solicited, but decide themselves to make a donation and ask their pastor to whom the check should be made payable. Send it through the pastor, and let him keep a record of it, so the Church to which you belong will get credit for it in the annual report to Conference. It was reported that there are nineteen thousand missionaries with income of forty million dollars which would mean only two thousand dollars per missionary to include maintenance of schools, hospitals, orphanages, and all other expenses. It was reported also that the United States has two hundred billion dollars, and the majority of it is in the hands of Christians. The Church is not poor. Christian civilization has produced the wealth of the world, and is able to give all that all religious causes need; and the Church will suffer if she withholds from the Lord His due. W. W. STALEY.

ELON LETTER.

There is a vital difference between fact and truth. Facts are temporal. Truth is eternal. Facts are matters of record and observation and experience. Truth is a matter of insight and meaning. Some facts are very important, and others trivial. All truth is important. Truth is relational and has to do with ultimate values. Truth relates to man and to God. Jesus said, "Thy word is truth" and "I am the truth." Pursue the truth.

The historian and the scientist do not deal in truth. They deal with fact. Philosophy and religion deal with truth. Historians and scientists are overstepping their prerogatives when they undertake to discover the truth growing out of the facts they record or observe. Philosophy is not as reliable for discovering truth as religion is, because philosophy oftentimes proceeds as if there were no God. The philosophy of religion treats the whole realm of truth, and is, therefore, the most important pursuit upon which the mind and heart of man may enter.

Perhaps an illustration or two will clarify our meaning. The fact is that Jesus died on the cross. The truth is that His death on the cross signifies the redemptive suffering of God for the sins of the world. The fact is that Paul was converted on the way to Damascus, whither he was going to arrest Christians. The truth is that Jesus speaks directly to men and women, and it is their privilege to obey or disobey the heavenly vision. The fact is that the Holy Spirit descended on the disciples at Pentecost. The truth is that prayer is always a condition of sensing the presence of the Holy Spirit. The fact is that Peter's sermon at Pentecost converted three thousand people. The truth is that preaching is one of God's chosen and approved methods of recruiting His kingdom.

One further matter should be set clear, that truth is not dependent upon fact. Parables, stories, allegories, myths, dramas, novels, imaginary persons, revelations, all are useful means of teaching truth. A mythical character like Santa Claus can teach the great and essential truth that the spirit of Jesus inclines us to give gifts to others, even as He was the greatest Gift the world has ever received. So many times, parents are so concerned with the fact of Santa Claus that they lose the truth of Santa Claus. When the children begin to ask if there is a Santa Claus, the wise parent can then impart the truth of Santa Claus by saying, "No, Santa Claus is not a person. The pictures you see of him are representations of the spirit of Jesus, which inclines us to give good gifts to others." So there is no disappointment felt by the child in the loss of the fact of Santa Claus since it now has its truth, and the beauty of it is that the truth of Santa Claus can and does for such a child sweeten the whole of the after-life, making Christmas not a time to receive, but to give gifts, and to do it for Christ's sake.

Our Sunday School classes may not learn as much about the facts of the Bible as we could wish. It will be most regrettable, however, if they fail to garner the rich truth of the facts and parables and other truth-bearing teaching materials of the Scriptures. We need information based on facts, but we most of all need that inner meaning and insight which shall reveal to us the truth of God. W. A. HARPER.

BETHLEHEM LETTER.

The appeal made through THE CHRISTIAN SUN for funds for Bethlehem College aggregating $5,000 has met with very reluctant response. We ask for a thousand persons who would give $5.00 each, and we have received $20.00 all told, from the following persons: Rev. J. H. Dollar, Mr. Perry, Dr. J. T. Clack, Mr. O. O. Mitchell, who gave $5.00 each.

Dr. Clack wrote: "Enclosed find check for $5.00, as I want to be one of the thousand to pay $5.00, though it ought to be five thousand."

Mr. Mitchell said in his letter: "I hope that other people have not delayed in remitting to you the small donation of $5.00 that you ask one thousand of us to give. I thought I would do this as soon as I saw your notice; however, I suppose it is better late than never. You should have asked us for $50.00 each. Have we not 100 men and women that will give Bethlehem College $50.00 each now? I will be glad to join the other ninety-nine."

Friends of Bethlehem College, you may have thought we were joking when we called for five thousand dollars for our own Bethlehem College, but if she ever needed financial aid it is now. I know that the college has a thousand friends who can give $5.00 each, and I know also that she has one hundred friends who can give $50.00 each, cash, and do it now. Pray that God will put it into the hearts of ninety-nine others who will join Bro. Mitchell in giving fifty dollars each, and that he will inspire nine hundred and ninety-six others to join the four on the $5.00 proposition, and do it now.

Why should our youngest educational institution be allowed to perish in a section where it is so much needed, for lack of funds, when a small contribution from those who are able to give among the membership of our Southern constituency can save it to serve the needs for which it was established?

We cannot believe that our people will fail us in this emergency appeal for Bethlehem College, if they can be reached and rightly informed. Bethlehem College needs financial help, and needs it now. Who will be next to send a contribution? We certainly will appreciate whatever you may be led to do for Bethlehem College.

Wadley, Ala. S. L. BEOUGHER.

IMPORTANCE OF TEACHERS.

American educators held in their hands the destinies of this nation, says J. P. Wickersham. Their task is not like that of the dashing soldier or the popular statesman at whom all the world gazes; but in the unobtrusive quiet of the schoolroom, though no eye, save that of God, witness the work, they may infuse such a love of our country and its institutions into the hearts of the coming generations of children that the republic, on its secure foundations, will stand as firmly as the Egyptian pyramids.

The life insurance companies have more than doubled the amount of their loans on farms in the past five years. Farm mortgages have increased from $859,000,000 at the end of 1919 to $1,781,000,000 on September 30th of this year.

THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.

By Henry Wallace Dowding, D. D.

My approach to this subject carries my mind back a little more than thirty years, to the city of Boston. I had just been ordained to the ministry, and was rector of a Reformed Episcopal Church. I recall that at the time I became well acquainted with one prominent institution and two great men. The men were Phillips Brooks and Lyman Abbot; the institution was the Andover Theological Seminary. So far as Phillips Brooks was concerned, I found in him a great preacher, a prince among men and a man of unfaltering faith. His friendship of nearly two years before his untimely death is a fragrant memory. I named my only son after him, and my last book, "The Protestantism of Tomorrow," is dedicated to him.

It was in those days of comparative ignorance and simplicity of faith that I was aroused as from a dream, to realize that the foundations of faith could be shaken, if not altogether removed, and that this threatening catastrophe was not confined, as I had supposed, to the realm of atheism and scepticism, or to the efforts of the infidel world; but was being precipitated upon the Church by its own institutions and by professed followers of the Christ. For me and for thousands of others starting out in the ministry, this was a rude awakening.

Andover Theological Seminary was at that time almost the only avowed champion of "higher criticism" in this country. This, of course, involved the question as to the authenticity and inspiration of the Scriptures and many other doctrinal views. So general was its influence and so thoroughly had the mental infection spread that every candidate for the ministry was asked by the ordaining council "What are your views of the 'Andover theory?'" and in my perplexity and ignorance I remember giving this evasive answer: "I have no fixed theory, Andover or otherwise. I am looking for more light." Strange to say, I got by with that answer.

In the midst of this theological confusion, Lyman Abbot came upon the scene in Boston to deliver what were known as the Lowell lectures in Harvard University. The inspiration of the Bible was his theme. Appalling as it may appear, discreditable as it may seem to the memory of an otherwise great man, Lyman Abbot declared in these lectures that Moses did not write the Pentatuch. The Old Testament was a book of fables, and the Bible was not inspired. The Boston dailies flamed forth upon their bulletins and printed in three-inch headlines these statements of the successor of Beecher. The country was startled, England was shocked, whilst Germany was elated and the sceptical world was laughing up its sleeve. They had found an ally in an unexpected camp, and from those days, the active sowing of the tares among the wheat of intellectual, spiritual life in America may be dated. So that for more than thirty years I have watched the increasing growth of the tares, until today there are few fields of Christian activity where you will not find some, and in many of our institutions the growth has been so rapid and noxious that we are afraid to start pulling up the tares for fear we may have to destroy the wheat also.

If I were to do justice to my own feelings I should open and close this discussion with one simple, but all-sufficing statement. It is this: "I believe that holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." For me to believe otherwise, I should regard as high treason to the kingdom of God and the faith that is within me.

I believe in God for many reasons. I believe in a Supreme Ruler of the universe. These reasons are found in my subconscious being and my conscious existence. They are also obvious or visible. They express themselves through my own longings, in nature, in human need, in mind and matter. Imperfect in this faith, I am sure I should be helpless and hopeless without it. To think of a world as our world, without this faith, is to attempt to conceive of a condition to describe which no language has ever been invented. Without God, and therefore without hope, is an abyss, on the bring of which the human mind refuses to think, approaching it at times and for an instant, we stagger and return to Him again.

Believing in God, I also believe that He is able to reveal Himself, therefore willing to reveal Himself, and is always doing it, not only amid the intermittent shafts of light which my reason affords, nature accentuates, and hope makes more or less permanent, but by a revelation which deals with human progress, human needs, starting with the alpha of human history and ending with omega of human redemption.

Starting with these sublime thoughts of God and His ability to make Himself known to men, I cast around to find if I may, or can, the channel of this communication, the medium of this knowledge. I am sure from observation that what has not been revealed remains a mystery. Why, then, is it not all mysterious? I discover that all philosophy, science, achievement apart from the Bible is imperfect, unsatisfying and incomplete. Man's origin, progress, purpose and destiny are alike hid amid the shadows.

Ancient medieval or modern history have never produced a single man who has held in one hand the secret of human life or in the other the destiny of the human race, apart from his associations with the Bible. No philosophy, religion or science has ever been competent to reveal God in His natural and paternal relations to man without the aid of the Bible. Such religions as have attempted this fruitless task have only succeeded in inspiring hope without confirming faith. After the lapse of thousands of years and upon the threshold of the twentieth century, men are still scrutinizing the heavens, ransacking their finite minds and turning the world upside down in a made endeavor to find another, a different or a better revelation of God, only, as we believe, to return again to the Scriptures to find in them the object of this everlasting quest—eternal life.

It might be well for us to note in passing that the acceptance or rejection of the Bible as an inspired Book has marked, and always will mark and mold the world's history, as it must also decide its destiny. These periods have been known in the past as the ages of faith and the ages of reason. A singular example of this may be found in the times of Cicero and those of St. Francis, separated by a space of twelve hundred years. It is though by some students that we are again returning to a Ciceronean form of civilization. If you will consult Dr. Samuel Dills' "Roman Society," you will see more easily what I mean.

That age was like our own in many ways. It had its millionaires, its great public benefactions, endowed institutions, trade-unions, its strikes, smart sets, week-enders, seaside resorts, pet dogs, yachts and motor chariots. If you visit Pompeii and Ostai you will see the counterpart of our great commercial centers of sensuality and a specimen of our pleasure resorts. These things and the atmosphere they created were the products of the boasted "Age of Reason."

Passing over twelve hundred years, coming nearer to our own age, what a change! Here is an unfamiliar world. Look at the Gothic cathedrals, poems frozen into stone. They stand today to rebuke our lack of devotion and make our service and sacrifice look cheap and little. Surely the people who reared these lofty piles and conceived these great ideals had something which we ought to hasten to recover. Canon Jessup tells us that the villagers helped to build these cathedrals with their own hands, and that therein lay much of their sacred value. Mr. Chesterton tells us that a cathedral is more important than a huge factory. Does the average man on the street so think and believe today? And yet this was the controlling idea in the age of St. Francis —a rude, violent, ignorant age in many respects, but it had the sense of the eternal. To that age there had come a revelation, and to their minds this revelation was inspired, and this inspired revelation was the Bible. What we need to recover from all such ages in the past is not their superstition and their faults, but their simplicity and their faith.

Perhaps, as a matter of concession, we ought to note a distinction between revelation and inspiration. In the ordinary use of these terms, revelation could be made without the necessity for inspiration. But in the case of God revealing Himself in all the varied aspects of His nature, and especially in the revelation of the divine will and purpose, an inspired revelation is the only kind possible. The two words really convey the same meaning. To say that we have a revelation without inspiration is a flattery of the human mind. To contend that inspiration has been given without revelation is absurd; but to avoid any misunderstanding, I prefer to speak of the Bible as "an inspired revelation from God."

Now the Deist acknowledges God. He believes in the wisdom and goodness of God, but he claims that nature and the teachings of reason are sufficient without any other revelation of the mind and will. This is the weak point of Deism, for it is plain that if God actually exists, that if He is a God of wisdom and goodness, He will not stop half-way in His attempt to make Himself known. If it is true, and we affirm that it is, that the greatest and noblest civilization has been that in which divine revelation has shed its light and the Bible has been the most completely accepted; if, therefore, the Supreme Being is all-wise and good—there is no reason to suppose that He would withhold just such a revelation as is made in the Bible.

The rationalist, as his name implies, attaches so much importance to reason that he rejects the teachings of the Bible unless he is able to bring its teachings into accord with his rationalistic views. Such a frame of mind and course of conduct results from the acceptance of a revelation which is not inspired.

I am sure that we shall not deny the revelation of the greatness and wisdom of God in nature, that the progress of science makes these clearer to the mind is also gladly conceded; but to study nature to find the moral character of God which culminates in divine love, is a fruitless task. True we get glimpses of the divine moral nature. We have suggestions of His love, but where will you look for the full-orbed glory of the divine morale and the unspeakable riches of the divine nature outside the Bible, and especially the gospel in miniature? "God so loved the world that He gave His Son." It must be said of these things, as it may be said of other supernatural truths: "Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared. But it is revealed unto us by His spirit"—and where shall we learn

(Continued on Page 8.)

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

By Warren H. Denison, Secretary.

I wish it were possible to take all of our pastors and their Church officials to visit several hundreds of our other Churches. It surely would be an eye-opener to those who have had little or no interest in the Forward Movement. A mere glance at the congregations of our Church who have earnestly and consistently endeavored to promote and carry out the Forward Movement program convinces one that such congregations have reaped large blessings, in return for their participation in this work of the kingdom and His movement calling for a united effort on the part of all our people.

It has helped to enlarge the spiritual horizon of our membership. It has unlocked the door of many covetous hearts. It has armed the membership with confidence to undertake larger tasks. Non-participating congregations have been the losers by all odds. The congregations which failed to fall into line will find themselves handicapped for years to come. All this is perfectly clear as one goes among our Churches. You find those Churches usually without the group system, and their work is done haphazardly. They have not adopted the denominational plan of departments five in number—devotion, evangelism and life service, Christian education, missions, stewardship and finance. Consequently they have no such secretaries and the denominational secretaries corresponding to those departments cannot be of service in any large way. Again, the Church is the loser. It is too bad that any Church does not use the group plan of work, and the matter of departmental system with a secretary at the head of each.

Those Churches that have not shared in the financial part of the movement, thought they were saving and gaining for themselves in many instances, but they have been the losers. Pastors who did not themselves give or did not encourage their people to subscribe were losers invariably. The best thing they can now do is to themselves make a subscription worth while to the continuation movement, and encourage others to subscribe too. All pastors now have a large opportunity to stress its importance to all the members received since 1920. Every interest of the Church has been helped by the Forward Movement, but one of the greatest blessings of the movement is the wholesome reflex influence it has exerted upon the congregation participating in the program.

Piqua, Ohio.

Sunday, January 18th, was spent in an all-day stewardship institute with Dr. J. E. Kauffman and his congregation. Your secretary was given the full day, beginning with Sunday School till the close of the night service, to present the message, answer questions, discuss methods, spirit, stewardship facts and aims. Young and old participated. There was a fine attendance and interest.

MEN AND MILLIONS COLLECTIONS FOR JANUARY.

North Carolina Conference.

New Providence	$ 68.50
Burlington	71.00
Liberty, Vance	25.00
Haw River	10.00
Mt. Bethel	5.00
Graham	9.00
Henderson	56.50
Elon	3.00
Pleasant Grove, Va.	20.00
Franklinton	5.00
Belew Creek	14.50
New Elam	10.00
Raleigh	100.00
Greensboro, First Church	459.00
Union, Va.	5.00
Asheboro	10.00
Union, N. C.	2.00
		$ 873.50

Eastern Virginia Conference.

Suffolk	$1,251.35
Christian Temple	150.00
Mt. Carmel	80.00
Burton's Grove	31.20
Johnson's Grove	14.00
Holy Neck	5.00
Wakefield	90.00
Ivor	145.00
New Lebanon	5.00
Union, Surry	30.00
Spring Hill	87.00
Portsmouth	40.00
Isle of Wight	5.00
Eure's	4.00
		1,937.55

Valley of Virginia Conference.

Bethlehem	$ 66.00
Leaksville	15.00
Concord	2.00
Mayland	16.00
		99.00

Alabama Conference.

Pleasant Grove	$ 7.00
Cragford	10.00
Wadley	95.00
Mt. Zion	1.00
Rock Springs	23.00
New Harmony	52.00
Noonday	5.00
		193.00

Georgia and Alabama Conference.

North Highlands		10.00
Total		$3,113.05
Less checks returned		55.00
Total for month		$3,057.55

Chas. D. Johnston,
Executive Secretary.

BETHLEHEM NOTES.

Although Bethlehem College is new and small, it is very progressive. It is a great inspiration to our educational board, as well as to those who are interested in the college. All this is due to the head of the institution, our beloved president, Dr. S. L. Beougher, and also to those that are anxious to help its growth. We need your prayers as well as your aid to make the star of Bethlehem shine everywhere.

A new branch has been added to the athletic association, known as B Club. This club was organized for the letter men, under the leadership of Mr. D. L. Beougher, who was recently elected coach for the basket-ball season.

Science 1-B class conducted chapel last week. The following subjects were discussed: "Home," "Life," "Health," and "Man," which were very interesting to the student body.

Religious education class will conduct chapel for this week. V. E. Adams.

THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.

(Continued from Page 7.)

of this Spirit, or how shall we understand the workings of this Spirit unless we resort to the inspired revelation of the Bible?

I am not here to say that the scientist is not sometimes inspired; that Socrates and Plato may not have been inspired; that Shakespeare, Milton, Dante and even Bunyan were not. But none of these men were the first fruits of inspiration. They were not pioneers, originals; therefore, I affirm that the authors of the Ol dand New Testament were inspired to a greater, deeper degree, or even in essentially a different manner to these; that in so far as the subjects concerning which they claimed inspiration were infinitely higher and divinely greater, so the quality and measure of inspiration they received was vastly different and immeasurably greater; that even then, God had to stretch the finite mind to its farthest limits, bordering upon the infinite, in order to convey to the world a somewhat clear conception of Himself and His true relation to a wandering world.

If I understand at all inspiration and its effect upon the person or the subject-matter involved, it is both a process and a result entirely independent of the character or qualifications of the person inspired. Therefore, it is not necessary that the subject for inspiration should be learned or enlightened, perfect or even morally good, previous to being inspired, nor is it a force related to chronology, historical data or setting, neither does it involve a predisposition towards certain truths. There is no doubt that God chose "holy men" whom he inspired to speak sacred truth in order that these vital and supreme revelations might not become contaminated or weakened by contact with evil-thinking.

When we reflect that "inspiration" in its simple form is nothing more or less than the infusion of ideas into the human mind, we are reminded that there are degrees of inspiration ranging from the lower order to the highest attainment of the mind which brings us to a place where the human and the divine may meet, provided the human has a holy purpose, an open mind and an obedient will. It is at this point and under these conditions that divine inspiration seems not only possible, but necessary to effect a juncture between man and his Maker. It is the excess of folly to suppose that men, or even objects, can infuse ideas into the mind of man, and that God is unable to inspire men with those nobler and richer ideas without which the lesser conceptions are unable to satisfy human aspiration and hope.

The old idea that God verbally inspired the Scriptures or those who wrote them is gone forever, except for a few who, through ignorance and prejudice, are unwilling to face the issue. Gone forever also is the notion that the Bible is a correct history or geneology of the race, or that it is a Book exempt from human error or false interpretations of divine attributes and power, or that it always clearly and correctly portrays the divine nature and will. But these considerations or admissions do not in any sense or degree discredit the Bible or abridge its claims to being the inspired Word of God, since the ideas of its Author, the will of God, the purpose and plan of the Book, together with the most perfect plan of human redemption, are so clearly set forth that he who runs may read, and though a fool he need not err therein.

Did Moses write the Pentatuch? We think so; we hope so, because it flatters our pride a little just to be sure that we are right. But what if the real writer should bear another name! We do not know who wrote some of our best poems or painted some of our rarest pictures. Did Shakespeare write the works attributed to him? We sincerely hope that he did; we have visited his home, his country, and the places his name has immortalized in human history. It would be a calamity if we must be disillusioned; but it would be a far greater tragedy if we were to lose his superb contribution to literature. It is the spirit, the ideas and ideals, and not the clay that endures. If it should ever transpire that some of the writings now attributed to the pen of some of the writers of Holy Writ should be conceded to be the work of others, I do not see how such an act could affect the more general statement or the greater fact "that holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit to give to the world a revelation of eternal verities not to be found in any other form or place."

I presume that the most conclusive evidence of the inspiration of the Scriptures is contained in the nature and value of the revelation, and the further consideration that such knowledge could not have come through human channels without divine assistance. For instance, heathen nations have not been ignorant of the existence of a Supreme Being, but the character of God has never been made known outside of the Bible. It is His character which lays claim upon our worship and service. Nature does not reveal this, but the inspired Book does.

The world could not have progressed very far without moral standards of right and wrong. Our obligations to our fellows grows out of our knowledge of God. Ignorance of God's will and His plan for human welfare would utterly unsettle life, and we should be unable to live in right relations with men, since we would have no adequate knowledge of God. The ancient Egyptians, Greeks and Romans were ignorant of moral subjects, as we know by the first epistle of Paul to these people.

If it were not for an inspired Book called the Bible, we should still be drifting about upon an ocean of conjecture concerning the future life and the hope of immortality. The very best philosophy and science have ever done is to speculate and to take refuge in silence and death. Julias Caesar said in a speech in the Roman Senate: "To those that live in sorrow, death is a repose. There will be no place for either anguish or joy." Pliney later declared, "All men are in the same condition after death as they were before they were born." It is, therefore, a self-evident fact that we must return to the inspired Word for a reasonable answer to the two great questions, "from whence did we come?" "whither are we going?" and our faith concerning either rests upon something more than conjecture.

Lack of space compels me to be brief. Perhaps there is no better way to do this than to put to ourselves a few questions such as suggest themselves to the average mind. (1) What is the Bible? I think that it must be acknowledged to be "the revealed mind and will of God." That such a revelation might be expected has already been suggested; that it is possible, may naturally be supposed from the admitted belief in a Supreme Being who in nature and natural law had already made a partial revelation which, without the Scriptures, would have remained imperfect, unfinished and incomplete—which is contradictory to sense of reason.

What is meant by inspiration? Is it also infallible? If we confine our idea of inspiration of Scripture to the fundamental principles underlying moral government, divine commands and man's relation to his Maker, I believe that this form and degree of inspiration implies also infallibility, but I do not believe that inspiration of motive, mind, and purpose involves infallibility of human words. I believe that holy men spake as they were moved to speak under the infusion of their minds, by the mind, motive and purpose of God in their customary language, which, though at times imperfect, did not have the power to obscure the mind of God. I do not think that when God inspired the mind that He dictated the words, nor was it necessary any more than it is necessary for the head of a business who has made his stenographer familiar with his manner and methods of business, and hand over a letter to be answered or a document to be drawn to dictate the words of that letter. He has inspired the mind of his secretary with the motive, plan and purpose of his business, so that they are conveyed in perfect harmony with his will in the language of his scribe. It is, to my mind, plain that we have, therefore, the Word of God—but not the words of God. The contents are of divine origin, but not the container. We have this vast priceless treasure in earthen vessels. Just as I am sure that the operations of the Holy Spirit in sanctifying men is compatible with the existence of partial evil in the life of the sanctified, so I believe that the operations of the same Spirit in inspiring the minds of men is compatible with partial error and imperfect language or speech.

My revered father used to say the correct way to interpret Scripture is to compare Scripture with Scripture. This was not original with him, nor is it new to us. It simply means that it requires one inspired word to explain and enforce another. Nor do I consider this necessarily a proof of the weakness of Scripture, but rather an indication of its strength, for the deep things of God are spiritually discussed. No man can know the mind of God only to the degree that he has the mind of Christ. Inspiration is more an attitude of mind than a question of words.

In this connection, I might say that I have studied carefully all those passages which might suggest verbal inspiration. As a whole, they do not impress me as having much weight upon the subject. I never have been much interested in the question whether the words of the Bible are inspired, but I am fully satisfied that the Bible as a whole is the revelation of the divine will and nature, resulting from an infusion of the mind of God into the consciousness of man, which has found expression suited to the needs of the human race in the form of Holy Scriptures.

The inspiration of the Bible, like its authenticity or its infallibility, does not rest altogether upon the opinions of its critics or the combined evidence of logic, reason or science. There are other, and, as we believe, greater evidences of its divine origin. For instance, there is its universality of acceptance and adaptation to every people of all ages. In spite of the fact that it had its rise among a despised people and nation, held in scorn by the Assyrians, Egyptians and Romans, and for eighteen hundred years since, yet no nation has ever refused its light, and the most unlikely nations have built their history and civilization upon its commands and teachings. To many of these it is the foundation of the oath which disposes of life, death or property. It is associated with the world's sickness, suffering, loss and sorrow. It sails on every ocean; it is carried on every battleship. No institution, however secular, is considered complete without it, and for many it is the corner-stone of their strength or the foundation of their permanence. The writings of nations, both poetry and prose, are the outgrowth of its teachings and vie with each other in stating its value and extolling its virtues. It has made the most illiterate peasant, unfamiliar with other countries and shrines, perfectly familiar with the land from which it came and the temple where it was first read by ancient scribes. The orator holds a thousand people spellbound by his oration, but this Book has held a thousand nations for many thousands years by the simple word of its prophecy and the logic of its imperishable precepts.

I confess that I am not seriously concerned about the nature and extent to which the Bible is inspired, nor am I deeply anxious about the possible mistakes of the Scriptures. What arrests my attention and gives me grave concern is the question as to whether the twentieth century Church, the rightful custodian of this revelation, will prove itself worthy of the great honor conferred upon it and will not make the fatal blunder of trying to pull up the tares, and in so doing destroy the wheat also. This is a great age; it is also a momentous, epoch-making age for the Church and its institutions. Men are so busy pulling the tares out of every field of endeavor until it would seem that we have forgotten that our chief business is to sow the seed of the kingdom and to be wheat-growers instead of tare-pullers. Just how long this period of spiritual unrest is going to last, this higher and lower criticism is going to flourish, God only knows. But when we have done all that human doubt and an incipient faith can suggest, it will be well for us to be "aware of Christ"—that unavoidable presence which has made itself felt not only in the Church, but far beyond its border; that serene and unbaffled personality who has taken hold of all kinds of men, whose influence is found in the market places, on the exchange, in legislative halls and halls of learning everywhere, challenging human life and hearts with His divine art of living, forcing men of all nationalities and creeds to shape their lives into the form of "the Pattern shown in the mount."

We must be aware of encountering Him in our quest for truth and in our opposition to truth, or our man-made opinions of truth. His living presence in the world is the last and most conclusive evidence of the inspiration of Scripture, for He is at once the source and the subject of divine inspiration. So long as this outstanding divine personality is guiding this bewildered world by His scarred hands and His quenchless love, we need never doubt but that the will of God by which He has inspired the hearts of holy men will at last be done on earth as it is in heaven.

Of this, at least, we are certain: What God was, he is; what He has done, He can do again. It still remains, as Mr. Moody said, "to be seen what God can do with a soul thoroughly consecrated to Him." Give Him holy men, open minds and hearts, untenanted by doubt, and He will say to such men, as He said to His ancient people, "I will come down and talk with thee." Under such conditions, nothing is impossible to God. Pauline faith and courage may return to the Church again after the long travel of two thousand years. The tongue of the golden-mouthed Chrisostom may again find its speech in our modern temple. The tongues of fire may again be seen upon the lips of the prophet and the seer. The scenes of the upper-room may again find their counterpart in the empty shrines of modern worship, and another holy group of consecrated men may be inspired to give the world another message—the last great message of a loving Father to His faithless children.

I believe finally that the Scriptures are inspired because they have led men to think about whatsoever things are pure, true, rich, noble, concerning, and in the interest of their fellow-men.

Portsmouth, Va.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

February 22, 1925.

Subject: "Good Citizenship." (Temperance lesson.)

Golden Text: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."—Rom. 13:9.

Lesson: Rom. 13:1-14.

Devotional Reading: Psa. 72:1-8.

Reference Material: Psa. 94:1-10, 101:1-8; 1 Peter 2:13-17.

Good citizenship is a practical form of religion. It is the expression in civic life of what a man really has, or is, in his religious life. And a very practical and a very searching test of how much religion a man has is the kind of citizen he is. In other words, the character of a man's citizenship in the kingdom of heaven is reflected and expressed in his citizenship in the things of the earth. And this is nowhere more strikingly emphasized than in this lesson, which is taken from Paul's letter to the Romans. For it is generally admitted that Romans is an orderly exposition of Paul's theology in regard to the religion of Jesus Christ. The first eleven chapters are doctrinal, dealing with the great truth of salvation through faith, with special emphasis on the fact that we are sons of God, and hence citizens of the kingdom of God through faith in Jesus Christ. Any one who reads the eighth chapter of Romans cannot doubt that Paul believed that great and inspiring and assuring truth. In the twelfth chapter he begins to make some practical applications of this great truth. He says in so many words that if we are children of God we should reflect it in our conduct. And in the thirteenth chapter—the lesson for today—Paul shows that a citizen of the kingdom of God will make it known as a citizen of earthly kingdoms.

It is true, of course, that Paul was dealing with a specific problem. He was facing the problem of the relation of the Christians to the great empire of Rome. But he dealt with that problem in a masterly way—such a masterly way that the principles which he declared for that specific problem are true and binding today. His teaching on good citizenship have a message for us today, not only in the limited sense of a temperance lesson, but in a wider application for all civic privileges and duties.

Paul says in the first place, that civil government has its source in God, and that all constituted power is appointed or ordained by Him. God is a God, not of confusion, but of order. And governments, as an agency for securing and preserving order, are ordained by God. Hence, in a sense, he who resists properly constituted authority resists God. And such disobedience and mutiny will entail a sure, if not a swift, penalty. Paul was not arguing for the divine right of kings. In fact, he was insisting that public office was a public trust, and because rulers did derive their power from God they would be answerable to God as well as to the people. Nor was Paul defending the outrageous acts of many rulers of his own day or of later days. Power, like any other gift of God, may be abused. But the institution of civil power, and not the ruler in his own person, is ordained by God. And any government, however poor, is better than anarchy. Better a tyrant at the head of things, as bad as that may be, then an order in which every man does that which is right in his own eyes.

In the second place, a citizen of the kingdom will be law-observing. He will keep the law. He may not like the law. It may work a hardship on him; but he will keep it, if for no other reason than for conconscience's sake. The way out of a bad situation is not through a worse situation. And better by far for a man to suffer inconvenience at the hands of the law than to break the law and thus bring the law into open contempt and engender the spirit of disrespect for law. Paul succinctly adds that, as a rule, laws and rulers are not a terror to good folks. He who is good himself need not fear laws. And where laws are unjust, the way out is not through disobedience, open or secret, but through repeal. It might be well for us Americans—for just as we are the greatest law-makers in the world, just so are we the greatest law-breakers in the world—to think on these things.

In the third place, Paul asserts that if the law of love ruled in life there would be little if any need for other laws. Love is the fulfilling of the law. And whatever others may do, the man who is a Christian ought to be so dominated by the law of love that he would not be concerned about the negative restrictions which are put around those who are bent upon doing wrong. And it is very significant that Paul does not interpret lawlessness only in terms of drunkenness and reveling, but in terms of strife and jealousy. A good citizen is one who does more than keep sober; he lives a positive, active life. He puts on Jesus Christ and seeks the things that are above. And in being a good citizen of the kingdom of God, he fulfills all the conditions of good citizenship on earth.

Some Teaching Points.

1. Public office is a public trust.
2. Abuse of power is a sin.
3. Duties take precedence over rights.
4. A clear conscience ever at a loss is better than all gain with a violated conscience.
5. The law of God supercedes all other law.
6. A good citizen is law-observing and law-enforcing.
7. Citizenship brings duties as well as privileges.
8. A receipt for taxes and an honest income-tax report are related to real religion.

Note: I have not made specific mention of the matter of prohibition. It is to be interpreted in the light of the principles given above.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

February 22, 1925.

Subject: "Industrial Missions."

(Worship Service.)

Scripture Lesson: Isa. 16:1-4.

Song: "Work, for the Night is Coming."

Prayer: Gratitude for the gift of the Son, who came and labored among men, and for the example He set in physical and spiritual labor. That we may be like Him, who was never too tired to labor for the Father, to bring joy and comfort to those who needed it, and to help the poor and sick. That the members of the Christian Endeavor Society may find their places of work and may do whatever they do well—as the Master did.

Sing, prayerfully, the song, "O Master, Let Me Walk with Thee."

Follow this with sentence prayers by the members. If the minister is present, have him close the sentence prayers with a prayer for the members of the society, that they may render efficient Christian service, and for those who are doing industrial mission work in the homeland and in the foreign lands.

Points for the Leader's Talk.

The life of Christ is a beautiful example of working for others. We can imagine Him quietly, but happily, going about His Father's business, helping those who needed help. He began His work when only twelve years of age, when he tarried with the doctors in the temple. He was a carpenter, and His disciples were all working men. He worked chiefly among the laboring class and directed most of His teaching to them. At all times, He dignifies honest work. We need more Christian business men; more people who are Christian first of all, allowing other things to come second in importance.

We mean by industrial missions giving people Christianity and at the same time physical responsibilities. This gives a Christian basis for business, and makes self-respecting,self-supporting business people. Many times, whole families are aided either directly or indirectly in this way. Paul said, "If any would not work, neither should he eat," and "We exhort by our Lord Jesus Christ, that with quietness they work, and eat their own bread." There are many people in many lands faithfully toiling from day to day. They need to know God's love. There are others who need to learn how to work and earn a living.

Suggestions for Short Talks.

1. The Southern Methodist Church conducts an industrial school for boys in Sangdo, Korea. The students go to school one week and work in the industrial plant the next week. In this way, they get a Christian education, and at the same time learn a particular kind of work. A small per cent of the profits goes to the boys, which enables them to be self-supporting and self-respecting. When they finish school, they go out prepared to live Christian business lives, and other boys take their places. They make beautiful ginghams, voiles, hose, and so forth, which are sold all over the world.

2. Antioch College, in Ohio, is doing a very interesting thing in industrial education. The students go to school for five weeks, and work for five weeks in Dayton and other near-by places. The five weeks of work is supervised by the school. This college lays no claim to giving their students any kind of Christian education, and for this reason is to be censured; but at the same time, this college holds an interest for members of the Christian Church, since it was established by our Church and owned by our Church for many years. It was the first co-educational institution for higher learning in America.

3. Miss Ollie Williams, one of our missionaries to Porto Rico, is doing a very splendid piece of work among the Porto Rican girls. She teaches them to sew, to make their own clothes, and to make them for sale. She has been able to help them in many ways, insuring more Christian homes in Porto Rico. Mr. Bruce Morton is our agricultural missionary to Porto Rico. He is teaching them how to farm more successfully, and at the same time giving them Christianity.

Questions for the Meeting.

1. Is it more worthy to work for one's living than to be supported by some rich person?
2. What should the attitude of the worker be toward those with whom he works? Toward his employer?
3. Why should we have industrial missions?

Christian Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

I asked our matron a few days ago what we needed most, and her reply was "sheets." When I sat down at my desk to write our weekly letter, I happened to find on my desk a copy of the Connie Maxwell, a paper gotten out by the Connie Maxwell Orphanage, in South Carolina. I just glanced through it to see how many nice things that had been done to make my dear old friend, Jamison, the superintendent, happy, and among quite a number, this one item struck us very forceably:

"A Linen Shower Given by the Ladies.—Five hundred and seventy-seven sheets, 4,085 towels, 1,376 pillow-cases, 564 napkins, and many other articles just as useful and as much needed were sent to him. Bro. Johnson said it was a downpour."

In the summertime, when the weather gets hot and dry, we say we need a shower to make the crops take on new life and look more promising for a good crop. We need sheets, pillow-cases, counterpanes, and towels. These things wear out; children wear them out faster than grown-ups. We expect them to. Grown people wear them out also, and old, worn-out ones must be supplied with new ones. Ours are wearing out; getting thin, and need to be replaced with new ones. One hundred and ten children, seventy beds, with two sheets each for the week, and some changed several times each week. So you can get some idea of the number of sheets it takes. I am wondering if the good women of the Christian Church would like to make their superintendent happy, as the good women of the Baptist Church in South Carolina made their superintendent. This would be a fine time for a "shower."

I remember several years ago I asked for sheets and we did not have a little shower, but sheets poured in in every mail till we began to think we would have a flood. The good women in the Christian Church always do things in a great way. I believe we are going to have a "shower" for double beds and single beds and three-quarter beds.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR FEBRUARY 12, 1925.

Amount brought forward		$ 877.32
Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
N. C. & Va. Conference:
Haw River		4.89
Western N. C. Conference:
Shiloh	$ 1.32
Ramseur	8.32
High Point	3.06
		12.70
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Morrisville	$ 2.00
Turner's Chapel	1.95
Fuller's Chapel	4.65
		8.60
Eastern Virginia Conference:
Elm Avenue, Portsmouth	$ 4.25
First, Norfolk	20.00
Rosemont	9.00
		33.25
Valley of Virginia Conference:
Linville	$ 5.32
Leaksville	2.75
Dry Run	2.91
		10.98
Georgia and Alabama Conference:
Richland	$ 1.23
Kite	2.85
North Highlands	1.31
		5.39
Baby Home Pledge:
Mrs. C. H. Edmondson		20.00
Special Offerings.
Christian Temple, Jr., Church	$ 2.80
Inter. C. E. Socy, Chris. Temple	2.50
Wake Chapel C. E. Society	15.00
Young Ladies' Guild, Conneaut, O.	10.00
W. W. Brown	15.00
A. W. Parrish	45.00
W. A. Newman, Henderson, N. C.	25.00
		115.30
Grand total		$1,088.43

MEETING CHRISTIAN EDUCATION LEADERS.

The greatest annual gathering of Christian education leaders from all parts of the United States and Canada is held in February each year in Chicago, in connection with the annual meeting of the executive committee of the International Council of Religious Education, and the Professional Advisory Groups, which meet just preceding this executive meeting. This great mid-year conference on Christian education ideals, plans and program will be held at the Chicago Beach Hotel next week, beginning Monday morning, the 16th, and continue through the week.

The first three days of the week, the various groups come together with representatives from denominations and State organizations in conferences on children's work, young people's work, adult, leadership training, editorial and publishing, directors and professors of religious education, daily vacation Bible school and week-day religious instruction, State, regional and national executives and other smaller groups. These groups meet to formulate plans for future work and to make recommendations in their field to the executive committee, which holds its sessions on Thursday and Friday. A special feature this year will be the memorial service on Thursday evening for Marion Lawrence, whose wise counsel will be greatly missed this year.

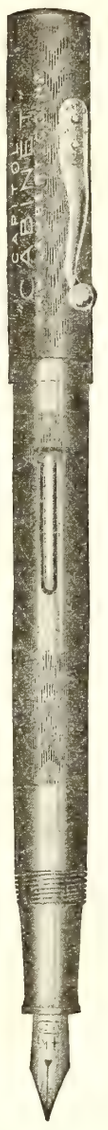
Leaders in Christian education work from denominations and States throughout the nation will take part on the program for the week.

The Christian Church will be represented at these sessions by Dr. W. A. Harper, who is a member of the executive committee; Dr. W. P. Fletcher, Mr. Hermon Eldredge, and Miss Lucy M. Eldredge, of our Christian education field staff. Following the meetings in Chicago, these workers, together with other leaders of the Christian Church, will meet in Dayton to discuss plans for forwarding our Christian education work through field work during the coming months, and through the eight summer schools which will be held in the Christian Church this summer.

LUCY M. ELDREDGE.

A VALENTINE.

This little card so dainty,
So snowy-white and fair,
Brings peace and loving wishes
For God's great love and care.
This little gift so precious
Is from a friend of thine
Who wishes thee great happiness
And sends this Valentine.



SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

These Pens are of standard make, and will give good service. If you are in need of a Fountain Pen, order from us.
MEN'S PENS ..... $2.00 LADIES' PENS $2.00
Postage paid, and Pens guaranteed by the manufacturer.

LIMITED COMBINATION OFFER.—To a new subscriber, or for renewal (if not in arrears), $3.25, either Gentleman's or Lady's Pen, with guarantee of manufacturer. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 EAST BROAD STREET, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Mission Study Books.

Official List for 1924-1925.

ORDER BY TITLE OF BOOK.

FOR ADULT CLASSES.

For Home Mission Classes:
"The Romance of Home Missions," by S. L. Morris, D. D.. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... $ .75
For Foreign Mission Classes:
"Ming Kwong—the City of Morning Light," by Mary Ninde Gamewell. Paper, 50c; cloth .75
"In China," by H. F. Williams, D. D. ..... .25

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

For Intermediate Home Mission Classes:
"The Land of All Nations," by Margaret F. Seelbach. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... .75
For Intermediate Foreign Mission Classes:
"China's Real Revolution," by Paul Hutchinson. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... .75
For Junior Foreign Mission Classes:
"Chinese Lanterns," by Minna McEwen Meyer. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... .75

LEADERS' HELPS.

Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Adult Classes) ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Young People's Classes) ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Land of All Nations" ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Ming Kwong" ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "China's Real Revolution" .. .15
Leaders' Helps for "Chinese Lanterns" ..... .15

Send all orders to—

THE CHRISTIAN SUN,
1536 East Broad Street - - Richmond, Virginia.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

AMBASSADORS FOR CHRIST.

"Now, then, we are ambassadors for Christ."—2 Cor. 5:20.

The position of ambassador is one of high honor and great responsibility. The greater the court to which the ambassador is sent, so much greater is his honor and responsibility. Judged by this standard, the Christian who represents the King of all kings has the highest honor and the greatest responsibility that can come to a human being. We are ambassadors "extraordinary" and "plenipotentiary." We have an extraordinary mission and work, and we may be clothed with full powers from our King, who has been given all power in heaven and in earth. As an earthly ambassador is a well-informed and loyal citizen in whom his government has placed the highest confidence and trust, so we must be loyal to our King, true citizens by virtue of the new birth, and well informed as to the heavenly treaties between God and man. Our residence is close to the throne of the King—so much so that we abide in Him and He in us. Our work is one of reconciliation and peace. We bring the good news of salvation from heaven's court to the lost soul, and when that soul listens and heeds the message of Christ's ambassador, we bear back to heaven a plea for pardon and forgiveness. We make the earth rejoice and angels sing. Is there a higher or holier work than to be an ambassador for Christ?

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining. —T. E. White.

TUESDAY.

A COMMON VARIETY.

Scripture readings: Titus 1:16; Matt. 15:7-8, 6:5, 7:5, 23:13; Prov. 11:9; Job 8:13-14.

Fosdick, in his "Manhood of the Master," says: "The secret of hypocrisy is the desire to appear well without paying the price that right costs. . . . A man who lies deliberately, hangs out a wrong signal. He creates distrust as to the dependableness of any other signal he may ever make. . . . Many a man's goodness consists in being as bad as he dares, of keeping just within the boundaries of social respectability. . . . We all delight in being respected by others, but the Master's character suggests a more searching rule—to become such person in our inward life that we can respect ourselves. . . . That we live on good terms with our fellows may not be a test of sincerity at all; that we live on honorable terms with ourselves is a far deeper standard; that we live on right terms with God means absolute genuineness of life. . . . Jesus was content only with an inward life so genuinely good that He need never be ashamed of Himself or shrink from the eye of His Father."

"In vain we call old notions fudge
And square our morals to our dealing;
The Ten Commandments will not budge,
And stealing still continues stealing."
—Lowell.

Prayer.—Dear Father, give unto us such an inward goodness that Thou shalt never be ashamed to own us and test our souls. May we be a light to others. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"WATCH AND PRAY."

"Watch and pray, lest ye enter into temptation."—Mark 14:37-42.

Gethsemane, "The Oil Press," was a garden of sorrow. Here the Master, after His farewell meeting with His disciples, walked in darkness and distress. Here, facing betrayal, He watched and prayed and suffered. Over against this picture is that of the disciples—asleep! Perhaps we shall never be able to understand how the disciples could be so forgetful of the Master's great lesson to "watch and pray" as they were in Gethsemane.

But the main problem is our own. We are to "watch and pray lest we enter into temptation." From the beginning to the end of the Master's teachings, this was a conspicuous precept. When Evangeline Booth sent her first pioneer workers to France, she called the little group together and gave them such a charge as would make an angel search his heart. She begged them to "watch and pray." How faithfully they fulfilled their mission is a part of history.

It is hard, sometimes, to be loyal and true to Christ. How hard, Peter found out, and James and John and the rest. So did Savonarola, and John Huss and Martin Luther and William Tyndale. Loyalty to Christ is written in the blood of the martyrs all through the annals of Christendom. Love and loyalty go hand in hand. And Jesus is our example. He does not ask, "Dost thou feel for me?" He asks, "Dost thou feel with me?"—Rev. W. S. Stranahan.

Prayer.—Father of all, as we are made in Thine image, O Thou everlasting One, so make us to feel the greatness of our creation, and never to stoop to debasing acts or degrading thoughts. We are Thy children. Fill us with the spirit of watchfulness and prayer. Amen.

THURSDAY.

KNOWING JESUS.

"Oh, that I may know Him!"—Phil. 3:8-11.

The verb "to know" in this text denotes the most intimate understanding of one another. The apostle had lived so closely to the Lord that now, out of that intimacy, he had clear comprehensions of the character and conduct of the Master, and he could talk of the wondrous majesty and beauty of His soul, which was now being reflected in their lives.

In this simple prayer Paul is saying, "Oh, that I might know Him, that I might be ennobled to triumph over temptation and preach the Word with unmistakable demonstration of the Spirit; that my joy may be more complete; that His possession and purposes may become my possessions and purposes.

Prayer.—Merciful Father, inspire in our hearts a growing passion for intimacy with Christ our Lord and grant unto us the compensation of spiritual richness and power, sacred nearness and friendship, conformity to His will, and at last completeness in His glory. Amen.

FRIDAY.

A LESSON FROM CHILDHOOD.

"Put away childish things."—1 Cor. 13:11-12.

In rumaging through the old chest, did you ever find something of your childhood?

I read a little story of a book, yellow with age, being thus found. It was a lesson book on writing. From first to last the book was filled with copy work—what awkward scrawling, angles, etc.! A child had been learning to write. On the cover had been inscribed in a graceful, womanly hand, "This was my school writing-book," and a woman's name was signed, and a date was given.

Isn't this a lovely lesson? First, the uncouth but honest attempt of a child learning to make letters; at last, the mature, lovely, perfect hand.

Paul says we must grow better with the years, and thereby put away the awkwardness of bygone days. By practice and prayer develop strong, gentle, loving children of the Father.

Prayer.—Our Father in heaven, who seest Thy children's needs, bestow upon us the life-giving touch of Thy divine leadership, that out of the wonder of Thy divine presence and companionship we may have continual refreshing and growth in grace unto the beauty of holiness. In Christ's name, we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE SAVING NAME.

"By what power, or in what name, have ye done this?"—Acts 5.

"Peter . . . said . . . be it known unto you all . . . that in the name of Jesus Christ . . . does this man stand here before you whole . . . and in none other is there salvation."—Vs. 7-12.

The apostle had just performed the miracle of healing the lame beggar. For this he was arrested and now at the bar of justice has to answer for it. His answer is a rebuke to some of our modern times. There are other systems of religion which have their good in them, and because they have, men say do not proselyte them. The follower has only to fashion his life to its laws and the light of nature, and that is his salvation.

Why didn't Peter say this? Because, in the life and teachings of the Master, crowned with His miracles, he had the proof that Jesus meant the Saviour of the world, to save the world from sin, and to Him ultimately every knee shall bow and every tongue confess that He is the Christ.

His name means to us ability to struggle and sacrifice; not the thwarting of, but the fulfillment of, our desires; death of the lower things for the life of the higher; clear conscience, and takes away sin's curse; heals our wounds; puts our feet on the rock; lifts our heads up; redeems us from hell and admits us to heaven.

I would rather be an outcast of the world with Christ than to be popular without Him.

O Jesus Christ, grow Thou in me,
And all things else recede;
My heart be daily nearer Thee,
From sin be daily freed.
More of Thy Glory let me see,
Thou holy, wise and true;
I would Thy living image be
In joy and sorrow too.
—Looter.

SUNDAY.

THE RENEWING DAY.

"Be renewed in the spirit of your mind; and . . . put on the new man, which After God is created in righteousness and holiness."—Eph. 4:23-24.

This is our Sabbath duty, according to divine will and pleasure. We find it difficult to control our operations on the Sabbath Day. We are related to so many different things that are divergent and at cross-purposes.

There is only one way to achieve this control and direct our lives on the Sabbath in the proper channels, viz: not only exclude from our lives the improper things, but fill our minds and lives with noble, pious and lofty things. A healthy, robust, spiritual mind has an armor impervious to the darts of wickedness. In such a filling is safety. In Him we are new every morning.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, may we not only do Thy will this day, but may we be filled with Thy fullness as it is in Jesus Christ. Amen.

Subscribe for THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

DEAR KIDDIES:

Read the following story and, listen dears, try to make some one happy on this Valentine Day. Little Hetty sent Mrs. Crabbe a valentine. Suppose you could find some one that has never had a valentine? If you can, write this little verse on the prettiest heart you make, and send it flying along to that person.

Oh-oo-oo- can you hardly wait? Hear is a great big wish from your editor that each Kiddies' Korner Kiddie gets to go to a valentine party. I just know your teacher will have one at school! Goody! Wish I could be at all the parties, too.

Good-by, pretty Valentines.

YOUR EDITOR.

MRS. CRABBE'S FIRST VALENTINE.

Mrs. Crabbe was a very cross old woman. She lived in an old black house on the road to school.

When her apples were ripe in the summer, she always stood in her door when it was time for the children to pass to and from school. She was afraid they might steal her apples. She always had a big stick in her hand and would have whipped any child who tried to steal them.

One day when a little girl named Hetty and some of her playmates were passing by the house, they saw some little pink piggies in the yard.

Hetty climbed up on the fence to count them—and what do you think? Old Mrs. Crabbe rushed from the house and scolded her dreadfully!

So, well—after that all the children ran past the house as fast as they could go; all except Bob. He would walk very slowly to show the rest that he was not afraid.

Once on St. Valentine's Day, he stopped right in front of the gate and asked, "How many valentines did you get today, Mrs. Crabbe?"

"Valentines! fiiddlesticks!" snappel old Mrs. Crabbe; "never got one in my life!"

The other children laughed, but Hetty did not. She felt very, very sorry for the old woman. She thought about it all the way home, too.

Hetty was really a good little girl, and she wished Mrs. Crabbe might be happier, so she bought a sweet little valentine for her. She addressed it to Mrs. Clarissa Crabbe and put it in the post-office. She was afraid to take it to the door of Mrs. Crabbe's house. I do not know what Mrs. Crabbe thought when she got the valentine, but I do know what she did the next day.

The next day when the children came home from school she came out of her house with something wrapped in a clean napkin, and she called to the children, "Which one of you young ones sent me a valentine yesterday?"

Poor little Hetty was frightened to death. Her heart went thumpy-thump; but she answered in a very small voice, "Me"—

"Then," said Mrs. Crabbe shortly, "put that in your dinner pail." And in the napkin Hetty found just the dearest little mince pie you ever saw. It was full of raisins as big as your thumb, and a beautiful flower was cut in the top crust. Little Hetty's valentine had made Mrs. Crabbe a better and happier old woman.

CHANGEABLE JOHNNY.

I read an awful sad poem today. It said life's a dreary journey. And we're all a lot of no-account worms struggling together. And a lot more which meant—what's the use anyhow? I couldn't see any. Seemed to me a feller might just as well be dead. Just then Ma called: "Are you hungry, Johnny? Apple fritters!"

My, land! how I changed. I didn't care if I was only a worm. Long's I could have apple fritters!—Johnny's Diary.

GO IT!

By Nancy Byrd Turner.

Zip, string, let her fly!
What a top for twirling!
Zing, zing, hear her sing,
See her colors whirling.
Zoom, zoom, round and round
Watch her bow and dip.
Take her up and start again—
Zip, string, zip!

Spin, top, all your stripes
Seem to run together;
How you go on your toe,
Light as any feather!
How you scurry as you skip,
Dancing out and in,
Whizzy bright, dizzy light—
Spin, top, spin!

FROM THE KIDDIES.

Santa Didn't Forget Her.

Dear Miss Moffitt:

Santa Claus was good to me Christmas. He brought me a nice bicycle and many other things.

Christmas was right sad for me, because my grandmother was at the hospital; but is at home now.

I am nine years of age and am in the fifth grade. I have a sweet teacher; her name is Miss Rebe Moyler. Yours truly,

Franklin, Va. MARY RUTH JONES.

Likes "Kiddies' Korner."

Dear Kiddies:

I will begin by saying that I like the "Kiddies' Korner" very much, and I think every one does that takes THE SUN.

I just wish that our dear editor would publish a real long, long, continued story, because we would never grow tired of reading it.

I must close, for I know that our dear editor will not have time to read other letters and ride in that little Ford, too. I am,

Yours truly,

Whitsett, N. C. CARRIE BREWER WHITSETT.

Had a Fine Christmas.

Dear Editor:

I am going to write you a little story about what a fine Christmas I had and about what Santa brought me. He brought me some nice toys and lots of good things to eat, and I was so happy, and I had a fine time ahunting.

I am a little boy ten years old. I am your little friend, EARL HOYLE.

Henderson, N. C.

Peter Rabbit Goes to Town.

Peter was a small rabbit, and could not read. His mother told him that she was going to take him to town with her. He was very glad. She put his best suit on him, and they started off.

When they got there, Peter saw a great big house with queer letters on it. He asked his mother what it was, and she told him that that was the place where THE CHRISTIAN SUN was published. She bought him a copy, and when they were again home she read the "Kiddies' Korner" to him. KIDDIE.

THE NEW BOY UP GOOSE LANE.

By Minnie Leona Upton.

When Peterkin is all curled up, taking a nap, you might easily mistake him for a handsome yellow-fur cap, round and soft and shining. But when his nap is over and he uncurls, you see at once that he is only a kitten—one of the finest kittens in the world to be sure—but after all a kitten is no more than a kitten. When Peterkin waves his golden plume of a tail and looks up at you with his big, mischievous blue eyes and says "Prrrrr!" you can easily understand how glad Poppy Parker is that he belongs to her. So you know how she felt the other day when she heard him calling for help from the top of a tall young maple tree.

No one knows why Peterkin climbed so high. One of the neighborhood dogs might have frightened him, but that seemed unlikely, since all of them are good friends. Perhaps a strange dog came along.

Anyway, there he was, very much frightened and fluffed up, and the question was how to get him down. The limb was too slender for any one of the neighborhood boys to climb out on, and also too slender to rest a ladder against. When Poppy called coaxingly, Peterkin seemed to be puzzled and perplexed, and only crawled farther the wrong way.

"What shall we do!" quavered Poppy. And her mother and grandmother Parker said, "What shall we do!" None of the neighbors who had come out to look could think of a single thing.

And just then along came a boy, a square, stubby boy, shy and in patched clothes, but with a steady look in his blue eyes. It was Tommy Doane, "the new boy," whose father and mother had just moved into the old house up Goose Lane.

He stopped and thrust his hands into his bulging pockets. "Does he sleep in a basket?" he asked.

"Y-yes!" answered Poppy.

"All right; then you bring it out and bring a long rope—a clothesline would be just the thing."

Poppy ran into the house and came out with the basket and the rope. Then Tommy, who had been exploring his pockets, pulled out a ball of twine. He unwound some of it, drew back, squinted up at Peterkin, and threw the ball. Up, up it went, sailed over Peterkin's limb just in front of his nose and came down into Tommy's hand. Then Tommy tied the end in his hand to an end of the clothesline and began to wind the twine back on the ball. The clothesline began to rise, and soon the end tied to the twine was over the limb. Tommy kept on winding, and in half a minute the line was within reach. With quick, strong fingers, he tied it to the basket. Then he took up the clothesline reel, and began to wind it up until the basket was right in front of Peterkin.

What a happy, understanding little "Meow" Peterkin gave! Then he crept cautiously forward and down into his own dear basket. Then Tommy unwound the line from the reel—"paying it out," he called it—and down, down, down came the basket, while Poppy held up her arms to get Peterkin safe in them as soon as possible.

Then Grandfather Parker fished a shining silver dollar from his pocket and said, "This is for you, my boy."

"Not much!" Tommy spluttered; "I mean, 'No thank you!' I don't take pay for anything like that!"

Then Grandfather Parker thanked him, and Tommy, conscious of his shabby cap, ran off down the road.

After that every one was in a hurry to get acquainted with "the new boy up Goose Lane."

THE PLACE OF THE RELIGIOUS PRESS IN THE NATION'S LIFE

(An informal address to the Editorial Council of the Religious Press at its recent meeting in Atlanta.)

The religious press serves the highest life of the nation in numerous indispensable ways. The whole Christian enterprise in the modern world is indebted to its press to an extent vastly greater than is usually recognized.

Moral problems which are confessedly difficult of solution are greatly benefited by the counsel of the religious press. The problems of this nature which rely upon an educated public conscience for their righteous issues are steadily before the attention of the Churches.

The various benevolences and missionary operations of Protestantism, as a whole, could scarcely exist, still less prosper, apart from the earnest advocacy of its press. More and more does it spread the good news of the kingdom's progress at home and abroad. At the same time, it is in touch with the weak, the needy, and the importunate phases of our common task of evangelizing the nations. The lover of Christ as Lord can scarcely understand His goings forth as in the days of old unless he reads the weekly dispatches from near and far that publish the countless enterprises of the gospel.

One's spiritual life is deepened and enriched by the instructions and exhortations of Christian journalism. How often the preacher and the layman alike have derived stimulus from the obituaries of good men and women, and from the experiences of saints who have felt "the power of the world to come."

Those of us who appreciate the fact that secular journalism is a dangerous business, look to the leavening value of Christian journalism as a sane and sanctifying force in human affairs. These affairs are exceedingly complicated just now. They require the trained editorial mind which makes correct diagnoses, based upon accurate information, couched in terms that convey the maximum of adjustment with the minimum of friction.

For these and other reasons, I read all the Church papers I can obtain, and have never read a single one that did not broaden my viewpoint, and also my sympathies. If the best material found in them could be made less fugitive, placed in some permanent shape, it would astonish not a few lofty intellectuals who ask: "Can any good come out of Nazareth?" I sincerely hope that every one to whom this brief message comes will do all he or she can to widen the circulation and the healthy sway of our religious periodicals, including the weeklies, monthlies, and quarterlies. Let every preacher who has the pen of a ready writer be a minute-man at the call of the editors.

Let the doings of the various Churches be chronicled, their policies scrutinized, their excellencies commended in the columns of their various organs. Above all else, may they abound in charity while remaining steadfast to whatever is right, as they see it.

Evidently the responsibilities of the editors are as great as their rewards. That those responsibilities may be fully discharged, it is usually wise for an editor to know at first hand the great newspapers of the country, and also the best literary weeklies, supplements and monthlies of the language. I find balanced opinions, seasoned discourse, lucid statements and much sermonic aid in the Spectator of London, the literary supplements of the New York Times and the London Times, and even in the pithy comments of Punch and life upon current events. But I forbear from superfluous references that I may wish my brethren of the editorial staff of the Protestant Churches increasing and genuine success.

S. PARKES CADMAN,
President Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

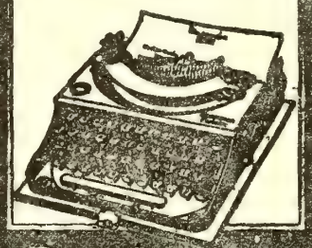
The White House, Washington.
January 26, 1925.

My dear Dr. Cadman:

I have just learned of your election as president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, and I want to extend to you my congratulations on your elevation to this important position. It will, no doubt, afford a wonderful opportunity for good service, and you have my best wishes for your success in every way. I trust that you will find it convenient to come down to see me at an early date. Very truly yours,

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

Something You Have Been Waiting For



Remington Portable Typewriter

—with Standard Keyboard and every other feature common to the larger machines. Case only four inches high.

Price, with case, $60.

Send Your Order to THE CHRISTIAN SUN Richmond, Va.

WINTER TOURIST TICKETS
—ALL RESORTS—
SOUTH AND SOUTHWEST

CALIFORNIA
Via New Orleans and "Sunset Limited."

INFORMATION, ITINERATIES, RESERVATIONS
Furnished in Detail Upon Request.

Apply to Local Agent, or Address
F. H. POSTON, Division Passenger Agent,
Southern Railway System,
809 East Main Street, - - Richmond, Virginia.

WINSTON-INTERNATIONAL
SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLES
SELF-PRONOUNCING
Contain specially prepared Helps to Bible Study and many Attractive Illustrations suitable for children.
Send for Illustrated Catalog
THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO., Publishers
American Bible Headquarters
429 Winston Building Philadelphia

V. E. MAREAN
Pipe Organ Expert
TUNING — REPAIRING
REBUILDING
Motors Installed Yearly Contracts
P. O. Box 864, - Richmond, Va.
Phone, Boulevard 7011-J

Health and good looks
—the reward of internal cleanliness.

IF YOU do not keep clean internally your looks and health are undermined together. A clogged intestine breeds poisons that reach every part of the body. These poisons ruin the complexion and undermine health. Constipation brings on such ailments as headaches, bilious attacks and insomnia, each of which saps your health and vitality.

Avoid Laxatives—say Doctors

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

Nujol
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
For Internal Cleanliness

JONES.

Miss Celestia Vie Jones was born May 6, 1852, in Greenville County, N. C., and died January 25, 1925, in the same home where she was born, having spent her entire life in the same home. She was 72 years, 8 months and 19 days old. She was the daughter of Robert and Mary Ann Jones. She never married. She leaves to mourn their loss three brothers—John W., William M., and H. Luther Jones; three sisters—Mrs. Virginia S. Winston (widow of the late Rev. W. L. Winston), Mrs. L. P. Moss, and Miss Mollie Jones. One sister, Mrs. Laura Harris, preceded her in death; also two brothers, Benjamin and Tucker Jones, were killed in the Civil War. She was converted in early life and joined Pope's Chapel Christian Church and remained a member till death. She was a pious and faithful Christian. She was an industrious and charitable follower of Christ. She lived in the old Jones homestead with her brother, William. In this home many of the kindred, neighbors and friends loved to gather because of the kindness and friendliness of said members.

She was sick but a few days, and the dreaded "flu" did its work. She was buried in the family burying-ground on the old farm beneath beautiful flowers and in the presence of a large gathering of kindred and friends. Hymns of the old style were sung in the burial services.

In the absence of her pastor, Dr. D. A. Long, the services were conducted by the writer. Peace to her dust till the resurrection morn, and the comforting presence of Christ to the sorrowing brothers and sisters. JAS. L. FOSTER.

Elon College, N. C.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father, in His wisdom and mercy, has seen fit to call from our midst to the home prepared for those who love and serve Him, our beloved and faithful president, Mrs. Mollie T. Whitley; be it resolved:

1. That in the death of Mrs. Whitley the Ladies' Aid Society of Isle of Wight Christian Church, of which she was a charter member and president from the time of its organization until her death, has lost one of its oldest, most devout and loyal members. She was a willing, devoted leader, and to know her was to love her.

2. That while we cherish the memory of her, we bow in humble submission to our Heavenly Father's will, knowing that He doeth all things well.

3. That we extend to her children our most profound sympathy, and urge them to look to Him, who alone can comfort us in sorrow.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy be spread on the minutes of our society's record.

MRS. M. F. HALL,
MRS. J. R. ROBERTS,
MRS. CLARENCE EDWARDS,
Committee.

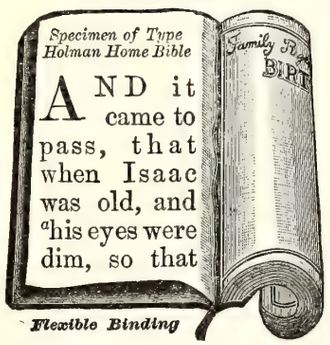
ELON COLLEGE---CO-EDUCATIONAL

WHITLEY AUDITORIUM BUILDING
One of the Group of Five New Buildings now Completed.

Elon, in her rebuilding program, has been looking to the future. Ten buildings, new and modern equipment, and a highly trained and efficient faculty are at the service of the future leaders of our Church. The phenomenal growth of Elon in the past two years indicates a larger growth throughout the whole denomination in the years just ahead. Make Elon your own Church College in a personal way by your patronage and prayerful co-operation.

HOLMAN BIBLES

For Old Folks and the Home
EXTRA LARGE PRINT WITH REFERENCES



Specimen of Type
Holman Home Bible
AND it came to pass, that when Isaac was old, and his eyes were dim, so that Family Record
BIBLE

Flexible Binding

Size when closed, 6½ x 9¼ inches

Printed from large Clear Pica Type, with Marginal References, Family Record and Maps. This HOME BIBLE is new and very desirable for every day use, containing all the advantages of a Family Bible in a compact size that can be easily handled, with Record for Births, Marriages and Deaths. The best Bible obtainable for old folks who need extra large clear print and a light-weight book.

No. 2014. Durably Bound in French Seal Leather, full flexible covers, round corners, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, gold titles.

Price—Post Paid.....4.85

HOLMAN BIBLES

NEW BLACK-FACED TYPE TEACHERS' BIBLE

The very latest and newest Teachers' Bible published, and it includes every possible improvement in Bible making. The type is a clean, clear, sharp Black Face, which is printed on the finest paper obtainable. Easy to read (can be read in the dimmest light), and is just the page for those suffering from impaired eyesight. Compact in size, light in weight, easy to carry.

Absolutely flexible binding. Contains Old and New Testaments, Treasury of Biblical Information, Practical Comparative Concordance, Oriental Light on the Bible, Four Thousand Questions and Answers, Fifteen New Maps in Colors, about 1500 pages in all.

Size, 5¼ x 7¾ inches.

Specimen of Type
THE LORD is my shephe not want.
2 He maketh me to lie green pastures: he leadeth the still waters.

No. 4412. Bound in Seal Grain Morocco, with overlapping covers, rounded corners, red under gold edges. Silk head bands and silk marker.

Price—Post Paid.....4.20

No. 433X. Holman India Paper. Algerian Morocco, Leather Lined, Silk Sewed, Divinity Circuit, round corners, carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and Helps as above.

Price—Post Paid.....9.35

MONEY TO LEND ON IMPROVED FARMS--FAVORABLE TERMS

Write for Details

SO. BOND & MORTGAGE CO.
627 E. Main St. - - Richmond, Va.

Medical College of Virginia

Medicine Dentistry
Pharmacy Nursing

New Buildings. Well-equipped Laboratories, under the direction of full-time, competent teachers.

The Memorial Hospital, Dooley Hospital, St. Philip Hospital, are owned and controlled by the Medical College of Virginia, and offer every facility for thorough clinical teaching.

Staffs composed of the Faculty of the College. Additional clinical facilities are offered through other institutions in Richmond.

For full information and catalogue, address—

J. R. McCAULEY, Secretary.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D.....Editor
W. W. STALEY, D. D.....Associate
W. A. HARPER, LL. D.....Associate
R. C. HELFENSTEIN, D. D...Associate
REV. S. C. HARRELL.....Associate
REV. S. M. LYNAM.....News Editor
P. J. KERNODLE....Managing Editor

Subscription Rates.

One Year $2.00
Six Months 1.00

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post-Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows the date of expiration. Please renew at least two weeks in advance.

Change of Address: Give both old and new post-office when asking that your address be changed.

When subscriptions are made for friends, state whether paper is to be stopped at end of the year.

Remittances: Make all remittances to "The Christian Sun," 1536 East Broad Street, Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and Marriage Notices, limited to 100 words, are published free of charge. All over 100 words, published at 1 cent a word. Remittance should accompany copy. Write names distinctly.

Advertising Rates: "Want Ads," 2 cents a word an insertion. Display Rates quoted upon request.

FOR SALE.

A 40-bbl., electric-driven, fully-equipped modern Flour Roller-Mill, Corn and Feed Mill, located right in the town of Elon College, near railroad siding, on acre lot; hard-surface and sand-clay roads leading out in all directions.. A good custom grain mill and good business opportunity for the right man, as well as advantage of a high-grade high school and high-class college.

Terms: Part cash; balance on long terms. Apply—

C. R. LOVE, - - BURLINGTON, N. C.

POWELL.

Mrs. Lucy Jane Powell, wife of the late J. W. Powell, was taken from her earthly home to the home prepared of the Lord on January 29, 1925. She had lived to a ripe age, and we believe was a true member of the family of God.

For many years she was a faithful member of the Wake Chapel Christian Church. In her latter years affliction kept her away from the house of worship. Her body was laid to rest in the Church bruying-ground, thus to await the resurrection. The services were conducted by the writer. God bless and comfort all that mourn, and prepare each one for a happy reunion in the glory.

J. LEE JOHNSON.

COLLIER.

Gussie Virginia, daughter of T. J. and Lula Collier, was born October 29, 1907, and departed this life January 20, 1925, age 17 years, 2 months and 22 days.

She leaves to mourn their loss a father, mother, three sisters—Sebreal, Nannie (Mrs. Owen Whitmore) and Maybelle—and one brother, Thomas. One sister, Mary (Mrs. W. F. Holmes), preceded her to the grave by about seven months.

She regularly attended her Sunday School until about four years ago, when she became so afflicted as to confine her to the home. She was very patient, and always wore a smile upon her face. Funeral services were conducted from the home by Rev. J. F. Osborne, of the M. E. Church, and the body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Spring Hill Christian Church.

The beautiful floral tribute showed the esteem and love with which she was held. May God bless and comfort the bereaved ones.

A FRIEND.

Dendron, Va.

OXFORD TEACHERS' BIBLES

An Oxford Teachers' Bible has references and 300 pages of helps that are a mine of information to Bible students. The helps are arranged in alphabetical order, like a dictionary. They are accurate, comprehensive and up-to-date. A few styles are listed here. Many others are described in our Bible catalogue, mailed upon request.

04403 [This size print] Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 6⅞ x 4¾ inches $4.00

0623x [Same Bible as 04403] Printed on Oxford India paper. Only 1 inch thick..... $6.00

04453 [This size print] French Morocco leather binding, overlapping covers, 7¼ x 5 in. $4.35

0773x [Same Bible as 04453] Printed on Oxford India paper. A remarkably thin and light Bible. (Only 1 inch thick) $7.75

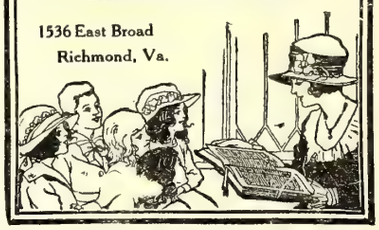
05453 [Same Bible as 04453] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $6.25

05453x [Same Bible as 0773x] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $8.75

04523 [This size print] A self-pronouncing Oxford Bible. Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 8½ x 5½ inches... $5.50

0923x [Same Bible as 04523] Printed on Oxford India paper, only 1⅛ inches thick... $9.75

ORDER FROM
"THE CHRISTIAN SUN"
1536 East Broad
Richmond, Va.



FOR GOOD HOME COOKING
MRS. COOK'S CAFETERIA
805 East Grace Street.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

A Co-Educational School

LOCATED AT

WADLEY, ALABAMA

This School offers the last two years of Academic work and the first two years of College work.

The following Courses are offered in the—

COLLEGE DEPARTMENT: English, Bible, Religious Education, Latin, French, History, Education, Mathematics and Science.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENTS: Music—Piano, Voice; Commercial Department—Bookkeeping, Typewriting, and Shorthand.

Due attention will be given Athletics, such as Tennis, Basket-Ball, Baseball, Football.

The government of the School is mild, but firm, endeavoring to create a home atmosphere as much as possible, not merely to maintain discipline, but to cultivate Christian character.

This is our own School, located within reach of all in this section, and the cost is less than any other College within reasonable distance of those who would attend School from this section.

Send for a Catalogue giving full description of Courses and entrance conditions.

S. L. BEOUGHER, President
Wadley, - - - - Alabama.

HOLMAN BIBLES

FOR CHILDREN
PICTORIAL BIBLES WITH HELPS

The text is self-pronouncing, by the aid of which children can learn to pronounce the difficult Scripture proper names.

Specimen of Type

27 And the boys grew: and E'sau was a cunning hunter.
5 And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof.

Size, 5⅜ x 3½ inches.

With beautiful photo views of scenes in Bible lands distributed throughout the text. Also maps of Bible lands in colors. Also new Practical Helps to Bible Study, especially designed for instructing children in scriptural information.

No. 9111. French Seal Leather, overlapping covers, round corners, gold edges, gold titles.

Our Price—Post Paid..... 2.30

COLORED PICTURE EDITION

Portraying in natural colors, scenes and places taken from nature and life in the Holy Land.

No. 9211. Same as No. 9111, but with Beautifully Colored Pictures.

Our Price—Post Paid..... 2.40

FOR INTERMEDIATE SUNDAY-SCHOOL SCHOLARS

Large Clear Black Type, Self-Pronouncing, containing Helps to Bible Study, 4000 Questions and Answers, Maps in Colors, and Presentation Page. A Beautiful Gift Bible.

Specimen of Type.

22 And the prophet Is'ra-el, and said unto thyself, and mark, and for at the return of t

Size, 7 x 5 inches.

No. 215. Divinity Circuit Style, Bound in French Seal Leather, round corners, red under gold edges, with silk head bands and purple silk marker, gold titles, etc.

Our Price—Post Paid..... 3.10

No. 3215RL. Red Letter Scholars' Bible, same Bible as No. 215, with all the Sayings of Christ printed in Red, and with Red and gold INLAID PANEL SIDE TITLES, also Beautifully Colored Pictures.

Our Price—Post Paid..... 3.45

Holman Self-Pronouncing

VEST POCKET TESTAMENTS

Clearest Print in Smallest Size

4⅝ x 2¾ x ⅝ inches

Specimen of Type.

AND the third day there was a marriage in Ca'na of Gal'i-lee; and the mother of Je'sus was

2133K. Bound in durable Morocco Grain Semble Leather, flexible limp, gilt titles ..... .60

2113. French Morocco, genuine leather, flexible limp, gold titles, rounded corners, gold edges..... .70

2115P. French Morocco, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, with the Book of Psalms included $1.10

ILLUSTRATED VEST POCKET TESTAMENT

With Pictures of Holy Land Scenes

2814. French Morocco, limp, gold side title round corners, red under gold edges ..... .85

RED LETTER VEST POCKET TESTAMENT

With all the words of our Lord printed in red.

13RL. French Morocco, flexible limp, gold side title on red panel, gold edges. .85

15RLP. French Morocco, overlapping covers, flexible, gold side title on red panel, red under gold edges, with Book of Psalms included $1.25

INDIA PAPER VEST POCKET TESTAMENT

Thin as a Wafer

2136XP. Fine Grain Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lined to edge, with Psalms included $2.25

Send Your Orders to
THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

HISTORICAL S) CIETY. 1956.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Official Organ of the Southern Christian Convention

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY. IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY. IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXVII. RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1925. NUMBER 8.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

Two Wedding Days.—

A Frenchman is privileged to have two wedding days, the civil and legal marriage preceding the Church wedding by twenty-four hours.

Clay's Estate Secured by Church.—

Olympian Springs, Ky., has been purchased by the Baptist Church, and will be used for a school for mountain pastors and students. The purchase consists of six hundred acres, and will be farmed by the students to assist in supporting the school. Olympian Springs at one time belonged to Henry Clay, and was lost by him in a game of cards, which makes us think that " somehow, good will be the final goal of ill."

Inaugural Plans Simplified.—

Announcement is made that the inaugural of President Coolidge will be severely simple. Many of the things at first planned by the inaugural committee have been changed, and the whole plan is being simplified. Mr. Coolidge is sticking strictly to his plan of economy. He is setting an example for the nation in his inauguration. There will be no court of honor, no stands along the way the parade will pass, and none of those things usually attendant upon the inauguration of a President.

Seemingly Ill-Fated.—

St. Luke's Hospital, the great Episcopal mission in Tokyo, Japan, is seemingly an ill-fated institution. During the great earthquake a little more than a year ago, the institution was practically destroyed. Reports now tell of a fire in its temporary quarters which destroyed the private wards, the operating room, the X-ray equipment, the kitchen and the laundry. An insurance will be collected, but not enough to replace the loss. An emergency fund is being raised for the institution by the Episcopal Church.

To Raise Memorial Fund.—

The Sunday Schools of all denominations will be asked to contribute to an interdenominational movement to raise funds to erect a memorial to Fannie J. Crosby. The committee is headed by Dr. S. Parkes Cadman. The memorial will take the form of a home for the aged and will be erected at Bridgeport, Conn. It was the great hymn-writer's wish that should any memorial to her work ever be erected it should take the form of a home for the aged. Fannie Crosby is the author of some 8,300 hymns, many of them among the best-loved hymns of all Churches. March 22d has been selected as the day on which to raise the funds for the memorial, since that day precedes the birthday of the writer. It is a fitting tribute, and fitting, too, that the Sunday Schools of the land and of every Church should erect this memorial to her.

Methodists Safeguard Easter.—

It has for years been the custom to make Easter a time for raising the budgets for the benevolent organizations of the Church. The boards of the Methodist Church have voted that this practice is to cease, and the Easter season is to be kept sacred to the memory of the resurrection of our Lord and the religious implications attached to it. Christmas and Thanksgiving are both times for money-raising. It does seem that at least one festival of the year should be kept free for the meditation upon the sacred things of faith. Programs and social interests are good, but when we think of the vast undertakings in these directions, and of the slights being accorded to the meditations of men and to the strictly spiritual interests of the world, we are made to wonder if it profits us. Sometimes we are inclined to think that we need to concern ourselves with the growing of our souls through meditation and prayer much more than we do, and that did we do it more, the programs and the social interests of the Church would be more adequately cared for.

Protestantism Retreating.—

Time was when New England was renowned for the strength of Protestantism, but, according to an article in a recent issue of Missions, New England is no longer a stronghold of Protestantism. Only 16.4 per cent of the present population of New England are members of the Protestant Church, while 32.95 per cent are members of the Roman Catholic Church, and 50 per cent have no Church affiliation at all. The larger portion of this latter number come from European countries, where there is a strong prejudice against all that savors of Romanism and of State churchianity. These people are settling on the farms and are working in the mills of old New England, and their children are matches for those of native New Englanders in the schools, while commercial, industrial, political and social institutions are welcoming them to place and power. This situation presents a genuine problem to the people of America, and one which must shortly be solved, else we lose, and heavily too, for should the foundation of religion underlying our government and our institutions crumble, a collapse would be inevitable.

Act of Genuine Christianity.—

In genuine Christianity one is inclined to think that the foreign field is ahead of the home base. We read of the constantly increasing union among Christians on the foreign field, and of helpful co-operation which has not been achieved at home. Announcement is made of the formation of the United Church of North India. There has been a United Church of South India for a number of years composed of the union of Presbyterians, Congregationalists and some Methodist body. The United Church of North India is made up of Presbyterians, Congregationalists and Calvinistic Methodists. Also reports state that the Sunday Schools of three leading denominations in Japan have agreed to co-operate in the publication of a magazine for the Sunday School teachers and workers of Japan. The new periodical will have most of the talent in the Christian ranks contributing to its columns, and it will contain ninety pages in each issue. Six denominations are operating a distribution of religious literature in Korea, and these denominations are seeking sixty thousand dollars to enlarge this work. There is much for the American Church to learn from the foreign field when it comes to Church unity and Church co-operation.

Endowment for the Berry Schools.—

On a recent visit to Atlanta, Mr. Adolph Ochs, the publisher of the New York Times, agreed to raise one million dollars as an endowment for the Berry Schools, provided Georgians would raise the first hundred thousand. Immediately Asa G. Candler, Jr., agreed to match every dollar given by other Georgians up to fifty thousand. The remaining fifty thousand is being subscribed without solicitation, $11,900 having been subscribed. The Berry Schools are situated about three miles from Rome, Ga. The school was founded by Miss Martha Berry for the education of mountain boys and girls in 1902. The thing which makes the school a peculiar one is that no student is admitted who has money enough to go elsewhere. Miss Berry founded the school, and to it she has given the best part of her life. She maintained the institution from her personal income until it grew so large that it absorbed that source of support. Since then she has kept the work going by annual soliciting campaigns. The time has come when Miss Berry's personal strength will no longer permit her to do that, and Mr. Ochs' offer came as a rescue to the school. Mr. Ochs stated that if his proposition were met, the one million dollars would be handed over to Miss Berry by or before the twenty-fifth anniversary of the school in 1927.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Your attention is called to the mission study books and supplies advertised in THE SUN.

When the editor shall learn what the Chapel Hill Christian Church has done—putting THE SUN into every family—we see a gracious smile spreading itself all over his face from ear to ear. His heart is no less appreciative than ours.

Dr. W. H. Denison preached both morning and evening at the First Christian Church, Richmond, Va., last Sunday. Besides delivering an address before the Sunday School in the morning, he conducted an institute in the Church at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

"The Christian Annual" of the Southern Christian Convention, just issued, reveals a steady growth in the number of members and in financial strength. It contains the proceedings of the Conferences, missionary conferences, and woman's conferences.

In the next issue of THE SUN a list of Sunday School supplies will be presented, including lesson stories for children, picture cards illustrating the Uniform and Group Graded Lessons, and general supplies and equipments. These will include literature adapted to the beginners' grade, primary, junior, intermediate and senior departments.

A good sister, Mrs. B. W. Fields, Reidsville, N. C., one of our enlisted tithers, by the way, and one whose sense of duty to her Church and her God leads her to a loving and loyal liberality to our mission work, and who had subscribed $100, in sending the final payment, adds: "Inclosed you will find $10.00 on my mission pledge. I am sorry I have kept you waiting so long. However, I am glad I can pay it now. I wish I had words to tell you what a pleasure this $100 has been to me. It has brought me more joy than any other thing I have invested any money in."

Rev. B. J. Howard, pastor of the Christian Church at Chapel Hill, N. C., is to be congratulated. Undoubtedly, he has weight with his congregation, and is supported by a loyal band of Christian workers. Why these few words of appreciation thus spoken? This Church is the first to set the pace. Beginning with the first of February, 1925, THE CHRISTIAN SUN is a welcome visitor to every home of the congregation. Every family connected with the Church is a subscriber to THE SUN. This was accomplished through a special committee or board of Church literature, of which Miss Naomi Long is the secretary. If an honor roll shall be made, Chapel Hill Christian Church has placed itself at the head of the column.

A copy of the bulletin for February 8, 1925, issued by First Christian Church, Norfolk, Va., Rev. John G. Truitt, 129 Hardy Avenue, pastor, has fallen into our hands, and among other very interesting items we find the following: "Our Church is doing things. Are you helping her? One girl—a stenographer—is contributing more than $2.50 per Sunday; a sales' girl gives more than $1.00 for herself and $1.00 for her mother each week; a tubercular patient, who is one of God's saints, gives one-tenth, or more than $3.00, per Sunday to the Church. The largest giver in this Church, according to up-to-date official records, is a bookkeeper who has no home of her own, bears all of her own expenses of every kind, gives freely outside of the Church, enjoys life, and saves a substantial little amount each week, and yet does not receive a large salary. She is a Christian by actual practice. Will you do your share, be it big or little?"

The map which served to inspire the voyage of Columbus to the new world is carefully stowed away in a wooden box, less than a yard long, in the National Library in Paris. It is a hand-painted chart of the design known as "Planisphere," which means the representation of the circles of the sphere on a plane; especially a projection of the celestial sphere and the stars on a plane passing through the Arctic or the Antarctic circle. This map is believed to have been presented to King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella by Columbus when he went to Spain in 1491 and asked for vessels with which to cross the Atlantic. The map was bought for $50 in 1849 at a sale of books, and today is estimated to be worth many thousands of dollars. In spite of this, one wonders why some effort has not been made to bring it to America, for that hand-painted chart was the real charter of world expansion and of the universal liberty which we enjoy today.

CONSECRATION.

"The Christian who consecrates himself to Christ acts on his own impulse and choice. Duty drives, but Christ draws. He attracts men to Him, and consecration is the preparation they make in order to keep company with Him. No finer fellowship and no more fruitful association is possible. He is our superior, and we must defer to His wisdom and His will. He knows our talents and attainments, and also our shortcomings, but He never loses regard for us while we are really responsive to Him."—Lawrence Keister, D. D.

YOU KNOW THIS BOY.

He isn't happy. He doesn't want to go to school. He is playing around in bad company. His family doesn't understand or sympathize with him. Taken all around, the world looks dark to him, and he is in danger of being lost in its mazes. The boy you know maynot be troubled in all these ways, but he certainly is in some of them. Tell us his name, address, age and something about him. We have several successful business men whose names are known all over the country and who love boys, who will be glad to be his friend and confidant by mail. They will exchange letters with him and try to straighten out his mind and give him a new outlook. We also have a group of wonderful women who want to do the same thing for girls who need sympathetic attention.

ILAMA FOR BREAKFAST.

Many fruits may soon adorn American breakfast tables.

Although the ilama, marang, mangosteen, zarda melon, carabaos, paradisiaca plantain, itzabnas, and a dozen other delicious fruits are now unknown to most Americans, they may be in general use here within twenty-five years, says the Department of Agriculture.

These particular fruits are now being introduced by the bureau of plant industry, and efforts will be made to make them available to the American market. They are now confined to out-of-the-way sections of the world, mostly tropical.

Mangosteen is an Oriental fruit of remarkable deliciousness. It is a large, reddish-brown, thick-skinned fruit, with the meat arranged somewhat like that of the orange. Its flavor is halfway between those of the peach and pineapple.

The ilama, which grows in the foothills of southern Mexico, is closely related to the sugar apple. The marang comes from the Philippines. It is oblong in form with soft, greenish-yellow spines. The entire fruit is separated into segments that are about the size of grapes, and these segments cling to the core.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT SALEM.

A Christian Endeavor Society was organized at Salem Chapel Christian Church Sunday morning, February 1st.

Rev. P. Fred Wright, pastor of the Church, was present and was assisted in organizing by Mr. R. M. Hook, of Elon College. After a short talk by Mr. Wright, the installation service was taken in charge by Mr. Hook, who spoke quite inspiringly on the purpose and value of Christian Endeavor work in the Churches.

The oath of office was then administered to the following officers by Mr. Hook: president, Miss Frankye Marshall; vice-president, Mr. Oscar Gerry; secretary, Miss Selma Marshall; treasurer, Miss Myrtle Pair; corresponding secretary, Miss Ethel Reid.

These officers, as well as a goodly number of members, are determined to make the new society grow and be of great service to the Church.

MISS FRANKYE MARSHALL.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR DOINGS.

Mr. Pressley Ingram, secretary of the Christian Endeavor Society at Bethlehem College, Wadley, Ala., writes that they have over forty members enrolled and that the Christian Endeavor Society is one of the most active organizations in the college. They meet on Wednesday evenings for the convenience of the boarding-students who go home week-ends.

Mr. Ingram also writes that he is planning to attend the Chautauqua at the college next summer. How many other young people are already planning to come?

The Christian Endeavor Society of the First Church, Richmond, Va., recently held an anniversary service. The regular Sunday evening was given over to this meeting, and a special program rendered. This is a good suggestion for other societies.

If you are planning a Christian Endeavor social or special meeting and desire help, please write me personally, and I shall be glad to help you.

PATTIE COGHILL.

AFTER THE SERMON.

"A candle is my God to me,
A little candle in my hand,
A little light by which I see
Which way to step and where to stand."

These words I heard the other day,
They pierced my heart and entered there;
Whatever else he had to say,
I did not hear; I did not care.

I carried home that lovely thought,
I made it mine, for mine own need,
And out of it I quickly wrought
A living truth for me to heed.

I am not strong, I am not wise,
The road is difficult and dark;
A little candle for dim eyes,
And for my feet a God-lit spark!

"A candle is my God to me."
I thank the preacher for this phrase.
A candle, too, my God shall be—
Sufficient light for darksome ways!

—Sheila Rand in British Weekly.

THE YOUNGER GENERATION.

How is it with our boys and girls, our young men and women? The question has become an anxious one throughout the land. The young themselves begin to feel the perturbation which they cause in their elders. The elders, on their side, begin to wonder whether they are rightly judging their young. Thus, it emerges that the two generations are conscious of their being two peoples, and they seek the reason for it.

It follows that children whose playthings are the miracles of motion pictures and radio, who can take a ride in the sky more easily than their forebears could procure a ride in a train, are bound to be somewhat different.

The long approach to mystery and reality has been greatly shortened, in its more superficial aspects, for the young. Some of the reticences which we formerly deemed the mark of rectitude have disappeared, but we catch ourselves with a subtle misgiving when we conclude from this that with the reticence has disappeared the rectitude also. We cannot believe that. One mark of the younger generation is frankness, and this coexists with natural decency. The younger group talk more freely perhaps than its elders did, but that this results in looser conduct has not been proved. The younger group dallies with philosophies which would mean ruin if the poison really took effect, but it seldom does; the young, no matter what their airs may be, are not philosophers. They have pretended to dump overboard some of the old reverences, but it is mostly pretense, inasmuch as one cannot get rid of what one never possessed, and reverence may be a thing pretended rather than consciously possessed by younger minds.—Dearborn Independent.

THE HIDDEN HAND IN EGYPT.

Behind the unexpected and sensational occurrences that upset the world, there is usually a hidden purpose. The average report records the event without shedding much light upon it. The intelligent reader is never really satisfied that these events are of individual origin or for personal purposes.

The intelligent reader is particularly right in regard to those events which from time to time rob the world of some of its best men. The hand of the fanatical assassin is usually the instrument of some hidden plot. In this way, America lost a Lincoln—whose death appears to have been desired on more than military or political grounds—and Europe some of its greatest statesmen.

The Patriot, a British magazine, cites the recent shooting of Sir Lee Stack, the sirdar of Egypt, in the streets of Cairo, as an instance of the power of "the hidden hand." The Morning Post, advancing the same idea, says: "The question now animating Cairo is, 'Who is maintaining this gang? Who is instigating the fanatical youths to commit these crimes?'" The Patriot gives a brief history of a secret organization known as the "Clarte," which is described as an "internationale of intellectual Bolsheviks," on the committees of which are to be found leading members of the Zionist movement. It is pointed out that "when a branch (of the Clarte) was formed in Egypt, its direction was placed in the hands of a well-known Jewish Communist and agent of the Soviet government there. Of the Egyptian Council of Five, three were Jews"—a German Jew, an Italian Jew and a Russian Jew.

The Patriot concludes with the following, received from one of its correspondents:

"Among the Bolshevist agents stirring up sedition in Egypt, Jews, as everywhere else, are playing the most important part. 'One of these, the Hebrew who has himself called Rose, but whose name is Abraham Rosenstein, has been arrested and expelled; as also another Hebrew, Salomon Saslawski, and a third. But, for three who depart, a hundred remain.'"

There is in every country, at the present moment, an element whose object is to subvert laws and undermine constitutions. This element is composed of men who own no nation and belong to no nation. They are the foci of the next outbreak which will occur in the Orient, involve all powers, and definitely settle some matters that will not yield to reason.—Dearborn Independent.

When Washington declined a military escort on the occasion of his inauguration (1789), he said, "I require no guard but the affections of the people."—Edward Everett.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The Illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the Number and prices.

TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Minion Bold-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4 7-8x 7 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

India Paper Edition, Size 4 7-8x7 Inches, 1 1-10 Inches Thick.

2152X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$6.00

Bourgeois Type, Size 5 3-8x8 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2167—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.00

2172—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.50

India Paper Edition, Only 1 1-8 Inches Thick.

2172X—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$8.50

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3¾x5⅝ inches, and 1 inch thick; with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black.

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations. Special book for Sunday Schools 95c

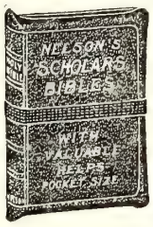
Ruby Type, Size 3¾x5⅝ Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps $2.50

Minion Type, Pocket Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ inches Thick.

With 32 full-colored illustrations; also 25 outline maps through the text and 12 colored maps.

133—Bound in cloth, round corners, red edges, title stamped on side in pure gold $1.60



135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 15-16 of an Inch Thick.

135X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.75

Minion Black-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4¾x 7 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick.

Printed from clear, large, black-face type, 32 full-page illustrations in Sepia and colors, 4,000 Questions and Answers, Harmony of the Gospels, How to Study the Sunday School Lesson, 25 outline Maps, 12 full-page colored Maps.

4152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold.....$3.25

TEXT BIBLES—AMERICAN STANDARD VERSION.

Printed from Easy-Reading Type, on Good Bible Paper, for Sunday School and Church Use.

Minion Type, Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick, 25 Outline Maps, Bound in Black.

101—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, title stamped on back in pure gold..$1.10

112—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title on back in pure gold $2.75

India Paper Edition, Only 7/8-Inch Thick.

112X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

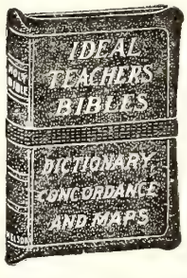
Reference and Text Bibles also in minion, brevier, bourgeois, long primer, pica and English type.

Thumb index cut on edge, 50c extra; name printed on any Bible in gold, 40c extra; extra wording, 40c per line.

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (v vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3-8x 8 1-2 Inches and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.



Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With concise Bible dictionary, combined concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.75

RED LETTER EDITION

With all the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

rocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands, title stamped on side and back in pure gold $3.25

1282—Genuine Leather, Mo-

Any of the above Bibles sent post paid. Address

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street, - - - Richmond, Va.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR.

J. O. ATKINSON, Elon College, N. C.

Contributing Editors.

W. W. STALEY W. A. HARPER
R. C. HELFENSTEIN S. C. HARRELL

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

STEWARDSHIP INSTITUTES.

The stewardship institutes, beginning at the Greensboro First Church on Wednesday, February 4th, and closing at Richmond First Church Sunday, February 15th, were well attended, and from the interest manifested seemed invaluable and exceedingly worthwhile. Some twenty-five pastors in North Carolina and fifteen or more in Virginia attended one or another, and in some instances two of these institutes. Then, leading laymen and women deeply interested in the progress of the Church and the development of the stewardship idea in the Church were in attendance. The pastor at each Church where the institute was held was in attendance throughout and had put forth effort not only to make the day of the institute agreeable and successful, but had sought to increase their attendance both from his local congregation and from congregations composing the group about his Church.

The ladies of the Church were exceedingly gracious, hospitable and helpful. Acting upon the mere suggestion of the occasion, without urgency or request, they prepared luncheons at the Church, and where it was deemed worthwhile served supper also. This was indeed a great help, as it gave an opportunity of delightful fellowship and saved much time for the work.

The institutes, as they came to a close, were spoken of in highest commendation in almost every instance by the pastor in charge and by others attending. As was so often explained by Dr. Denison, Stewardship Secretary of the General Convention, the denominations are realizing, not only the need of stewardship teaching and preaching and practicing in the Church, but of putting forth far-reaching and tireless efforts to bring this vital biblical teaching home to the hearts of the people. We shall have to teach stewardship and preach stewardship more in the coming weeks and months and years than we have in the past because in this latter day God has wisely revealed, as He always does reveal, His divine plan for dealing with and properly solving situations as they occur. We are living in a time when the best business methods are being applied to industry. Industry becomes more complex and more engaging and more absorbing. To meet this growing demand, men are using their best possible ability to render service in the industrial world.

Likewise, the Church—that institution which has been given the high commission to enlarge the kingdom of our Lord—grows in complexity and multiplies in the multitude of its duties, obligations and tasks. Time was when financing the Church was a very simple matter, just like financing the farm or the shop was a simple matter. But in our day, neither is a simple matter. The Church, like the farm and the factory, has broadened its scope and multiplied its activities and its outlook. All that was necessary in the days far gone to finance the Church was to look after the expense and the upkeep for a preaching service and the house in which to have it once per month. There was no Sunday School to look after, no Christian Endeavor, no Orphanage, no Christian educational institutions, no missions (home or foreign), no Church paper, no co-operative effort to care for the aged and infirm, nor the fatherless and motherless.

In our day, all these have been brought into the scope of the Church as being institutions, essential to the building up of the kingdom of God on earth. To seek to meet the demands of this ever-increasing and complex activity in kingdom building, it is inconceivable that ancient methods and ancient attitudes towards financing the kingdom and carrying on the work of the kingdom can be employed. A congregation can no more meet the demands of the growth of the kingdom of our Lord at the present time with the use of outworn and outgrown and inefficient financial methods than a modern bank can meet the demands of its growing business without using adding machines and other devices which the inventions of man and the grace of God have supplied in our day. The wisdom of God has directed and is directing the mind and the heart of the Church to that sense of stewardship taught in His Word from Genesis to Revelation, and to a large degree not developed until now, because never needed as now. God ever deals with His world in this way. Coal and oil and gas waited in the bosom of the earth for our day, created and put there by the power of an all-wise God, and in the wisdom and benevolence of our Creator until they are needed to supply the multiplying needs and the growing demands of an increasing and ever-growing population.

Stewardship is not a thought read into the Bible nor a scheme devised by designating theologues, but the plain teachings of the Word of God, ready now to yield her riches and her infinite resources in the very time when the demands of a growing and multiplying kingdom of our Lord requires it.

Fortunate indeed were the pastors and people who got the expert counsel and knowledge given by Dr. Denison, who, as Stewardship Secretary, is seeking to bring to the mind and lay upon the hearts of our people a most sagacious program and a divine plan of carrying on kingdom's service.

ANCESTRAL WORSHIP.

In China they practice the worship of ancestors. This is counted idolatry in China. In America, even in many Christian Churches, we also practice ancestral worship. One wonders if another term than idolatry is to be applied to this practice in a Christian land. One is not thinking of an adulterated form of ancestral worship, but the genuine article. The pity of the situation in Christian lands is that the people are not candid with themselves to acknowledge that it is idolatry, but without any hesitation call it idolatry in China.

Very frequently an anxious pastor, in a city or town where there is a Christian Church, asks a member of a Christian Church why he does not unite with the Church in the city or vicinity in which he now resides. Very frequently his reply is, "My father and my mother were members of the old Church at home and are buried in its cemetery. Out of respect to their memory, I want to hold my membership in their Church as long as I live." Such a person should not even claim membership in the old home Church, but flatly and frankly acknowledge that he belongs to the graveyard of the old Church. By his confession, it is the dead, not the living, that is holding him, and that his professed veneration for the dead ties him to a dead past and prevents him from living duties, privileges and obligations.

It is indeed pitiful to hear pastors on all sides declaring that they are trying to build up a Christian Church in a town or city to which many members of Christian Churches in remote or outlying districts have moved, not carrying their membership nor giving their co-operation and endeavor. We know communities now where there might and should be strong Christian Churches, but there are only struggling and small Churches for no other reason than that members of the Christian denomination who live in the town or city will not give countenance, support and co-operation. Those not members of any Church look on with indifference, wonder, and unwillingness, at the members of the Church who live in the vicinity, but will take no active part in building up the local Church and their denomination.

Ancestral worship, called idolatry in China and practiced in the name of the cemetery at home, is deplorable evil which a Christian system must struggle with at home and abroad, and, through struggle and by the grace of God, do the work of the kingdom.

ATHEISM IN COLLEGES.

In view of the talk which finds vent in certain quarters of America to the effect that atheism is encouraged by the advanced studies in the nation's colleges, it is inspiring to hear that the Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick stated the other day, in New York, that a far greater proportion of the students in American colleges today are religious than was the case a century and a half ago. He was referring to a recent visit to Harvard, and he spoke of the "splendid, bewildering, adventurous, hopeful new generation." That is just the point. There is a spirit of investigation in the atmosphere.

Students no longer take unquestioningly what their elders have handed down to them, in politics, religion or other vital matters. Rather, they subject such opinions to the crucible of their own thinking. But this does not mean that they are less religious, in the best sense of the term. It is well that there is less of the blind leading the blind than there was, for this means that there is more intelligent leading and following.

The oldest public document ever presented in the courts of Queens County, N. Y., so it is said, was a deed dated August 16, 1685, recently brought into the courts to settle a land dispute.

THE FORGOTTEN JOY OF RELIGION.

By Dr. R. J. Campbell.

(Dr. Campbell is vicar of Christ Church, Westminster. His father and grandfather were both nonconformist ministers, Ulster Protestants of Scottish extraction. His preaching ability is not accidental.—The Editors.)

"The kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost."—Rom. 14:17.

The question to which these words immediately refer was one of temporary and local importance. There seems to have been a good deal of difference of opinion in the early Church concerning the keeping of the Lord's Day, the lawfulness of eating meat offered to idols, and other things of a similar character which are not held to be of importance now. The apostle, in a spirit of wide tolerance, tells his fellow-Christians that material things and usages are only of value as the vehicles and instruments of spiritual values; "for the kingdom of God," he says, "is not eating and drinking, but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost."

No doubt, he means us to understand that eating and drinking have something to do with it, but that the kingdom of God is not to be thought of primarily under these aspects. These are good only and in so far as they provide scope for the spiritual experience here designated as righteousness and peace and joy. When we remember that to the primitive Church the kingdom of God was not only an ideal state, but also something very real and tangible, nothing less than a rejuvenated creation, a reconstituted human society, these words have for us an added force. St. Paul and his contemporaries never thought of the kingdom of God as something that could be divorced entirely from human relations. They never thought of it as having nothing to do with human social institutions. When, therefore, the apostle says that it denotes a spiritual experience first and foremost, we ought to give the more heed to his words.

We live in a time when this apostolic exhortation needs to be reaffirmed with authority and power. For in the world of today, and in no country more than our own, men generally are making the mistake of reversing the order of interest and experience so plainly and authoritatively set forth in these venerable terms. What is called the social gospel, for instance, is made to take precedence of everything else, both within the Church and out of it. We need have no quarrel with the social gospel, we need not less of it, but more; but when it occupies the whole foreground of human thought and attention in our troubled and storm-tossed age, a warning seems to be called for. We need to be reminded once more that the highest and most precious things in life are not those that have to do with what we shall eat, and what we shall drink, and wherewithal we shall be clothed. These have their necessary place, a place from which they will never be dislodged while the world lasts and human nature remains what it is; there is no danger of mankind underestimating their importance in the scheme of things. Our danger is of quite another kind. It is that we all too readily tend to view material good as an end in itself and not as the vehicle and instrument of spiritual values.

This is the root trouble of civilization today. Some of the developments of the social movement, as it is called, especially on the Continent, have been distinctly hostile to religion in any and every form, and, especially perhaps in Russia, have become identified with a bad and cruel spirit which has already caused much suffering and is likely to cause much more before its reign comes to an end. At the best, in our own land, as well as elsewhere, triumphant social democracy is too greatly possessed by the conviction that the cure of all human ills is to be sought in economic readjustments rather than in a change of heart. There are those among the unprivileged, and perhaps we can hardly wonder at it, who scorn the suggestion that they should take account of a good which is not wholly of this world. They are so dominated by the desire of making this world a more habitable place and so indignant with what they suppose to be the calculated selfishness of those who would postpone the complete fulfillment of the desire for well-being to the next, that they can hardly listen with patience to any suggestion that there may be a next at all. As to whether there is anything worth having in religious experience for is own sake and apart from material considerations, they neither know nor care. The gospel of the Churches, they believe, is, for the most part, a comfortable class doctrine; it does not touch the masses, for the simple reason, so we are assured, that it is devised in the main for the benefit of those who are already possessed of a sufficient amount of material possessions to enable them to receive and profit by it.

It was not always so in the history of our country, and the change has been so recent that most of us have lost sight of its significance. In the Hibert Journal, for instance, Principal J. W. Graham, writing on the tercentenary of George Fox, says: "Something has gone from the nation since the time of the protectorate and the restoration. Particularly has the religious power of the countryside faded. I cannot conceive any movement now laying hold on the gentry and farmers, the shopkeepers and the laborers of North Lancashire and Westmoreland, sending them to convert London and Bristol and the colonies overseas, to a faith which led them to abandon all their most sacred associations in Church and sacrament, to take the Bible in a new way, and, in reliance on the indwelling God, to go to prison, exile or death with joy and newness of life." In the same article he adds: "The early friends spoke to people who had hardly any competing interests. The Puritans did not know about Shakespeare; there were no novels, no magazines, no newspapers. There was no science and no British empire. Foreign politics, concerning Holland and Spain, were religious issues. Serious-minded people gave their attention chiefly to the newly translated Bible. There were no football matches. The sporting world and the financial world hardly existed. There was little art outside Churches, and hardly any foreign touring, indeed very little home travel either."

This is the simple truth about the matter, and one need hardly look further in order to understand the inwardness of the situation in regard to the place of religion in the common life of today. Men's thoughts are turned outwards to an extent that they never were before, and as an Anglican writer of our time has recently put it, in referring to the same change of mind which characterizes our whole race and the civilization to which we belong, "It is more and more coming to be recognized that man's chief good is bound up with his secular interests and with nothing else." It is not too much to say that the outstanding characteristic of modern industrial civilization is the almost invincible assumption it makes that man's chief good is to be sought in ameliorating the conditions under which he has to live his life in this world. This is the chief preoccupation, not only of politicians and social reformers on the one hand, and of organized labor on the other, but of the community at large. Mr. Bertrand Russell, one of the acutest thinkers of our time, and no friend to Christianity, thus writes: "Industrial populations everywhere are tending to irreligion and materialism, and the chief reason for this state of things is that the welfare of the wage-earners is more and more dependent upon human agencies and less upon natural causes than with people whose manner of life is more primitive." Finally, in the same series let me cite a Roman Catholic writer, Christopher Dawson, in "God and the Supernatural": "This modern indifferentism is due, not so much to any philosophic theory as to the material triumphs of modern civilization and man's conquest of nature; this has reacted upon man himself. The realm of mystery, before which he feels himself humble and weak, has withdrawn its frontiers; he can know his world now without falling back, or so he thinks, upon revelation. He can live his life without feeling his utter dependence upon supernatural powers." Then he piquantly adds: "Yet, if man so limits himself to a satisfied animal existence and asks from life only what such an existence can give, the higher values of life at once disappear. It is from this very element of the eternal and unlimited which the materialist in practice seeks to deny that the true progress of the human race has sprung."

Here we touch the main issue, the heart of the matter, in any attempt to come to close quarters with the question of how best to relate human nature as we know it to religion, properly so-called, today. It is surely an undeniable psychological fact that there is a peculiar exaltation of spirit associated with religious experience at its best, which is like nothing else on earth, and which enlarges and dignifies the whole nature of the man or woman possessed and governed by it. There is no other experience which can for a moment be compared with it. One does not know how best to describe it, but no one can mistake it, once it is really present. Shall we say it is the touch of the eternal, the transcendental transforming our meager cloddy earth to glittering gold? In itself it is not morality, though it presumes the moral ideal. The claim is often made that man can be as ethically earnest and upright without religion as with it, and we may agree with the statement so far as to say that if there were no religion to be taken into account, no immortality, no God, and no future, we should still have to have a morality of some kind if society is to hold together. But no naturalistic, no utilitarian theory of morals has ever yet been able to produce the finest fruits of human character; it takes the touch of the eternal to do that. "Not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law—any law—but the righteousness which is of God by faith." Religion is something more than ethics. It is the evidence of things not seen, commerce with the eternal and divine.

Social enthusiasts sometimes denounce it as a kind of anaesthetic, deadening the susceptibilities of miserable fools, and rendering them unaware of their true condition. One has heard it denounced as self-hypnotism, a narcotic, a kind of drug blinding those that are under its spell to the truly horrible facts of life. Once make a man religious—so I once heard a politician say—and you have rendered him useless for all practical purposes. He no longer things about improving his world, he forgets it and begins star-gazing.

The assumption behind all this kind of criticism is that there is no real foundation for the experience of the religious votary, that the joy that fills his heart is nothing but a dream, and that it would be a good deal better if he could be persuaded to have done with dreams and ad-

(Concluded on page 9.)

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Human differences are relative, and often imaginary. The ratio of human life is a fixed quantity. "The rich and the poor meet together; the Lord is the Maker of them all." When vessels are full, that is all that can be said. There may be large vessels and small, but if they could feel they would have the same enjoyment and be of the same use. In a great water system, the small pipes perform their part as well as the great pipes. The same is true of wheels. The little wheels do their work as faithfully and successfully as the large wheels. A wheel is a wheel, and nothing more. Great men and small men have their place, perform their task, and receive their reward. Human experience is the same in all. Where there is greater capacity, it can be no more than satisfied. All men have the chance. All men share in the common lot of all. This common condition equalizes all races of men. Each race has its own characteristics, its own opportunities, and its own obligations. "Where much is given, much is required." It is just as easy for one man to do what he ought as it is for another. The Constitution is right—"all men are born equal"; that is, with equal inherent rights, equal obligations to fill his place, and equal chances to live his life.

Human happiness would be greatly increased if imaginary inequalities did not beget envy in the human heart. The spring branch from the hillside spring fills its place as truly as the great river. It is not as large, but it is just as worthy of its place among the streams. The eagle does not enjoy his meal any more than the sparrow, nor does the man than the child. The man in the big hotel does not enjoy his dinner any more than the man with his tin-bucket lunch in the logwoods. It is a mistake to suppose that one man can be happier or more useful than another. Sleep is sweet to all. Music is enjoyed according to capacity, and each has his full.

The simple Christian who can hardly read the Word of God has the "joy of the Lord" as well as the great scholar who trusts in God. Soul-capacity, like bodily capacity or mind capacity, can enjoy hope in the degree of experience. Even a child can believe and love. It would ruin the garden if the flowers were to envy one another. Each has its own beauty, its own fragrance and its own place in that garden of beauty. Human society is made up of parts, and all those individuals are made in the image of God.

As men can fill their places in the great world of work and be useful in any true sphere, so Christians can be useful and happy in the place in the kingdom to which God calls them. The soprano should not envy the tenor, nor the alto the base. They are parts of one hymn of praise. No man can say which is best. The pew is as great as the pulpit, and the laymen as important as the minister. It takes all the bricks in the wall to make the house, and all the Christians in the congregations to make the Church. The man who sets the type is as important as the man who writes the editorial. One man who fills his place is as useful as any other who fills his place, though one may be President and the other a guard at the gate. All can be good, and all can be great.

W. W. STALEY.

ELON LETTER.

February is the birth-month of three great Americans—Washington, Lincoln, and Lee. Much is said and written about Washington and Lincoln. In this letter I wish to say three things about the great, the beloved Lee.

General Lee said that duty is the sublimest word in the English language. He lived that concept in his own splendid life. He was a man that never considered the consequences of a course of action except in terms of his duty, and duty for him was always conceived as related to Christian standards and ethics.

The Civil War left him impaired in fortune. The authorities of the Louisiana Lottery learned this, and thought to bolster up their cause as well as help the general get on his feet financially by securing from him permission to use his name as an officer of the company, paying him $10,000 a year for his influence. His reply is one of the bright spots in the history of the country. "I have nothing but my good name left," replied the defeated commanding general of the Confederate Army, "but that is not for sale."

During the progress of the Civil War, General Lee was very much criticised by Whiting, a brilliant man, who had led his classes at the military academy and was jealous of Lee. Whiting lost no opportunity to nag, belittle and slander the great general. President Davis once questioned Lee in the presence of his staff as to Whiting's ability. "He is a splendid man," declared Lee; "one of the bravest men in the country and of excellent judgment." After the interview, Lee's staff remonstrated with him, telling him how Whiting had maligned him and that he had lost the chance to get even. Lee's answer is immortal: "President Davis did not seek to know Whiting's estimate of me, but my estimate of him."

No wonder Lee's soldiers loved him. No wonder his military opponents had greatest admiration for him. No wonder Lee is become a national, a world figure because of his sterling worth and strength of character. His cause was lost, but his character is an inspiration to the aspiring manhood and womanhood of the world.

W. A. HARPER.

GREAT SCIENTIST BELIEVES IN BIBLE.

Can a really scientific man believe the Bible? Dr. Howard A. Kelly is entitled to answer. His scientific record and standing today are equaled by few living men. After a brilliant career as professor of gynecology at Johns Hopkins University and surgeon of world-wide reputation, he is now giving himself to special research while continuing as emeritus professor at Johns Hopkins and conducting his personal practice. With degrees from several universities, including aberdeen and Pennsylvania, Dr. Kelly has been honored by scientific societies throughout the civilized world, is an authority on radium, and is honorary curator in the division of reptiles and amphibians of the University of Michigan. He is an honored member of scientific or medical societies in Scotland, Ireland, Italy, Germany, France, Roumania, and Russia. He is the author of standard works in surgery and medicine, and of hundreds of articles in medical journals.

And Dr. Kelly believes the Bible, because he has tested it in rigidly scientific ways and finds that it meets every test. "I have never in my whole life met a man who really knew the Bible and rejected it," he says. He gives from one to four hours a day to his own Bible study. He conducts a large Bible class every Sunday in Baltimore.

Some years ago he was seriously troubled by the higher criticism. Then he studied his way out of it by making the Bible his textbook of religion exactly as he would use any textbook in science. Today he knows that the whole Bible is the very Word of God, and its every precious doctrine vital to life and happiness.

The full, personal, intimate, autobiographical testimony of such a scientist is needed today as never before. The Science League of America, recently formed, is denouncing the Bible and saying that science alone is the "saviour of mankind." It declares: "We must have a confidence in the natural that will not leave room for one iot or tittle of faith in the supernatural." Dr. Kelly knows otherwise. At the invitation of the Sunday School Times, he is preparing for that journal his own full confession of faith. He will begin by telling how he came out of his uncertainty concerning the critical attacks on the Bible into his present unshakable convictions, and will then give his reasons for believing in the great doctrines of the Christian faith. Thus he will write the following seven articles: "How I Came to My Present Faith," "Why I Believe the Whole Bible is True," "Why I Believe that Jesus Christ is God," "Why I Believe in the Virgin Birth of Jesus," "Why I Believe in the Blood Atonement," "Why I Believe in the Bodily Resurrection," "Why I Believe Christ is Coming Again."

There has been no contribution like this from any other outstanding scientific leader in our generation. It is an event of stupendous importance in these days of confusion, uncertainty, and outspoken denial by men who command respect in everything but their faith.

Dr. Kelly's testimony cannot be ignored. It cannot be discounted. It cannot be ridiculed. Those who reject God's Word will disagree with him. Those who believe God's Word will rejoice that he was raised up "for such a time as this."
—Sunday School Times.

CLEAN NEWSPAPERS DEMANDED.

There is a growing demand on the part of multitudes of our people that the press of the land should cease to cater to the popular demand for the accounts of crime and scandal and all that is low and vile, under the plea that "we must have the news." The healthy growth of this sentiment is seen in a vigorous protest that comes out of Chicago, a most unexpected source of such sentiment.

According to the news dispatched under date of January 19th, the line between "evil news" and "good news" in the press has been drawn for Chicago business as, perhaps, never before so prominently or so forcibly, by Harry A. Wheeler, first president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and one of the outstanding business men in Chicago.

Mr. Wheeler made his appeal for a press more representative of the good in the community at the annual meeting of the Chicago Association of Commerce. This ranks among the greatest business men's associations in the world, and its annual meetings among the chief business gatherings of Chicago's year. Mr. Wheeler by no means confined himself to the press. He was analyzing Chicago's needs, and he characterized the newspaper as one of the spots where there was need for progress. He said:

"I wonder if the press has come to believe that, so far as Chicago is concerned and her citizens, that we would rather read the nauseating story of crime than we would the good things that are transpiring here every day of our lives. Evil is not the only news. We seem to have gotten the idea that that is true. It is not. Good news ought to be news, but we make news out of evil and we plaster the walls of our buildings and the front pages of our newspapers with these stories.

"What are we doing? We are trying to make better citizens, and the textbook that we are reading in order to make better citizens is the story of crime and all of the other evil that goes with the world in its making. Oh, it is all wrong! We have got so much more to talk about that is better.

"I know that the press is constantly striving to serve their public with what the public wants, but can't we convince them that it is not what we really want, the amplification and the spreading out of all of these wretched stories of crime? What we want is something that will not urge weak-minded people to follow the course that is set forth in the press of the habits and the life and the actions of an unworthy person.

"That is not the sort of education that we really ought to have, and with all of the sympathy that we can possibly show for the press as a great business agency, desiring to give to their public what the public wants, can't the public show the press that what it really wants is decency, and not indecency?"—Wesleyan Methodist.

DARKEST FACTS ARE NEVER TRUE.

Those who are to come after us may, therefore, see what we do not now perceive—that the world of the young, as it is now whirling before us, did not destroy, but only retarded. It may even be disclosed that what has seemed and still seems to us to be a cessation in the development of the young was but a period in which a greater head of steam was gathering—a period in which, unconsciously, they were mustering their latent forces for a drive against the world!

It is all guesswork. The facts are against the young, but I don't believe the facts. Nobody knows what is going to happen to them, but I cannot believe that it is going to be anything bad. I believe they will develop the ability to meet life as it will soon present itself to them. Not all of them will win in the struggle. All do not win in any struggle. Some will fail. The most adaptable, the most intelligent, and the most energetic will pull through.

In some ways, this young generation is perhaps the best that ever lived. For one thing, it has better health because scientists of one kind and another are teaching people how to live.

I cannot say that I am an optimist about the rising generation—I can see too many unprecedented difficulties, obstacles and handicaps confronting it and surrounding it to be an optimist—but I am hopeful and confident. I believe that, as the English say, some way or another it will "muddle through."

TUBERCULOSIS SYMPTOMS.

The extension department of the North Carolina Sanatorium is trying to make it possible for every person in North Carolina with tuberculosis to find it out, and to find it out in time to get well. To do this, it employs two whole-time traveling specialists to hold diagnostic clinics free of charge in any part of the State. Dr. S. E. Lee and Dr. D. R. Perry, the clinicians employed for this work, are experienced physicians in tuberculosis.

A special bulletin, "Tuberculosis, its Symptoms, Cure and Prevention," that gives in detail the symptoms of tuberculosis and what one who has tuberculosis should do to get well, is issued by the extension department. It is sent free of charge to any one requesting it.

Every morning from 8 to 11 diagnostic clinics, also free of charge if the patient writes for an appointment, are held at the North Carolina Sanatorium. An appointment for examination can be made by writing the superintendent, Dr. P. P. McCain.

Many far-advanced cases of tuberculosis say: "If I had only known the early symptoms of tuberculosis!" Every diagnosis means tuberculosis cures, lives saved and money saved for the State and for its citizens.

The free traveling tuberculosis clinics in North Carolina were first begun in 1920. At that time the work was under the supervision of and was financed by the North Carolina Tuberculosis Association. Since February, 1924, it has been carried on under the direction of the extension department of the North Carolina Sanatorium and has been supported by State appropriation. Thousands of persons have been examined and hundreds of cases have been diagnosed and treated since these clinics were begun.

Every person in North Carolina should have a thorough physical examination. But it is almost imperative that the following classes of people be examined: (1) those who have any one of the symptoms of tuberculosis; (2) those who have been closely exposed to infection by an open, active case in the family, especially children; (3) any one who is ill in any way and has not obtained a positive diagnosis of another disease.

By writing the Extension Department, Sanatorium, N. C., any citizen of North Carolina whose health isn't what it ought to be may receive free of charge information that may keep the citizen from filling an untimely grave, a victim of tuberculosis that might have been cured.

LESSONS FROM THE FOXES.

Have you ever seen a fox? A fox is an animal looking much like a dog, with a straight, bushy tail and ears that stand up straight. Foxes are found in almost every part of the earth. There are some with gray fur, some with black fur, some with red fur, and even a kind of fox with white fur. Everywhere the fox is known as a very sly and tricky animal.

The Bible speaks about the foxes, especially the little foxes, and we will see if there are not some lessons for us to learn from the little foxes.

Turn to the song of Solomon 2:15. Here we learn that the little foxes are not liked, for they spoil the vines with the tender grapes.

There are some places in the world where the people earn their living by raising grapes, and, of course, they take great care to preserve the fruit-bearing branches. The grapes have many enemies. There is a little plant that is very destructive. There is also a kind of spider that sucks the juice from the grapes. But the fox is a special foe.

The food of the fox is not only flesh, but honey and fruits, and especially grapes. When the grapes are young and tender, the little foxes steal into the vineyard, snatch the branches and pulling them down spoil the grapes. No wonder, then, that the vineyard-keeper said, "Take us the foxes, the little foxes, that spoil the vines: for our vines have tender grapes."

Now, turn to the New Testament, John 15:5. Here Jesus says, "I am the vine, ye are the branches." If you have taken Jesus as your Saviour, your heart is joined to Him as the branches are joined to the vine. The grapes that grow on these branches are the thoughts, words, and deeds that come forth from the heart. Just as there are little foxes to destroy the grapes in the vineyard, so there are little enemies that spoil the fruit of the heart. These are little enemies, so little that some boys and girls think that they are not worth noticing. They think only the big sins are the ones to watch. But, listen!

One time two cruel dogs were chasing a little kitten. The poor thing ran for its life—a big dog first and a little dog coming after as fast as he could. The kitten got safe to the railings of a fence and slipped in through them. The big dog almost touched it as it went through, but then he could go no farther. He was too big to get in after it—the railings were too close together. So the little kitten felt safe. But up came the little dog and he was able to get in where the big fellow couldn't, and in he came. But a kind gardner happened to be near, and he rescued the little kitten.

Do you see now that little things may be very dangerous? They creep in so quickly and so slyly. Turn to Luke 13:32. Here Jesus spoke of King Herod as a "fox," because of his sly, tricky and deceitful ways.

Now, there are little foxes with odd names which get into the "heart-gardens" and spoil the branches upon which the fruit grows.

1. Little Fox Selfishness.

In Luke 14:1-11 we read a parable that very plainly shows what harm this little fox may do. Jesus desires His followers to be unselfish, and so this little fox will try his best to destroy the fruit. He tries to make you think of no one but yourself.

2. Little Fox Bad Temper.

This is a snarly, sulky, nasty little fox. It usually comes dashing in very quickly, and it throws a dark cloud over the happiness of those about you as well as over your own sky. This little fox really destroys a lot of fruit, and often you are very sorry afterward, but the fruit is spoiled. Beware of this little fox.

3. Little Fox Lying.

This is a very dangerous little fox. He seems so harmless that some boys and girls let him enter their heart-gardens sometimes. They think they can easily drive him out again. But little foxes grow big and soon they master you. This fox has been the downfall of many, for it often brings in so many other little foxes, and tries to hide their presence.

4. Little Fox Deceit.

This is a sly, sneaking little fox. It does not like to be seen. Deceit is an acted lie. Girls, when you break a dish, do you hide the pieces? Little Fox Deceit has crept in, if you do. Tom was very poor in arithmetic. One day another schoolmate worked all his problems for him. The teacher praised Tom because he had done so well. But Tom felt ashamed and guilty. He thought he would tell the teacher, but along came Little Fox Deceit and said, "The teacher will never know unless you tell him." But Tom went right up to the teacher and told him, and the little fox ran away as fast as he could.

By this time I am sure you can name some other little foxes, such as cheating, irreverence, disobedience. Watch them, boys and girls, and keep them out.

Now, I hear some one say:

"Well, I do try, but it seems they slip in anyway." Yes, you cannot do it yourself. But there is One who will do it for you and will give you power to overcome each little fox. It is Jesus. Give Him charge of your "heart-garden." He can keep the little foxes out.—Ruth Raeburn Jones.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

FOREIGN MISSION CONFERENCE COMMITTEE REPORTS.

The Committee on Findings of the Foreign Missionary Conference of United States and Canada, meeting in Washington, D. C., February 2, 1925, reports as follows:

We affirm our conviction that Jesus Christ is the absolute and only Saviour and hope of all mankind.

We register our unqualified allegiance to Him as risen Lord of individuals and nations and worlds.

We believe His dominating purpose is to achieve a humanity redeemed from sin and transformed into the likeness of God, our common Father.

We recognize His call to every one, and especially to those who receive Him and seek to know and do His will, to participation in His creative world-inclusive work, and accept the inescapable duty of co-operation with Him, and dedicate our lives to this purpose.

We are assured of His invariable presence and mastering power in accomplishing His purpose and realizing His ends. Victory may be delayed, but it will surely come.

The Need of Purification.

We believe like-mindedness, purity of heart and singleness of purpose are essential elements of successful endeavor, and only those who are seeking with passionate desire these virtues can avail much in the program of our Lord.

Realizing, as we do, the importance of a faith that denies itself in its moral delinquencies, we conceive our first and most important task to be that of setting our own house in order in our social, commercial, political, interracial and international contacts, that our missionaries may not have to carry too great a weight of Christian inconsistency. We dare not deny the love we teach by a selfishness we practice. To this end, we bid our people to put into daily operation the principles of Jesus in their industrial, political and social life; that our missionaries, when they point the non-Christian world to Jesus' ideal of a brotherhood of love, may be able to hold up our own land as a living exemplification of their teaching.

We accept the challenge laid down to us in the million one hundred thousand people in Japan and Porto Rico to whom we are asked to bear the gospel of love and hope, and call upon our people to gird themselves by prayer and consecration of life and substance for the successful issue of the work to which we are bidden.

We note with gratitude the increase in ten years of three organized Churches and ten outposts in our field in Japan, and over 107 per cent in membership in Japan and 44 per cent in Porto Rico. It is encouraging, too, to learn that contributions to the cause have grown 360 per cent in Japan and 295 per cent in Porto Rico in the same period. It is not so gratifying to know that in this ten-year period, while some of our missionaries have been replaced by men and women of deep consecration and wide training, the number of American missionaries on the field is but three more today than it was ten years ago. The increase of 186 per cent in current annual receipts during the decade being offset by the greatly developed cost of living.

Demand for a New Appraisal of Our Task.

With five years of disruption and five years of readjustment behind us, the time has come for the Christian Church to face her missionary task anew, and, in the light of fresh opportunities and demands, changed methods, and greatly amplified resources to respond to the call of her Leader with promptitude and gift of life and means that will justify her charter of existence.

There must be no retrenchment. Only one purpose will save our Church in the crisis of a great hour—advance! Our program of evangelistic endeavor must be continued and enlarged. Our present fields should be extended, and new fields opened up. Then, too, if we are to catch the present vision and make response to the new appeal we must undertake a greater Christian educational program—preferably in co-operation with other Churches, if that can be effected—for Christian education is the watchword of the hour and will increasingly become, if we are to accept the testimony of those best informed, the way of progress.

To accomplish this, missionary leaders must be secured who are adequately trained for the work. None but those thoroughly equipped will suffice. The deeps of Oriental life, particularly cultured Oriental life, can only be sounded by those of disciplined mind. No missionaries should be sent to the foreign field who are not thoroughly trained.

The Stewardship of Money.

So, too, the new-old passion directed by intelligence, must lead to a greater outpouring of money. Men and women are in training now and will ever be preparing themselves for service, providing opportunities are impelling enough and funds are sufficient to sustain them on the field. We cannot hope for accomplishment commensurate with privilege until our people are Christian enough to face this whole question of the stewardship of money in the light of our Lord's teaching and life. Our foreign mission offerings should not be less than $100,000 a year. such a goal is entirely within our reach, and the easy possibility constitutes our challenge. The system that has proven the most effectual in financing the work of missions is the use of the weekly offering, duplex envelope. Boards responsible for the education of our people in this method of benevolence are urged to use every means at their disposal to secure its adoption.

We lay it upon the heart of every pastor in the Christian Church that he may line up with Jesus in His world-redemptive program. We urge our pastors to inform themselves through systematic reading of missionary magazines and study of missionary textbooks and other literature, attendance at missionary conferences and conventions, as to world need, world advance and world possibilities, that the people whom God has called them to lead may not suffer through their indifference or neglect. We are convinced that non-missionary Churches are, in the great majority of cases, attributable to non-missionary pastors.

Missionary Education in the Church.

We call upon our local Churches to secure or formulate a program of education that will equip the rising generation and aid the present generation in such an intelligent approach to the whole problem of the advancing kingdom as to enlist a whole-hearted co-operation in the ever-enlarging demand. The foundation, however, must be laid with the child. The program of Jesus in world redemption should be laid before them by skilled teachers, in such fashion as to secure an intelligent apprehension of it and a consecrated will to help in its realization. To do this, every advantage of summer conference and mission school must be utilized to equip leaders for groups of both young and old. The Church will do well to finance the attendance at these conferences of selected persons who are qualified for the teaching of the program of the kingdom. We urge our mission boards to plan, and disseminate widely, programs of mission education that can be used in all our Churches.

We commend to our Churches the support of a missionary pastor, or worker, who shall represent the congregation on the foreign field and who may act as a living link with the work in non-Christian lands.

Missionary Conferences.

We commend interdenominational and interracial conferences such as the present gathering, express our gratification at the representative number of our people here, and voice the hope that at succeeding conferences every effort will be made to secure the attendance of representatives from every quarter of our field.

We suggest that "echo meetings" be arranged for in all parts of our Church, and that this body take measures to appoint representatives in each section of the field who will plan for such meetings that the message of this conference may be carried throughout the whole Church. So far as possible, we hope some one who has been present may have a place on the program of our conference, State, regional and summer school programs.

We are assured that only those Churches that accept the program of Jesus and undertake to put it into operation are Christian, and can in their local task lay claim to his full and blessed promise of abiding to make certain success in their local field. We may judge our Churches as to their Christian character, by their desire and purpose to realize His will for a redeemed world.

W. G. SARGENT (Chairman).
MRS. W. V. LEATHERS.
A. E. KEMP.
A. F. TOON.
RAYMOND G. CLARK.
L. E. SMITH.

A MANIFESTO.

(A resolution by Dr. W. G. Sargent, unanimously adopted by the group to whom submitted.)

It is the unanimous sense of this group of fifty-three representatives of the Christian Church in the Foreign Missions Convention of the United States and Canada, that, in view of the present deficit of $12,000 in the foreign mission treasury and the budget of $68,333 for the present year, all of which is greatly needed, we face an unusual period in our missionary history; therefore,

Resolved, That we memorialize the Church to consider with a new urgency the immediate task which is upon us, and in the spirit of Christian co-operation we suggest:

1. That our people be called to sacrificial prayer.

2. That all who can do so, be urged to make personal gifts to meet the present needs, and that we encourage the Mission Board to make such personal solicitations as their wisdom may approve.

3. That an effort be made to make the coming foreign mission offering equal to our budget, and to this end our whole brotherhood be urged to co-operate to the full extent of their ability.

4. That, in the judgment of this group, there should be inaugurated at once a denomination-wide stewardship campaign to prepare for our present and future responsibilities.

RESULTS OF MEN AND MILLIONS.

The financial goal of this movement, initiated about five years ago and ending on May 1, 1925, as to Men and Millions Fund, new money, was $2,000,000, apportioned as follows:

Special mission fund, subscribed.....	$ 125,000.00
Elon standardization fund, subscribed	375,000.00
From regular sources, including Conference apportionments, missionary associations, woman's missionary societies, and for the Orphanage ($125,000 for previous five years).	250,000.00
Church extension, to be raised in the local Churches, expended there, and reported to annual Conferences....	500,000.00
Men and Millions fund, new money...	750,000.00
Total	$2,000,000.00

Collections to December 31, 1924, were as follows:

Special mission fund	$ 85,950.32
Elon standardization fund	212,279.59
Benevolences, regular sources	261,965.87
Elon emergency fund	332,495.48
Church extension	807,087.92
Men and Millions	131,809.33
Total	$1,831,588.31

Treating the Elon funds as one, we have gone considerably ahead as to three financial goals. We are around $40,000 behind as a special mission fund and a little over $400,000 behind our subscription to Men and Millions and $618,000 behind our Men and Millions quota. Our $2,000,000 goal was based on $80 per member for the five years. We have collected, so far, over $73 per member. If we collect $168,411.69 additional on Men and Millions pledges we will reach our aggregate financial goal of $2,000,000.

In addition to hundreds of tithers and life recruits, our membership in the Southern Christian Convention has increased 15 per cent, and is now 29,179.

Let us pay our pledges to Men and Millions if it takes five years to do so. Do not break faith with God and with His Church. If financial disaster and sickness prevents, we will be excused. Make the same effort to discharge this obligation that you do to discharge your obligations to men.

J. E. WEST,
Chairman.

MEN AND MILLIONS' COLLECTIONS.

Collections to December 31, 1924.....	$131,809.33
Collections for January, 1925.....	3,057.55
Total to January 31, 1925.....	$134,866.88

Forty-three Churches, representing the five Conferences, contributed to January Collections, showing a general interest in the fund.

In the North Carolina Conference, Greensboro, First Church, deserves honorable mention for a splendid collection of $459, and Henderson moves up to 50 per cent of its quota. In the Eastern Virginia Conference, Ivor moves up to 60 per cent and Suffolk 52 per cent, having paid in cash $26,102.97, nearly one-fifth of total collections. In the Convention, about sixty Churches have paid over 20 per cent of their quota, and forty-three Churches over 25 per cent of their quota. Some of our strongest and richest Churches are not included in either list. Why not? There is still a chance to make a good showing on May 1, 1925.

J. E. WEST,
Chairman.

MEN AND MILLIONS.

I desire to add Liberty Spring, Eastern Virginia Conference, to the list which appeared in THE CHRISTIAN SUN of February 5th. This Church has paid $4,124, which is 37 1-2 per cent of its quota of $10,946.

If there is any Church which has paid as much as 20 per cent of its quota but whose name did not appear on the list referred to, please write C. D. Johnston, executive secretary, Elon College, or the undersigned.

J. E. WEST,
Chairman.

PAUL'S CONVERSION.

The subconsciously maturing processes of which Paul, on the road to Damascus, suddenly grew conscious were at least five. They may be considered as follows:

1. Paul's experience with the Old Testament law. The situation, briefly, is this: Paul, after graduation in Gamaliel's school in Jerusalem begins to practice with pharisaical accuracy the legal, formal righteousness of the law. As "touching the law, he was blameless." Fervently he desired the coming of Messiah, and according to his theology Messiah was to come as soon as God's people kept the law even for one Sabbath Day. Reading the tenth commandment for, perhaps, the thousandth time, a new lane of light comes upon the words, "Thou shalt not covet" (see Rom. 7th chap.), and Paul saw that he was commanded to inner correctness rather than outer correctness; that it was a matter of heart rather than physical formality; he saw he had a hopeless task. "O wretched man that I am!" If the Messiah waited until all hearts were right, He would never come.

2. In the second place, Paul's debate with Stephen in the Cilician synagogue, situated in Jerusalem (see Acts 6). Stephen was the first recorded one to see that believing of Jesus meant the scrapping of the Old Testament food laws and the Levitical laws of sacrifice. Many like Peter and James, brother of the Lord, had joined the Jesus movement, but had never dreamed that it meant the abrogation of those old ceremonies. Paul was outwitted in this debate.

3. Paul could never quite get over the angel face of Stephen; nor (4) Stephen's speech before the Sanhedrim.

And, finally, Paul's persecution of the Jews was the last step leading him to a light on the Damascus road and a voice which said, "I am Jesus of Nazareth, whom thou persecutest."

The significance of Paul's conversion, stated very briefly, is this: It showed him that Jesus was alive; that He was therefore the Messiah; that God had not waited for law-keeping; that the Messiah came to all the world; and, finally, that He wanted Paul to carry the good news to the ends of the earth.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

RELIGION IN SCHOOLS.

To any one acquainted with the purpose that actuated the fathers of the republic in formulating the Constitution, it is not necessary to go over the argument that defends their action in making a clean break between Church and State. This is one of the peculiar glories of our form of government and a principle that we must keep inviolate forever.

The strict observance of this principle has saved us from many of the social and political disturbances that have convulsed European nations. Consistently we have refused to allow any ecclesiasticism to obtain a predominating influence in our government. Therefore, it is essential that public education be kept free of all such demoralizing control.

The teaching of religion is the duty of the Church and the home. It cannot be the responsibility of the State. The widespread irreligion that our clerical brethren so earnestly condemn will be overcome not by religious instruction in public school-rooms, but by the activities of the Churches, in co-operation with the homes.

It has been said that the public school system of education is unsatisfactory because it denies to the children the moral and religious training which their parents believe they should have.

The public school makes no such denial. It simply cannot concern itself with matters of religion and theology. But there is nothing taught in the public schools, either specific or implied, that runs counter to the moral teachings of the Church. The Church supplements the instruction of the public schools.

(Concluded from page 5.)

dress himself to hard realities. But when we find that along with the dream, this rapture of the soul, there comes the most beautiful kind of human character that has ever yet been revealed, it ought to make us pause and think. For never has this spiritual illumination come to soul or to society without making the world not only gladder but better. Once get the genuine thing, and you are in the atmosphere of brotherly love, of the spirit of self-sacrifice, of humility conjoined to marvelous strength and fortitude.

What Christendom is suffering from today is the lack of it; not too much of it. We have fallen upon a time of spiritual deadness, but the awakening may be nearer than we think:

O God of mountains, stars and boundless spaces,
O God of freedom and of joyous hearts,
When Thy face looketh forth from all men's faces
There will be room enough in crowded marts.
Brood Thou around me, and the noise is o'er,
The universe Thy closet with shut door.

This, dear brother men, is what the world needs to rediscover today. This is what my experience of human need has taught me. We have got to get the spiritual consciousness back into our common life, and the world will be reborn. All the power is here already, all the feeling of a common need and the desire for a better common life, all the comradeship, all the hopefulness, all the unselfish striving towards a great and holy end. What we want now is a realization of the presence and the power of the Holy Ghost. We want Christendom to be shaken and thrilled by a new bursting forth of the life of God in the heart of man. We do not need much in the way of doctrine—the simpler the better. What we want is just a renewal of the sense of the eternal in our common life. We all need it, and you know we do. Can you endure the thought of life as a meaningless drudgery, a mere struggle to keep the body going until it breaks up for ever? Are you not sometimes made wretched by the thought of the cruelties inflicted in that struggle? Are you not often weary of it? Oh, this pitiful waste of life, this pitiful waste of soul! Oh, the frantic struggle for the meat that perisheth! Can we not do better? Can we not do it together?

Come, fellow-warriors, comrades of the sorrowful way! Let us turn back to the living God. We want what united prayer will bring, we want righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost. Let us unite in this demand, and pray that it may overflow to all mankind. May men take knowledge of us that we have been with Jesus, and may the Dayspring from on high visit us once more, to give light to them that sit in darkness and the shadow of death, and to guide our feet into the way of peace.—Christian Work.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

March 1, 1925.

Subject: "Christ Before Pilate."

Golden Text: "He was wounded for our transgressions; he was bruised for our iniquities."—Isa. 53:5.

Lesson: Matt. 27:11-31.

Devotional Reading: Isa. 53:1-6.

Reference Material: Matt. 26:57-27:10; Mark 15:53-15, 20; Luke 22:52-23:25; John 18:12-19:16.

"How Jesus stood before the Governor." It was one of the world's most dramatic scenes. Here was the Governor of a Roman province, a representative of the world-power, unscrupulous, vacillating, grasping, with a lust for power and popular acclaim. His character must have been reflected in His face—grim, hard, cruel.

And there were the chief priests and the elders, the religious leaders of the Jewish people. They were very circumspect, so circumspect in all the details of religion that they would not enter the judgment hall lest they be defiled by the contact with unclean unbelievers, the hated Romans, and thus be kept from observing the feast of the Passover. They did not seem to be concerned over the fact that they were going to put an innocent man to death; that was another matter. It must not interfere with their religious scruples.

Soldiers were there, too. They were a hard-hearted, rough crowd, who thought it great sport to blindfold the prisoner, to smite Him, and then to ask Him who smote Him. They enjoyed, in a rough way, the "sport" of spitting on Him and of jamming a crown of rough, ragged thorns on His head. They were the men who later "threw dice" for His garments. One could not expect much from such a crowd.

And there was the prisoner—Jesus. He was calm, dignified, reserved. He was alone, too, for His friends had deserted Him. There is no doubting, however, that He was the central figure in the scene. And, although we usually refer to the scene as Christ's trial before Pilate, the fact of the matter is that it was Pilate's trial by Christ. For, although Jesus stands at the bar as a prisoner, He condemns the judge. Here, as always, when men come face to face with Jesus Christ, they are judged and they know it.

The trial itself was a parody. The Jews had brought Jesus to Pilate because they wanted Him put to death. This modest, kindly man had made Himself unpopular by speaking the truth. And the scribes and elders were determined to get rid of Him. They could not do it under their own law, so they made false charges against Him and brought Him before the Roman Governor. They said that the man had threatened to set up a kingdom. With an ingenuity that was as clever as it was diabolical, they knew that this would call down the wrath of Rome, for Rome brooked no opposition. And with itching palms and passionate pleading, they pressed the charge before Pilate.

Pilate knew the man was innocent. He knew that "for envy they had delivered him up." He found no fault in Him. And as if that were not enough, his wife warned him against having anything to do with "that righteous man." He resorted to every device to get rid of Jesus. He sent him to Herod, his enemy, in a vain attempt to dispose of Him. He offered to let Him go at the holiday season. But Pilate was afraid of his job. He was afraid to pay the price of doing right. He sought to please public opinion instead of obeying his conscience. And, taking the basin of water, "he washed his hands of the whole matter." At least he thought he did. But not all the water in the world would suffice to cleanse him from his foul deed. Poor Pilate! He has come down to the world as one of its most pathetic figures. "Suffered under Pontius Pilate"—thus ignominy is heaped upon him every time one repeats the Apostles' Creed. And tradition has it that Pilate was overtaken by the very calamity which he dreaded, and that he died a suicide.

"Then released he unto them Barabbas." Every man has to choose which spirit he will release in the world. The spirit of evil and destruction, as embodied in Barabbas, or the spirit of good and salvation, as embodied in Jesus Christ. Let every man take heed unto himself how he chooseth.

Something to Think About.

1. Many sins are committed in the name of religion.
2. There is something in Jesus Christ that makes men marvel when they see Him as He is.
3. Conscience is to be obeyed, not bribed.
4. Life's greatest question is: "What, then, shall I do unto Jesus who is called Christ?"
5. "No man who has known Christ may escape a decision regarding Him."—Geo Adam Smith.
6. Temptation demands immediate and final action.
7. Whosoever committeth sin is a bond-servant of sin.
8. God warns those who are doing wrong.
9. Every one of us must stand before the judgment seat of Christ and give an account of himself.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

March 1, 1925.

Topic: "The Cost of Friendliness." (Consecration meeting.)

References: John 15:13-17; 1 Sam. 20:1-4, 16-42; 2 Sam. 1:26.

1. Worship Service.

Repeat in unison, "This is my commandment, that you love one another, as I have loved you."

Scripture lesson: John 15:13-17.

Sentence prayer of consecration to the Master's work. Close with some one (appointed before the meeting) singing softly, "Take My Life."

Song: "Saviour, Like a Shepherd, Lead Us."

2. Suggestions for Leader's Talk.

"Strew human life with flowers! Save every hour for the sunshine! Exalt your soul! Widen the sympathies of your heart! Make joy real now to those you love."—Richard Jeffries.

Let each of us ask ourselves the questions: Am I worthy of the friendship of others? Do I enrich the lives of my friends? Answering these two questions should cause us to give our own lives an examination and make us resolve to seek a closer friendship with Christ and to be a better friend to others. Friendship with Jesus assures us of His love watching over both our friends and us and making our friendships richer and truer.

3. Write Questions.

Write out enough questions on the subject for each person present at the meeting to have one. After the leader's talk, have some one quietly pass them to as many people as will take them. Explain that each person is expected to answer the question in not more than two or three sentences, and urge every one to take one whether or not they have ever taken part in the meeting. This will mean an interesting meeting and perhaps some new people to take part in the discussion.

4. The Right Attitude Towards Our Friends.

We cannot expect our friends to be perfect. They have faults, and so do we. Some one has said, "a friend is one who knows all about you and loves you just the same." Try always to see the good shining out greater than everything else in your friends. Overlook their faults. Always look upon them as persons with opinions of their own and capable of strengthening your own life.

5. The Value of Friends.

We sometimes rebel against winning new friends, declaring that our present friends mean more to us than new friends ever can. Yet we find that each new friend has a place in our lives and often seem just as true as old friends.

The sad part about friendship is the fact that we have, sooner or later, to part with most of them, and sometimes when we have known them for only a short time. But we should remember that they are not really gone. If they have been true friends, they have made some definite contribution to our lives; they have helped us, made our lives a little happier or a little richer, and we are glad that we knew them.

6. What Our Friends Cost Us.

They cost us unselfishness—denying ourselves for their happiness and pleasure.

They cost us time—perhaps when we are the busiest; some mental and physical effort. We share with them our own experiences. But what we get in return for being a friend is the rich and wholesome friendship of others. It is worth far more than anything we can give. Remember, your best friend was once a stranger.

Influence of Friends.

Although psychologists tell us that self-preservation is the first law of life, this means very little to us when we haven't loved ones and friends. Did you ever lose a good friend and feel that the "bottom had dropped out of the earth?" We are naturally social in nature, craving the approval of others. We are greatly influenced by what our friends think of us. They help to mold our lives, and for this reason our friends should be well chosen.

8. Things which Friends Never Do.

Gossip—start things which are untrue; stretch things; speak before they really know the circumstances; criticize unjustly; say "catty" things. Friendship has no room for such things or people who do these things.

The world spent $3,300,000,000 for new motor vehicles in 1924, according to a Department of Commerce survey just completed. The number of passenger cars, trucks and motorcycles was increased 3,479,000, or 18 per cent, during the year. The United States now has 82.5 per cent of the world's total of passenger cars and trucks.

Christian Orphanage

SCHOOLS FOR ALL.

One-fourth of our entire population is engaged in school work as pupils, teachers, supervisors, and administrators. The public schools constitute a great corporation spending over one and a half billions of dollars annually. Each citizen is a shareholder and has a voice in determining what kind of a school his community shall enjoy. Is your stock represented when school policies are determined?

The life of American children today is so different from that of our grandparents that they need a very different kind of help to meet these new problems. When the butcher, the baker, and the candlestick-maker, as well as the weaver and cobbler, were all members of the same family, things done with the hands were learned at home and their worth was appreciated. Now we phone for what we need, drive the auto around the corner or at most a few miles over good country roads for them, or else have them delivered by parcel-post. Children, therefore, no longer gain industrial education in their homes. The schools are supplying as much of it as they can.

Modern Education Complex.

The time that children spend in school should be much greater than it used to be. It takes more time to master problems than it does to learn rules. It takes more equipment to work out the details of problems than it does to memorize the words printed in a book. Today children are taught how to sew and cook and how to make many things they need in their work and play. They test their designs by actually making the things planned in order to prove the accuracy of their thinking.

Opportunity for Every Child.

The school should give every child an equal opportunity to attain his highest development. It should secure for him a healthy mind and body. It should imbue him with the principles of personal honesty and a strong sense of his obligations to his family, his community, and his nation. It should give him the education and training necessary to support himself and to bear his just share in maintaining a community with high American ideals. It should develop his capacity for the wholesome use of leisure. It should inculcate a broad and understanding patriotism which insures our country's highest good.

Education's Casualties.

Better understanding of the schools problems and heartier co-operation of all citizens in their solution are needed. The number of pupils dropping out of school after the fourth grade is appalling. Out of 100 pupils who enter the fifth grade, 66 fall by the wayside during the next three years; 20 more drop out during the high-school years, leaving only 14 of the original 100 entering the fifth grade to complete the high-school course.

Almost as startling is the poor daily attendance of the pupils enrolled in the schools. Of each 100 pupils enrolled in all the public elementary schools and high schools, 79 are in actual daily attendance. This irregular school attendance caused the waste of $250,000,000 last year. Taxpayers robbed themselves of this amount and at the same time suffered their children to lose an average of nearly two months' schooling in a year.

Rural Education.

Half of the school population lives in the open country and villages. Three and a half million of them still attend one-teacher rural schools. Many of the 175,000 one-teacher rural schools have undergone little change during the past generation. Their school terms are one or two months' shorter than city and village school terms. Their teachers have received the fewest weeks of professional training of any group of teachers. More than one-fourth of them are teaching their first term of school. Their average age is three or four years younger than city and village teachers.

City people should learn more about rural education. Rural people should learn more about city schools. The ultimate economic success of the merchant and the manufacturer depends to a large extent upon purchases made by rural people. People's wants are greatly influenced by the kind and amount of education they receive. Thousands of adults from the country go every year to the cities to fill places in industrial, commercial, and professional fields. The services they perform and the kind of citizens they become in their new environment depend on their early education. It is imperative that the education they receive be such as to fit them for life in the city as well as in the country.

TRUTH ABOUT PROHIBITION.

The best social gift to the American people was the one brought by prohibition. A few years of the cumulative results of four years of sober industry are:

A cut in the death rate that saved 873,000 lives, profiting the insurance companies and policy holders $678,769,000.

A decrease in the rate of preventable illness equivalent to 1,747,950 people continuously ill for one year.

A reduction in the ratio of drunkenness arrests per 100,000 population equivalent to 500,000 fewer arrests for drunkenness in 1923 alone, or over 2,000,000 fewer in the four dry years. A decrease in the penal ratio, resulting in 20,000 fewer persons being committed to penal institutions in these four years.

Elimination of intemperance as a cause of poverty, releasing $74,000,000 of charity funds for constructive work.

Wiping out 177,790 licensed saloons, around which huddled the homes of families whose revenues were drained by the liquor leech.

Over a billion dollars added to our savings accounts, and over eleven billion dollars to our new life insurance policies in 1923.

Increased the taxable wealth of former license cities by increasing valuation of former saloon sites.

Lowered industrial accidents by a quarter of a million annually.

Made possible vast expeditures on moving pictures, athletic equipment, and other wholesome entertainments which replaced the saloon.

Made roads safer for the 4,000,000 automobiles manufactured last year, many of which were bought by former impoverished drinkers.

Increased home building by 2,000 more new homes built per month in 1923 than in 1919, in spite of higher costs.

Added a daily Pentecost of 3,000 new members to the Churches.

"Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding."—prov. 3:5.

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

These Pens are of standard make, and will give good service. If you are in need of a Fountain Pen, order from us.
MEN'S PENS ..... $2.00 LADIES' PENS $2.00
Postage paid, and Pens guaranteed by the manufacturer.

LIMITED COMBINATION OFFER.—To a new subscriber, or for renewal (if not in arrears), $3.25, either Gentleman's or Lady's Pen, with guarantee of manufacturer. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 EAST BROAD STREET, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Mission Study Books.

Official List for 1924-1925.

ORDER BY TITLE OF BOOK.

FOR ADULT CLASSES.

For Home Mission Classes:
"The Romance of Home Missions," by S. L. Morris, D. D.. Paper, 50c; cloth.....$ .75
For Foreign Mission Classes:
"Ming Kwong—the City of Morning Light," by Mary Ninde Gamewell. Paper, 50c; cloth .75
"In China," by H. F. Williams, D. D..... .25

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

For Intermediate Home Mission Classes:
"The Land of All Nations," by Margaret F. Seelbach. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75
For Intermediate Foreign Mission Classes:
"China's Real Revolution," by Paul Hutchinson. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75
For Junior Foreign Mission Classes:
"Chinese Lanterns," by Minna McEwen Meyer. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... .75

LEADERS' HELPS.

Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Adult Classes) ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Young People's Classes)..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Land of All Nations"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Ming Kwong"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "China's Real Revolution".. .15
Leaders' Helps for "Chinese Lanterns"..... .15

Send all orders to—

THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

1536 East Broad Street - - Richmond, Virginia.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

A PRESCRIPTION FOR A WELL-SPENT DAY.

Scripture: 1 Peter 3:8-12.

"Take a dash of water cold
And a little leaven of prayer,
A little bit of sunshine gold
Dissolved in the morning air;
Add to your meal some merriment
And a thought for kith and kin,
And then, as a prime ingredient,
A plenty of work thrown in.
But spice it all with essence of love
And a little whiff of play,
Let a wise old book and a glance above
Complete a well-spent day."—Anon.

Prayer.—Our Father, we look to Thee from Thy book and dedicate our lives to Thee. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE PROMISE OF DAILY POWER.

Scripture: Acts 1:6-11.

On the Mount of Olives, Peter asked Christ for power. With this, the power of Jesus' death begins. Rev. Mr. Reynolds bids us "listen in" and hear the conversation:

Peter: "I failed Thee, Lord, in the presence of Thy foes, when the cup of agony was already pressed to Thy lips. My base cowardice helped to break Thy heart. I am not fit for any place on the program of Thy kingdom."

Jesus: "Simon, Simon, thou shalt have power, after the Holy Ghost is come."

John: "Master, I have sat at Thy feet in our retreats. I have learned to lean upon Thee in the calm as well as in the storm. How can I meet the tumult and the violence of the stern battlefronts of the apostleship?"

Jesus: "The promise of the Father, Beloved, the promise of the Father!"

Thomas: "Master, I cannot do the work Thou wouldst have me do. Oh, those days of tragic isolation and melancholy doubt before I saw Thy wounds! There are doubting castles even within Thy kingdom."

Jesus (with tender iteration): "Thomas, Thomas, thou shalt have power."

Jesus (to all): "Children, why are ye still troubled? Ye all shall be clothed with power, the Holy Ghost coming upon you."

This was the greatest moment of apostolic history.

Prayer.—We beseech Thee, our Heavenly Father, to grant us grateful hearts for the blessings that cannot be measured with money or power. For the love of friends and of little children, for the knowledge we have of forgiveness and everlasting life, and for the joy of communion with Thee and the companionship of the Holy Spirit, we bless Thee now and evermore. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

OUR PART OF THE POWER.

Scripture: Matt. 11:28-30.

Our part in receiving the power from above is "come" and "take." How often He bids "come" to Him!—come to the sanctuary. The weary come, come empty-handed, come and follow, come and be baptized, come and live. He saves them that come.

Then "take": Take my yoke, take my meekness, take of mine, take and purify thyself, take the armour of God, take the helmet of salvation. The word is full of "come" and "take." The call of such a lowly way discovers the only true victory of life—the victory of peace and power; only such will finally inherit the earth. By coming to Him and taking of Him, we shall enter into and inherit the kingdom prepared for us—the kingdom of love and peace and power.

Prayer.—Our Father, help us to come, help us to take, help us to be filled, and to know Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith. Evermore give both as Thy bread of love, peace and power. Amen.

THURSDAY.

"DELIGHTING" IN THE LORD.

"I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth."—Isa. 58:13-14.

We are to blame. We have thoughtlessly allowed the little Sunday foxes to grow and thrive until our vineyard is almost spoiled. Let us be firmly persuaded in our own minds as to the true meaning and obligations of the Sabbath. It was intended to be like that rift in the dungeon wall, of which Byron sings in his "Prisoner of Chillon." The lonely prisoner, worn out with weary years of captivity, saw at length that the upper stones of his dungeon had parted, letting in a ray of sunlight. He climbed the wall, dragging his chain with him, and looked out. He saw, through tears of joy, the world once more! The green valley was there, the mountains and the blue sky.

So did God ordain the day of holy rest that we, out of the lonely toil and struggle of life, might climb and see sweet fields all dressed in living green. O blessed Sabbath Day! Let us so observe it that its rest shall be to us a foretaste of "the rest prepared for the people of God." Of old, the Sabbath was made a sign of God's covenant with His chosen people; and that sign has never been and never can be abrogated. How lacking in fidelity are those who look askance at the Sabbath as a "blue law"! It is indeed one of God's kindest provisions for our happiness here and hereafter.

Prayer.—We pray for gratitude as we call to mind Thy manifold mercies and Thy loving-kindness, O Lord. Open our eyes to see the wonders of Thy grace and the beauty of Thy daily miracles for our happiness. Amen.

FRIDAY.

HUMBLE HEROES.

"Patience in well-doing."—Rom. 2:6-11.

In one country Church, the members rehearse the war exploits of one of her young soldiers. Stationed on a platform in the crotch of a tree, this youth stood to his post with a machine gun and held the enemy back until assistance came. His two companions being wounded, he lowered them to the ground, but stayed alone with the gun, while rain after rain of bullets literally stripped the tree of foliage. For three terrific hours the young man held his own.

Recently, the ex-service man came back to a "home-coming" at the old Church. He found it just as it had been for years. At the organ was the woman who had presided there year after year, and at Sunday School he listened to the same teacher who had instructed him and prayed for him as a boy. During the dinner on the lawn, the young man protested against the honors being heaped upon him. "I'm no greater hero than you folks here at home. You have been at your tasks year after year always facing the discouragements of a small backwoods Church. And you have not faltered. That's what I call true hero stuff."

Prayer.—We long for Thy peace of heart, O Lord, and crave the happiness that is not found in the search for pleasure. Give us that deep and overrunning joy of the pure in heart, who shall see God. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE SERVICE THAT GOD LOVES.

"But go ye and learn what that meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice."—Matt. 9:10-13.

Although we have had two thousand years longer in which to learn, we have not yet learned what it means that God requires of us mercy rather than sacrifice. Sacrifice represents man's obligation paid direct to God. Mercy represents man's obligation, paid no less truly to God, but paid through attitude toward and contact with and service to man's fellows. It is the latter that is most pleasing.

The Christian requirement of mercy roots back into our very conception of God. We believe in a God of justice, but we put our faith in a God of mercy. If at the heart of the Eternal there were only justice, if God gave to man only that which man deserved and which he had a right to claim, it would not fare well with most of us. We have the Christian faith that God's attitude toward us is determined, not by our rights, but by the love in His heart. The Christian should be not only just, but merciful, because of the great mercy which has been shown to him. We are ingrates indeed if having ourselves been shown mercy, we in turn fail to show mercy. We pray for mercy; and that same prayer doth teach us all to render the deeds of mercy."

Prayer.—O God, we pray this day for the desire to live as Thou wouldst have us live. If we make money, may it be to use it so that those in poverty may know some joy that money itself cannot purchase. And always make the spiritual of more value to us than the material. Amen.

SUNDAY.

RECOVERY OF THE LOST SOUL.

"So He drove out the man; and He placed at the east of the Garden of Eden the cherubim and the flame of a sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life."—Gen. 3:24.

Although man was driven out of Paradise and forbidden access to the tree of life, he was not forever to be excluded. God promises that we shall eat again with Christ in the paradise of God, where the leaves of the tree shall be for the healing of the nations.

With the driving out of man, the education begins. Which of he will submit to it is to bring him back to the tree fully restored. Everything of God, from that time to this has been to teach man the haplessness, the folly and the unsatisfactoriness of a selfish life, and by every discipline of sorrow and joy to bring him to see the nobleness, grandeur and glory—the perfection of obedience and consecration. When that is learned, we shall again partake freely and fully of the tree, and live forever.

Prayer.—Our Father, show unto us this day Thy love in the flaming sword which guards the tree of life. As we learn by the discipline of the thorns in the fields that we must labor and sweat if we would eat of the fruit of the fields, teach us all the discipline thought best for us in the sword by the tree of life, and help us to fight to win our souls. In Christ's name. Amen.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

DEAR LITTLE FRIENDS:

I want to tell you something. It's something you can ask your Sunday School teacher to do for you. I just know she will do it, too, for Sunday School teachers are always interested in Kiddies, and what Kiddies like. Here in our Church we have a story hour every week. What is a story hour? Ch-ee-ee! listen, then, and I'll explain it to you, dears; and, gee! I know you will want one right away in your Church.

Every Wednesday afternoon, at a certain hour, the little folks come to the Church basement. Some one who loves these little folks very, very much gets a beautiful story all ready to tell to them. After they cut out some funny little pictures, or make something for their scrap-books, they all sit around in a circle and listen to the story. Then after a while, the little folks play and play, and sing and sing; and first thing you know, dears, it's time to go home, and every one says good-by until next week's story hour. Oh, it's the mostest fun, Kiddies, and it's the best way you ever saw to learn to play fairly and to hear good lessons, and to learn things our school teachers do not have time to teach us. Don't you want your Sunday School teacher to start a story hour for you? Ask her this very day—please do! Then write me all about what she says. If she needs some help, maybe she will write to me, too. It's loads of fun, Kiddies! I 'spect you would like it almost as much as school. Wouldn't you, now? honest!

The sun has come out, and we are all so happy today. I must run and get the little Ford and go to see some little sick Kiddies.

Good-by, dears; run and play now in the pretty sunshine. YOUR EDITOR.

DISORDERLY MR. DESK.

By Edna Billings.

"Get away from me, I can't breathe with you children climbing all over me," gasped thin Mr. Ruler. "Mrs. Tablet, why don't you look after your children better?"

For, you see, it was Mrs. Tablet's children, her little pages, that had been pulled away from her and scattered all over the desk; and Mr. Ruler was buried under them.

"Dearie, me! I wish I could keep my children home with me like they used to be, but it's simply impossible. You must remember that this is Marian's desk, and we all belong to Marian."

"Yes, I remember it only too well," sighed Mr. Ruler.

"I think we all do," said big Mr. Desk, "and also that little Marian is not the most orderly person in the world."

"Well, I guess she isn't orderly; no, indeed!" snapped Miss Inkbottle. "She goes away every day and leaves my cap off and lets a draft down my neck, and I'm getting all dried up. I can't last much longer. I think it's a shame, too. I don't want to live forever, but I should like to live my natural life and not have my end hastened by a careless child forgetting to put my cap on."

Miss Inkbottle cried and cried, and kind Mrs. Blotter, who was sitting beside her, helped to dry her tears.

Mrs. Blotter is such a kind person. Many are the tears she has dried and many the inky little fingers she has cleaned.

"Don't cry any more now, Miss Inkbottle," she said comfortingly; "it won't help matters any, and perhaps Marian will outgrow her careless habits after a while."

"Not in my time, I fear," sobbed Miss Inkbottle, and refused to be consoled.

"Oh, goody! Look who is coming now," exclaimed Mr. Desk. "It's Nora. Today is cleaning day, and I'm going to get straightened up. You'll all be put where you belong now."

In a short time all the desk people were put in place and they began to feel happy again.

"Oh, my dear children, here you are all back. How glad I am to have you in my arms again," joyously exclaimed Mrs. Tablet.

"I'm just as glad as you are, Mrs. Tablet," said Mr. Ruler. "That is, I'm glad they aren't on top of me any longer. Now, I can breathe again."

"I feel comfortable again, too, now that I've got my cap on. I hope it will stay on now," Miss Inkbottle sighed contentedly.

"None of you are any happier than I am over the change," said Mr. Desk. "I prefer having you all in your proper places instead of all in a heap on my lap. Here comes Marian now. Let's all listen and see what she has to say."

Marian burst into the room and looked around. "Oh! how lovely my desk looks. Who fixed it? There's my ruler that I thought I had lost. And my papers are all straightened up. Why, the cork is in the inkbottle. I haven't seen the cork for a week. Oh! I'm so glad it's all in order, and I'm never going to let it get out of order again."

"Let us hope she doesn't," whispered Mr. Desk.

LORA SURPRISES THEM.

Grandmother Martin watched her daughter's trembling fingers as she basted the skirt of a filmy pink net dress onto the waist. "Jane, why do you work yourself nearly sick to get that dress done today?" she finally asked, solicitously.

"Lora said she absolutely wouldn't go to her senior party unless it was finished, and I'd hate for her to miss that," answered Mrs. Sessions, nervously. "It's 5 o'clock now, and I don't see how I'm going to finish it for this evening. I've done my best, but I'm afraid that won't be any excuse to Lora."

Grandmother Martin's lips compressed to a fine line. "Jane," she said, "I've lived in your home a long time, and you know I've never interfered with anything, but I really can't let this pass without saying something. Every time Lora doesn't get exactly her own way she raises a perfect tempest in the home, and we all suffer. She is almost a young lady, and I think it is a shame for you to continue to sacrifice yourself to allow her to grow up thinking only of herself."

Jane Sessions shrank back as if stung. "I know," she finally admitted; "but she's always been that way, and I've never seemed to be able to overcome it. Other members on both sides of the family have had her disposition, so I can hardly blame her."

"Nonsense!" declared Grandmother Martin, emphatically. "We could all blame our faults onto some one else if we tried, and how dreadful it would be if every one shirked responsibility that way."

Before Mrs. Sessions could answer, the front door banged, and, her fingers trembling more than ever, she bent again over her sewing. A moment later, a sweet-faced blond girl, with a smile on her lips, appeared in the doorway. She hurried over to Mrs. Sessions.

"Oh, mother, I'm so sorry you've worked so hard on that dress," she exclaimed, regretfully. "You can't possibly get it finished now, so put it away and rest a while. I'll wear the old yellow one tonight and save this pink one for some other party."

Mrs. Sessions gasped. "But Lora, you said you wouldn't go unless you could have it. Maybe I can get it at least basted together so you can wear it this evening," she answered tremulously.

"I know I said that, and I'm sorry because it has caused you to work so hard; but I don't mind wearing the yellow a bit. I think I'll run up now and start to get ready. Daddy gets home so late, I wouldn't have time to dress after dinner."

She kissed her mother and then her grandmother and hurried out of the room. The two older women looked at each other in bewilderment as the happy strains of a pleasing song reached their ears from Lora's bedroom overhead.

"What could have happened?" demanded her mother finally.

"It's too good to be true," replied Grandmother Martin, skeptically.

At 8 o'clock Lora left with pink cheeks and shining eyes, wearing her last year's party dress. Her mother waited up for her, and when she went in to Lora's bedroom the last thing to kiss her good-night, she put her arms around her daughter. "Lora, dear, you do not know how much I appreciated your consideration of me this afternoon, when I was unable to finish your dress on time," she said softly.

"Oh, mother, I'm so ashamed of the way I've acted so many times," Lora almost sobbed; "but I'll never do it again. Today Marie said something in school that provoked me terribly, and, to keep the girls from seeing how I felt, I rushed into the cloak-room, but I was seething inside. Then I caught sight of myself in the mirror, and I almost thought the awful-looking person was some one else. Oh, mother, if I look that way outside, what a dreadful tempest there must be inside!"

"I'm so glad you've seen the truth at last," breathed her mother thankfully.

"Yes, mother, I'm so happy to think I've learned to still the tempest," answered Lora, earnestly.
—Presbyterian Banner.

THE MAN IN THE CHIMNEY.

By Clinton Scollard.

There's a fellow in the chimney in this white, bright weather
Who makes such funny noises in the flue;
He hasn't any manners, for he bristles up like thistles
When I ask him most politely, "Who are you?"
He just puckers, and he whistles down a
"W-h-e-w! w-h-e-w! w-h-e-w!"

If I could catch this fellow who is hiding in the chimney,
I can't exactly say what I should do,
But I think a proper beating would reward him for repeating
Those saucy words up there within the flue;
Perhaps he'd be more civil in his greeting than a
"W-h-e-w! w-h-e-w! w-h-e-w!"

I THANK THEE.

By Pauline Rinker.

I'm thankful, Lord, as I can be,
That I can sing sweet songs to Thee.
I thank Thee for Thy loving care,
And for the privilege of prayer.
I thank Thee for my home and school,
I thank Thee for the Golden Rule
That helps me know the loving way
To treat my playmates every day.
So many gifts come from above—
But best of all is Thy great love.

WILLIAMS.

Sarah Margaret Williams, wife of John Williams, at Whistler's Chapel, departed this life February 9, 1925, aged about 74 years and 4 months. Sister Williams was a consistent member of the Christian Church at Whistler's Chapel, and highly respected by all who knew her.

She is survived by her husband, two sons, and three daughters. She was a great sufferer during her last illness, but, we believe, has gone to enjoy a sweet heavenly rest from all suffering and care.

Funeral services at Whistler's Chapel February 11, 1925, and the remains laid to rest in the Cedar Grove Cemetery.

A. W. ANDES.

ROUDABUSH.

Mrs. Fannie C. Roudabush, widow of Andrew Roudabush, was born April 17, 1843, and died January 26, 1925, making her age, therefore, 81 years, 9 months and 9 days. She was a faithful member of the Lutheran Church, as was also her husband. She had no children, and was the last surviving member of her family. She spent the last years of her life with a niece at Hinton, Va.

Funeral services were held at Mt. Horeb U. B. Church January 28, 1925, and the body was laid to rest by the side of her husband in the adjoining cemetery.

A. W. ANDES.

YOUR EVENING YEARS.

Your old age can be the best part of your lifetime or the worst, depending entirely on what you do with the surplus earnings of your productive years. Two facts ought to be faced squarely, and here they are—

Your earning capacity will not always be as great as it is today. It may increase before it lessens, but, if you live to old age, it will decrease. That is the first fact, and it is inevitably certain.

The second fact is this: Unless the savings and investments of your present years take care of you in old age, then charity must do it. There is no middle course.

There is nothing unpleasant about this unless you choose to look on the dark side of it. Look on the bright side, make up your mind to have a good time of it every year you live, save and invest regularly—and your evening years will be as full of restfulness and glowing color as a summer sunset.

We know from years of experience with thousands that the regular saver—the pay-day depositor—is sure to get ahead.

EDUCATION IN CHINA.

K. T. Lo, of Peking, in an address at Indianapolis, said:

In China, the German system of the gymnasium was in vogue before the war. Since then, American education entirely has taken its place. China sends more than 3,000 students to American universities every year. She sends hardly 1,000 to all of the European countries put together. At present, there are 50,000 students in Peking alone studying in Chinese universities conducted after American methods. After these students have graduated, a good number of them will teach school.

Since the war, the percentage of illiteracy has been reduced to a point where only 25 per cent of the population cannot read or write. The war in China has showed up the progress of education considerably, with a large number of the universities running at only part time.

Mr. Lo said that of the 3,000 Chinese students in America, 1,000 earned their own way. The other 2,000, he added, were supported by the Boxer indemnity fund and other scholarships.

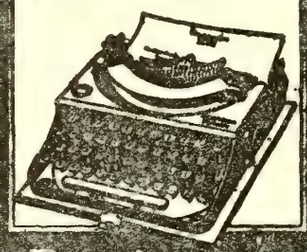
FULTON—PRESTON.

A lovely marriage was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Paris on Friday, January 30, 1925, when their sister, Miss Jewel Preston, and Mr. Paul Fulton, of Walnut Cove, met before an improvised altar of palms and lilies, Dr. C. H. Rowland, pastor of the First Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C., administering the vows that made them one.

After a solo by Miss Eugenia Patterson, the bridal party entered—Miss Elizabeth Little, of Winston-Salem, with Tom Preston, of Belews Creek; Mrs. C. C. Fordham, of Chapel Hill, dame of honor; Mr. Lew W. Preston, of Lynchburg, with the groom, while the bride entered with her father, Mr. A. W. Preston, of Belews Creek.

The ring ceremony was used, and following the marriage, an informal reception was given. Miss Preston was formerly a student at Elon College, and has made her home here in Greensboro and at Belews Creek. The groom is one of the leading business men of Walnut Cove, where they go to make their home.

Something You Have Been Waiting For



Remington Portable Typewriter

—with Standard Keyboard and every other feature common to the larger machines. Case only four inches high.

Price, with case, $60.

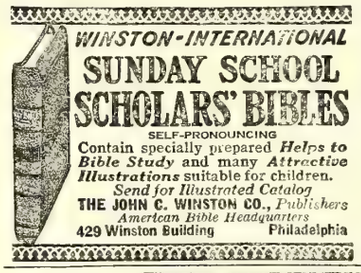
Send Your Order to THE CHRISTIAN SUN Richmond, Va.

WINTER TOURIST TICKETS
—ALL RESORTS—
SOUTH AND SOUTHWEST

CALIFORNIA
Via New Orleans and "Sunset Limited."

INFORMATION, ITINERATIES, RESERVATIONS
Furnished in Detail Upon Request.

Apply to Local Agent, or Address
F. H. POSTON, Division Passenger Agent,
Southern Railway System,
809 East Main Street, - - Richmond, Virginia.



WINSTON-INTERNATIONAL
SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLES
SELF-PRONOUNCING
Contain specially prepared Helps to Bible Study and many Attractive Illustrations suitable for children.
Send for Illustrated Catalog
THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO., Publishers
American Bible Headquarters
429 Winston Building Philadelphia

V. E. MAREAN
Pipe Organ Expert
TUNING — REPAIRING
REBUILDING
Motors Installed Yearly Contracts
P. O. Box 864, - Richmond, Va.
Phone, Boulevard 7011-J

Health and good looks
—the reward of internal cleanliness.

IF YOU do not keep clean internally your looks and health are undermined together. A clogged intestine breeds poisons that reach every part of the body. These poisons ruin the complexion and undermine health. Constipation brings on such ailments as headaches, bilious attacks and insomnia, each of which saps your health and vitality.

Avoid Laxatives—say Doctors

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

Nujol
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
For Internal Cleanliness

WILSON.

Mr. Calvin D. Wilson departed this life suddenly on January 20, 1925, at his daughter's home, 2005 North Main Street, where he was visiting. He had suffered from a stroke of paralysis a few weeks before, which partially robbed him of speech. He was twice married—first, to Miss Celestia Fryer, and second, to Miss Emily Smith, Fayetteville, N. C. Both preceded him to the grave.

He served throughout the Civil War. He is survived by the following children: Mrs. W. E. Alderson, Danville, Va.; Mrs. J. A. Hammer, Randleman, N. C.; Mrs. J. W. Mitchell, Greensboro, N. C.; Mrs. J. D. Simpson, Burlington, N. C.; Mrs. B. W. Saunders, Salisbury, N. C.; Mrs. F. A. Collins, Cramerton, N. C.; Mrs. J. W. Pratt, Leaksville, N. C.; R. V. Wilson, Nebo, N. C.; M. P. Wilson, Spokane, Wash., and H. C. Wilson, Pocatella, Idaho. May the Lord comfort the bereaved.

Funeral services were conducted from Mrs. Alderson's home by the writer, assisted by Rev. C. J. D. Parker, and interment was made in Leemont Cemetery.

Danville, Va. L. L. WYRICK.

ISELEY.

On January 17, 1925, Bro. Geo. Iseley departed this life, being in his sixty-seventh year. He was a son of Rev. Alfred Iseley, one of the pious preachers of our Church. He leaves a wife and two children to mourn their loss.

There were five brothers and two sisters—Rev. A. Frank Iseley is one of them, who still survives; Mrs. L. M. Clymer, of Greensboro, is a sister. Bro. Iseley was a good, earnest Christian man. His life was spent in service for good; peace to his memory.

His burial was at Bethlehem, Alamance County, N. C., the Church of his boyhood and membership by the writer who conducted his funeral and buried him Masonically. There, on that hillside, the crowd left his body in that grave, with beautiful wreaths of flowers upon it, never to see his face again until the resurrection. He is not dead, but only sleepeth. "Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep."

J. W. PATTON.

FLORENCE.

Died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Newton L. King, Burlington, N. C., Mrs. Jane Florence, widow of John Florence, February 11, 1925, in her ninety-fourth year. Her husband died in 1883. She leaves two children, Mrs. Newton L. King and Mrs. J. S. Coleman.

She united with Prospect Methodist Episcopal Church, Caswell County, at the age of 18 years, and remained a member till death. She was quiet, peaceful, hopeful in sickness and in health. I never heard her utter a word of complaint. She served her day and generation well. Surely she came to the grave like as a shock of corn in its season. The funeral services were conducted from the Union Christian Church by the writer, assisted by Dr. J. O. Lankford.

"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints."

Burlington, N. C. P. H. FLEMING.

ELON COLLEGE---CO-EDUCATIONAL

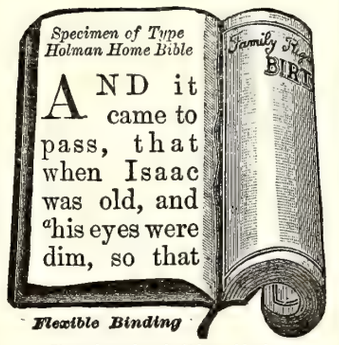
WHITLEY AUDITORIUM BUILDING
One of the Group of Five New Buildings now Completed.

Elon, in her rebuilding program, has been looking to the future. Ten buildings, new and modern equipment, and a highly trained and efficient faculty are at the service of the future leaders of our Church. The phenomenal growth of Elon in the past two years indicates a larger growth throughout the whole denomination in the years just ahead. Make Elon your own Church College in a personal way by your patronage and prayerful co-operation.

HOLMAN BIBLES

For Old Folks and the Home

EXTRA LARGE PRINT WITH REFERENCES



Specimen of Type Holman Home Bible
AND it came to pass, that when Isaac was old, and his eyes were dim, so that
Flexible Binding

Size when closed, 6½ x 9¼ inches

Printed from large Clear Pica Type, with Marginal References, Family Record and Maps. This HOME BIBLE is new and very desirable for every day use, containing all the advantages of a Family Bible in a compact size that can be easily handled, with Record for Births, Marriages and Deaths. The best Bible obtainable for old folks who need extra large clear print and a light-weight book.

No. 2014. Durably Bound in French Seal Leather, full flexible covers, round corners, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, gold titles.

Price—Post Paid..... 4.85

HOLMAN BIBLES

NEW BLACK-FACED TYPE TEACHERS' BIBLE

The very latest and newest Teachers' Bible published, and it includes every possible improvement in Bible making. The type is a clean, clear, sharp Black Face, which is printed on the finest paper obtainable. Easy to read (can be read in the dimmest light), and is just the page for those suffering from impaired eyesight. Compact in size, light in weight, easy to carry.

Absolutely flexible binding. Contains Old and New Testaments, Treasury of Biblical Information, Practical Comparative Concordance, Oriental Light on the Bible, Four Thousand Questions and Answers, Fifteen New Maps in Colors, about 1500 pages in all.

Size, 5¼ x 7¾ inches

Specimen of Type
THE LORD is my shephe not want.
2 He maketh me to lie green pastures: he leadeth the still waters.

No. 4412. Bound in Seal Grain Morocco, with overlapping covers, rounded corners, red under gold edges. Silk head bands and silk marker.

Price—Post Paid..... 4.20

No. 433X. Holman India Paper. Algerian Morocco, Leather Lined, Silk Sewed, Divinity Circuit, round corners, carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and Helps as above.

Price—Post Paid..... 9.35

MONEY TO LEND ON IMPROVED FARMS--FAVORABLE TERMS

Write for Details

SO. BOND & MORTGAGE CO.
627 E. Main St. - - Richmond, Va.

Medical College of Virginia

Medicine Dentistry
Pharmacy Nursing

New Buildings. Well-equipped Laboratories, under the direction of full-time, competent teachers.

The Memorial Hospital, Dooley Hospital, St. Philip Hospital, are owned and controlled by the Medical College of Virginia, and offer every facility for thorough clinical teaching.

Staffs composed of the Faculty of the College. Additional clinical facilities are offered through other institutions in Richmond.

For full information and catalogue, address—

J. R. McCAULEY, Secretary.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D.....Editor
W. W. STALEY, D. D.....Associate
W. A. HARPER, LL. D.....Associate
R. C. HELFENSTEIN, D. D...Associate
REV. S. C. HARRELL.....Associate
REV. S. M. LYNAM.....News Editor
P. J. KERNODLE....Managing Editor

Subscription Rates.

One Year $2.00
Six Months 1.00

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post-Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows the date of expiration. Please renew at least two weeks in advance.

Change of Address: Give both old and new post-office when asking that your address be changed.

When subscriptions are made for friends, state whether paper is to be stopped at end of the year.

Remittances: Make all remittances to "The Christian Sun," 1536 East Broad Street, Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and Marriage Notices, limited to 100 words, are published free of charge. All over 100 words, published at 1 cent a word. Remittance should accompany copy. Write names distinctly.

Advertising Rates: "Want Ads," 2 cents a word an insertion. Display Rates quoted upon request.

FOR SALE.

A 40-bbl., electric-driven, fully-equipped modern Flour Roller-Mill, Corn and Feed Mill, located right in the town of Elon College, near railroad siding, on acre lot; hard-surface and sand-clay roads leading out in all directions.. A good custom grain mill and good business opportunity for the right man, as well as advantage of a high-grade high school and high-class college.

Terms: Part cash; balance on long terms. Apply—

C. R. LOVE, - - BURLINGTON, N. C.

CLEM.

Eva Clarice Clem was born January 11, 1897, and died January 11, 1925, aged 28 years. Sister Clem was a consistent member of the Dry Run Christian Church. She was twice married. Her first husband, Charley Wood, died in camp during the great World War. She is survived by her husband, John D. Clem; her parents, one sister, one half-sister, and four half-brothers.

She was much loved by all who knew her. An infant son, Vance Daniel, was buried with her. Funeral services at Dry Run on January 13, 1925.

A. W. ANDES.

CARTER.

James Wilson Carter, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Carter, of Holland, Va., died February 4, 1925, aged fourteen months and nineteen days. In the absence of the pastor, Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, the funeral was conducted by the writer at Holland Christian Church and the little remains laid away in the family cemetery at Mrs. Carter's mother's, near Holland.

The writer joins with a large number of friends in extending our sincerest sympathy in this great affliction.

N. G. NEWMAN.

WILLIAMS.

Charles Ralph Williams, infant son of William and Sallie Williams, was born April 30, 1924, and died February 5, 1925. His age was 9 months and 5 days. Funeral services were held at Whistler's Chapel, February 7, 1925, and interment made in Cedar Grove Cemetery.

May the beckoning hands of the children call the attention of parents and others towards that heavenly land.

A. W. ANDES.

OXFORD TEACHERS' BIBLES

An Oxford Teachers' Bible has references and 300 pages of helps that are a mine of information to Bible students. The helps are arranged in alphabetical order, like a dictionary. They are accurate, comprehensive and up-to-date. A few styles are listed here. Many others are described in our Bible catalogue, mailed upon request.

04403 [This size print] Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 6⅞ x 4¾ inches $4.00

0623x [Same Bible as 04403] Printed on Oxford India paper. Only 1 inch thick..... $6.00

04453 [This size print] French Morocco leather binding, overlapping covers, 7¼ x 5 in. $4.35

0773x [Same Bible as 04453] Printed on Oxford India paper. A remarkably thin and light Bible. (Only 1 inch thick) $7.75

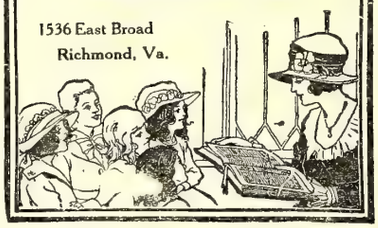
05453 [Same Bible as 04453] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $6.25

05453x [Same Bible as 0773x] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $8.75

04523 [This size print] A self-pronouncing Oxford Bible. Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 8½ x 5½ inches... $5.50

0923x [Same Bible as 04523] Printed on Oxford India paper, only 1⅛ inches thick... $9.75

ORDER FROM
"THE CHRISTIAN SUN"
1536 East Broad
Richmond, Va.



FOR GOOD HOME COOKING
MRS. COOK'S CAFETERIA
805 East Grace Street.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

A Co-Educational School

LOCATED AT

WADLEY, ALABAMA

This School offers the last two years of Academic work and the first two years of College work.

The following Courses are offered in the—

COLLEGE DEPARTMENT: English, Bible, Religious Education, Latin, French, History, Education, Mathematics and Science.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENTS: Music—Piano, Voice; Commercial Department—Bookkeeping, Typewriting, and Shorthand.

Due attention will be given Athletics, such as Tennis, Basket-Ball, Baseball, Football.

The government of the School is mild, but firm, endeavoring to create a home atmosphere as much as possible, not merely to maintain discipline, but to cultivate Christian character.

This is our own School, located within reach of all in this section, and the cost is less than any other College within reasonable distance of those who would attend School from this section.

Send for a Catalogue giving full description of Courses and entrance conditions.

S. L. BEOUGHER, President
Wadley, - - - - Alabama.

HOLMAN BIBLES

DURABLE FLEXIBLE BINDINGS — THE BEST EDITIONS OF THE WORLD'S BEST BOOK — WILL NOT BREAK IN THE BAKE

FOR CHILDREN
PICTORIAL BIBLES WITH HELPS

The text is self-pronouncing, by the aid of which children can learn to pronounce the difficult Scripture proper names.

Specimen of Type

27 And the boys grew: and Esau was a cunning hunter.
5 And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof.

Size, 5⅜ x 3½ inches. With beautiful photo views of scenes in Bible lands distributed throughout the text. Also maps of Bible lands in colors. Also new Practical Helps to Bible Study, especially designed for instructing children in scriptural information.

No. 9111. French Seal Leather, overlapping covers, round corners, gold edges, gold titles.
Our Price—Post Paid..... 2.30

COLORED PICTURE EDITION

Portraying in natural colors, scenes and places taken from nature and life in the Holy Land.

No. 9211. Same as No. 9111, but with Beautifully Colored Pictures.
Our Price—Post Paid..... 2.40

FOR INTERMEDIATE SUNDAY-SCHOOL SCHOLARS

Large Clear Black Type, Self-Pronouncing, containing Helps to Bible Study, 4000 Questions and Answers, Maps in Colors, and Presentation Page. A Beautiful Gift Bible.

Specimen of Type.

22 And the prophet Is'ra-el, and said unto thyself, and mark, and for at the return of t

Size, 7 x 5 inches.

No. 215. Divinity Circuit Style, Bound in French Seal Leather, round corners, red under gold edges, with silk head bands and purple silk marker, gold titles, etc.
Our Price—Post Paid..... 3.10

No. 3215RL. Red Letter Scholars' Bible, same Bible as No. 215, with all the Sayings of Christ printed in Red, and with Red and gold INLAID PANEL SIDE TITLES, also Beautifully Colored Pictures.
Our Price—Post Paid..... 3.45

Holman Self-Pronouncing

VEST POCKET TESTAMENTS

Clearest Print in Smallest Size
4⅝ x 2¾ x ⅜ inches

Specimen of Type.

AND the third day there was a marriage in Cā'nā of Gāl'i-lee; and the mother of Je'sus was

2133K. Bound in durable Morocco Grain Semble Leather, flexible limp, gilt titles ..... .60

2113. French Morocco, genuine leather, flexible limp, gold titles, rounded corners, gold edges..... .70

2115P. French Morocco, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, with the Book of Psalms included $1.10

ILLUSTRATED VEST POCKET TESTAMENT
With Pictures of Holy Land Scenes

2814. French Morocco, limp, gold side title round corners, red under gold edges ..... .85

RED LETTER VEST POCKET TESTAMENT

With all the words of our Lord printed in red.

13RL. French Morocco, flexible limp, gold side title on red panel, gold edges. .85

15RLP. French Morocco, overlapping covers, flexible, gold side title on red panel, red under gold edges, with Book of Psalms included $1.25

INDIA PAPER VEST POCKET TESTAMENT
Thin as a Wafer

2136XP. Fine Grain Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lined to edge, with Psalms included $2.25

Send Your Orders to
THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Official Organ of the Southern Christian Convention

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY. IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY. IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXVII. RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1925. NUMBER 9.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

The Conquest of Selfishness.—

One of the greatest enemies to human happiness is selfishness. Down through the ages it has been responsible for war and for suffering of all kinds. If it could be gotten out of human life, the kingdom of God would very soon be established. The only way to get it out of your life is to accept Jesus Christ as your Saviour and follow His example of living.

What May Idaho Expect?—

By a vote of thirty-five to twenty-three, the lower house of the Idaho Legislature defeated a bill recently which would have made it possible for children to have been excused from the sessions of the public schools of that State for the purpose of religious instruction. There is to be no week-day schools of religion for Idaho. It is said that all the religious forces of the State were behind the bill. In its failure, and what will naturally be denied to the children of Idaho from that failure, what may Idaho expect from the coming generation of boys and girls?

A Million for Bibles.—

The New York Bible Society plans to increase its resources by the raising of one million dollars. Last year the society distributed nearly eight hundred thousand volumes of the Bible in sixty-seven languages. Seventy thousand of these went to immigrants on Ellis Island, 121,000 to sailors and seamen, several hundred to the Merchant Marine Library Association, over eight thousand to the rooms of New York hotels. The society handles no literature except the Bible, but it does much to make that a best seller, and to place it in the hands of those for whom they believe it has a special and a needed lesson.

Something We Need to Imitate.—

Realizing the need for Sunday School teachers who are well trained for the Hebrew Sunday Schools, the Hebrew Union School is offering a training course which requires two evenings each week for two years for completion. Two hundred young Hebrews have enrolled in the school. The essentials of Hebrew history, Bible, religion, philosophy, and pedagogy are the subjects taught. The school maintains a placement bureau to secure positions for its graduates. The Hebrews are doing something which we of the Christian Church need to follow. It is no longer true that just anybody who is good can teach a class in Sunday School. The teacher must be good, but it is equally important that the teacher know what and how to teach.

The Clean Books' Bill.—

The so-called clean books' bill now before the New York Legislature ought to interest us all. The New York law, as it now stands, forbids the publication of obscenity. The proposed bill would so amend the present law as to make it possible to indict on part or parts of the publication and forbid the use of expert testimony. It would not consider the effect as a whole. It would demand the elimination of much of Shakespeare, and would play havoc with much which we have come to regard as superlatively important in literature. We believe that the people should be safeguarded against filth, but naughtiness does not become attractive until prohibited. It is well known that free fresh air and bright sunshine does much to eliminate disease. It is just as true of books, and the New York bill would, by its stringency, defeat its purpose.

El Porvenir Saved.—

El Porvenir, the Protestant College in Madrid, was forced during the war to place mortgages on its property. Some of them for a long time, but one which came due on December 31st. The college was unable to meet the payment, and the mortgagee demanded full payment, and if the money was not forthcoming the entire plant, representing an investment of a half-million dollars, would revert by foreclosure to the Jesuit power of Spain. The friendly Churches of Europe helped some, but not nearly enough. Two Spanish Protestants came to America and appealed to the Federal Council of Churches' Bureau for the Relief of European Churches. The money was forwarded just in the niche of time through the representative of the bureau in Europe, Dr. Adolph Keller. Much more could be done for the great Protestant organization in Spain if Americans realized how important this work is as the sole Protestant college in that capital.

An Unreached Goal.—

The Southern Baptist Church has come to the end of its five-year financial program with a goal of seventy-five million dollars, with that goal unreached. The Church, however, received fifty-nine million dollars. It has also received some remarkable accessions. During the five years, the denomination added three times as many new Churches as in the preceding five years, seven times as many new Sunday Schools were organized, and ten times as many new pupils enrolled. During that period, there was a membership gain of 532,841. It is strange, too, that the Southern Baptists, among whom denominational loyalty is stressed perhaps more than in any other Church, were able to enlist only 37 per cent of its members in this great financial enterprise. The benevolent giving of the Church, however, has risen from three million to eleven million dollars a year. Henceforth, the Southern Baptists will place their benevolent programs on a year-to-year basis with all the other denominations in common.

The Isle of Pines or Self-Respect.—

Following the Spanish-American War, the State Department negotiated two treaties with Cuba. By one of these treaties, Cuba was ceded the Isle of Pines, a sand plot of about six hundred square miles, and by the other we received the Guantanamo Bay. The Guantanamo Bay treaty was promptly ratified. The Isle of Pines treaty was allowed to rest undisturbed. Now, that the matter has come up, some of the Senators wish to keep the Isle of Pines. Americans have invested money in land, and we ought to protect American interests, the Senators contend.

As a matter of fact, Cuba has always administered the government of the Isle of Pines, and it has been considered a Cuban possession. For the United States to go back on her pledged word after twenty years would shake the faith of Latin-America and the world in our dependability. It would win for us the contempt of our neighbors. In order to retain our self-respect and the respect of those nations among whom we must live, we must ratify the treaty.

A Revelation of Charity.—

For more than two weeks, the people of America have watched the newspapers anxiously for news of Floyd Collins, who was trapped by a falling boulder in San Cave, about six miles from Cave City, Ky. The untiring efforts to rescue him have ended. When the rescuers reached him, Collins was dead. His body was not removed, but sealed in the arms of nature, which held him those last fearful days of life. Newspapers have given liberally of their space to tell of the heroic efforts made by those working for the rescue of the entombed man. The great thing in it all, the revelation which has interested us, is that a nation could become so vitally interested in a man hitherto totally unknown to them that the money, the labor, and the prayers of thousands could be enlisted in a common effort of human kindness. It is a revelation of charity for which the Christian world should give devout thanks. For those two weeks, this tragedy of a single man and the humane efforts to serve him in his need have predominated in the newspapers, proving that there is a kindly response in the hearts of men still. The rescue party failed to save Collins, but they have contributed, or should contribute, to a greater faith in the innate goodness of humanity and the increased realization of the kinship among men.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Your attention is called to the mission study books and supplies advertised in THE SUN.

Dr. W. A. Harper, chairman of the Board of Religious Education, attended a meeting of his board in Dayton, Ohio, last week.

Rev. McD. Howsare, Secretary of Evangelism, Dayton, Ohio, has been conducting a series of meetings in First Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C., with Dr. Rowland, the pastor, the past week.

Dr. W. T. Walters, Richmond, Va., writes, under date February 17th: "Dr. Denison was fine in stewardship work last Sunday. We had one new Church member and six additions to the Sunday School."

The Elon College Catalogue for 1925 is off the press and is now being mailed out to interested patrons. It is a neatly printed bulletin of 136 pages, and gives a complete prospectus of the college and list of faculty and students.

Dr. W. H. Denison, Dayton, Ohio, rendered great and invaluable service in stewardship work through North Carolina and Virginia recently, and any Church or group of Churches securing his services for a stewardship institute is to be counted fortunate indeed.

A number of friends from Elon, the writer included, visited Rev. J. W. Wellons ("Uncle Wellons"), at the Masonic Home, Greensboro, N. C., last Thursday. Bro. Wellons is getting along nicely, eating and sleeping well and is enjoying his home, also the many letters and visits he is receiving from his friends.

In the next issue of THE SUN a list of Sunday School supplies will be presented, including lesson stories for children, picture cards illustrating the Uniform and Group Graded Lessons, and general supplies and equipments. These will include literature adapted to the beginners' grade, primary, junior, intermediate and senior departments.

"The Christian Annual" for 1925 is now in print and has been mailed or shipped by express to all Churches or persons subscribing in the Southern Christian Convention. It is a large volume and is very neatly printed and bound. A copy can be had by addressing THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 East Broad Street, Richmond, Va., and sending 50 cents with your request for a copy. It contains invaluable information and is worth the price.

Several hundred men, laymen of the North Carolina Synod of the Presbyterian Church, met in a two days' session at Greensboro last week to discuss the all-important theme, "Men and the Church." This question was raised: The women have their Church organizations, such as aid and missionary societies; the young people have their organizations in the Church, such as Christian Endeavor, etc.; but what are the men in the Church—the laymen—doing in any sort of organized way to carry on the work of the kingdom? Come to think of it, why a Woman's Missionary Society (to do the biggest business on earth), but no men's society to aid in this same great task? We wonder!

The Federal Council has issued a four-page pamphlet entitled "A Call to Prayer"—an invitation for all Churches to unite in Christian fellowship and intercession during the pre-Easter season. This leaflet gives the program to be followed, with dates and suggestions, and also daily Bible readings for the season. It has also issued a thirty-page booklet entitled "The Fellowship of Prayer," which seems quite worth while in any pastor's hands or home. THE SUN is permitted to announce that either or both of these publications may be secured by any pastor who will send his address, with request, to Rev. Charles L. Goodell, Executive Secretary, 105 East Twenty-second Street, New York. There will be no charges either for postage or the publication.

Many good words are expressed by subscribers in sending in their renewals. The editors should be permitted to read at least a part of these letters. One writes: "I enjoy every issue, and do not want to miss it." No doubt, THE SUN, to this reader, is as a weekly letter from his old home. He is a man of affairs.

Another: "Please find enclosed a post-office money order for $5.00, for which credit my subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, for which I will thank you kindly. I certainly enjoy reading THE SUN, and could not get along well without it. With all good wishes for your success"—and then follows the signature. Why may not all subscribers feel thus kindly disposed?

And another: "Enclosed please find check for $6.00 for all arrearage and up to March 1, 1925, and renewal for another year. Many thanks for the past. I can safely say I have been helped spiritually by reading THE CHRISTIAN SUN. I look for it and read it. I don't think I could live happy without it. I have no excuse for not renewing—pure negligence." After wishing kind regards, the writer signs his name. The spirit of this letter is good, and may be an inspiration to others.

One of the features of the Daily News, Greensboro, N. C., in its Monday edition is an account of the leading sermons of the day before in the city pulpits. Last Monday, the following appeared: "'Unrealized Ideals' was the subject discussed yesterday morning at the First Christian Church by the pastor, Rev. C. H. Rowland. The large audience gave him close attention. 'Soloman,' he said, 'got the credit for building the temple, but it was his father's idea. The man who can originate a great and lofty idea is a much more important person than the one who merely shapes it into form and fact. What a man accomplishes with his hands is not so important as what he thinks in his heart. There are those who do some very excellent things by accident. They were carried along by the force of circumstance and found they had done something the world was praising. I often wonder how much of the praise and blame men receive is deserved. One man does a reckless thing and it turns out well with the result that he is a hero. Another man fails because the task is too great for him and we call him a coward and a fool. We praise the coward because by chance he became what he never expected to be, and blame the hero for not accomplishing the impossible. Those deeds which we hear about are not always the greatest amount. The widow's mite was greater in the sight of the Lord than all the gold of the rich. David's ideal was to build a house for God. He filled his son and the nation with the desire to build. Ideals unrealized are often more powerful than those accomplished. David never saw the temple, but his idea was so strong that it was definitely communicated to those who were able to see the actual structure.'"

NOTICE.

To the Ministers and Members of the Eastern Virginia Conference:

At the December session of the Christian Missionary Association, a grant of one hundred dollars ($100.00) was made the Ocean View Church, provided funds became available. Since the session of the Association, seventy-five dollars ($75) have become available, and we feel, perhaps, the balance of twenty-five dollars ($25.00) can be secured through the payment now of subscriptions not paid at the time of the session. If you have not yet paid last year's dues and would like to put yourself in good standing with the association and at the same time help the Ocean View Church, please send your dues to Mr. C. D. West, Newport News, Va. Please do so at once, for we hope to make the payment in full to Ocean View by the middle of March.

J. H. LIGHTBOURNE, President.

WINCHESTER, VA.

A very fine interest is now being manifested in the increased membership campaign in our Winchester Church. This campaign includes not only the Church, but all the Church organizations, and will continue until Easter Sunday. The Christian Endeavor Society has already received ten new members, the Church has received four new members, and the Sunday School has received several new members, and there is a new enthusiasm in all these organizations.

The Church recently decided to put in a new carpet, and the carpet committee, composed of H. W. Seabright, Mrs. F. W. Forney, Mrs. R. A. Larrick, Mrs. Lem Anderson, and M. S. Loy, have promised to have the carpet in by Easter Sunday, or before.

The primary department of the Sunday School, under the supervision of the superintendent, Mrs. J. F. Morgan, and her helpers, is doing a most splendid work, and the greatest need now in this department of the school is a piano, and we hope to have that in a few months.

Our Ever-Ready Missionary Society had a "joy-bell service" last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Cather, which proved to be not only a happy, but a helpful, occasion. The program consisted of a duet by Miss Janet Rinker and Mrs. B. R. Richards, a solo and reading by Miss Evelyn Cather, a talk on "Why I Believe in Ringing the Joy Bells," by the pastor, and a debate on the subject, "Resolved, That a Missionary Should not Marry." The affirmative side was upheld by Nelson F. Richards and Roy Cather, and the negative was discussed by Miss Janet Rinker and Miss Lillie Massey. The judges were E. W. Cather, Mrs. Harry Reed, and Miss Anna Amelia Seabright, and their decision was that the ladies had won by 2¼ points. The debate was not only amusing, but much helpful missionary information was brought out, and no one went away saying that that missionary meeting was not interesting.

The attendance at all our services yesterday were good, despite the fact that it was a rainy day, and the pastor delivered two splendid messages, one "On Becoming a Member of the Church," and the other on "The Security of the Christian."

Our Church extends heartiest good wishes to our entire brotherhood, and craves from all a remembrance in prayer, that the work here may go forward. MRS. R. A. LARRICK.

THE EFFECTS OF CORRUPT LITERATURE.

By Rev. V. T. Crawford.

It is everywhere evident today that literature is becoming more and more popular. The printed page, as an intelligencer of the people, is certainly keeping pace with the progress which is being made along other lines of thought and endeavor, and in the stage of progress in which the world stands today, it is not only necessary as a means of promoting knowledge among the people, but it has become indispensable to mankind in every conceivable phase of his life and work.

In regard to the literature which is commonly circulated in the form of magazines and periodicals, it is the purpose of this brief article to urge the necessity for the exercise of discrimination in the selection and distribution of such literature.

It seems that entirely too much is being taken for granted, both in regard to the contents of the magazines and periodicals which are being purchased and eagerly read everywhere today, and to the effect such reading will have and is having upon the minds and hearts, and ultimately the characters of those who read them.

Any one who will take the time to examine the literature being sold from the news-stands today must be convinced that much of the literature which is being offered to the reading public today and which is being bought and "devoured" by the reading public by the thousands is of such a corrupt character that the reader is corrupted by it before he is aware of the evil effect which it is having upon him. It is perhaps even true that many persons, through the example of others, because of the attractiveness of the front-page pictures, or just from the desire to get something "new and interesting" to read, unsuspectingly purchase and read such literature, never realizing its demoralizing effect upon mind and morals until after the baleful work is done.

It is just as true today as it has ever been, that what people read may be taken as an indication of what they are; and if they are not bad when they begin reading bad literature, they are almost sure to "catch" some of its bad traits before they are through with it. That is, if they persist in it.

It seems to be a wrong method in the educational procedure of today, which makes an effort to teach our youth those things which are worthwhile, and at the same time allow the iniquitous business of disseminating corrupting literature among them at the expense of that which is pure, elevating and spiritual, without a word of protest against them.

It makes no difference from where it comes—a bad book, periodical, or magazine can never exert anything but a corrupting influence.

The writer feels very strongly that the time has arrived when all who stand for that which is upright and pure and holy should raise their voices in protest against the dissemination of all impure, indecent literature, as well as against that class of literature which is anti-scriptural and which directly or indirectly aims to wreck people's faith and to dishonor God. From all such we should not only turn away ourselves, but we should voice our protests against it in such a way that no one shall fail to understand just what we mean.

I believe that ministers, teachers, parents, and every one who has the welfare of our people at heart, should use every possible means to discourage the purchase and the sale of all literature of an impure and suggestive kind, because we cannot afford to keep silent when the moral and spiritual lives of our young people are in such imminent danger of ruin by it.

When so much literature of a helpful and uplifting character is available, there can be no excuse for the reading of that kind which can only produce evil results.

Let us help the youth of our land to see the present and eternal values of the teaching of the great Missionary, who once wrote these words: "Whatsoever things are pure, . . . think on these things."

Portsmouth, Va.

"Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding."—prov. 3:5.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The Illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the Number and prices.

TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Minion Bold-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4 7-8x 7 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

India Paper Edition, Size 4 7-8x7 Inches, 1 1-10 Inches Thick.

2152X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$6.00

Bourgeois Type, Size 5 3-8x8 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2167—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.00

2172—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.50

India Paper Edition, Only 1 1-8 Inches Thick.

2172X—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$8.50

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3¾x5⅝ inches, and 1 inch thick; with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black.

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations. Special book for Sunday Schools 95c

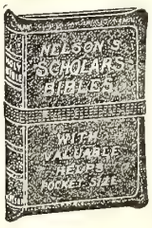
Ruby Type, Size 3¾x5⅝ Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps $2.50

Minion Type, Pocket Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ inches Thick.

With 32 full-colored illustrations; also 25 outline maps through the text and 12 colored maps.

133—Bound in cloth, round corners, red edges, title stamped on side in pure gold $1.60



135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 15-16 of an Inch Thick.

135X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.75

Minion Black-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4¾x 7 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick.

Printed from clear, large, black-face type, 32 full-page illustrations in Sepia and colors, 4,000 Questions and Answers, Harmony of the Gospels, How to Study the Sunday School Lesson, 25 outline Maps, 12 full-page colored Maps.

4152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold.....$3.25

TEXT BIBLES—AMERICAN STANDARD VERSION.

Printed from Easy-Reading Type, on Good Bible Paper, for Sunday School and Church Use.

Minion Type, Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick, 25 Outline Maps, Bound in Black.

101—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, title stamped on back in pure gold..$1.10

112—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title on back in pure gold $2.75

India Paper Edition, Only ⅞-Inch Thick.

112X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

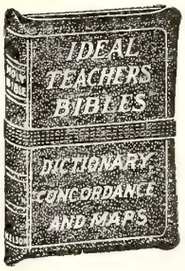
Reference and Text Bibles also in minion, brevier, bourgeois, long primer, pica and English type.

Thumb index cut on edge, 50c extra; name printed on any Bible in gold, 40c extra; extra wording, 40c per line.

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (v vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3-8x 8 1-2 Inches and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

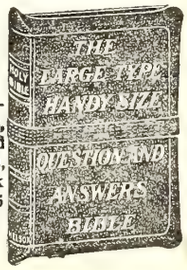


Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With concise Bible dictionary, combined concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.75

RED LETTER EDITION

With all the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.



1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands, title stamped on side and back in pure gold $3.25

Any of the above Bibles sent post paid. Address

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street, - - - Richmond, Va.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR.

J. O. ATKINSON, Elon College, N. C.

Contributing Editors.

W. W. STALEY W. A. HARPER
R. C. HELFENSTEIN S. C. HARRELL

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

WITHOUT ME, NOTHING.

"Without me ye can do nothing," said Jesus. Did He mean it?

The relationship of the psychic with the physical, of the divine with the human, of God with man, is involved in the conception. "Closer is He than breathing; nearer than hands and feet." "In Him we live and move and have our being."

It is simple enough to comprehend how the Christian is unable to achieve anything without Jesus. The statement of our Lord puts no limitations on the inclusiveness of His claim. Surely we cannot limit its "ye" to the disciples, for then the oneness of ourselves with Christ could have no personal meaning.

God is God of every soul in the wide, wide world, and without God mankind can do nothing. It is not difficult to understand this if we accept the thought that God speaks to the attentive heart everywhere, that He does not limit His message to one race or to one time. The best interpreters of His message were the Jews, and now the Christians. This fact imposes it upon Christians to carry the gospel to all men, since they have, through it, best sensed the nature, mind, will, and purpose of God.

But because we have the best revelation, does not preclude the correlative fact that God has spoken to other peoples, though they have interpreted His voice erroneously and imperfectly. Missionaries of the cross understand this and undertake to interpret Christianity not as a revelation excluding other religions and competing with them for the supremacy, but as completing, fulfilling them. The heart-hunger for God and spiritual peace characteristic of every religion finds its fulfillment in the Christian religion. We must share our best with our brothers who have a less good. Christ urged us, commanded us, to this, and our sense of brotherhood impels to undertake the noble crusade.

Jesus literally spoke the truth when He said, "Without me ye can do nothing." In that statement, so hard to understand, He gave undeniable witness to the universality of His nature and function as the Relevator of His Father. Who is our Father, too, and the spiritual Father of every human being in all His world?

DUTY.

"I slept, and dreamed that life was beauty;
I woke, and found that life was duty."

So sang a great poet years ago, and never a poet sang truer words, for without duty and the impelling power of duty we are in a dream-world, a world of chaos, anarchy and ruin.

"Duty," declares a great philosopher, "is the cement which binds the whole moral edifice together without which all power, goodness, truth, happiness, love itself, can have no permanence; but all the fabric of existence crumbles away from under us, and leaves us sitting in the midst of a ruin, astonished at our own desolation."

And another equally great thinker and teacher wrote, "Duty is not a sentiment, but a principle pervading the life, and it exhibits itself in conduct and in action. Duty is above all consequences, and often commands us to throw consequences and results overboard."

"To dare nobly, to will strongly, and never to falter in the path of duty"—that was the motto that was the slogan of a hero.

Duty is the principle that gives stability to character, strength to purpose, weight to life, and foundation to love and happiness. Pity the man or woman, boy or girl, rich or poor, who regards duty lightly, looks upon it as cold, lifeless, stoical. Such a view of duty crowds our divorce courts, fills our prisons, and empties our Churches. When the bonds and obligations of duty are removed, with only some sentiment of emotion, fancy, or dream, to hold him or her, the husband or wife, renouncing the claim of duty to one another and to God pledged and plighted at the marriage altar, a suit for divorce is easy, and "free love" puts in its ruinous hand.

Our Saviour realized this fully. One recalls His last recorded conversation with Peter, whom He had longed to strengthen and stabilize—"Lovest, thou, me more than these?" Three times over, the Lord asked Peter that same question. "Yea, Lord, Thou knowest that I love Thee." Then prove it; make good your word; put soul, strength, heart, life and meaning into your profession of mouth by doing your duty—feed my sheep.

Peter might affirm his love with word of mouth forever, but what Christ wanted was not profession of word, but deed, duty done by those who had not had the privilege Peter had had. Go out and do your duty, Peter, and then I shall know whether you love or not. But you shall not deceive me by saying you love me—you must prove your saying by the everlasting discharge of your sacred duty.

As a great preacher has said, "We owe service, bringing about the kingdom of God on earth." We will never pay this debt, save by the solemn and strict observance of our Christian duty. God give us strength, courage, grace and fortitude to do our duty in every relationship of life and be obedient not to our wills, but to His will.

EDUCATION.

Plato: "Good education is that which gives to the body and the soul all the perfection of which they are capable." The best means are work for the body, study for the mind, worship for the soul. Instruction in the school is a large factor in education, but capacity and self-effort are essential. Something must be put into the student to help what is inherent. Land is improved by adding fertilizer and cultivation. Fertile soil needs but little help; but the poorest can be made fertile and productive—that is educated soil. Some individuals need but little instruction; others need more.

The Chinese were the first of existing nations to develop a system of literary education. It dealt primarily with their sacred literature as a preparation for civil service, tested by examinations. Successful competitors became government officials who opposed change even from the time of Confucius. Western ideas have crept in since the Boxer uprising.

Ancient Persian, Greek, and Roman education was national and largely military. Political life is Greek and Roman education finally expanded into individual and practical education. It may be safely asserted that education in all non-Christian nations was built chiefly upon their sacred books, rooted in their religion. Mohammedan nations educate principally in the Koran. Christian nations might learn that neglect of the Bible in the school leaves out the essential thing in Christian education.

The Greeks first worked out a scientific system of education. The purpose was to develop citizens for military, political and religious service. They developed through gymnastics and music. Education was the State's most important function. The general tendency of all education is toward democracy, and that means the death of monarchy and aristocracy. But it depends upon what kind of education whether the world will grow toward freedom. Work, study, and worship must co-operate for best results. Pestalozzi, Herburt, and Froebel agree "that the nature which is to control in education is the nature of the child." Soil and climate determine agriculture. Spencer says, "the function of education is to prepare for complete living." Children from illiterate homes are benefitted by schools, and from cultured homes may be injured when the teachers know less than their parents. "True science and true religion are twin sisters, and their separation is the death of both. Science prospers as it is religious; religion flourishes as it is scientific," says Huxley. Science can give the knowledge of the 320,000 species of plants and the 2,000,000 species of animals, but the true knowledge of man is learned from the Bible and science. Science interprets physical truth; chemistry, matter; mathematics, space; music, sound; logic, thought; character interprets God. Jesus manifested God not by credal statements, but by life; and Christians continue that witness for Him.

The Scriptures reveal the origin of man; history tells of his development. Man is a creator, made in the image of God. Machinery and musical instruments prove his power to create.

Education interprets not only truth and man, but the times. Now must be interpreted in terms of electric lights and not in terms of tallow candles; in terms of trains and automobiles, and not in terms of the stage coach; in terms of phones, pictures, radios, the press, and not in terms of conversation and debate. Family life not in terms of homes, but in terms of apartment houses and hotels. The home merges into the community, and that should be made what the home once was. The present must be interpreted in terms of the new conditions, and Christianity's task is to make society as safe as the home.

Religion can no more be interpreted in terms of councils, papal decrees and creeds, but in terms of life. Verbal statements of fundamentalists or modernists cannot interpret religion for us. "If any man will do His will he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God." Religion is personal, not verbal. It is "Christ in you the hope of glory." Discussion is of the head; faith is of the heart. "With the heart, man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth, confession is made unto salvation." Religion must be interpreted in terms of life required by the age. It can be adapted to any condition of population, education, wealth; the religion of yesterday will not meet the demands of today.

TWELVE INTERNATIONAL MOVEMENTS.

By Rev. R. F. Brown, M. A.

VI. CRIME AND LAWLESSNESS VERSUS CIVILIZATION.

"The better the Church, the worse the crime," says Attorney Frank G. Thompson, of Jefferson County, Ill. In this statement the attorney seems to imply that all crimes, regardless of who commits them, have their origin in the Church; that the Church teaches and condones crime rather than condemns it; and that whatever crime and lawlessness we have today must be laid at the door of the Church. All of which is not true. The Church is not in the crime-producing business. The insinuation of Attorney Thompson must not pass unnoticed. Those who say that the Church teaches crime, promotes crome and condones crime are sadly lacking in discriminating power. Even devils know better than to blaspheme the Church in such a manner. No one would attempt to deny the statement that there are some people whose names are on the Church rolls who commit crimes and become outlaws in attitude and conduct; but they are not the Church or even a part of the Church. They may be in the Church, but they are not of the Church; and if they are in the Church they are there using the Church as a shield to protect them from their criminal designs. As soon as they are discovered, they should be ingloriously cast out of the Church. But facts do not substitute the accusation that the Church condones crime, or that the most devoted Church members violate the law. Visit the courts, the jails, and the chain-gang and review the personnel of the prisoners and criminals, and it will be seen that they come not from the Churches of the land, but from sources such as dirty moving pictures, the bootlegging districts, indecent customs, unwarranted publicity of crimes, our inadequate and inefficient educational process, laxity of law enforcement and other similar sources. And those who carp at the Church because we are in the midst of a great crime-wave are missing the mark.

One thing that contributes to the spirit of crime and lawlessness in the world more than any one thing is the fact that those who are indifferent as to the effect of crime on civilization are loudly vociferous in announcing the emensity of the crime wave, while those who bemoan its effects on civilization are, for the most part, amazingly and distressingly silent. An evasion of the law receives ten times the publicity that a penalty imposed under the law receives. This condition is not due to the fact that the lawless exult in the former and frown on the latter; but it is due to the quiescence of law-abiding citizens who are more interested in their own personal advancement in materialisms than they are in the advancement and perpetuity of civilization. It is possible for any well-meaning, law-abiding citizen to be so thoroughly absorbed in his own affairs that he will forget the welfare of others. He does not seem to know that the proper way to measure the strength of civilization is to examine minutely and carefully the possibilities of the weakest link.

There is no question but that the wave of lawlessness reaches farther and is more disastrious in civilization today than ever before in the history of man. The argument is current that there are fifty crimes committed in this country to one crime in other countries. In New York City alone there are more murders committed annually than in England. And what is true of New York is equally true with reference to other cities in this nation. And what is worse, these crimes are committed by the youth of the land. According to a statement by a judge in New York, 85 per cent of the crimes there were committed by boys under twenty-one years of age. Juvenile delinquency begins early. Statistics show that out of a total of 17,453 boys and girls, 160 boys and 150 girls committed their first crime at the age of eight years. Crime among boys increases rapidly, reaching its climax at the age of sixteen, while crime among girls reaches the climax at the age of fourteen. The record indicates that of the number of cases cited above, not one boy committed his first crime after the age of twenty, and not one girl committed her first crime after the age of twenty-one.

During the last six years the majority of the crimes in this nation and other nations have been committed by the young people. And it is significant to note that these young people were students in our grade and high schools durine the World war. Just at that time the World War was engaged in wholesale slaughter and destruction. Murder, and hate, avarice, and greed were everywhere in evidence. Consciously and unconsciously, the spirit of the time was echoed in the school room, and made a part of the daily thought. And this was at a time in the lives of these young people that they were responsive to the educational stimuli. Their very natures were open to the influences about them. And the result is a world filled with adolescent lawlessness and crime. It is not a deliberate refusal on the part of these young people to respond to a spiritual stimulus, choose evil instead of good; but resulted from the weakness of our educational influences and processes. Instead of the schools, during the war, fostering breadth of vision, profundity of meaning, and genesis of new concept and vigor, they made a distinct contribution to the list of criminals. We see the mistake now, but we were unable to see it when we were committing it, because we were surrounded by the senseless and meaningless atmosphere of war and the stifling smoke of battle. We shall have to ask the next two or three generations to atone for our sins, and in the meantime we shall have to watch our civilization degenerate, decay, and fall hopelessly behind in the progress of the world. But this is the price civilization must pay for its mistakes. And let us hope that it is the method God employs to make a better civilization. But, be it remembered, that when any agent turns aside to condone and promote unworthy and unwarranted enterprises, it trespasses upon the rights of the devil and abdicates its own purpose.

Those who experiment with the law, defy the law and become the victims of their own designs, make a demand for the restriction, modification, or nullification of the law. It is perfectly natural for them to make such a demand. The poet has well said:

"No wretch e'er felt the halter draw,
With good opinion of the law."

No statement will ever be issued that the law should be restricted, or nullified unless it be issued by those against whom the law is directed. Laws were never enacted because of the obedience of men, but because of the disobedience of men. When the people speak in statutory enactment it is an outburst against the disobedience of the minority; and when a member of this disobedient minority feels the sting of the law, he at once protests against the law. Several cases might be cited. Two or three cases will suffice.

A few weeks ago, Representative John Philip Hill, of Maryland, announced that he would manufacture cider from the apples grown on his yard. He said that this cider would be allowed to attain an alcoholic strength of 2.75 per cent. He carried out his purposes, and on the evening of September 20th he served this cider to several hundred friends who were assembled at his home in the capacity of a "party." The Federal grand jury has indicted him and he has expressed delight over the action which he has forced on this question, saying: "At last I have forced action, and we shall now get decisions on section 29 of the Volstead act, which I have been demanding for more than two years."

Representative Hill did a similar thing in 1923 when he manufactured wine in his home. He has been indicted for both offenses, but no date set for trial. There will be no further criminal trials in Baltimore until November 10th. Hill has not been arrested on the ground that he can be found when needed. Through such defiance of the law, and through such breakdown of the will of the people as expressed in statutory enactment lies an easy path to the destruction of civilization. Whether he be a congressman, a bootlegger, a lyncher, a thief, or a murderer, no man should be allowed to experiment with the law. When men take the law into their own hands, absolve themselves from obedience of law, or proceed according to the dictation of their own perverted will to circumvent it, they at once become a menace to civilization. But we find examples of this type of citizenship in all walks of life, from the factory hand to the lawmakers of the land. Such a fact is a distressing travesty on civilization.

We are not pointing with pride to the fact that we are leading the world in crime and lawlessness. The leaders of progress, the advocates of the law, and the well-wishers of civilization are silent in several languages touching this matter. Our very silence leads to speculation, natural supposition, and creates doubt in the mind of those who violate the law. The distressing silence of the people touching crime and lawlessness is making a distinct contribution to crime wave of this nation, whether we so intend it or not.

The biased wheels of justice are also making an alarming contribution to the wave of crime and lawlessness. Take the Leopold-Loeb case as an illustration. The very fact that they did not receive the extreme penalty for their hideous crime has caused others to believe that they can commit crime with perfect impunity. Since the announcement of the penalty for these boys, I have noticed that there are fifteen juvenile and adolescent criminals who are asking for a life sentence instead of a death sentence. And what is more, there will be no stopping-place. Pleas like these will be multiplied many times. It can certainly be no deterrent to crime and lawlessness when a murderer who deserves the death penalty receives life imprisonment, and that under the guise of youth or femininity. The fact that a murderer happens to be a youth of sixteen or seventeen, or a woman of thirty summers, is no reason jusice should be controverted. Law against murder has nothing whatever to say about age, or sex, or race or color. Let the courts point out

(Continued on page 7.)

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Almost all lines of service have been specialized except that of the preacher. In shops, in offices, in stores, in schools, in departments of governments—almost everywhere—workers have their special tasks. In the schools, teachers have one study, as Latin, mathematics, science, history, etc.; but the preacher's work has multiplied almost beyond one man's capacity or time. In other days, he preached at the main service, visited a few people, married the lovers, and buried the dead. Now he must attend all sorts of organizations in the Church and outside of the Church, visit increasingly, speak on all sorts of occasions, attend numerous and nameless meetings, raise money for independent organizations, and still preach good sermons. Preaching today has greater variety, no doubt, but cannot be as expository, as profound, as spiritual as in other days; it may be more practical, for if any man comes in touch with all experiences it is the preacher. He comes in contact with trouble, gossip, criticism, poverty, wealth, ignorance, learning, ambition, aspiration, indifference, and every "ism" that claims to be better than the Church. He ought to absorb enough to make him efficient in his varied obligations.

The age in which we live and move and have our being and try to do our work is so complicated that the preacher must be an all-'round man or go out of business. A business man, on the train, once said to me that preachers were poor business men. I said, I will prove to you the contrary or withdraw my claim. He said, "Go ahead." I then said: "Preachers dress better, take better care of their families, educate their children better, and give more to charity, for what they receive, than any other class of men. You could not begin your domestic expenses on a preacher's salary." He said: "I give it up." He was a tobacconist, doing business on a large scale. The common idea that ministers do not have business experience, could be revised without loss to fact or truth. This does not prove that a preacher could make more money if he left the ministry and went into business. If God has called a man to preach the gospel, he can succeed best in that calling. A draft-horse would fail on the race-track, and a race-horse would fail on the farm. Man succeeds best where he belongs.

There is no higher calling than the ministry, and any man should count himself fortunate to be called of God into it. Small salaries should not discourage ministers. There are three good reasons why the ministry does not offer large salaries. It develops those qualities of self-denial and economy so necessary for proper living; it puts them in a position that secures the confidence and respect of the poor and the rich. A rich preacher could not enjoy this necessary confidence of all conditions in society. It keeps out of the ministry many that would enter if there were big-salary inducements. In this money-loving age, men will choose any respectable vocation that offers large remuneration. The ministry makes no such inducement, and God calls men for service, not for salaries. Jesus was the poorest of all. He had not where to lay His head. This does not excuse laymen from paying salaries adequate for this expensive age. "The laborer is worthy of his hire." W. W. Staley.

ELON LETTER.

The Carlton Library "Bulletin" has been mailed out to nearly five thousand members and friends of the Christian Church. Some have sent their contributions to buy books, in this way endeavoring to show their deep appreciation for the splendid donation this family has made to our Church and college. The first donation to come after the bulletins went out was sent by Bro. W. A. Newman, Henderson, N. C.

Many letters of appreciation have come, all of them breathing the same fine spirit of gratitude to the Carltons and of devotion to the college. I am going to quote at length from one of them, written by a loyal and devout heart, consecrated through a life of service to the college and to our beloved Church. Modesty has, through the years, characterized this friend, and so I refrain from using the name of the letter's beloved writer. He will not object to my using his fine message in this impersonal way. He says:

"The 'Bulletin,' containing the dedication service of the magnificent library given to Elon by the big-hearted Carlton family to hand. I was so glad to read the service in detail, and know who took part. It was of great interest to me, and I thank God for putting it in the hearts of this family to make this gift to Elon at this time. God's hand was in it, and I thank Him for using Elon in such a big way. I think we have the right men in the right place there, and the people of the Christian Church appreciate our leaders more than they know, I think. We realize they are under a tremendous responsibility. A great task is before them at Elon. I feel for them, sympathize with them, pray for them.

"Go forward! God is leading. Never be discouraged. Your strength is from the Lord. He will see Elon through and continue to lead as He has been leading. The prayers of our people are behind Elon. God is with Elon and success is ahead."

It is such messages as these that make it possible for those who carry the responsibility of administering our work in education, missions, publishing, the Orphanage, superannuation, etc., to trudge away at their burdens. A letter like the above is an inspiration, and those who are loaded with our general enterprises need just such uplift to newness of hope and aspiration.

W. A. Harper.

BETHLEHEM LETTER.

If all of our Churches in the Southern Christian Convention could be made to realize how badly funds are needed at Bethlehem College, they would do as the Wadley Sunday School did today. Although the day was very inclement, and only about half as many in attendance as usual, the following persons responded to the appeal made in The Sun for "one thousand persons to give $5.00 each to Bethlehem College:" Dr. J. M. Welsh, Mrs. Dr. M. M. Welsh, J. T. Gibson, Mrs. Eva Gibson, C. A. Weldon, Prof. Herbert Scholtz, Mrs. Thyra Swint, Purity Drug Co., John R. Harris. Others who responded were Mrs. A. M. Johnson, Norfolk, Va., and Dr. Job G. Holland, Holland, Va. We have received, to date, on the above call, $75.00, for which we are thankful; but, like the old colored woman who received a gift with thankfulness, said she would be thankful for more.

Some of our folks are also waking up on the $50.00 proposition, as was stated in my last letter to The Sun, which was made by Bro. O. O. Mitchell, of Cragford, Ala., viz: one hundred persons to give $50.00 each. Just received this letter from Rev. J. H. Dollar, Elon College, N. C.: "I cannot meet all the challenges that come my way, but I am doing my best to meet every one that comes from and for Bethlehem College. I notice that Bro. O. O. Mitchell has a new one in this week's Sun, and it is a good one. I accept his challenge. Tell him we only lack ninety-eight of having the hundred fifty-dollar men. I want to see Bethlehem grow and go, and am willing and glad to make any sacrifice I can for her. I can do this by the help of God, and I will do it for the sake of young lives who need the inspiration which flows out of such institutions as our own Bethlehem College. 'Will a man rob God?' May He forbid that I should rob Him of that which is His and not mine. This money is coming from our tithing account, which is the greatest asset any Christian ever had."

If Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Dollar can do this while struggling to get through school at Elon College, I am sure we have a thousand people who can do likewise within the bounds of the Southern Christian Convention, and they would if they could be led to feel that what they have came from God and belongs to Him, as they do; that they only hold it in trust; that their money represents so much of themselves which they can turn loose to do good.

God counts on the use of our money to educate His workers to do His work—to preach His gospel; to establish His kingdom of righteousness, love and peace. The right use of our income is one of our first duties as a Christian. Until I do this, my prayers will be empty. I am saying, "Lord, Lord," while I do not the will of my Father. Who will be next to open their pocketbooks as well as their hearts?

Wadley, Ala. S. L. Beougher.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

By Warren H. Denison, Secretary.

IN OUR CONFERENCE—DO IT NOW!

Don't say, "It can't be done in our Conference." There will be some Conference officers, stewardship secretaries, pastors, saying that as to their Conference in the matter of putting on a simultaneous every-member canvass this year. "It simply can't be done" has thwarted many a worthy project. That is what ten of the twelve said who made a survey of Canaan, and they wandered forty years in the wilderness with suffering and loss as a result. Of course, all the Churches may not be brought to see its value to themselves the first time. A good beginning should be made this year in your Conference, and you are the ones to do it. You can do it. Christian Church folks are pioneers in many regards, but in this we are far behind. We suffer accordingly. It will take work and co-operation, of course. Anything that is worth while does take effort and patience.

Let the Conference Stewardship Secretary, backed by the Conference President and Secretary, call a meeting of the stewardship secretaries from the Churches of the Conference for a consultation and plan the matter. If your Conference has not a stewardship secretary, it is high time to appoint or elect one. In that case, let the President and Secretary make the call. If your Church has not a stewardship secretary, now is the time to get one. Let this group make plans, set the date of the canvass and start the project. Do this now. Do not delay it. Give plenty of time in the notice to the Churches, for some may need to choose their stewardship secretaries.

If they do not have such chosen, then the chairman of the finance committee should be in this preliminary meeting. Select the Sunday afternoon for the canvass for your Conference. This should be probably the second or third Sunday in the closing month of the Conference year.

Then have each Church choose the man who is to direct the every-member canvass. He may be the stewardship secretary himself. In some cases it may have to be the pastor. In other cases it may be a temporary man chosen especially for that task.

Then the important meeting of all is that of these every-member canvass directors. They should have an all-day meeting of thorough drill and training on the method of doing it successfully. This may be done by your Conference Stewardship Secretary or some locally qualified man. Again, you may find it advisable to call in some outside stewardship man. Take great care in choosing this instructor, some one who will follow the plan in detail. There are no short cuts to real success. This meeting should be held fully two months before the canvass is to be made. Do not wait too late.

Some Churches will not enlist the first year. They will be the losers, of course, but you cannot afford to wait for them. If the Christian Church had waited until all Churches and pastors had been ready to undertake the Forward Movement, we would have waited even yet. Do it now—this year. It is worth the while. Your Church urges you to do it.

BENEVOLENCES DURING 1924.

The following is a report of the benevolences distributed through the Southern Christian Convention for the calendar year 1924:

Orphanage	$ 23,257.44
Conference apportionments	17,259.32
Woman's Missionary Societies	9,290.56
Specials for missions and evangelism...	7,368.15
C. M. A., Eastern Va. Con.	2,060.00
C. M. A., Ga. and Ala. Con.	100.55
S. S. and Christian Endeavor	1,050.13
Direct to boards at Dayton, Ohio	104.72
Total	$ 60,490.87
Special mission fund	1,967.36
Elon standardization	12,926.50
Men and Millions	26,494.42
Elon emergency	127,621.50
Total for benevolences	$229,500.65
Average per member (29,179 members)	7.86
For local Church extension	265,292.50
This makes a grand total, exclusive of current xpenses	494,793.45

May 1925 have as good a record!

J. E. West, Chairman.

Y. P. MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR MARCH.

The following is the Woman's and Young People's Missionary program for March:

CHINA.

Hymn—"How Firm a Foundation!"

Business:

Roll Call (respond with verse of Scripture).

Dues Collected by Treasurer.

Reports of Officers.

Reports of Committees.

Devotional—Bible Lesson, "Jesus' Work for Individuals" (John 3:1-3; John 4:13-14; Matt. 15:21-28; John 8:10-11; John 1:41-43; Rom. 1:14).

Prayer—Call for Sentence Prayers.

Special Music.

Missionary Topic—"Ming Kwong: City of the Morning Light."

(a) Good Tidings.

(b) The Harvest.

(c) The Tares.

(d) A Strong Nation.

(e) The Glory of the Lord.

(Have room arranged attractively with Chinese lanterns and pictures. A set of six beautiful pictures can be obtained from Mrs. Powers, Room 25 C. P. A. Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, for 50 cents. Have the story of each picture told by various members. A little book in which the story of each picture is given accompanies the set of pictures.)

Reading from "Of One Blood," pp. 87 & 88.

Hymn—"The Morning Light is Breaking."

Benediction.

Gertrude Browne.

TWELVE INTERNATIONAL MOVEMENTS

(Continued from Page 5.)

the law that considers youths and women ineligible for the death penalty. When such a law is discovered and pointed out, those of us who are opposed to murder and crime in general will have nothing to say when a couple of youths escape the gallows, or a woman kills her husband by the poison route. So long as there is this evident discrimination, these murderers will go blithely about killing anybody of any age or sex, thus increasing the crime wave, making life and the pursuit of happiness less certain. While such a thing will be hard on those who are the victims of the murderer's evil designs, the courts seem to sanction it and nobody seems to worry about it. Such a course is dead-sure to make civilization safe for murderers and less safe for decent and innocent people.

A deliberate blow at the Constitution and at statutory law is a blow at the individual's happiness and rights. That the crime wave is turned in that direction, there is no doubt. There is a movement on foot to limit the power of the Supreme Court, which has the power to interpret the Constitution. In referring to this movement recently, President Coolidge said: "Our forefathers were alert to resist all encreachments upon their rights. If we wish to maintain our rights, we can do no less. Through the breaking down of the power of the court lies an easy way to the confiscation of the property and the destruction of the individual."

The present-day trend of things threatens our national solidarity and underminds the moral integrity of the law. When laws are defied and criminals go unpunished, the government of law ceases to function and the State is lost. Our theory of popular government is right; and whatever weakness we have is caused by the citizen who sneers at the law and condones its violation. It matters not how high a man may be in the business world, in public life, or how a woman may be in politics and society, if they subvert the government by direct violation of either the violation of the latter or the spirit of the law, they at once indicate that they do not mean to observe and co-operate in the enforcement of the law, but join forces with those who violate the law. In essence, they are themselves contemptible criminals. Such people constitute the very quintessence of hypocrisy in government and civilization, and are unworthy of the protection offered under the Constitution.

There are many misnomas in the world, one of which is the argument that law creates more than it surpresses. There are some people who want to attribute all crime to the existence of law. It would be as near the truth to say that civilization creates more wants than it is able to supply. But it should be remembered that just as civilization has created many wants, and just as these wants have prepared and prompted man to enter upon a conquest to conquor the natural world, so law is the natural and spontaneous outcome of man's theories and thoughts and serves to educate man in obedience and respect in all matters touching governmental and constitutional authority. The strange and unwarranted philosophy expressed by my great-uncle many years ago is not true. He said, "If there is no law there will be no crime." If it were true that law is the cause of crime, then the old man was right; but if law is the expressed will of the people made necessary because of crime, then the old man was wrong. There is no process of reasoning that will support the theory that law is the cause of crime. Law has never caused a crime; it has revealed many.

The philosophy is current today that law liberates. This theory is expressed by many well-meaning people, but they are hopelessly deluded. They are the dupes of their own conceptions, or misconceptions. By no twist of logic can it be shown that law is license. It is not a network of nerves for personal liberty. Neither is it a badge for personal privilege, or a means of tyranny and anarchy. Such men as President Butler, of Columbia University, and Representative Hill, of Maryland, to the contrary, however. But these men and all the rest who say that law liberates, are living under the tyranny of a dreadful misconception, to say the least. During the middle ages, custom goaded and ruled the feudal barons and honest workmen with an iron rod, and law had feeble sway. But the birth of nations and the enactment of laws checked and finally broke down the tyranny of custom which was active in its heartless discrimination against the common man. The substitution of law for custom gave the common citizen equal rights, and law proposes to safeguard these rights. Such a change was not wrought in a day, or a year. It required a reign of tudors to steel the commons against the favored class under the rule of custom. It required a Louis XIV to crush the old regime of custom in France and substitute law in its place. Judging from the cry of certain men today who say that law liberates, it would seem that we have a number of so-called citizens who were born too late in the progress of the world. They properly belong to the middle class. They think the thoughts of the middle ages, and dream the dreams of the middle ages. It is unfortunate for our civilization that the wheels of progress were so tardy in bringing these men to life and light.

Civilization cannot continue half-lawful and half-lawless any more than it can continue half-slave and half-free, half-drunk and half-sober. Our civilization is a civilization of laws, not customs; and it is folly to suppose that custom can be substituted for law. So long as law is interpreted as the expressed will of the majority of the people, and is inherent in the acquisition and inheritance of the people, it must be obeyed if civilization is to be maintained. And so-called civilization that runs on the theory that custom can be substituted for law and personal privilege for constituted authority, is headed for anarchy, and anarchy places men under the tyranny of a million masters.

But our great nation which overcame human slavery, defeated the liquor traffic, will again rise to the emergency and defeat the enemies of the law and cast the radiance of our civilization to the four corners of the earth, and men will once more say, "O how I love the law!"

Pleasant Hill, Ohio.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

MISSIONS.

That missions is a fundamental quantity in the proposition of saving the world, all awakened members of the Church of Jesus Christ will readily admit. But the "how" of missions is the equasion difficult to solve. Trying the solution of this proposition, factoring with duty, the work is long, the problem is found extremely difficult, and the result practically a failure.

Duty deals with externals. Its power is really based on money, as the prime factor and the "result," by many, is often considered monetary rather than missionary. The result swallowed up by the means—money—rather than the means producing the intended results, viz: missions.

I used to think that duty was the most comprehensive word in the English language. But it is cold, lifeless, stoical.

If you look after the needs of your family, influenced only by the motive, duty, I am sorry for your household, sorry for you, sorry for your wife, sorry for your children. They may be happy in spite of you. You cannot be.

If you buy your wife a pair of shoes or a new dress, because duty demands it, I am not surprised that she has aching feet, a broken and blighted and bleeding heart.

If you go to Church because it is your duty, I am not surprised if you consider the services long, the sermon dry, and the time lost.

If we—you and I—pay to benevolent purposes because it is our duty, I am not surprised at unhappiness of heart, poverty of soul and emptiness of God's treasury—charity dead; love substituted by duty.

In Washington city, in the lobby of a hotel, a gentleman approached Mr. Bob Ingersol, and said: "Mr. Ingersol, you should have seen a poor little crippled boy out on the street, on crutches, approached by a strong, able-bodied man, who kicked one of the crutches from under the boy." Mr. Ingersol became very much enraged. The gentleman then said to Mr. Ingersol: "I heard your address. I was a poor, weak, crippled Christian on crutches. You have knocked not only one, but both crutches from under me."

Ingersol's philosophy may have been, from his viewpoint of life, honest and, as he saw it, the demand of duty, but it has done detestable damage. Duty is demanding, coersive; duty drives. We need leaders, not drivers. Christ drove the money-changers from the temple.

Luke 17:10: "When ye shall have done all those things which are commanded you, say, we are unprofitable servants. We have done that which was our duty." Commanded—duty! Who does his duty because it is duty?

2. Solving the equasion—the how of missions —with the factor "privilege," the problem is very difficult and the result unsatisfactory. It then becomes a commercial proposition. Privilege, having opportunity, is generally taken up because of personal consideration or benefit. For example a man has the privilege, legally and morally, to make honest money. The opportunity comes to make, easily, $100.00 without injury to himself or any one else. Who would fail to commercialize the opportunity?

But the question is, why did he make the money—the $100.00? Was it because of the privilege, or opportunity? One or both? What the real dynamic? Was it not personal benefit?

A young man enters the gospel ministry. Why? Was it duty- privilege? calamity? to help God save the world? to make the world better to live in? Does it stop there?

Back of duty—back of privilege, back of calamity, back of helping God to save the world, back of making the world a better place to live in—is the real motive; is the everlasting dynamic of the heavenly called preacher. The preacher is born, not made!

A little girl at play was singing. Her mother called her and said: "Daughter, do not sing; it bothers me." She returned to play, and was soon again singing. Her mother called and chastised her more severely. This was repeated the third time. To this the child replied: "Mother, it is in me, and I just cannot help it!"

There are the fatherless and widow. Do we visit them in their affliction? Why?

The world is in sin, at home and abroad. God is speaking to man through His great lexicon, the book of nature, telling him of His great omnipotent power, reminding him of past dealings, of His terrible judgments, and warning him to repent before He is compelled by His prearranged and foreordained plans and purposes, to purify by elimination, separation or destruction.

History tells us that the world was once deluged. In our time, California has been shaken up and Japan had many lives and much property destroyed by an earthquake.

3. Solving the problem of Christian missions, with the factor, love, the commandment, "Go," given by Jesus Christ, becomes easy, the problem simple, and the result satisfactory.

Missions, of this kind, originated in heaven, in the heart of God the Father, Jesus Christ His Son, the Missionary, and this world the mission field. Missions was conceived in heaven, born in this world and established through blood. Missions is the mind of God, the need of man, and the glory of Jesus Christ. Its effects are marvelous, its plan is simple, its power is love; it seeks the lost, it saves the sinner, it rejoices the heart; it substitutes gladness for sadness, success for failure, and heaven for hell.

Christian missions, based on duty, is stoical; based on privilege, is commercial. But wrought in love, is Christ-like, is the heart of Christianity, is the life of the Church.

First Corinthians 13.

Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing.

And now abideth faith, hope, charity—these three; but the greatest of these is charity—love.

If the preacher, whether in the pulpit or the pew, will talk more about religion, and faith, and regeneration, and salvation, and consecration, and God, and heaven, and the life eternal, all saturated with the love of God, and less about duty and privilege, and opportunity, and money—then Jesus Christ will be more able to save and redeem the world. The power of Jesus Christ to work, is measured by men's faith.

An artist was requested to paint a dead Church. He painted a beautiful building, beautiful marble steps, etc.; but, said the man to the artist: "This looks like a live Church, etc." Then, said the artist: "Look at the mission box"—and lo! it was covered with cobwebs.

Prestige, Power and Faith Wanting.

"The tragedy of the world today is not that men are poor, for all know something of poverty; not that men are wicked, who can claim to be good; not that men are ignorant, who can claim to be wise—but that men are strangers."

The young man of today will spend his last penny for the thing he desires, the mother he loves, the young woman he adores—why?

Love is the invisible key that unlocks the heart of man, and the safe of the miser to relieve suffering humanity and aid God in redeeming the world.

Not redemption, but love.

The real purpose of missions is not to get the Church into heaven, but heaven into the Church; not to keep the members out of hell, but get hell out of the Church membership.

Elon College, N. C. J. W. Patton.

Editorial Comment.

It seems to the editor of The Christian Sun that it would be exceedingly difficult to more completely misinterpret the spirit of missions, as taught in the Bible, than the writer of the above has succeeded in doing. If it were a matter of personal interpretation and opinion, of course the whole matter could go unnoticed, but in the above paper we have attacks on the most sublime words of the English tongue and on the most sacred and holy teachings of the Word of God. In such a spirit, it is no wonder that the paper goes far of the mark, and instead of being missionary, is anti-missionary, and if the Church is to act in the spirit of this paper it will have to discard the commands of our Lord, the teachings of Paul the apostle, and the whole example of every missionary that has gone out in the name of his Lord from the beginning of the Christian era down to this present moment.

Surely, Bro. Patton had not considered the dire consequences of his own thought, and that he failed to observe that his whole teaching runs counter to the Word of God, and certainly to the preaching and practice of Paul, of whom it has been said that here is the noblest missionary of all times. Practically every sentence in the paper above carries its misleading and anti-biblical teaching; but we content ourselves with quoting only a few.

Take this sentence for example: "Trying the solution of this proposition (missions) factoring with duty, the work is long, the problem is found extremely difficult, and the result practically a failure." Whoever said the work would not be long, nor the problem extremely difficult? When Jesus said, "Go," He laid it as a command, an implicit and an explicit duty on His disciples to go into all the world; He did not promise them how long it would take, nor how easy or difficult their problem would be. He simply laid upon them the obligation, the eternal and the everlasting duty to go. Bro. Patton may not be willing to factor with duty, but Jesus Christ was. And it was in this spirit that Paul went.

In 2 Cor. 5:14, Paul strikes the keynote of the whole situation when he declares: "The love of Christ constraineth me." That is to say, the love that Christ had for Paul drove him on and out and forward. Yes, out where the way was long, out where the problem was found extremely difficult, out even out where the results seemed practically a failure. But, thank God, Paul was heroic enough, brave enough, bold enough to go by the promptings of a duty that he could obey, keeping step to the commands of a power higher than himself, obeying a voice and a vision that constrained him even beyond the strength and the measure of his own personal will. It was in such a spirit and under such compulsion that Paul declared in Rom. 1:14: "I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the barbarians; both to the wise and to the unwise." Debtor, duty-bound, a servant of Jesus Christ, separated under the gospel of God, obligations upon him, not to wait for a sickly sentimentality or an emotional mood, but to go as a bondsman of his Lord, through whom he had been redeemed. Go, go, go, a bounden duty laid upon him by the constraining hand of love; not his love, but God's love—that bound and compelled him. Paul was not to wait; Christ did not tell His disciples to wait. We have not found where any outgoing missionary has ever waited until some emotion, some sentiment, some feeling should stir him. Christ's command was "Go!" and regardless of consequences about the length of the road, or the difficulties of the journey, they were to go.

Bro. Patton again remarks: "I used to think that duty was the most comprehensive word in the English language." What a great pity indeed it is that this thought does not still linger in the mind of our brother. It was the thought, it is today the thought of the noblest heroes and characters that ever crossed the pages of time. The immortal Robert E. Lee voiced not only his own thought about the word duty, but the thought of the heroes of the ages, when from the depths of his soul he declared that duty is the sublimest word in the English language. From the day when the apostle Paul saw the vision on the road to Damascus until the day he laid his pen down to write no more, he shared the same impulse, expressed so concretely in the words of Robert E. Lee—duty, the sublimest word in the English tongue.

Duty "cold"—cold only to those who do not perform it; "lifeless" only to those who have no heart for it; "stoical" only to those who have lost its meaning. Thank God, as a father, I can look after the needs of my family prompted by the high and holy motive of duty—my solemn duty as a husband; my sacred duty as a father; my holy duty as a Christian; a duty to my Church, a duty to my God, a duty to my family—that duty God laid on me at the marriage altar. Prompted by such a high motive, love will shed its halo over the words I speak to them and the deeds of kindness rendered in their behalf. God pity them if they are dependent upon my moods, my emotions, my sentimentalism. If historians and the lexicographers are correct, only deep, abiding and moving love has sprung up where duty has led the way and commanded the willing subject and forced the rebellious will. Our Saviour said, "Pray for your enemies." Am I to wait until it shall be easy, sweet, agreeable, before I perform my duty and carry out the command of my Lord? God forbid!

Or, another sentence from Bro. Patton's remarkable paper: "If we pay to benevolent purposes because it is our duty, I am not surprised at unhappiness of heart, poverty of soul, and the emptiness of God's treasury." The happy hearts of this world today are not those who have failed of their duty, but those who, through trial and sacrifice and effort, have performed their duty; and the richness of soul has come about in the world, not on the part of those who have shirked their duty, but who, like Peter and James and John, Paul and Silas, Luther and Wesley and O'Kelley, and that infinite line of God's elect, have gone out in obedience to the command of their Lord from a solemn sense of obligation to their God to perform their sacred duty in His name, regardless of how long the work was and how difficult the problem was and how meagre the results should be. And every Church treasurer and every mission board and every mission worker on the field will declare with all the emphasis that their souls command that the emptiness of God's treasury is not due to the fact that people have acted according to the promptings of duty, but have failed to act from the promptings of duty. One agrees with Bro. Patton most fully when he says: "Duty is demanding, coercive, duty drives." That explains why many of us never do our duty. We are unwilling to be coerced, constrained, as Paul was, even by the love of Christ, or on any other account.

That is what Paul declared. That is what carried Paul through the trials and tribulations of his great missionary journies. Driven by the sense of duty, by the sense of his everlasting obligation to the wise and foolish, to the Greek and the barbarian, Paul followed the One who drove him to his task in the flaming message to all Christians, "Go!"

One agrees with Bro. Patton again when he says, "Christ drove the money-changers from the temple." He certainly did! They were there because of the promptings of sentiment, emotion, business, because they loved money more than duty. They were not doing their duty there. Our Lord knew it. If they had been doing their duty, one knows full well He would have praised and not have condemned them.

But possibly the strangest term in Bro. Patton's paper is that in which he quotes the very Scripture that refutes his position and divinely denies the whole spirit of his article. In the 17th chapter of Luke, our Saviour was plainly teaching what Bro. Patton says we should not be taught, namely: that the servant obey the commands of his Lord, do his simple duty in obeying his commands, and then not say to his Lord that he expects favors or fawning, glory or greatness, but simply say, "Master, I have only done my duty." Jesus never possibly more emphatically set forth the solemn obligations of a servant to his Lord than He did in the very Scripture that Bro. Patton quotes, and certainly nowhere in all His ministry does He exalt duty to higher heights than in this Scripture.

Read again the verse that Bro. Patton has quoted (Luke 17:10): "When ye shall have done all those things which are commanded you" (which it is your duty to do because commanded), "Say, we are unprofitable servants, we have done that which was our duty." Bro. Patton may think these words quite light and hold them up to our gaze as he did—"Commanded, duty: who does his duty because it is duty?" Well, very few of us may, but despite Bro. Patton's reflection to the contrary and his strange anti-biblical doctrine, that is exactly what our Lord Jesus Christ was trying with the plainest language at His command to drive home to the hearts of those who heard Him and to all who have read it since, namely: do your duty because it is your duty; that duty laid upon you by the command of your Lord; that duty which Paul felt when He declared Himself a bond-servant of the Lord; that duty which Paul and all the faithful since his day have sought to render for duty's sake, that going in obedience to the command of their Lord and performing that duty for duty's sake, they may be counted faithful servants of their Lord, willing to obey Him, not merely in seeking the easy places, the short journies and the quick results, but obeying Him through sacrifice, through service, through trials, through tribulations.

One or two more quotations from this strange and singular document on missions will have to suffice. "A young man enters the gospel ministry—why? Was it duty, was it privilege, etc.? Back of duty, back of privilege, etc., is the everlasting dynamic of the heavenly-called preacher." Pray tell us what sort of a preacher that would be who did not feel that it was his duty to preach, who did not realize that it was a privilege to preach? And who are the heavenly-called preachers except those who feel in duty-bound to preach because God has laid upon them the burden, the obligation, the duty of preaching. That, at any rate, was what Paul thought of it when he cried out, "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel." It is doubtful if any preacher who preached and held to his preaching through thick and thin, trial and tribulation, has ever yet been born who did not feel, who did not realize, who did not know that his Heavenly Father had laid upon him this solemn obligation, this everlasting duty, this that made him debtor in bond to all, the wise and the unwise, the Greek and the barbarian.

Possibly this is the reason why many preachers quit preaching because they find "that the work is long, the problem difficult, and the results a failure"; that quit because they feel bound by no duty, held and driven by no sense of obligation, beckoned on by no feeling of high and holy privilege.

One cannot solve the mystery of Bro. Patton's last declaration, "Solving the problem of Christian missions with the factor love, the command go, given by Jesus Christ, becomes easy, the problem simple, and the result satisfactory." Think of the apostles of our Lord. Try to think if you can of the apostle Paul, the hero of hardships, saying that since the command of our Lord has become easy, since the problem that He gave us is very simple, since we can see that the results are very satisfactory, now we will "Go."

Or turn it around and think of our Lord saying to His disciples, "When you are in a mood to do so, when you have the will to undertake it, when that day shall arrive, after neglecting as long as you will, my commandments, you shall find yourself in love with the tasks I have set you to, then will you please undertake them?" If Bro. Patton will show us one instance in which we are to neglect our duty, be oblivious to our obligation, unconcerned about the commands of our Lord, until we can develop a love in ourselves for a sinning world, such a love as will call us out to save them, then we are ready to agree with the strange conclusions to which he has come.

One is thinking of William Carey, the great missionary to India, who in the spirit of Paul and in obedience to the command of his Lord, trying to pay a debt to his fellowman, a debt laid upon him by his Lord, after wearing his life out in hardship in India, wishing this simple epitaph written on his tombstone: "A poor, unworthy worm of the dust, on Thy strong arm I fall." In such a spirit was missions conceived, and have missions been carried out. In obedience to command of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, who by His atoning death, made us poor creatures His debtors forever and ever—debtors to Him to do our duty in His service. Verily, those who have felt it their duty are carrying the gospel to the uttermost parts, while those who have never felt it their duty are waiting till the way seems easy and the results glorious.

J. O. Atkinson.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

March 8, 1925.

Subject: "The Saviour on the Cross."

Golden Text: "He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not also, with Him, freely give us all things?"—Rom. 8:32.

Lesson: Luke 23:33-46.

Devotional Reading: Psa. 22:11-19.

Reference Material: Matt. 27:32-61; Mark 15:21-47; Luke 23:26-32, 47-56; John 19: 17-42.

"There they crucified Him." Crucified Him? Why, what evil had He done? The records state that He, above all others, had lived a life of kindness and helpfulness, and had preserved an indomitable spirit of good will toward all men. It seems strange that He who went about doing good should have been put to death in such a rude and rough way. But He had preached as well as healed. And the truth which He proclaimed had cut across the prejudices and the selfish interests of the "special privilege" class. They, therefore, proceeded to put Him out of the way. And they did it by the cruel and ignominious way of crucifixion. The fact that the victim had to carry His own cross, the fact that nails were driven through His hands and feet and sides, the fact that the cross was dropped into a hole after the victim had thus been fastened to it, the fact that death came only after the victim had hung there for a longer or shorter period—all these were involved in crucifixion. And to this was added the ignominy and shame of it all, in Jesus' case of being crucified with two malefactors. "The shame of the cross"—the words have meaning in the light of these facts.

There was a mixed crowd around the cross. The common people, some of the ones who had hailed Him with hosannas on the previous Sunday were there. By and large, it was a morbid curiosity which led them there. Soldiers were there. They were a coarse, brutal crowd, hardened by other spectacles of which they were a part, and they sat by and watched Him, after they had cast dice for His garments. The rulers were there. "They scoffed," and challenged Him to save Himself, insomuch as He had saved others. They spake better than they knew; He had saved others, but He who saves others must give Himself, and if Christ had saved Himself, He could not have saved others. A centurion was there, and the sight of the man, praying for his enemies and suffering in silence convinced him that truly this man was the Son of God. The women were there. And, of course, the mother was there. And she "stood by the cross of Jesus" ready to minister to Him in His hour of need as far as it was possible. And John had not utterly forsaken his Lord, for he was there, too. And he took under his care his Master's mother.

It was customary to have printed over the victim of a crucifixion the charge against him. In this case, it was an inscription in Hebrew and Greek and Latin—"This is the King of the Jews." But He was more than that. He refused to be King of the Jews because He wanted to be King of kings and Lord of lords.

Jesus had refused the wine mingled with myrrh which they offered Him, and which would have deadened His sense of pain. And so, through the long hours from 9 in the morning till 3 in the afternoon, He suffered a living death. But even then His thoughts were of others. He prayed for His enemies, forgave the dying thief, and provided for His mother in His hour of agony. Finally, worn out in body and broken in heart, and with a momentary sense of His utter aloneness, He committed His spirit to the Father and "gave up the ghost." This is the simple story of the most important facts from the standpoint of a news story. But the statement that "Christ died on the cross" means more than that.

For the cross of Christ is central in Christianity. It expresses in time something that is eternal, and more and more Christians are coming to feel that the heart of Christianity is to be found there. In the cross of Christ, God expressed something that is eternal and vital.

1. The cross of Christ shows the awfulness of sin. It was sin that nailed Jesus Christ to the cross. And what the sin of bigotry, prejudice, hatred, pride and other kindred sins did is simply typical of what sin in any form will do.

2. The cross of Christ shows the love of God. God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son. Jesus Christ on the cross showed the eternal and infinite love of God in its highest form expressing itself in behalf of man.

3. The cross of Christ shows the redeeming power of vicarious suffering. He who would save must suffer. The story of the cross is the story of love giving itself for its own.

4. The cross of Christ shows the way to perfection. The Captain of our salvation was made perfect through suffering.

5. The cross of Christ testifies to man's redemption. Jesus Christ tasted death for every man. We are redeemed by Him.

Suggestive Teaching Points.

1. Religion suffers much wrong on account of ignorance.

2. He who would save others, must give himself.

3. He was wounded for our transgressions, and by His stripes are we healed.

4. Sin is an awful thing.

5. Wherein sin did abound, grave did much more abound.

6. We are not our own; we are bought with a price.

7. No cross, no crown.

8. He who rejects Jesus Christ, crucifies Him afresh.

9. Love forgives.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

March 8, 1925.

Subject: "The Master's Method of Winning Followers."

Scripture Reference: John 1:35-51.

1. Devotional Service—Winning Others.

Song: "Jesus Calls Us O'er the Tumult." If your hymnal does not contain this song, have some one read the first verse given below and follow with an appropriate song:

"Jesus calls us, o'er the tumult
Of our life's wild, restless sea.
Day by day His sweet voice soundeth,
Saying, 'Christian, follow me.'"

Scripture: John 1:35-51.

Prayer.

Song: "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind."

2. Suggestions for the Leader's Talk.

Christianity is a historical religion, based on historical experiences and events. The early Christian Church was built around one personality—Jesus. Christianity spread rapidly because of the wonderful power and influence of Christ. By the one-by-one (personal) method, He carefully chose His disciples, who, through the power which came from close friendship with the Master, were able to spread the good tidings.

We owe much to the early disciples who knew Jesus as He walked and talked and preached on earth. We owe much to people like Paul and thousands of others, who never knew Him as the Man on earth in flesh, but, nevertheless, knew Him just as truly. We must first realize that Jesus was once a part of our world, a reality in human experience, a simple and impressive person moving among men. Secondly, we must know Jesus for what He has done for men and women through the ages and for what He has done for us. He is life, joy, faith, hope, spirit—all! Third, we must know Him through devoted service to His cause—untiring service. To know Christ once lived, to know His historical life, is not sufficient—we must know Him through giving Him to others. And this is our task: winning men and women to Christ.

3. Suggestions for Short Talks.

Christ and His Disciples.—Christ chose His followers from among working-men, but they were men who responded to His call earnestly and stood by Him to the end (with the exception of Judas). They could not resist His simple, personal call when He said, "Follow me" and "I will make you fishers of men." They must have followed Him with joy and happiness—this Man whose quiet godliness attracted and held people. We can imagine the personal friendship between Jesus and each of the disciples. It was John who knew Christ so intimately, and this, no doubt, accounts for His being known as the disciple of love, because He must have caught Jesus' great spirit of love.

The Every-Day Life of Christ.—Jesus realized at a very early age that He must be about "His Father's business," and so in a very natural way He began definite work when He tarried in the temple with the doctors. In a simple and impressive way, He healed the sick, comforted them, visited in the homes, went apart to pray, and taught. His parables are stories which all could understand and with a message for all. His method while on earth was one of directness and steadiness, and of lasting importance. And this is His method among men today.

Winning Others.—So much of the success of the "Billy" Sunday meetings has come as a result of the large number of personal workers who have assisted him. Winning others is not alone the work of the evangelist or preacher, but the duty and privilege of every Christian. It is not so much the things we say or do which count as what we are, the kind of lives we live, and our attitude toward people and things. One can never know the kind of influence he is exerting.

Dean Brown, of Yale, tells the story of a senior who was crossing the campus late one evening after spending the evening in such a way that he was ashamed of himself and disgusted with the world. As he crossed the campus, he saw through the window the oldest and best-loved member of the faculty sitting at his desk busily writing. The young man believed he was working on something worth while, and the contrast between that picture and his own life caused him to resolve to live a more decent life. From that time on, his life was clean and pure. The old professor did not know the influence he had had on the young man.

Christian Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

When we plant a small tree, we expect it to thrive and grow to be a large tree, and at some future day be a blessing in some way to humanity. We are disappointed if it does not grow as we expected. It is the same way in the business world. If a man opens a store with but a small stock of goods, he expects it to grow and develop till it reaches larger proportions. He is a disappointed man if his dreams do not come true. It is so in every line of business—we start at the bottom with a small beginning, but no man is satisfied to stand still and not make progress.

We cannot stand still—we must go forward; we must build another building. The call has gone out for funds. We are receiving replies like the following: "I will give you a thousand dollars if you will raise the money in a reasonable time." "I want to invest a hundred dollars in the new building." "After reading your letter in THE SUN of January 29th, I have decided I would like to have a part in the new building, and I inclose $20.00 and will mail you $20.00 for four years." Another man, "I will give you a thousand dollars if you will raise the money and build the building."

What has your heart prompted you to do in this matter? Let me hear from you.

The following have been sent in since the last report: Mrs. R. E. McCollin, Wentworth, N. C., 1 pr. pillow-cases, 1 dress; Mrs. Henry Crocker, Suffolk, Va., 1 coat; Mrs. J. S. Stephens, Kite, Ga., 1 overcoat; Mrs. H. B. Everett, Holland, Va., 1 box clothing and Christmas presents; Ladies' Aid Society, Haw River Church, 1 quilt; Ladies' Aid Society, Franklin, Va., 4 night gowns; young ladies of Seagrove Church, 1 quilt, 1 box Christmas gifts (this item was overlooked in reporting our Christmas gifts).

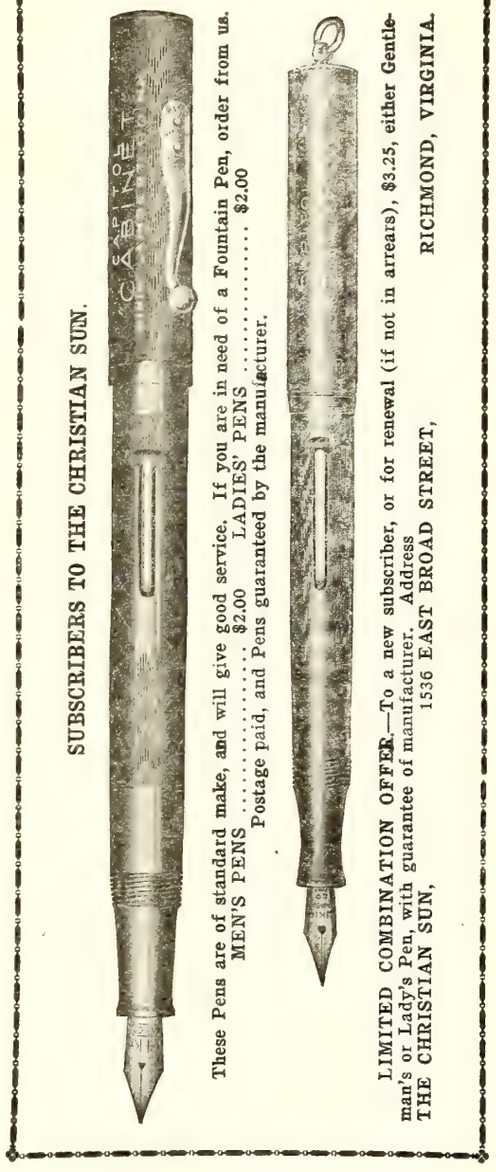
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR FEBRUARY 19, 1925.

Amount brought forward		$1,088.43
Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Christian Light	$ 5.29
Hanks Chapel	3.00
Pleasant Union	11.00
Mebane	1.25
Durham	13.11
Chapel Hill	4.03
Pleasant Hill (J)	3.33
Shallow Well	2.42
Wentworth	16.00
Piney Plains	8.75
Sanford	8.68
		76.96
Western N. C. Conference:
Pleasant Ridge (R)	$ 1.40
Seagrove	1.33
		2.73
N. C. & Va. Conference:
New Lebanon	$ 2.55
Baracca Class	2.00
Ingram, Va.	5.00
Lebanon	.80
		10.35
Eastern Virginia Conference:
Oakland	$ 4.24
S. Norfolk	6.27
First, Portsmouth	9.65
First, Richmond	4.82
Suffolk	25.00
Berea, Norfolk	6.58
Berea, Nansemond	10.00
Antioch, Valley of Va.	2.76
		69.32
Georgia and Alabama Conference:
Mt. Zion, Ala.	$ 1.10
Beulah	4.50
		5.60
New Building Fund.
Meyers, Greensboro	$ 50.00
J. F. Hilliard and wife	20.00
Ernest B. Roscoe, Burlington	25.00
		95.00
Baby Home Fund.
J. J. Gomer, Holland, Va.		5.00
Special Offerings.
Citizens' Bible Class, Elon, N. C.	$ 2.95
Philathea Class, Elon, N. C.	1.02
A. W. Andes, Harrisonburg, Va.	10.00
Alamance County, for Rudd child'n	135.00
	90.00
Mr. & Mrs. H. R. Parsons, Brushart, Ky.	10.00
		248.97
Grand total		$1,602.26

REPORT FOR FEBRUARY 26, 1925.

Amount brought forward		$1,602.26
Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Christian Light	$ 6.39
Liberty, Vance	4.37
		10.76
Western N. C. Conference:
Randleman	$ 4.00
Zion	1.05
Pleasant Hill (A)	2.50
		7.55
N. C. & Va. Conference:
Palm Street, Greensboro	$ 7.65
First, Greensboro	16.47
Reidsville	5.95
Bethlehem	2.83
		32.92
Eastern Virginia Conference:
Mt. Zion	$ 2.40
Holland	11.50
Wakefield	4.64
Franklin	5.00
Ocean View	1.50
		24.54
Valley of Virginia Conference:
Antioch	$ 3.58
Palmyra	.88
		4.46
Alabama Conference:
Wadley	$ 2.64
Bethany	3.00
		5.64
Northern Church:
Pleasant Hill, Ohio		10.00
Baby Home Fund.
F. M. Haward, Henderson		10.00
Special Offerings.
Boone Bible Class, Sanford	$ 14.50
A Friend, Durham	15.00
Chas. A. Ballentine	25.00
Miss Tom Balentine	10.00
E. M. Davenport	75.00
H. H. Furman, Raleigh	30.00
Mr. & Mrs. C. C. Howell, Jacksonville, Fla.	25.00
R. W. Malone, for Renigar child'n	240.00
		434.50
Grand total		$2,143.11



SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CHRISTIAN SUN.
These Pens are of standard make, and will give good service. If you are in need of a Fountain Pen, order from us.
MEN'S PENS $2.00
LADIES' PENS $2.00
Postage paid, and Pens guaranteed by the manufacturer.
LIMITED COMBINATION OFFER.—To a new subscriber, or for renewal (if not in arrears), $3.25, either Gentleman's or Lady's Pen, with guarantee of manufacturer. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN,
1536 EAST BROAD STREET,
RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Mission Study Books.

Official List for 1924-1925.

ORDER BY TITLE OF BOOK.

FOR ADULT CLASSES.

For Home Mission Classes:
"The Romance of Home Missions," by S. L. Morris, D. D.. Paper, 50c; cloth..... $ .75

For Foreign Mission Classes:
"Ming Kwong—the City of Morning Light," by Mary Ninde Gamewell. Paper, 50c; cloth .75
"In China," by H. F. Williams, D. D..... .25

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

For Intermediate Home Mission Classes:
"The Land of All Nations," by Margaret F. Seelbach. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75

For Intermediate Foreign Mission Classes:
"China's Real Revolution," by Paul Hutchinson. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75

For Junior Foreign Mission Classes:
"Chinese Lanterns," by Minna McEwen Meyer. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... .75

LEADERS' HELPS.

Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Adult Classes) ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Young People's Classes)..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Land of All Nations"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Ming Kwong"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "China's Real Revolution".. .15
Leaders' Helps for "Chinese Lanterns"..... .15

Send all orders to—

THE CHRISTIAN SUN,
1536 East Broad Street - - Richmond, Virginia.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

FRAILTY AND FORGIVENESS.

"If ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses."—Matt. 6:14-18.

Divine forgiveness, national forgiveness, personal forgiveness, are needed in the world today as much as ever before. The man who thinks he can get along without these elements in his life will have a sorry time of it.

God is so forgiving toward us because we are His children. He knows how frail and weak and ignorant we are. "He knoweth our frame, He remembereth that we are dust." The father of a great sculptor had become very aged and infirm, but he still loved to model in clay. After he had gone to his room, the son would take up the faulty workmanship of his father's trembling hands, and under his touch it would become perfect and beautiful. God the Father is like that. He takes our faulty lives with all their poor workmanship and makes them all that they ought to be. Certainly He has a right to expect that we who stand in such constant need of forgiveness ourselves, should be patient and merciful and forgiving toward our brothers and sisters.

The man who realizes his own faults and failings will be very charitable in his judgment of others and quick to forgive them; and as he forgives, he will be forgiven, not only by men but by God Himself. One of the most solemn truths Jesus ever uttered was this: "If ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses."

Prayer.—Hear us, Heavenly Father, as we pray for the ones we name by name. May our petitions come to Thee with faith that Thou wilt answer our longing that those we bear up on our hearts may also be borne up by Thee. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE ACT OF KINDNESS.

"Blessed be he of the Lord who hath not left off his kindness to the living and to the dead."—Ruth 2:19-23.

Boaz stands out as a type of the gentleman of the Old Testament. He was a kindly, generous man, whose thought was of others. The village gleaner was welcome in his spacious and fertile fields, and in those Bethlehem meadows the unprotected woman was safe because of his chivalry and his instructions to his servants. His industrial generosity carried no compromising obligation. The widow's cause was on his heart, and while he bestowed his gifts first upon the living, he did not forget the dead.

In these days he brings us another example we would do well to emulate. He drew no race line, held no blinded prejudice against the worthy alien to his village, and tendered his generosity and chivalry to the immigrant Ruth, with a fineness and knighthood unexcelled today. He did not say: "You are from Moab; I shall exclude you from my fields," or "You have not the required shekels and must return to Moab."

Prayer.—Fashion anew the thoughts of our hearts, most gracious One, in whom to believe is to renew all of life. Make us to see the beauties of a world that every morning is a new world because He is born again each morning in our hearts. In Jesus' name. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE VINE AND THE BRANCHES.

"I am the Vine, ye are the branches."—John 15:5.

By these words, Jesus shows the close relationship and union which we may have in Him. The purpose of the abiding union is that good fruit may be borne, and this harvest will glorify our Father and make us happy. We cannot bear good fruit unless we abide in Jesus. In fruit-bearing there must be both the vine and the branches, and they must live, grow and bear fruit together. If the branch cannot bear fruit without the vine, neither can the vine unless it has abiding branches. Both are necessary, and one must depend upon the other. This makes believers very important. By sin, selfishness and stubborness we may defeat the purpose of Jesus. We may be cut off, gathered up, and used for fire-wood, and will be thus treated unless we bear fruit. It is death to the branch to be cut off. The vine, however, still lives and bears its blessings to all branches that remain. An old man may get into Christ, by faith, and bear good fruit. But it is far better to have godly parents to so teach and train us that we may naturally grow up in Him as the tender branch puts forth and grows in the vine.

Prayer.—We thank Thee, our Father, for Thy great care and love in permitting us to know Jesus and to live and grow in Him. Purge us, but do not prune us. So teach us that we may know how to abide in Him, the true Vine, that we may glorify Thee with much fruit. In Jesus' name. Amen.—T. E. White.

THURSDAY.

JESUS' PRAYER FOR UNION.

"That they all may be one."—John 17:21.

From whatever angle we may wish to view the sublime words of Jesus in the seventeenth chapter of John, it is the greatest utterance that ever fell upon human ears. It reaches back to the very beginning of time, and it reaches forward and remembers every one in the ages to come who shall believe on Jesus. Judged from the human standpoint, it is a literary germ, well-prepared, logically outlined, and the theme is so treated that there is not a superfluous word in it. The subject is unity, and there are three divisions or circles. It is inclusive and exclusive. In the first circle, it is Jesus and the Father. He does not pray that they may be one, for they were one. And that glorious union made Him say, "All Mine are Thine, and Thine are Mine." Then the circle is enlarged to include the disciples, with the world shut out, as He fervently prays for their keeping, sanctification and union. But the world was not to remain excluded; and the climax is reached in the third circle when He prays for the world. That union which was in the first, He prays may be in the second and third circles. It is a happy thought to know that in this sublime prayer we were remembered.

Prayer.—Our Father, we pray for the union of all believers, that they may be one in faith and hope; one in spirit and love, and one in purpose and work, so that the world in darkness may have light and believe on Jesus. Amen.—T. E. White.

FRIDAY.

THE GENEROUS SOUL.

"Remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how He said, It is more blessed to give than to receive."—Acts 20:32-37.

The most wonderful telegraphic system in the world is within our bodies. Our nerves are like an intricate duplex system of electric wires. Over one set of wires we receive; over the other, we impart. The sensory nerves receive. The motor nerves impart. We are so constituted and so conditioned that we must receive and keep on receiving while we live. What have we that we have not received? Health, knowledge, character, our chiefest possessions, are largely derived from others than ourselves. But if we have received, others have given. And if others are to receive, we must learn to impart. We that are parents must give health to our children. We that have been taught must be vigilant and zealous to teach. We that love truth and hold inestimable the inheritance of faith must do our utmost to propagate it.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

SATURDAY.

THE SOUL THAT STOOD STILL.

"Curse ye Meroz, said the angel of the Lord."—Judges 5:23.

Tom was not his name, but it will serve the purpose. When winter came, the man was a "regular" at the gospel missions, those beacon lights for hard-pressed men. Few men were more prayed for than Tom. There was something in the mien of the man that touched the heart—something akin to harmlessness. Although so many mission workers prayed for him, there was apparently less hope for this man than for some of the most hardened cases. By "calling" he was a professional beggar and a periodic drunkard.

During several years that men worked and prayed for the man, some notorious "bad" men were thoroughly converted and entered upon a new life, while Tom stood religiously still. Here was Tom's weakness—he could never be brought to a decision. Lacking in will power, he dawdled mentally, standing irresolute while precious days slipped by. Never a downright "bad" man, and yet never a Christian. So he lived and died and found his resting-place in the potter's field.

"Curse ye Meroz, said the angel of the Lord." A reading of the full verse shows that the indignation of God was not because of some heinous crime committed; but because Meroz refused to come to the help of the Lord's people. They were lacking in decision. They did not fight against the Lord; they stood idle when their help was needed. "Neither hot nor cold," was the condemnation of Laodicea. Many men miss life and fail of God's blessing, not through gross sinning, but because of indecision.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

SUNDAY.

THE PRESENCE OF JESUS.

"When he saw Him, he fell at His feet."—Mark 5:21-24.

Charles Lamb said that if some other great personage of history should enter the room where he was, he would rise as a mark of respect; but if Jesus Christ should enter the room, he would bow at His feet. There was something about the personality of Jesus that arrested attention, stimulated interest, and commanded reverence. In His presence, men felt the emanation of divinity. They felt the presence of a power that could not be explained on any human basis—a power benevolent, gracious, majestic. On seeing Him, their first instinct was one of adoration.

Men do not make demands of Him. They fall at His feet. And there they find the place of true humility, the best place to make contrite confession of their sins. At His feet they get clear visions of themselves, as Peter did, and feel the infinite reaches of space that stretch between His holiness and their own sinfulness. At His feet they find the power to rise again. His infinite compassion reaches down and takes them by the hand and lifts them up.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

GOOD MORNING, DEARS!

All those valentines! My! oh, my! they were so pretty; and the Kiddies who sent them were so thoughtful of their editor. You are all dear and kind, and—wait a minute—did you try to send a pretty valentine to some one who was very, very lonely? I hope you did, for that was the true valentine spirit. Oh! oh! oh! I'm so proud of all you dear little folks, anyway. Can't you just feel that your editor loves you a lot? But I know you can.

Gee-whiz! it's 'most spring-time again—'most time to hear the birds calling from the apple trees in the garden. And then pretty soon along comes a warm day, and little brother pulls off his shoes and stockings and goes wading in the branch. Oh, dear me! wish'd I was as little as little brother. But even grown-ups are happy when the spring comes. It just makes us have a song in our hearts all day long, and all spring long, to see everything getting green again and to think of a summer-time soon a-comin'. Whoop-ee! girls and boys, aren't you glad you are alive?

At story-hour this week, we are going to have the bestest time! All of us are to wear soldier caps and do a soldier drill, and hear a George Washington story. Wish—I do wish—all my Kiddies' Korner Kiddies were coming too!

Did you ever see a dear little chipmunk? No! Read this little story about Peggy and Daddy Chipmunk. I imagine you will like Daddy Chipmonk about as well as you like Peter Rabbit.

Love from Peter Rabbit and your editor.

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT.

PERSONAL MENTION OF KIDDIES' KORNER DOINGS.

Jack Frost left town last week on the run. The warm weather chased him away.

Would you believe it when I tell you there are eight new babies just joined our cradle roll? Some of them have black hair, some of them have yellow hair, and some—oh! poor, poor wee 'ittle babies—they ain't got no hair a'tall.

Some of our Kiddies are taking the croup. I have just heard it. Peter Rabbit's Ma made a flannel-leaf poultice when Peter had the croup. Oh! that's right, it wasn't croup, was it? Well, what was the trouble with Peter that time, then? Does any one remember?

Some of our Boy Scouts had a banquet not long ago. Chicken pie and 'lasses cake was part of their menu. Oh! it went away so fast, too! But not a Scout ate so much that it hurt. Every one had such a good time, and the best of it all was the fact that all the Scouts' dads were there. They ate chicken pie, too, and 'lasses cake. Every one had a good time!

Mrs. Ducky Lucky went to town last week, and took her three little Duckies along to purchase some new spring bonnets. Coming home, later in the day, it began to rain. The two oldest children walked beside their mother, under her big green unbrella; Baby Luck Lucy had such short little legs that he was almost drowned, because he couldn't keep up. Let us hope that he isn't sick this week as a result.

PEGGY AND A CHAT WITH DADDY CHIPMUNK

"Oh, you dear little thing!" Peggy exclaimed as the wee little chipmunk scooted out from the grasses almost under her very feet. "Where in the world did you come from?"

"Hush! don't breathe it to a soul," chattered Daddy Chipmunk; "I've been gathering corn."

"Gathering corn?" Peggy laughed. "Why, Daddy's corn isn't up yet. Where did you get it from—the barn?"

"No, indeed!" replied Daddy Chipmunk; "I should have said cornseeds. We chipmunks never bother the corn after it's ripe, but we do like the freshly planted seed."

"Ho! ho!" laughed Peggy; "so that's why my Daddy's corn doesn't grow like it should! Oh, well, I guess if you leave some of it he won't mind. But where's the little chipmunk house? Don't you have a little path like most of the meadow folks do leading up to their houses?"

"Well, I should say not!" and Daddy Chipmunk shifted the corn seeds he was carrying from one cheek pouch to the other. "That's one thing I never could see."

"Come along and see my place. I'll bet you every seed I have in my pockets you can't find my burrow," and he led Peggy over where the grass was lovely and green.

"Is it around here some place?" Peggy asked. It was like a game of hide-and-seek, for she could not discover the doorway to Daddy Chipmunk's house.

"See, I told you you couldn't find it," laughed Daddy Chipmunk, very much pleased. "Had there been a path leading up to the doorway you couldn't have missed it. Well, here it is," and he pointed to a wee little doorway just under the edge of an old stump. "And I'll have you know I dug every bit of the dirt myself."

"Where did you put the loose dirt?" asked Peggy, looking for the telltale dirt.

"Over in the bushes," chuckled Daddy Chipmunk.

"So many of the woodfolks just leave the dirt piled around their doorways, but not me. I carry every bit of it away in my pockets and dump it away from my doorway. That's why you couldn't find my doorway.

"Hello, there, Mamma," he called, and a tiny, squeaky voice answered him from down in the ground. He led Peggy down through the long tunnel into the chamber at the very end, where Mamma Chipmunk and her family of five were as comfy as could be on a nice little bed made of soft grasses.

Daddy Chipmunk was very proud of his little house and showed Peggy all the little store-rooms he had made to hold their winter supplies.

Mamma Chipmunk hustled around and spread the wee little table and Peggy had the loveliest time you could imagine, and when she heard her Mamma calling her she bid her new friends good-by and hurried home.

DIFFERENCES.

By L. J. Bridgman.

When Billy squirts the garden hose
A cricket, drenched, falls on his nose,
An ant-hill melts to mud and flows,
So ants and cricket tell their woes:

"Ugh!" says the cricket; "look at me!
I'm just as mad as I can be!"
The ants cry, "Stop it! Don't you see
You'll spoil our top-floor nursery!"

But, oh, how thankful is the rose!
Why, every pretty plant that grows
Wiggles its leaves with joy and shows
How glad it is of Billy's hose.

MOUNTAINS.

Somewhere, I have heard an old story
Of Indian boys, who were sent
The desert to cross to the mountain,
Where each should attempt its ascent,
And each was to bring to the chieftain,
As proof of the story he'd tell,
A sprig of such cactus or pine tree
As on desert or mountain-side dwell.

We, too, who are crossing Life's desert
And climbing its mountain of need,
Can carry the proof of our journey—
Kind words and the kindlier deed;
Lives lived by Christ's precepts and proverbs
We can take to our Chieftain, to show
How far up the side of the mountain
His children were able to go.

—Agnes Monks Hunter.

THE CORNFIELD IN AUTUMN.

By Daisy D. Stephenson.

Where once there waved a field of green,
A mystic village now is seen;
For shocks of Indian corn now stand
Like tepees brown on every hand.

Customer: "You're sure one bottle will cure a cold?"

Assistant: "I'm sure it does, sir; nobody's ever come back for a second."

Ole Mr. Sun is out of his house again. We are all very, very glad, too!

KEEP THEM OUT OF SIGHT.

Some girls who are always showing their worst side to others try to persuade themselves this is admirable. But none of you would think of putting on your oldest, shabbiest clothes when a visitor is expected. If you are ashamed to wear a dirty blouse before a guest, you should be doubly unwilling to make a display of a bad temper or an unworthy jealousy. You cannot conquer all your weaknesses at once, but you should do your best to conceal them till you can conquer them. Displaying your shabby clothes or your shabby traits is not so much frankness as ill-breeding.

Sunshine follows after rain,
Loss will soon be changed to gain;
Joy will take the place of pain.

There is virtue in the look of a great man (after meeting Washington). I felt myself warmed and refreshed by it during the rest of my life. —Chateaubriand.

SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

Church mission secretaries, members of missionary societies, mission superintendents of Sunday schools, and missionary committees and pastors in the Virginia Valley Central Conference are hereby reminded of the school of missions to be held at Mayland Church on the first Saturday in May. All the above-mentioned persons are also urged to see to it that every Church in the Conference has one or more representatives at this missionary meeting.

The services are to begin at 10 A. M., and will continue only one day. Interesting speakers are to be present, and a large part of the time will be given over to open conferences and discussion. No Church or society can afford to miss this school of missions, and every one is urged to begin to plan now to spend the day with us.

J. F. MORGAN,
Conference Mission Secretary.

HOLT.

Penny Ella Holt, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Mann, was born February 28, 1846, and died February 16, 1925, age 78 years, 11 months and 17 days old. About the close of the Civil War, she was married to Ruffin Holt, and to this union were born nine children—three boys and six girls. She joined New Elam Christian Church during the Civil War, and remained a consistent member until death. Her husband and one son preceded her in death.

The funeral was conducted from Goldston Methodist Church January 17th by Rev. H. L. Witten, pastor, assisted by Rev. Jonas Borclay, of Pittsboro, and the writer. The body was placed by the side of her husband in the City Cemetery, covered by beautiful flowers as mute tokens of love by those who knew her.

Her suffering was long, but her patience great and faith strong, enabling her to die rejoicing in the love of God. To know her was to love her, for she was one of those rare characters in life.

She is survived by the following children: C. W., Kernersville; A. P., Salisbury; Mesdames J. M. Yarborough, of Jonesboro; J. J. Burns, Troy; I. M. Gilmore, Pittsboro; W. L. Moore, Red Springs; W. I. Williamson, Sanford, and T. B. Beal, Bear Creek; also thirty-seven grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren; also one brother, F. P. Mann, and one sister, Mrs. M. D. Holt.

The grace of God will enable all to live to meet her in heaven.

C. E. GERRINGER.

MICHAEL.

Sister Barbara Michael departed this life February 17, 1925, and was placed beside her husband in the Bethlehem Cemetary on February 19th. She was 78 years, 11 months, and 6 days old. She was the widow of David Michael, who preceded her to the spirit-land twenty-one years. To this union were born seven children, five of which survive, one son and four daughters.

Some two years previous to her death she had a beautiful vision of heaven, and on her death-bed she frequently shouted and praised God that the end was nigh. As an evidence of her Christian life, I think there were at least 500 present at her funeral. We had known her for many years as a Christian.

She leaves, to mourn their loss, five children, twenty-one grandchildren, and a hose of friends. God bless and comfort the bereaved. Funeral by the writer, assisted by Rev. A. F. Isely.

P. T. KLAPP.

TICKLE.

Robert E. Tickle departed this life on February 18, 1925, and was buried at Bethlehem. He was about twenty-three years old. He professed faith in Christ at the age of eleven years and joined the Christian Church at Berea. He entered Elon College January 2, 1923, to prepare for the gospel ministry. His health broke down, and notwithstanding all was done for him that human skill could do, his young life ended here to begin life in the spirit-world.

We were told that he was a very consecrated Christian young man. God bless the memory of this young man to the good of his survivors. He leaves to mourn their loss three sisters and three brothers. Funeral by Rev. Albright, of M. E. Church, assisted by the writer.

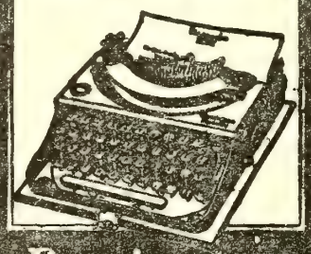
P. T. KLAPP.

EYESIGHT CONSERVATION.

Conservation has come to mean doing something unpleasant. But the call to conserve the eyesight of the nation must be heeded, else we shall find ourselves as a people seriously handicapped physically. Recent statistics show that nine out of every ten persons over twenty-one have imperfect vision. At thirty-one the proportion is larger, while after forty scarcely a person has perfect sight. Sixty-six per cent of the school children have defective eyes. Examination of the eyes of thousands of employees in the industries show the same per cent of defectives. This proves that more than one-half of the people have faulty vision.

Our eyes are the largest factor in our efficiency; their defectiveness causes a serious waste of nerve energy, which directly reduces human efficiency. The Eyesight Conservation Council has issued a call to the parents of America to watch the eyesight of their children. Many of the defects detected in childhood could be corrected. If a child sees clearly, he is more apt to think clearly. Defective vision may lead to distorted thoughts and opinions. The schools have for years been doing their utmost to have eye conservation uniform, but the co-operation of parents is necessary to make the safeguarding perfect.

Something You Have Been Waiting For



Remington Portable Typewriter

—with Standard Keyboard and every other feature common to the larger machines. Case only four inches high.

Price, with case, $60.

Send Your Order to THE CHRISTIAN SUN Richmond, Va.

WINTER TOURIST TICKETS
—ALL RESORTS—
SOUTH AND SOUTHWEST

CALIFORNIA
Via New Orleans and "Sunset Limited."

INFORMATION, ITINERATIES, RESERVATIONS
Furnished in Detail Upon Request.

Apply to Local Agent, or Address
F. H. POSTON, Division Passenger Agent,
Southern Railway System,
809 East Main Street, - - Richmond, Virginia.

WINSTON-INTERNATIONAL
SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLES
SELF-PRONOUNCING
Contain specially prepared Helps to Bible Study and many Attractive Illustrations suitable for children.
Send for Illustrated Catalog
THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO., Publishers
American Bible Headquarters
429 Winston Building Philadelphia

V. E. MAREAN
Pipe Organ Expert
TUNING --- REPAIRING
REBUILDING
Motors Installed Yearly Contracts
P. O. Box 864, - Richmond, Va.
Phone, Boulevard 7011-J

Internal cleanliness protects against disease

IN CONSTIPATION, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness, including the gravest diseases of life.

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favour Lubrication

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

Nujol
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
For Internal Cleanliness

A LONG TIME TO WORRY.

A great deal of discussion recently arose when some scientist predicted that the sun was cooling off. The discussion was of a rather hectic nature until the scientist hastened to explain that this work would not be evident until about fifteen billion years had elapsed.

It was a great relief that was felt in the land at that announcement. To be sure, there may be somebody that will worry about the end of the world with the fading of the sun in something like fifteen billion years, but if they can afford to do that it is a pretty good sign that there is not anything much in the way of care bothering them on earth at present.

Fifteen billion years is certainly a long time to worry. If the human race started in now, a lot of wrinkles and headaches could be achieved before Old Sol started to get the curtain in the theater of the universe.

It is rather interesting to know that some man has the egotism to think that his puny little brain can project itself fifteen billion years into the future and predict the end of the sunshine that has been serving mankind since the beginning of the world. That same man probably could not tell whether or not he is liable to walk around the corner and get hit with a brick that some workman might allow to drop inadvertently. This business of looking into the future affords some people a living, but the man who is predicting an event fifteen billion years away will have to lower the elevation of his guns before he expects to hit anything in the mind of the average man.—Selected.

THE SCHOOL CURRICULUM.

Eighty-five per cent of the two million school children are in elementary schools, the great crucibles out of which our citizenship comes. In them, tools of life are fashioned, habits are formed and character molded. It is important, therefore, that such courses be offered and such effective teaching be provided as will enable each child to develop to the fullest extent of his powers, says C. F. Hoban, Department of Public Instruction, Harrisburg, in the Pennsylvania School Journal.

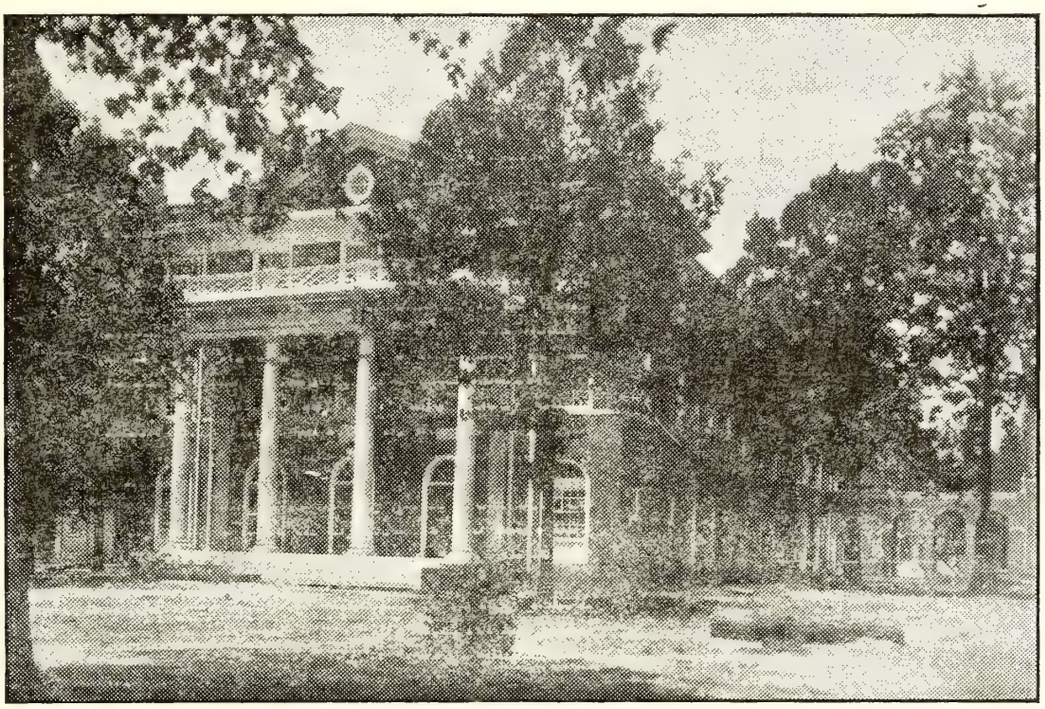
The elementary school can be enriched through—

The establishment of kindergartens. These provide for the individuality of the child, develop motive and offer large opportunity for physical activity. They are democratic and great Americanizers.

The work-study-play plan of organization, which offers provisions for guidance, supervised study, proper specialization and larger socialization.

A wider use of visual aids. An intelligent use of the chart, graph, map, model, motion picture, school journey, museum specimen, photographic print, picture, slide and the stereograph will vitalize the teaching of art, civics, English, geography, health, history, music, nature study and vocational subjects.

ELON COLLEGE---CO-EDUCATIONAL

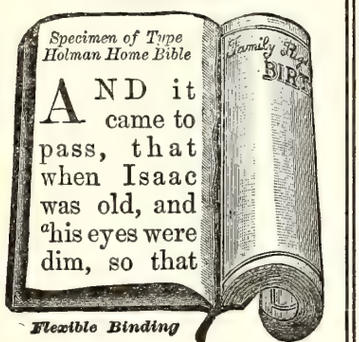


WHITLEY AUDITORIUM BUILDING
One of the Group of Five New Buildings now Completed.

Elon, in her rebuilding program, has been looking to the future. Ten buildings, new and modern equipment, and a highly trained and efficient faculty are at the service of the future leaders of our Church. The phenomenal growth of Elon in the past two years indicates a larger growth throughout the whole denomination in the years just ahead. Make Elon your own Church College in a personal way by your patronage and prayerful co-operation.

HOLMAN BIBLES

For Old Folks and the Home
EXTRA LARGE PRINT WITH REFERENCES



Specimen of Type
Holman Home Bible
AND it came to pass, that when Isaac was old, and his eyes were dim, so that Family Bible
Flexible Binding

Size when closed, 6½ x 9¾ inches

Printed from large Clear Pica Type, with Marginal References, Family Record and Maps. This HOME BIBLE is new and very desirable for every day use, containing all the advantages of a Family Bible in a compact size that can be easily handled, with Record for Births, Marriages and Deaths. The best Bible obtainable for old folks who need extra large clear print and a light-weight book.

No. 2014. Durably Bound in French Seal Leather, full flexible covers, round corners, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, gold titles.

Price—Post Paid.....4.85

HOLMAN BIBLES

NEW BLACK-FACED TYPE TEACHERS' BIBLE

The very latest and newest Teachers' Bible published, and it includes every possible improvement in Bible making. The type is a clean, clear, sharp Black Face, which is printed on the finest paper obtainable. Easy to read (can be read in the dimmest light), and is just the page for those suffering from impaired eyesight. Compact in size, light in weight, easy to carry.

Absolutely flexible binding. Contains Old and New Testaments, Treasury of Biblical Information, Practical Comparative Concordance, Oriental Light on the Bible, Four Thousand Questions and Answers, Fifteen New Maps in Colors, about 1500 pages in all.

Size, 5¼ x 7¾ inches.

Specimen of Type
THE LORD is my shephe not want.
2 He maketh me to lie green pastures: he leadeth the still waters.

No. 4412. Bound in Seal Grain Morocco, with overlapping covers, rounded corners, red under gold edges. Silk head bands and silk marker.

Price—Post Paid..... 4.20

No. 433X. Holman India Paper. Algerian Morocco, Leather Lined, Silk Sewed, Divinity Circuit, round corners, carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and Helps as above.

Price—Post Paid..... 9.35

MONEY TO LEND ON IMPROVED FARMS--FAVORABLE TERMS

Write for Details

SO. BOND & MORTGAGE CO.
627 E. Main St. - - Richmond, Va.

Medical College of Virginia

Medicine Dentistry
Pharmacy Nursing

New Buildings. Well-equipped Laboratories, under the direction of full-time, competent teachers.

The Memorial Hospital, Dooley Hospital, St. Philip Hospital, are owned and controlled by the Medical College of Virginia, and offer every facility for thorough clinical teaching.

Staffs composed of the Faculty of the College. Additional clinical facilities are offered through other institutions in Richmond.

For full information and catalogue, address—

J. R. McCAULEY, Secretary.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D.....Editor
W. W. STALEY, D. D.....Associate
W. A. HARPER, LL. D.....Associate
R. C. HELFENSTEIN, D. D...Associate
REV. S. C. HARRELL.....Associate
REV. S. M. LYNAM.....News Editor
P. J. KERNODLE....Managing Editor

Subscription Rates.

One Year $2.00
Six Months 1.00

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post-Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows the date of expiration. Please renew at least two weeks in advance.

Change of Address: Give both old and new post-office when asking that your address be changed.

When subscriptions are made for friends, state whether paper is to be stopped at end of the year.

Remittances: Make all remittances to "The Christian Sun," 1536 East Broad Street, Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and Marriage Notices, limited to 100 words, are published free of charge. All over 100 words, published at 1 cent a word. Remittance should accompany copy. Write names distinctly.

Advertising Rates: "Want Ads," 2 cents a word an insertion. Display Rates quoted upon request.

FOR SALE.

A 40-bbl., electric-driven, fully-equipped modern Flour Roller-Mill, Corn and Feed Mill, located right in the town of Elon College, near railroad siding, on acre lot; hard-surface and sand-clay roads leading out in all directions.. A good custom grain mill and good business opportunity for the right man, as well as advantage of a high-grade high school and high-class college.

Terms: Part cash; balance on long terms. Apply—

C. R. LOVE, - - BURLINGTON, N. C.

BURKE.

Mrs. Cornelia Burke, of Asheboro, N. C., Route 1, passed away at her home on February 5, 1925. She was born March 30, 1847, and so was 77 years, 10 months and 5 days old. She leaves to mourn their loss three sons—Mr. J. E. and Charlie Burke, of Asheboro, and James, of Franklinville, N. C.; two daughters—Mrs. Clifford Glasgow, of Asheboro, and Mrs. D. Kivett, of Siler City, N. C. She also leaves two brothers and two sisters and a host of relatives and friends. Her husband and two children preceded her to the grave.

She professed faith in Christ when young, uniting with the Baptist Church. Later she united with the Christian Church at Pleasant Cross.

She was laid to rest in the Pleasant Cross Cemetery. A large crowd attended the funeral, conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. Wm. Elam.

J. M. ALLRED.

FURMAN.

Whereas, God, in His wisdom, has seen fit to call from our midst Mrs. Mattie King Furman; be it resolved:

1. That in the death of Mrs. Furman, the Woman's Missionary and Aid Society of the First Christian Church, of Raleigh, N. C., has lost one of its most faithful and loyal members.

2. That we extend to her husband and children our sympathy, urging them to look to Him who is abundantly able to comfort them in their sorrow.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to th family, a copy to The Christian Sun, and a copy be spread upon the minutes of our society's record.

MISS SUSIE ALLEN.
MISS LENA BARROW.
MRS. WM. D. PARRY.

OXFORD TEACHERS' BIBLES

An Oxford Teachers' Bible has references and 300 pages of helps that are a mine of information to Bible students. The helps are arranged in alphabetical order, like a dictionary. They are accurate, comprehensive and up-to-date. A few styles are listed here. Many others are described in our Bible catalogue, mailed upon request.

04403 [This size print] Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 6⅞ x 4⅝ inches $4.00

0623x [Same Bible as 04403] Printed on Oxford India paper. Only 1 inch thick..... $6.00

04453 [This size print] French Morocco leather binding, overlapping covers, 7¼ x 5 in. $4.35

0773x [Same Bible as 04453] Printed on Oxford India paper. A remarkably thin and light Bible. (Only 1 inch thick) $7.75

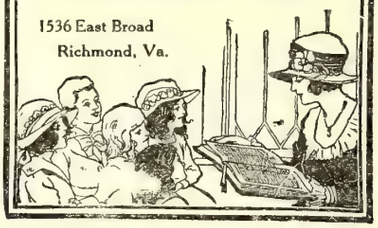
05453 [Same Bible as 04453] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $6.25

05453x [Same Bible as 0773x] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $8.75

04523 [This size print] A self-pronouncing Oxford Bible. Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 8½ x 5½ inches... $5.50

0923x [Same Bible as 04523] Printed on Oxford India paper, only 1⅛ inches thick... $9.75

ORDER FROM
"THE CHRISTIAN SUN"
1536 East Broad
Richmond, Va.



FOR GOOD HOME COOKING
MRS. COOK'S CAFETERIA
805 East Grace Street.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

A Co-Educational School
LOCATED AT
WADLEY, ALABAMA

This School offers the last two years of Academic work and the first two years of College work.

The following Courses are offered in the—

COLLEGE DEPARTMENT: English, Bible, Religious Education, Latin, French, History, Education, Mathematics and Science.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENTS: Music—Piano, Voice; Commercial Department—Bookkeeping, Typewriting, and Shorthand.

Due attention will be given Athletics, such as Tennis, Basket-Ball, Baseball, Football.

The government of the School is mild, but firm, endeavoring to create a home atmosphere as much as possible, not merely to maintain discipline, but to cultivate Christian character.

This is our own School, located within reach of all in this section, and the cost is less than any other College within reasonable distance of those who would attend School from this section.

Send for a Catalogue giving full description of Courses and entrance conditions.

S. L. BEOUGHER, President
Wadley, - - - - Alabama.

HOLMAN BIBLES

FOR CHILDREN
PICTORIAL BIBLES WITH HELPS

The text is self-pronouncing, by the aid of which children can learn to pronounce the difficult Scripture proper names.

Specimen of Type
27 And the boys grew: and Esau was a cunning hunter.
5 And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof.

Size, 5⅜ x 3½ inches.

With beautiful photo views of scenes in Bible lands distributed throughout the text. Also maps of Bible lands in colors. Also new Practical Helps to Bible Study, especially designed for instructing children in scriptural information.

No. 9111. French Seal Leather, overlapping covers, round corners, gold edges, gold titles.

Our Price—Post Paid..... 2.30

COLORED PICTURE EDITION

Portraying in natural colors, scenes and places taken from nature and life in the Holy Land.

No. 9211. Same as No. 9111, but with Beautifully Colored Pictures.

Our Price—Post Paid..... 2.40

FOR INTERMEDIATE SUNDAY-SCHOOL SCHOLARS

Large Clear Black Type, Self-Pronouncing, containing Helps to Bible Study, 4000 Questions and Answers, Maps in Colors, and Presentation Page. A Beautiful Gift Bible.

Specimen of Type.
22 And the prophet Is'ra-el, and said unto thyself, and mark, and for at the return of t

Size, 7 x 5 inches.

No. 215. Divinity Circuit Style, Bound in French Seal Leather, round corners, red under gold edges, with silk head bands and purple silk marker, gold titles, etc.

Our Price—Post Paid..... 3.10

No. 3215RL. Red Letter Scholars' Bible, same Bible as No. 215, with all the Sayings of Christ printed in Red, and with Red and gold INLAID PANEL SIDE TITLES, also Beautifully Colored Pictures.

Our Price—Post Paid..... 3.45

Holman Self-Pronouncing
VEST POCKET TESTAMENTS

Clearest Print in Smallest Size
4⅝ x 2¾ x ⅜ inches

Specimen of Type.
AND the third day there was a marriage in Cā'nā of Găl'i-lee; and the mother of Jē'sus was

2133K. Bound in durable Morocco Grain Semble Leather, flexible limp, gilt titles ..... .60

2113. French Morocco, genuine leather, flexible limp, gold titles, rounded corners, gold edges..... .70

2115P. French Morocco, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, with the Book of Psalms included $1.10

ILLUSTRATED VEST POCKET TESTAMENT
With Pictures of Holy Land Scenes

2814. French Morocco, limp, gold side title round corners, red under gold edges ..... .85

RED LETTER VEST POCKET TESTAMENT
With all the words of our Lord printed in red.

13RL. French Morocco, flexible limp, gold side title on red panel, gold edges. .85

15RLP. French Morocco, overlapping covers, flexible, gold side title on red panel, red under gold edges, with Book of Psalms included $1.25

INDIA PAPER VEST POCKET TESTAMENT
Thin as a Wafer

2136XP. Fine Grain Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lined to edge, with Psalms included $2.25

Send Your Orders to
THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY. 1956.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Official Organ of the Southern Christian Convention

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY. IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY. IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXVII. RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, MARCH 5, 1925. NUMBER 10.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

Most Important Claim.—

No other claim is so important as that of President Coolidge—obedience to law is every citizen's duty.

Churches Appeal to Parents.—

The newspapers of Dayton, Ohio, have published an appeal to parents, signed by a minister of the Protestant, the Catholic, and the Jewish faith. The appeal summarizes the conditions in the morals court of the city, and points out that the condition effects every family in the city, of whatever station. The signers then declare that the schools and the police are unable to get at the seat of the trouble, and appeal to the parents to render assistance in the matter in a very genuine way.

Experimenting in Religious Education.—

New York City is the scene of an interesting experiment in week-day schools of religion. Protestants, Catholics and Jews are co-operating in the work. Public school No. 46 has been selected as the laboratory. Pupils are not excused from classes, but are invited to remain after school for religious teaching. It is felt that it would be politically unwise to attempt to excuse the children from classes. This co-operative movement of the three faiths may have far-reaching results. The experiment is still in its infancy.

Reorganize Education Board.—

The Methodist Church has announced the reorganization of its boards of education. The single board of education now supervises the same work formerly under four separate boards. There is now a department of educational institutions, a department of educational institutions for negroes, a department of Church schools, and a department of Epworth League. Except in the department of Epworth League, the work will still be under secretaries formerly on the boards. Again we can say that the Christian Church pioneered in this direction.

Reichstag Faces Prohibition Bill.—

It is reported that twenty members of the German Reichstag stand ready to support the prohibition bill, to be introduced into that body soon. The bill cannot pass at this time, but it is felt that agitation in that direction will be helpful to the temperance cause in Germany. It is declared by authorities that the liquor consumption in Germany is not more than one-third of what it was in the pre-war days. Poverty, of course, accounts for some of this falling off, but the branches of the German youth movement is credited with a part of it. The prohibition cause is gaining ground rapidly in Germany.

Rockefeller's Proposal Supported.—

In subscribing half a million dollars toward the completion of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., proposed that trustees of other denominations than the Episcopalians be associated with the Episcopalian members on the board. Bishop William T. Manning declared that such action would hinder rather than help the carryong out of the slogan, "A house of prayer for all people," which has been used in the campaign. Many other prominent Episcopalian ministers have seen fit to disagree with Bishop Manning, and are supporting the Rockefeller proposal. The subscriptions to the building fund have passed the seven million dollar mark already.

Test Oregon School Law.—

Early in March, arguments will begin before the Supreme Court of the United States as to the constitutionality or otherwise of the public school law of the State of Oregon compelling all minors to attend the public schools. The arguments of Oregon is frankly aimed at Roman Catholic and other parochial schools, and in the argument it is contended that there is no guarantee of religious liberty, and that the State has unlimited control over its minors. On the decision of the court rests the fate of similar laws now pending in Michigan, Washington, and Wyoming. The Federal district court has already declared the law unconstitutional, and the decision of the supreme tribunal will finally settle the matter.

Iceland Pre-Eminent.—

After two years of futile effort, the Roman Catholic Church has retired from the attempt to win over the people of Iceland to that faith. The 85,000 people inhabiting the little kingdom of Iceland are firmly fixed in their loyalty to Lutheranism. Every child is taught to read, and in all the 85,000 population there is not an illiterate person. The people of Iceland have not been engaged in a war in more than a thousand years. In his recent book, "The Character of Races," Dr. Ellsworth Huntington devotes especial attention to Iseland, and declares that, according to its population, it has given to the world more outstanding men than any other country in the world. A beautiful example that real men may be grown without war.

"Watchman-Examiner" Disturbed.—

The Watchman-Examiner, a conservative Baptist weekly, seems somewhat wrought up over the advertising of the Ladies' Home Journal in the Memphis Commercial Appeal, in which the journal featured an article by Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick. The Watchman-Examiner asked if the Ladies' Home Journal did not know that the South was a stronghold of orthodox religion, and a few other similar questions. The Baptist editor then points out that the journal will lose ten subscribers for every one it gains or, he says, something is wrong with the law of cause and effect. Now, the Ladies' Home Journal is advertising a reply to Dr. Fosdick by Dr. C. E. Macartney, the eminent fundamentalist. We are persuaded that the journal may be trying to regain those lost subscribers, if there were any.

Chaplaincy Committee Appointed.—

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, president of the Federal Council of Churches, has just announced the appointment of a chaplaincy committee consisting of twelve of the most prominent ministers of America. The business of this committee will be to investigate the possibility of furnishing the army and navy with the service of chaplains without incorporating them into the military system or giving to them military rank.

If this can be done, and it seems altogether possible, it will mean much to the Church. The Church of Christ should be, and must be, present wherever men are; but it seems such a sad commentary on the Christ which the Church represents that those men who carry His message should don the soldier's garb and follow to war as soldiers. Let us pray that somehow these men to whom Dr. Cadman has entrusted so great a task shall succeed in the work to which they set their hands.

The Farm Furnishes Preachers.—

Dean James A. Beebe, of the Boston School of Theology, points out the fact that the farm furnishes more ministers than does any other calling in life. Taking the alumni of that institution as a basis, the dean reveals the following facts: Out of 924, 372 admitted that their fathers were farmers. The manse came second, with 142 hailing from the parsonage. Business offered its share, with the sons of 48 merchants, 14 manufacturers, 25 contractors, and 8 salesmen. Among artisans, carpenters were in the lead, with 27 coming from such homes. The professionals made a poor showing, considering their cultural advantages, there being but 35 of these sons listed. Of these, 13 were sons of physicians, 7 sons of lawyers, and 7 claimed teachers as their sires. Such reports are always interesting; however, they may often be incomplete. They furnish a basis on which to do some very suggestive thinking of our own. If the farm leads, why does it lead? If teachers do furnish the pulpit with so few recruits, just why do they not furnish more? These and many other very pertinent questions may arise for constructive thought.

NOTES-PERSONALS

New subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN are welcome. There are needed one thousand new subscribers to be added this year.

Who will be the next pastor to install THE SUN in every family represented in his Church? Write for the plan and conditions to be observed.

Easter Sunday this year falls on the 12th of April. Many things are appointed to be done by this time. None too much time in which to prepare a good Easter program.

The three largest cathedrals in the world are: St. Peter's, at Rome; the Seville Cathedral, in Spain, and when completed, the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, in New York City, which will be the largest.

Rev. T. J. Green, Elon College, has been properly and lovingly pounded by his good Shallow Ford congregation—a deserved mark of esteem from a congregation that ever delights in doing generous deeds.

Rev. McD. Howsare, D. D., began an evangelistic campaign at Elon Monday, March 2d, to continue for a week. His system of enlistment and personal work seems to have great virtue in it and achieves wonderful results.

We congratulate our good friend and brother, Dr. Roy Helfenstein on the successful and great work he seems to have accomplished on a recent tour to the Pacific Coast. Dr. Goodell, secretary of evangelism for the Federal Council, writes most flatteringly of Dr. Helfenstein and his work. See elsewhere in this issue.

Bro. Sam Davis and wife, of Norfolk, our good and great evangelistic helpers, are to be with Rev. W. C. Hook, Albany, N. Y., March 15th to 29th. Bro. Davis and wife are great helps in evangelistic services, and their work seems to be effectual. Our Churches should keep them busy.

Rev. B. J. Harward, our devoted pastor at Chapel Hill, has evidently cultivated the reading habit amongst his people. He has recently put THE CHRISTIAN SUN in every home represented in the Church. Now comes an order for fifty copies of "The Principles of the Christian Church" and other denominational literature. This pastor is evidently sowing seeds with a harvest in view.

The moon was about four seconds late in blotting out the sun. This was due to the fact that some unknown force speeds up or slows down the moon at times. But isn't it wonderful that scientists are able to tell us almost to the second when we are to have an eclipse, and able to tell when eclipses will come a hundred or a thousand years from now!

Within the past few weeks, every one who pledged to Men and Millions has been given, in person or by mail, a statement of amount paid and "balance due." Many have responded cheerfully. Some have not. At any rate, we do not think any one can complain that his or her account was never presented. How gladly do we receive and receipt and duly credit every dime and dollar sent in!

Some are loyally and sacrificially meeting their obligations to Men and Millions, paying their pledges though it costs to do so. This is the kind of zeal and moral strength that makes men and women worth while in their day and generation.

Our First Christian Sunday School, Richmond, Va., is among the growing list of Sunday Schools making a monthly contribution to missions. We are glad of the increasing number of Sunday Schools who, through their monthly offerings, are helping to carry forward our missionary work. St. Luke's Christian Church, Dover, Del., Rev. R. S. Stephens, pastor, is also among the goodly and growing number, and our gratitude is hereby expressed.

We have received a copy of a monthly journal published at Washington, D. C., entitled "The Old Time Religion." We note with pleasure that Rev. V. T. Crawford, pastor of Elm Avenue Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va., is one of the editors and has in the initial number a very fine article. We wish "The Old Time Religion" much success in its chosen field of activity. It is interdenominational and seeks to promote the ideals of the old-time religion in all the denominations and to advance the kingdom of our Lord on the constructive basis of the faith once delivered unto the saints. The first number is a very readable and interesting one. We congratulate Bro. Crawford on the fine work of his pen.

THE PATHWAY OF PROGRESS.

By Dr. W. D. Weatherford.

To those who can discern the meaning of things, it is clear that a new light is dawning in race relations. Men are coming to desire a larger knowledge of all other men. Wise men realize that each group has a contribution to make to the world's civilization, and the sooner all groups can be brought to efficiency, the sooner will the world be blessed with all these contributions. Neither individuals nor races work out their destinies alone, but in co-operation. "All the world needs all the rest of the world." Working together for the good of all, each race may have its individual life and yet live in peace and harmony, and in helpfulness to the other races which live by its side. It behooves every true lover of his land to strive to know all its peoples and to help each and all in the struggle upward, envying no man his success, hating none, blessing and blessed by all.

BENEVOLENCES DURING 1924.

The following is a report of the benevolences distributed through the Southern Christian Convention for the calendar year 1924:

Orphanage	$ 23,257.44
Conference apportionments	17,259.32
Woman's Missionary Societies	9,290.56
Specials for missions and evangelism	7,368.15
C. M. A., Eastern Va. Con.	2,060.00
C. M. A., Ga. and Ala. Con.	100.55
S. S. and Christian Endeavor	1,050.13
Direct to boards at Dayton, Ohio	104.72
Total	$ 60,490.87
Special mission fund	1,967.36
Elon standardization	12,926.50
Men and Millions	26,494.42
Elon emergency	127,621.50
Total for benevolences	$229,500.65
Average per member (29,179 members)	7.86
For local Church extension	265,292.50
This makes a grand total, exclusive of current xpenses	494,793.45

May 1925 have as good a record!

J. E. West, Chairman.

THE PRAYER PAGE.

Lent.

For the next forty days, the "Prayer Page" will be devoted to the fellowship of prayer and observed in the spirit of Lent. It is hoped that every one will give special attention to each day's devotions and may the Lord prepare your hearts for its climax—Easter.

Lent is the forty days of spring prior to Easter. It corresponds with the forty days' fast of the Saviour. It is usually observed by some self-denial or sacrifice and by prayer, in imitation of the spirit of our Lord. Whatever we may forego during this season, or whether any at all (and these are no directions for abstinence), it is hoped each will want to join the other readers of the page by reading each day the "Fellowship of Prayer." This is THE SUN'S contribution to the observance of the sacred season. The Lord's blessings be upon you.

H. E. Rountree.

POUNDED.

The good people of Shallow Ford expressed their appreciation of their pastor by a generous pounding Monday, February 12th. When we had settled down at our new home at Elon College, a company of the members of Shallow Ford, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Crouse, Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Pitts, Mr. and Mrs. Bal Hensley, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Gerringer, Mrs. Mollie Tickle, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Walker, Mrs. Wyrick, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Isley, and others whose names I failed to get, arrived at our home and proceeded to bring in and lade the table with such things as sugar, ham, sausage, canned fruit, dried fruit, cereals, and the like, until the job was complete.

Although the pastor was absent, on his return his heart rejoiced with the family because of this substantial expression of appreciation of the efforts of their humble servant, and we only hope we may at least be of some service to the Father's kingdom and His people. Thanks to one and all.

T. J. Green.

POUNDED.

It is not with a feeling of worthiness, nor an attempt at boastfulness, that I write these lines of testimony to the loving thoughtfulness of my people toward their pastor. Fear of such apparent presumption, and not lack of appreciation, has kept me from reporting for publication many of their special expressions, such as their very frequent "poundings."

However, the most recent of such "batterings" deserves a place in print. When one is stabbed in the back, he very naturally gives publicity to the facts and circumstances of the affair, and in that way advertises the perpetrator. The writer was a victim of such an unheralded attack last Saturday night. I was in my library, all alone and busy with my studies. Of course, I heard voices and footsteps in other parts of the house, but thinking that some people who have rooms with us were having company, I was not disturbed. Later, when I was conscious of no noise except that of my typewriter, and not knowing that I was not the only one awake in the house, one of our roomers came to my door and informed me that I had been pounded. Pounded already, mind you, and the pounders all gone! Well, I went to the kitchen and immediately observed one thing that might have been the reason they did not leave us more good things to eat—the kitchen wasn't bigger!

Now, dear reader, these people do many good things for their pastor, their Church and community in just this kind of way. They do "whatsoever their hands find to do," and blow no horns before nor after. I guess there are many people in our town who do not know that this Church, though the youngest by perhaps more than fifty years, is the only self-supporting Church in the town.

Do you ask if I am happy? God bless my people and make me worthy of a place among them. BRITTON J. HOWARD.

NOTICE.

Eastern Virginia Woman's Conference.

The district missionary rallies will be held as follows:

Franklin District.—Mrs. J. A. Williams, superintendent; March 31st; Mt. Carmel; speakers: Dr. I. W. Johnson, Rev. J. H. Lightbourne.

Waverly District.—Mrs. Waverly Barrett, superintendent; April 1st; Spring Hill; speakers: Rev. F. C. Lester, Rev. J. G. Truitt.

Nansemond District.—Mrs. H. S. Hardcastle, superintendent; April 2d; Oakland; speakers: Dr. L. E. Smith, Rev. J. G. Truitt.

Norfolk District.—Mrs. J. E. Cartwright, superintendent; April 3d; Christian Temple, Norfolk; speakers: Dr. W. W. Staley, Rev. F. C. Lester. MRS. L. W. STAGG, Secretary.

PROGRAM.

Program for the district missionary rallies, to be held at Mt. Carmel, Spring Hill, Oakland and Christian Temple, March 31st, April 1st, 2d, 3d.

Song—"The Church's One Foundation."

Devotional—Scripture: Col. 1:13-20; 1 Cor. 12:12-20; Acts 17-24.

Minutes.

Superintendent's Message.

Address—Dr. J. O. Atkinson.

Special Music.

Address—(Delegate to North American Missionary Conference).

Appointment of Committees.

Offering.

Message Concerning Apportionments.

Afternoon Session.

Devotional.

Our Work Explained (each Superintendent will choose her speakers for this part of the program):

The Cradle Roll.

Willing Workers.

Young People.

Woman's Societies.

Special Music.

Address—(Delegate to North American Missionary Conference).

Reports of Committees.

Closing Exercise.

MRS. M. L. BRYANT,
MRS. W. V. LEATHERS,
MRS. R. T. BRADFORD,
MRS. R. T. STAGG,
Committee.

Y. P. MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR MARCH.

The following is the Woman's and Young People's Missionary program for March:

CHINA.

Hymn—"How Firm a Foundation!"

Business:

Roll Call (respond with verse of Scripture).

Dues Collected by Treasurer.

Reports of Officers.

Reports of Committees.

Devotional—Bible Lesson, "Jesus' Work for Individuals" (John 3:1-3; John 4:13-14; Matt. 15:21-28; John 8:10-11; John 1:41-43; Rom. 1:14).

Prayer—Call for Sentence Prayers.

Special Music.

Missionary Topic—"Ming Kwong: City of the Morning Light."

(a) Good Tidings.

(b) The Harvest.

(c) The Tares.

(d) A Strong Nation.

(e) The Glory of the Lord.

(Have room arranged attractively with Chinese lanterns and pictures. A set of six beautiful pictures can be obtained from Mrs. Powers, Room 25 C. P. A. Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, for 50 cents. Have the story of each picture told by various members. A little book in which the story of each picture is given accompanies the set of pictures.)

Reading from "Of One Blood," pp. 87 & 88.

Hymn—"The Morning Light is Breaking."

Benediction. GERTRUDE BROWNE.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The Illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the Number and prices.

TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Minion Bold-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4 7-8x 7 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

India Paper Edition, Size 4 7-8x7 Inches, 1 1-10 Inches Thick.

2152X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$6.00

Bourgeois Type, Size 5 3-8x8 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2167—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.00

2172—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.50

India Paper Edition, Only 1 1-8 Inches Thick.

2172X—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$8.50

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3¾x2⅝ inches, and 1 inch thick; with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black.

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations. Special book for Sunday Schools 95c

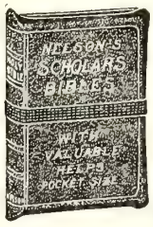
Ruby Type, Size 3¾x2⅝ Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps $2.50

Minion Type, Pocket Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ inches Thick.

With 32 full-colored illustrations; also 25 outline maps through the text and 12 colored maps.

133—Bound in cloth, round corners, red edges, title stamped on side in pure gold $1.60



135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 15-16 of an Inch Thick.

135X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.75

Minion Black-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4¾x 7 Inches, 1¼ Inches Thick.

Printed from clear, large, black-face type, 32 full-page illustrations in Sepia and colors, 4,000 Questions and Answers, Harmony of the Gospels, How to Study the Sunday School Lesson, 25 outline Maps, 12 full-page colored Maps.

4152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold.....$3.25

TEXT BIBLES—AMERICAN STANDARD VERSION.

Printed from Easy-Reading Type, on Good Bible Paper, for Sunday School and Church Use.

Minion Type, Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick, 25 Outline Maps, Bound in Black.

101—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, title stamped on back in pure gold..$1.10

112—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title on back in pure gold $2.75

India Paper Edition, Only ⅞-Inch Thick.

112X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

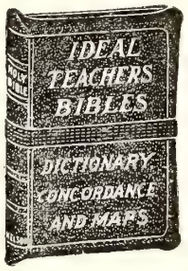
Reference and Text Bibles also in minion, brevier, bourgeois, long primer, pica and English type.

Thumb index cut on edge, 50c extra; name printed on any Bible in gold, 40c extra; extra wording, 40c per line.

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (v vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3-8x 8 1-2 Inches and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

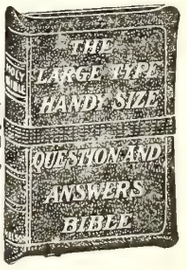


Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With concise Bible dictionary, combined concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.75

RED LETTER EDITION

With all the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.



1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands, title stamped on side and back in pure gold $3.25

Any of the above Bibles sent post paid. Address THE CHRISTIAN SUN 1536 East Broad Street, - - - Richmond, Va.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR.

J. O. ATKINSON, Elon College, N. C.

Contributing Editors.

W. W. STALEY W. A. HARPER
R. C. HELFENSTEIN S. C. HARRELL

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

A RELIGION OF OBLIGATION.

It has been wisely said that Christianity is a religion of responsibility and obligation, rather than of privilege and opportunity. This for the reason that the privileges and opportunities of Christianity creates obligation and responsibility. That is to say, all the privileges, advantages, opportunities, blessings, benefits that Christ brings to one are means to an end. Having been blessed in Christ and through Christ, we are commissioned by Christ to carry those blessings and benefits to others. We are laid under constraint, put under bonds, brought under obligations by and through Him to make Him known to others who have not known Him. Paul, the greatest of missionaries, went at the heart of the matter when in 2 Cor. 5:20, he declared, "Now, then, we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech through us." Ambassadors—those sent out for Christ—as if God was beseeching, begging an unsaved world through us to come unto Him and be saved.

This obligation, this solemn responsibility, this heavenly duty was laid upon His disciples, all His disciples, until this day, when this parting command was given by the Lord, "Go, ye, into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." He could have commissioned the angels and the seraphs to do that infinite task. But instead He laid that obligation on His disciples. And this was not commanded then to make them and us the poorer, but the richer; not the weaker, but the wiser; not to burden them, but to bless them. For only through obedience to Christ, doing our bounden duty in all things that He has commanded us, carrying out our obligations to Him as strength and courage and faith will allow, do we come to share His love for an unsaved, a sinning, a wicked world.

The thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians has been rightly called the noblest ode to love ever penned by the hand of man. No man could have ever penned such immortal words of love as those who had not been "constrained by the love of Christ," who had not been in bonds to Christ, who had not sought by all the power and strength in him to carry out the solemn obligations laid on him by Christ, and at the hazard of his own health, life, safety, security and physical wellbeing, do his duty to God, to the State and to his fellow-man. Only the heart that could cry out, "I am debtor to Greek and barbarian, wise and foolish"—under obligations to them not for what they have done or may do for me, but under obligations to my Lord—could ever pen a worthy and an immortal ode to love.

Who are they that love their Church most and serve it best? To ask that question is to answer it. Those whom duty prompts, those whom obligations bind, those whom responsibility burdens, —these are they who are found faithful in times of stress and trial, and who in the humble discharge of the commands of their Lord can say, as He has taught them to say, "We are unprofitable servants; we have done that which was our duty to do" (Luke 17:10). Out of their hearts flows a stream of infinite love and boundless compassion for their fellow-man; out of their lives comes a devotion that will not die, a saving power that no man can stay, a wholesome peace and joy that the world can neither give nor take away.

In keeping with such a spirit and such Scripture, some in the Christian Church five years ago undertook responsibilities, laid on themselves obligations to their Church and the kingdom of our Lord through our Men and Millions Movement. All know full well who are going to love their Church, their fellow-man and their God more when this movement is over—it will be those, of course, who, having of their own accord, out of a sense of duty to their Church and its enterprises, entered into these obligations, seek through thick and thin, sacrifice and hardship, to meet those responsibilities, discharge those obligations and do their duty therein at least to Church, to God and to fellowman. Through such means and methods God has undertaken to carry on His work in the world for the saving of the nation and the extension of His kingdom into the uttermost parts.

A READING CONTEST.

THE SUN's editors could wish that some of our wide-awake Churches, or even some of our Churches desiring so to become, would put on a stewardship reading contest. Such a contest must be very wholesome, helpful, profitable and inspiring. When Dr. W. H. Denison, Dayton, Ohio, was recently in several of our Churches he referred to such a contest then being put on by our friend and brother, Rev. F. E. Rockwell, pastor of Warren, Ind., Christian Church. To show how such a contest goes, and makes its demands, we print the following from a letter to Dr. Denison from Bro. Rockwell, dated February 14, 1925:

"Dear Bro. Denison,—Our stewardship reading contest is going! We are having hard work to get the literature fast enough to supply readers. We have used practically all of the pamphlets from the Layman Company, all the foreign mission literature for this year, are reading all in the Herald and Christian Missionary, and have the following books in circulation: 'Money, the Acid Test,' 'Life as a Stewardship,' 'Woman and Stewardship,' 'Stewardship for All of Life,' 'The Message of Stewardship,' 'The Christian and His Money Problem,' 'Church Finance,' 'A Man and His Money,' 'You and Yours,' 'Stewardship Lessons for Juniors,' 'The Larger Stewardship,' 'The New Christian,' 'Studies in Stewardship.' What lack we yet? Can you help us carry on? This is an 'S O S' call.

"Please send me 25 'Sunday School Stewardship Programs,' 50 'figuring the Tithe,' 50 'A Manual for the Annual Every-Member Canvass,' 50 'Aim and Objectives of the Bureau of Christian Stewardship and Promotion,' 50 'Putting Stewardship into the Local Church Program,' 50 'Christian Stewardship Principles.'

"If you can suggest additional reading material in quantities, I hope you will do so, as we are reading in groups, discussing each article, or chapter read, and I do not want to let the interest lag."

Evidently this sort of contest creates interest, thought and discussion worth while. We wish some of our pastors would try it and give SUN readers the benefit of their experience and observation.

MUCH GREATER TENSION.

As the general public reads day after day of lives claimed at grade-crossings in the country, it is just possible that not enough attention is paid to the plight of the engineer in the cab, whose hands guide the rushing tons of steel that form the irresistible instrument of death.

A few years ago, an engineer in the western part of North Carolina drove his heavily laden train out onto a trestle. When it was too late to check the hurtling locomotive, because of its terrible momentum, he saw two girls before him, in the center of the track, clutching at each other in frantic terror. He was powerless to prevent the tragedy, but it left a mark upon his life.

His wife told friends, after he had been claimed by a tunnel accident, that for years he was troubled by the shock of the accident in which the young women lost their lives. Starting from his sleep, he would awaken cold with horror, as dreams brought back that terrible crunching sound that had shredded his nerves when the accident happened.

The general public did not know the price that he paid, because somebody else took a chance with their lives. Grade-crossings add greatly to the tension on the men in the engine cab, who are already charged with the responsibility of the lives of the passengers.

It is a great deal to ask of them, that they be constantly on the lookout for some irresponsible trespasser on their right-of-way, and that they watch every automobile to see that the driver is watching for the safety of the occupants of the car with a small fraction of the diligence that is required of the engineer from the moment that he mounts the steps to his cab.

People who take chances in automobiles at grade-crossings are in a class with those who look into the muzzle of a gun to see if it is loaded, or taste medicine to see if it is poison.

The educated man is a man with certain subtle, spiritual qualities, which make him calm in adversity, happy when alone, just in his dealings and rational and sane, in the fullest meaning of that word, in all the affairs of his life. This is the definition given by Ramsay MacDonald, Britain's late Labor Premier.

There are two Federal sources of free information about the progress of prohibition. They send out short news items, summaries of investigations and stories about enforcement.

AN 8,000-MILE ERRAND FOR GOD.

By Roy C. Helfenstein,

General Secretary, Department of Evangelism and Life Service.

In response to numerous requests that I give The Sun readers a resume of my experiences as a member of the team representing the Federal Council Commission on Evangelism and Life Service in its recent tour of the Pacific Coast, I submit the following:

I want to say in the beginning that the trip and the opportunity for service involved was one of the greatest experiences of my life. The team was composed of seven men, with Dr. Chas. L. Goodell, secretary of the Federal Council Commission, as leader of the team. When Dr. Goodell began to plan the itinerary last summer and repeatedly expressed his desire that I accompany the team on this important mission, I did not entertain any hope of being able to leave my work for so long a time as the trip would necessitate.

Communications from Dr. Goodell during the fall months, and several urgent letters from his office shortly before the time the team was to start west made me keenly realize the importance of the work to be done, and the opportunity it would furnish for our denomination to have a voice in the meetings that were to be held in the principal cities of the Pacific Coast, and the great privilege the trip offered to make a contribution to the spirit of Christian unity as the plans called for union meetings of the pastors and Church leaders of all denominations. Realizing all these things made me regret that my strenuous program of activities in the local Church happened to come at the same time the trip was to be taken, and made me regret that I felt compelled to decline the invitation.

But a few days before the time the team was to leave for the West, a long-distance call from Dr. Goodell, urging me to make a special effort to accompany the team, made me feel that I should lay the matter before the official board to see what they thought about it.

The board was unanimously enthusiastic in its conviction that, in the interest of unselfish kingdom service, their pastor should accept the invitation and have his father, Dr. D. M. Helfenstein, supply the pulpit at the morning service and look after the pastoral work, and Miss Martha Denison, the director of religious education, to supply the pulpit at the evening service. As the board was anxious that I be able to join Dr. Goodell and other members of the team in Chicago, so as to make the trip West together, they recommended that I leave Dover Sunday afternoon, January 11th, as the team was to leave Chicago Tuesday morning. Hence, a telegram was sent to Dr. Goodell, stating that I would reach Chicago Monday evening, January 12th.

The splendid vision and unselfish spirit of the official board, and their deep interest in the opportunity the trip would afford their pastor, was an inspiration to me that shall never be forgotten. In fact, they seemingly understood better than did I how much the trip would involve, for the experiences of the trip were far beyond my most fanciful dreams.

Dr. Goodell met me upon my arrival in Chicago. The trip was made over the Burlington Route to St. Paul, and over the Northern Pacific from St. Paul west. It was my unexpected and happy privilege to take breakfast in St. Paul between trains with my cousin, Mrs. Mary Powell, and her husband, Dr. Powell. Mrs. Powell is Uncle S. Q. Helfenstein's daughter. Upon proceeding westward from St. Paul, I noticed by the railroad guide that our train passed through Miles City, Mon., on the following morning at 6:55 o'clock, so I sent a telegram stating that fact to my sister, Mrs. Ethyle O'Connell, who lives in Miles City, and whom I had not seen for ten years. When the train pulled into Miles City on schedule time for a ten-minute stop, on the station platform waiting for me were sister and her husband, who is an attorney in Miles City, and whom I had not seen for eighteen years; also their two fine big boys, Harold and David, the latter whom I had never seen before. This little visit was another entirely unexpected joy when I left Dover.

And thus all along the journey, unexpected joys were experienced of meeting old class-mates and old friends and associates of other days. Not a city visited but where there happy surprises so unexpected came to me. The trip was so filled with these experiences that the strenuous work involved of having to address from two to four meetings a day was itself a joy. Never was the statement more forcefully demonstrated to me that if a person is in the line of duty seeking to do the Father's will that happiness will cross his pathway at every turn, and that the best way to find happiness is not to seek for happiness, but to seek the line of duty and then happiness will come as a by-product of honest effort.

I have been a member of the Federal Council Commission on Evangelism and Life Service team as it made its itinerary through the principal cities of various sections of the country three previous winters. But the itinerary this winter was by far the most successful and beneficial, though all the previous itineraries were a real success, accomplishing untold good.

The cities visited this year were Spokane, Wash.; Seattle, Wash.; Portland, Oreg.; San Francisco, Sacramento, Oakland, Fresno, Los Angeles, Whittier, and Denver. Most of these cities invited the pastors and Churches of all denominations within a radius of one hundred miles to participate in the conferences and meetings held. The response and co-operation was simply beautiful. I had only met a great many former friends and associates, but also it was my privilege to meet a number of people who used to be members of the Christian Church formerly living in the Middle West. Over and over again I was impressed with the thought of what a pity it is that we do not have Christian Churches in the principal cities of the Pacific Coast, where so many of our own people have gone.

I will not attempt to repeat our program in each city, but will give an outline of our schedule in Seattle, which serves as a sample. There were only six men on the team in Seattle, as Dr. Baby, of the Presbyterian Church, did not join us until we reached San Francisco. Hence, we each had more engagements here. I will not give the schedules of the other members of the team, as that would take too long, and the readers of The Sun will naturally be more interested in the schedule of the Christian Church representative. I wish to state that the fact our denomination had a representative on the team offered opportunity for a little educational work in regard to the Christian Church, as the Disciples of Christ use the name Christian Church almost exclusively on the coast. Dr. Bader, the representative of the Disciple Church, a very sweet-spirited and co-operative member of the team, found it rather embarrassing at times to explain to his people, who were not acquainted with the Christian denomination as such, but recognizing that the mistake was theirs, he very graciously held to the name Disciples of Christ or Church of Christ. Numerous questions as to the difference between their denomination and the Christian Church were always asked following the conferences. Hence, opportunity for enlightenment was given. At Los Angeles, the distinction was made quite emphatic by Dr. Goodell, who introduced Dr. Bader as the representative of the Church of Christ, which on the Pacific Coast was sometimes called Christian Church, and immediately following he introduced me as the representative of the denomination which was officially known as the Christian Church. I sincerely hope the time will soon come when all the Disciple brethren will concede to us our denominational name, as we have no other name to designate us, whereas they have two—"Disciples" and "Church of Christ."

Referring to the schedule given me at Seattle as a suggestion of the work done in the different cities, I will say that the two days spent in Seattle gave me a larger contact with leaders of different denominations than up to that time I had ever experienced, as it was the second city visited on this itinerary. At 10:30 Sunday morning I preached in the Beathany Lutheran Church; at 3 P. M. I spoke at a big union meeting in the Swedish Baptist Church; at 5 o'clock I spoke at a friendship luncheon at the Y. M. C. A.; at 7:30 I preached at the Free Methodist College Church, where one of the most inspiring groups of young people I have seen in a long time occupied one section of the auditorium. Following the evening service I asked the pastor to take me to the famous Presbyterian Church of which Dr. Mark Matthews is pastor and which has a membership of over 8,000, as I was told his evening service was not usually over until after 9 o'clock. We got to his Church in time to hear the last fifteen minutes of his sermon. The occasion was the twenty-third anniversary of his pastorate. It was interesting to learn that his congregation had raised $10,000 at the morning service in recognition of his twenty-three years of service to send him and his family on a year's vacation in Europe and Asia.

Monday morning I was one of the two speakers at the large conference of pastors of all denominations within a radius of a hundred miles of Seattle. At 2 o'clock I addressed the students and faculty of the Northwestern Deaconness Training School, which meeting was one of the most spiritually uplifting I have ever conducted. At 3:30 o'clock I conducted a conference on pastoral and personal evangelism with the Episcopal clergymen of the Seattle diocese. At 7:30 I gave the message to a union meeting of ten different Churches.

While I was thus engaged in carrying out my schedule, the other members of the team were similarly engaged. The pastors in all the cities were deeply appreciative of the team's work, declaring over and over again that the visit was one of the greatest blessings that had come to their cities in their memory. I was glad that the Christian denomination had an opportunity to have a part in this far-reaching service.

Between the meetings, the pastors and laymen showed the members of the team every courtesy imaginable by way of entertainment and in showing us the sights of the cities and environs.

Beginning the itinerary in Spokane, we found a splendid spirit of interest, and coming on down the coast to Seattle, Portland, Sacramento, San Francisco, Oakland, Fresno, Los Angeles and Whittier, the sentiment prevailing every where was that the pastors and Churches felt the need of simultaneous effort among the different denominations in the work of pastoral and personal evangelism such as is provided for in our kingdom-enlistment week program and in the similar evangelistic programs of the various denominations.

While in Los Angeles it was my happy privilege to respond to an invitation from the cele-

(Continued on Page 9.)

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Much is said and done about savings accounts in these last years. Banks encourage it and solicit depositors, and many such deposits are made by children as "Christmas" accounts. At Christmas, the banks pay these accounts and the children spend what they have saved during the year. This has three values. It cultivates the saving habit during the year. It gives children spending money at Christmas, and they do not have to depend on parents for all they spend. It helps to keep alive the Christmas thought, which has its religious value. It seems that Jesus Christ creeps into every good work, permeates all good business, and wins the recognition of thousands who think very little, directly, of Him or His cause.

Bank records show that the saving habit, not only among children, but among grown people, has increased many, many millions throughout the country within the last five years—prohibition years. Many men who spent their earnings for liquor before that time now provide for their families, carry insurance, and place money in savings accounts. When all the people obey the eighteenth amendment, and do as they should, this nation will increase in wealth beyond the dreams of youth. President Coolidge hit the nail on the head when he said: "More emphasis should be laid on the observance of law, and less on the enforcement of law." When all the people observe the law there will be no need for the enforcement of law; and when respectable people come to understand that it is as much a violation of the eighteenth amendment to buy as to make and sell, bootlegging will cease. Total abstinence of anything is not for the benefit of the abstainer so much as for others, weaker than themselves.

But, back to the question of saving. It is not important to save money only, but time and possessions. The best of men waste time and opportunity. We waste energy. We spend talents on useless things. We spend opportunities for winning souls to Christ in the most useless ways. We let Sundays slip unimproved. When a young person reaches twenty-one, he has had three years of Sundays. If people would stop to consider that a person seventy years of age has had ten years of Sundays, they could see that education of the best type is within the reach of all.

There is no better school than Sunday School, and no better college than the Church. Here is the opportunity for the education of the heart, the soul, the life. Character is more than a degree. It is more than a diploma. It is life at its best. It is satisfaction itself. It is concrete hope. It is witness for Jesus Christ. It is entrance to heaven at last.

W. W. Staley.

ELON LETTER.

We have in this country three major associations, each treating the problem of education from a different standpoint.

Marion Lawrence, for many years, was the outstanding leader of the International Sunday School Association. He was himself a magnetic character, and the association he headed was inspirational in aim and achievement. It did not initiate progressive measures, and was more inclined to be opportunist than constructively serviceable to the cause of religious education. This association has now been succeeded by the International Council of Religious Education, which is not a mass-meeting, but a representative of an assembly composed of delegated persons representing Churches, and by other delegated persons representing territorial constituencies. The International Council is concerned with the creation of a statesman-like program of religious education for the home, the Church, community and nation, and likewise it is deeply solicitous for leadership training in all these directions.

The Religious Education Association is composed of any person who may be interested in the field of religion, whether Protestant, Catholic, Jew, Ethical Culturist, Social Reformer, Bolshevist, or what not. The opinions expressed in this association are individual opinions, but woe to the man who undertakes to express an opinion which he cannot doughtily defend! This association is the forum of free thought in the educational matters of the country, particularly as they relate to religion.

The National Education Association is the third of these major bodies and represents the educational forces of the nation, particularly those engaged in college, university and seminary work and in public education. This association has many divisions according to the particular interest of the specialists who find it their best avenue of expression, professionally.

Many wild theories are advocated at the sessions of the N. E. A., but also many good things are initiated by it, such as academic freedom, health instruction in schools, modern buildings, etc.

All these three organizations are worth while, but the one that is serving best the cause of Christian education in the country is the International Council of Religious Education, but the others, too, fill an important place in the program of the nation's educational agencies.

W. A. Harper.

AN APPRECIATION.

Dear Sir and Brother:

I would like to express, through you to the constituency of the Christian Churches, the appreciation of the Federal Council and the secretaries of Church federations in the various cities of the service rendered by Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein, chairman of your commission on evangelism. In January, the secretaries of evangelism of the various denominations made a visitation of the cities on the Pacific Coast and the Far West. For several years these secretaries have held meetings twice a year in some of our leading cities, and their visits have been greatly appreciated by the Churches. This is the first time they have gone to the Pacific Coast. They visited, under the general direction of the Commission of the Federal Council, eleven of the important cities of the West, including Seattle, Spokane, Tacoma, Portland, Sacramento, Oakland, San Francisco, Fresno, Los Angeles and Denver.

Invitations were sent out to ministers and leading laymen in the territory surrounding each city, in some cases reaching as far as one hundred and twenty miles. This brought together a very large number of Christian people. Our secretaries addressed not far from three thousand ministers and more than twice as many laymen. In this work, your own Dr. Helfenstein took a very important part. His messages were scholarly and spiritual, and while there were not many of your own members among the people reached, those who were present greatly appreciated the work of your denomination in sending Dr. Helfenstein, and all the other Churches were impressed with the fact of your unselfish desire to help forward the kingdom and to do anything in your power to deepen the religious life of the entire community.

I would like to express for myself and my associates among the secretaries our deep appreciation of Dr. Helfenstein's service and our great enjoyment of his presence with us.

Sincerely yours,

C. L. Goodell.

105 E. 22d St., New York.

RECORDS OF DISCHARGED T. B. CASES.

One thousand and thirty-six former patients now living and working is the record of the North Carolina Sanatorium for its patients discharged from the sanatorium during the past ten years. There are also 303 living and not working. Eighty-nine per cent of all the early-stage cases treated in the past ten years are living, and 80 per cent are living and working.

"We claim," Dr. P. P. McCain, superintendent of the North Carolina Sanatorium, said, "to have the most complete records of our discharged cases of any sanatorium in the United States. We have not completed our survey for 1924, but previous to December 31, 1923, we had lost track of only 56 out of all the patients discharged from the sanatorium.

"If we estimate the value of a life at the low figure of $5,000, these cases who have been restored to health and to useful citizenship are worth more than five million dollars to North Carolina. Outside of their money value, the patients who have gone out from the institution have been a great health educational factor in the State—missionaries, carrying the gospel of early diagnosis and prevention of tuberculosis to cities, villages and farms throughout the whole State. Our ex-patients are instrumental in discovering a large percentage oft he patients sent to us in the curable stage. They have learned the symptoms of tuberculosis; they know the necessity of an early diagnosis if a cure is to be effected, and their own experience has made them want to help the other fellow.

"As a means of prevention, the value of the institution in these discharged cases cannot be estimated. Not only has the life of the person infected with the disease been saved, but many persons have been kept from the risk of infection and probable death by removing the tuberculous persons from among the healthy citizens of the community. Treatment by segregation removes the risk of infection, and knowledge of how to prevent infection by precautionary measures lessens the risk of infection to others when they leave the institution.

"The extent to which the institution has been successful in the prevention of this great white plague is shown by the steadily declining death rate. Ten years ago there were more than 5,000 yearly deaths from tuberculosis. In 1923 there were only 2,540. Tuberculosis exacts its toll from those in the prime of life. Is it not worth while to save 2,500 of our most useful citizens every year?"

The first Woman's World Fair is to be held in Chicago, beginning April 18th. It will show what women have done in business, trades, professions and the arts. The work of women's clubs throughout the world will be explained, and articles which manufacturers have made especially for women will be exhibited. Mrs. Medill McCormick, of Chicago, who has been active in civic improvement work, is one of many important women who will take part.

CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY.

One of the most attractive events of the month was the birthday celebration given last night at the Suffolk Christian Church, when the Woman's Missionary Society observed its thirteenth anniversary. Members of the Baraca Class of the Church were guests. The attendance was about 300. Mrs. Clarence Rawles, president of the society, welcomed the guests, and the following program was rendered:

Hymn, "The Church's One Foundation"; Scripture lesson, Mrs. Rawles; quartet, "Give of Your Best," J. M. Eley, J. C. Felton, J. D. McClenny and John Hiltmer; solo, "There Is a Green Hill Far Away," W. W. Ballard, and violin solo, Miss Nina Oliver.

Twelve tables, decorated in symbols appropriate to the months, were arranged in the Sunday School room.

January, with its white covering, glittered with snow crystals and had for its favors white baskets of mints, and the hostesses were Mrs. W. R. Mitchell and Mrs. A. T. Holland. The centerpiece was a miniature New Year perched on a snow-bank.

February was valentine month, with festoons of red hearts, the centerpiece being a birthday cake with red candles and valentine favors. Mrs. J. C. Philhower and Mrs. W. H. Burchett presided. March was in charge of Mrs. J. E. West and Mrs. B. D. Crocker, and was lovely with white and green shamrock leaves, jonquils and crocus. Favors were green mints in yellow tulips.

A green umbrella from which showered spring blossoms was the centerpiece on April's table, in charge of Mrs. John King and Mrs. E. E. Holland.

For the Merry Month.

A miniature maypole dance with tiny dolls and a gaily decorated maypole was the feature of the table devoted to May. Favors were pink baskets of roses. Mrs. A. D. Brinkley and Mrs. J. D. Luke were hostesses.

A June wedding with miniature bride, groom and attendants marked the June table, which was in charge of Mrs. Susie Holland and Mrs. W. G. Farrar. Favors were small pink and blue parasols.

July was represented with red, white and blue streamers, toy cannon and flags. Favors were baskets of red and white mints. Mrs. C. A. Shoop and Mrs. Hersey Woodward were in charge. Yellow and orange predominated at the August table. Masses of yellow daisies made a centerpiece, and yellow boxes of bon-bons were favors. Mrs. H. A. Jones and Miss Effie Beale were in charge.

School Days Depleted.

September was given over to school days. A tiny school-house with miniature pupils occupied the center, and favors were baskets of candies. Mrs. A. F. Richardson and Mrs. Fred Taylor were hostesses. The October table was lovely, with Hallowe'en fancies, a huge pumpkin surrounded with autumn leaves being the centerpiece. Favors were baskets of nuts, and hostesses were Mrs. R. P. Wright and Mr. L. E. Rawles.

Thanksgiving features were used at the November table, with its centerpiece of chrysanthemums and tiny turkeys, and the hostesses were Mrs. Charles Andrews and Mrs. George Daughtrey.

December was characterized by a glittering Christmas tree with many decorations, and favors were baskets of Christmas candles. Mrs. T. A. Barbee and Mrs. W. T. Barrett were in charge.

Guests were seated at the tables of their birth month, and ices and cakes, candies and nuts were served by the members of the society in charge of Mrs. John Eley and Mrs. B. O. Crocker. Each person present gave pennies for the years of his or her age, and the sum aggregated $200.—Virginian-Pilot.

COLLEGE FRATERNITIES.

The opinion of Ramsey MacDonald on college fraternities is interesting as a reaction of a young Englishman of the university type to our student life. He found the fraternity "creating a definite boundary between members and non-members which is to be deplored." In contrasting the student social system of the two countries, Mr. MacDonald said that the social life of Oxford was built across hundreds of small clubs of various kinds and from which members can withdraw at will. They entail no special social obligation on the members, as do the fraternities. The value of fraternities in the life of the college students has long been a debated question. Some of the best leaders in the educational world have condemned the existence of the fraternity as tending to develop snobbishness among the members and also to create discontent among the students who are not taken into the fraternities. Another objection is the expense which attaches to membership in a fraternity and the extravagance which almost without exception the fraternities encourage. Against these objections are set the service which the fraternity gives the college in providing homes for students, the ideals which it seeks to inculcate in its members, and the training in social affairs which it gives. The fraternities also encourage higher standards of scholarship, and in many instances support the plans of the faculty in developing student life. That fraternities are undemocratic in principle is recognized even by their friends. That they should appear so to the young Englishman fresh from the quadrangle of one of the best-known institutions in the English-speaking world is quite good proof that they are in need of more careful inspection than is now being given them. Whatever is good and helpful in the development of our youth should be fostered. If the fraternity is found to be destructive to our democratic principles, let it be eliminated from our colleges.—Christian Advocate, Nashville.

AMERICA DOING GREAT SERVICE.

In seeking an amicable solution of their problems of race relations, the American people are doing the world a service of greatest importance, according to Secretary Kenneth Maclennan, of the Missionary Conference of Great Britain and Ireland, who is now in the United States studying the interracial situation and the status of negro education in this country. After inquiring carefully into the interracial movement in the South, at its headquarters here, Mr. Maclennan said:

"You Americans are doing a much more important thing than you realize; one which has significance not for America alone, but for the whole world. The twelve million negroes in this country are but a small part of the world's colored population, and the relation of the two races here is only a segment of a world-wide problem of racial attitudes. Great Britain alone is dealing with a vastly larger native population in Africa and with some three hundred million inhabitants of India.

"The best minds among the British people are earnestly seeking the right solution of this tangled web of race relations," continued Dr. Maclennan. "They are looking hopefully to America, where the problem seems to be clearing up through mutual efforts to promote understanding, sympathy and helpfulness between the races. You may feel encouraged, therefore, to go forward with your efforts," he concluded, "seeing that they mean so much to millions of people in other lands."

MISSIONS, PRAYER AND THE CHURCH.

Is the Church sincere in its prayers? For many years the Church prayed that the doors of the nations of the world might be opened, that the gospel might be carried to all people. These prayers have been answered, and the nations and peoples of the world are showing a wonderful willingness to hear and receive the gospel of Jesus Christ. For many years the Church has been following the Saviour's instructions and have been praying that the Lord of the harvest should send forth more laborers into His harvest. God has done His part in answering that prayer. For some years our committee of foreign missions has had more applicants for work in the foreign field than it has been able to send out, though every one of them and many more have been needed. There are now in our Church, it is reported, about 700 young men and women, who have offered their lives for work among the heathen. They will all be ready to go within the next few years, as soon as their educational courses are completed. They are all needed, and the only thing that will prevent or delay these being sent out as soon as they are ready will be the lack of money. This is now delaying the sending out of many recruits for the work who are ready or will be ready in a few months. God has opened the doors, He has called the workers, but expects His Church to provide the means for them to go. When we make a prayer to God there is the implied obligation that we will do our part in bringing about the answer. Is the Church doing its part in providing the means needed. The members of the Church have the money. Will they give it?—Presbyterian of the South.

THE ISLE OF PINES.

President Coolidge wants the Senate to ratify the treaty that will give the Isle of Pines to Cuba. This little island is just the size of the Yosemite National Park—1,000 square miles. It is located in the Caribbean Sea, near Cuba, and has been governed by Cuba since the Spanish-American War. Because our treaty with Spain did not state to whom it should belong, the Senate has been trying for twenty years to decide the question. The Supreme Court, Secretary Hughes and many others think that Cuba should have it. Senator Copeland, of New York, thinks the island is very important to us as a base for ships, soldiers and airplanes to protect the Panama Canal, and that we should keep it. Watch to see if the Senate ratifies the treaty giving it to Cuba.

THE PRESIDENT'S NEW CABINET.

Six men, who were in President Harding's Cabinet, will continue in President Coolidge's Cabinet. They are Secretary of War Weeks, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Postmaster-General New, Secretary of the Interior Work, Secretary of Commerce Hoover, and Secretary of Labor Davis. Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, who was appointed by President Coolidge last year, will also continue. The three new members of the Cabinet will be Secretary of State Kellogg, Attorney-General Warren, and a Secretary of Agriculture.

The belief in force is the one reckless folly of modern life. But it has no future, and there is no salvation. It moves ever more and more toward the edge oft he precipice. There is in it no healing and no restoration. Only in the cross and what it stands for can that come.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

BY WARREN H. DENISON, Secretary.

We Need to Make Pledges.

There are at least three reasons why we should make pledges, looking to the future, for Christian work. We sometimes hear persons say that they will not make a definite pledge for each week of the year in advance, or for benevolences, or for a term of years for some larger undertakings. When Christians say that it is because they have not stopped to think the matter through from all angles. Three reasons stand out prominently:

1. We make pledges for all business and social matters, and it is not fair to refuse to do it only in the work of the Lord. If one marries a wife, rents a house, installs a telephone, runs a store bill, joins a lodge, borrows money of a bank, calls a physician—he makes a pledge. We do it constantly in all our business, social, domestic relations. I submit that it is not fair to refuse to do it only in the work of the kingdom. That is the way business and social matters are carried on successfully. There is no reason why the same should not be true in the Lord's work.

2. If one member refuses to make pledges, then all other members have the same right, and chaos would reign in the plans and activities of the Church. We have no right to ask for ourselves that which we would not grant for others. The bills of the Church must be met regularly. The pastor, light, janitor and other bills must be paid regularly. Who would take those places unless there was regularity and system in the meeting of the bills. If bills are to be assumed, then there must be definite pledges to pay them. The same is true with our missionaries, Church officials and workers who are giving their time and life to the Church. If you refuse to make definite pledges to sustain the work regularly, then every other member has just the same right to decline, and system, order and acceptable plans become chaos.

3. We need to make pledges for our own spiritual interests. The most of us have so small Christian plans, if we have any, that there is scarcely any place for God to get into them. God wants to develop our faith, and unless we map out Christian plans beyond what we can carry out ourselves, God does not get into them. If our plans are only as large as we can carry out, we have but little need of God. We need to plan beyond where we can touch, so that we shall be driven to put our hand in His hand. One of the best things that has happened to our people was that five-year subscription plan in the Forward Movement program. It tested each one of us. That testing and planning was needed by us for our own spiritual interest. Pledging develops faith, makes us think of and plan for God's work. It gives Him a place in our lives which otherwise He would not have. We need to pledge for our Church, or colleges, our missions, new Churches and other agencies of the kingdom that reach out into the future.

SUNDAY SCHOOL MISSIONARY OFFERINGS FOR FEBRUARY.

Linville, Harrisonburg, Va., $3.42; Liberty, N. C., $1.00; Wentworth, McCullers, N. C., $3; Ingram, Va., $4.00; Reidsville, N. C., $7.41; Liberty, Vance, Henderson, N. C., $4.53; Shallow Well, Jonesboro, N. C., $1.76; Haw River, N. C., $10.29; Rosemont, Berkley, Va., $3.65; St. Luke's, Dover, Del., $1.50; Salem Chapel, Walnut Cove, N. C., $1.00; Fuller's Chapel, Henderson, N. C., $2.00; Chapel Hill, N. C., $3.25; Antioch, Harrisonburg, Va., $2.23; Palm Street, Greensboro, N. C., $8.66; Richmond, Va., $2.79; Wake Chapel, Cardenas, N. C., $5.00; South Norfolk, Va., $6.27; Philathea Class, Elon College, N. C., $1.60; People's Christian S. S., Dover, Del., $17.54; Oakland, Suffolk, Va., $5.32; Holland, Va., $9.00; Leaksville, Luray, Va., $1.90; Greensboro, First Church, $18.03; Citizen's Bible Class, Elon College, N. C., $2.93; Richland, Ga., $1.55; First Christian S. S., Norfolk, Va., $17.89; Winchester, Va., $8.42; Randleman, N. C., $3.00; Franklin, Va., $10.00; North Highlands, Columbus, Ga., $1.43; Berea (Nans.), Driver, Va., $9.00; Pleasant Grove (Va.), News Ferry, Va., $3.00; Beulah, Wadley, Ala., $3.00; Auburn, Garner, N. C., R. F. D., $3.20; Dry Run, Seven Fountains, Va., $2.00; Third Avenue, Danville, Va., $7.22; Elm Avenue, Portsmouth, Va., $4.50; Turner's Chapel, Colon, N. C., $1.86; New Lebanon, Wentworth, N. C., $3.85; Ramseur, N. C., $6.52; First S. S., Ocean View, Va., $3.67; Timber Ridge, High View, W. Va., $2.66; Wakefield, Va., $3.79; Mt. Bethel, Summerfield, N. C., 72c; Linville, Harrisonburg, Va., $4.45; Durham, N. C., $12.37; Burlington, N. C., $72.42; Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., $156.67—total Sunday School collections for month of February, $471.27.

We are grateful to these good schools for their liberal offerings to our mission cause. We trust that this number shall greatly increase, as funds are so much needed now to carry forward our missionary work at home in Carroll County, Va., and abroad in Japan. We are happy at what these wide-awake schools are now doing.

Respectfully,

J. O. ATKINSON,
Mission Secretary.

LESSONS FROM PAUL'S FIRST JOURNEY.

BY REV. J. G. TRUITT.

In the outset, let us notice a few general facts about the so-called first missionary journey of Paul. In time, it lasted about two or three years; most likely its dates are 47 to 49 A. D.; its distance about 1,500 miles; and its results the evangelization of southern Galatia, including the cities of Pisidian Antioch, Iconium, Lystra and Derby. Also it must be observed that this is not Paul's first missionary work. There are twelve to fourteen years of Paul's activity prior to this and after his preaching in Damascus and his stay in Jerusalem with Peter almost entirely unmentioned. Acts is not intended to be a complete record.

The first thing we ought to learn is the great secret of the beginning of the mighty missionary movement. Where did it get its start? Who initiated it? It began at Antioch, in Syria, and clusters around Paul, but the great first lesson is found in Acts 13:2, "the Holy Ghost said." The Holy Spirit spoke to the Church at Antioch. Any great thing we undertake today should be spoken by the Holy Spirit. The Church which has an understanding, listening ear to the Holy Spirit is the Church upon which Christ Jesus can count. There are Churches to which the Holy Spirit cannot speak. He is dumb in them. They are in no spirit to hear Him. "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit sayeth to the Churches." Happy and vigorous is that Church in which the Holy Spirit can speak, and mighty are the things He will do.

The second lesson learned from this missionary movement is from Paul's careful choice of the most effective manner of approach to the people to whom he went. Marvelous for complete mastery of the situation is Paul's speech in Acts 13 to the Jews in Pisidian Antioch. In the first place, he begins with what he finds a synagogue and listening Jews. In the second place, he takes complimentary notice of the fact that they are "men of Israel" and "ye that fear God." Then he talks to them in a fine fashion on the basis of what they already believed, and with what discernment and tact he leads them to the very feet of one of their own descendants from Abraham—Jesus. How differently, but with what keen foresight he works at Lystra. Here he finds pagan Gentiles and an open street. A cripple with healing faith and a group of passing townsfolk formed a nucleus for a receptive announcement of the gospel of liberation in Lystra. This opportunity Paul saw and seized. Col. Rosevelt deduced from this kind of procedure his life principle of "Do the best you can where you are with what you have." The Spirit-led servant of Christ will learn to appreciate the other fellow's beliefs, traditions and environments and become "all things to all men in order that he may thereby win some."

And finally from the journey of Paul's we will learn to have a statesman-like plan for our work; a program carefully thought out and properly put through. Paul chose the key cities; in them he established Churches, he made these to be teaching and leader-training Churches which went out and evangelized the surrounding regions; and fourthly, he planned a chain of such Churches from Jerusalem to Spain. From this kind of planning, John R. Mott conceived, or rather restated Paul's slogan, to "evangelize the world in this generation." The Spirit-led Church will be statesman-like in its plan and program.

Norfolk, Va.

A GENERAL REVIVAL.

The hearts of God's people rejoice over revivals, whether the extent of them be small or large, local or general, and we are happy that in the reports of pastors and evangelists there are numerous illustrations of the gospel's power to win men in these modern times. Wherever a congregation gives its soul to an evangelistic effort, there is sure to be a revival. The lamentable feature of our work is that only occasionally do congregations turn their whole attention to revivals. There comes no season when all the hearts of Christian people are ablaze with revival fervor.

Bishop W. F. McDowell has written a letter to the conferences in his area, in which he says: "There ought to be a general revival of religion," and further:

"Bishop Candler pointed out at Atlanta, the other day, that we have had no general revival of religion in the country for half a century. There have been occasional local outpourings, but no general 'work of grace' in the memory of the present generation. We have seen no recent general experience of revival in any conference or area or country unless we except Wales. We have not seen such a thing in our area or any conference in it in the memory of any person under fifty years old. We have had no spiritual movement to heal and restore the life of the people after the war, though there is no other cure for the shock of war than the spiritual cure. We have had no general spiritual movement toward God, no outpouring from God to gird and prepare us for the strain on our strength, the strength needed to carry our present burdens and to meet those heavy duties just ahead of us. And our life shows it. This is one secret of our inefficiency."

Bishop McDowell places the emphasis correctly when he calls for "a new passion of prayer" and "a new passion of effort and co-operation with God," as follows:

"Is not the hour ripe for a new passion of prayer for God to make bare His holy arm in the presence of all His people and to show us all His salvation? Is not the hour here for us all in every place to enter a new passion of intercessory consecration that in every life and in every Church the way may be cleared for the freedom and power of the Holy Spirit? Is not the hour here for a new passion of effort and co-operation with God to bring neighbors, friends, children, employees, employers, and associates to Christ for redemption? I am not asking that there be organized effort, but that everywhere every man who knows Jesus Christ, regardless of what others may do, shall join Jesus Christ in His passion to win the souls of men. Do not wait to be one of ten. Be immediately one of two, Jesus Christ being the other one. Do not sign a card and send it to me. Do not make any noise about it. But quietly, without excitement, without waiting to be worked up, clear your own life, your own engagements so that God's Spirit may have freedom in and through you. Then go out with Jesus the Redeemer humbly, earnestly, and patiently to win all the people nearest you to Him. Keep that clear. Win them to Him. Go the whole length with Him for their sake. Make it a personal, not a public, matter. If you win them, it will become public enough."

Above everything, in the plans of laymen and ministers should be the revival. Without refreshing seasons, the water brooks run dry. We can never conduct the increase of the kingdom exactly after the fashion of schools or other human enterprises. Religion has in it an emotional power which wins. The regular agencies are never to be neglected, but neither is the unusual and special effort. We shall come again to the "general revival." God grant it may not be delayed! The dawn of a revival epoch will be upon us when the souls of Christian people unite "as touching this one thing."—Christian Advocate, Nashville.

ELM AVENUE, PORTSMOUTH.

We are very glad to be able to report progress in the work of the Church here during the past month. The Lord has greatly blessed the efforts made to keep the work of evangelism prominently before the people, and it is the purpose of our pastor, Rev. V. T. Crawford, to continue this program throughout the year. New members are being received into the Church almost every Sunday; and we are looking forward to a series of revival services some time during the spring months, which will, we trust, be a great blessing to the Church and community, and be the means of saving many precious souls.

The introduction of a system of definite Bible study in connection with our midweek prayer services has increased the interest and attendance considerably, and has greatly stimulated the interest of our young people. The people are getting in this way a much better knowledge of the Word than they could possibly get by studying the Bible without some definite plan or system. Each week's study receives a brief review and discussion by the pastor without taking too much of the time which belongs to the devotional part of the prayer service.

Our Sunday School and Young People's societies are doing good work, and the interest of all our people in the missionary work of the Church is growing rapidly. The Young People's Missionary Society has been reorganized, and has some very bright prospects for future work.

The attendance at our Church services manifests a splendid spirit of interest on the part of the people. The people at Elm Avenue are looking forward to larger things, and we trust that God may continue His blessings upon the work at this place. CORRESPONDENT.

BETHLEHEM NOTES.

Campaign is on for Bethlehem College to raise $100,000 in four counties. Preparations for the campaign are being made, and an organization is being formed in the Counties of Randolph, Clay, Chambers, and Tallapoosa. The board has retained the Hewitt Company, which has raised funds for many colleges and have been very successful with this work.

The present building was erected for a girls' dormitory, but is now used for the administration building as well. The immediate campaign for $100,000 will provide for an administration building apart from the dormitory, and greatly relieve the congestion in the present quarters.

Hearty co-operation should be given this worthy undertaking.

Feddlers' convention was held at the graded school building last Saturday night, and the proceeds, which were $62.70, will go toward the lighting system of the building.

Boys' Literary Society will present a negro minstrel on Friday night, February 20th, at the school building.

Boys' basket-ball team defeated Milltown High School team on their court, with a score 38 to 33.

Girls' basket-ball team defeated Davedston High School team on home court, with a score 23 to 10. V. E. ADAMS.

Wadley, Ala.

AN 8,000-MILE ERRAND FOR GOD.

(Continued from Page 5.)

brated Dr. Francis, pastor of the First Baptist Church, to preach for him at his Sunday evening service. The union services the following day were held in the First Methodist Church, which is said to be the largest Church plant of the evangelical denominations in the entire country. In this connection I might say that the Churches in the cities along the Pacific Coast are much larger and more elaborate than are found in the East.

It was a great inspiration to me to see my good friend, Bro. Orban, in the audience in the Los Angeles meeting when I was introduced to speak. On Wednesday of the same week the team visited Whittier, Bro. Orban's home city, and which, by the way, to the minds of different members of the team, was one of the most beautiful and pleasant places on our itinerary.

While in Whittier it was my delightful privilege to be entertained in the Orban home. Words cannot express the joys of this visit, which was altogether unexpected when I left Dover, as the team intended to go to San Diego from Los Angeles, but the schedule was changed to include Whittier on the itinerary instead of San Diego. Mr. and Mrs. Orban are past masters in the art of making one feel at home and causing one to enjoy himself to the full. It was a great privilege to meet their estimable daughter, Mrs. Corrine Milville, and her delightful husband, who were visiting her parents at the time. Some of the happiest hours of my life were spent in the fellowship of this wonderful family whose home life is ideal and whose gracious hospitality could not be surpassed.

While in Denver I experienced a very peculiar coincidence. In the evening I was walking through the great State House, and though there were hundreds of people on the street whom I might have asked to direct me to the hotel, I happened to ask a distinguished-looking gentleman I met coming up the steps. When he answered me, he turned his face in just a proper angle so that I saw a resemblance of a young man I had not seen for twenty-eight years and whom I did not know to be within a hundred miles of Denver. I said, "This is not Emmett Naugle, is it?" The reply was in the affirmative, but he was at a loss to know who I was, as he had not seen me since I was a barefooted boy back in Iowa. I let him take time to think, and finally he said, "I do not know who it is unless it is Roy." He placed me, he said, by a resemblance to my father, as he was a student at Palmer College when father was the president. He is now assistant attorney-general of the State of Colorado.

Naugle was a familiar name in many of the homes of the Christian Church in days gone by, as several members of the family were students in Palmer College and have since made a large place for themselves in the affairs of life. It was my happy privilege to take supper and spend the evening with Emmett, who has made a remarkable success in the legal profession. His brother Edward, who was my boyhood chum, is a prominent surgeon in Sterling, Col. After supper he called two other friends, Seba and Lennie Fortner, formerly of Iowa, whom I had not seen for over twenty years, and they called at the hotel with their wives to see me, and we enjoyed a happy hour in talking over "ye olden times."

At midnight Monday night, Dr. Goodell and I started for Chicago over the Burlington Route, the other members of the team remaining for a little stay in Denver. The journey homeward was very pleasant. Several prominent people in the educational world were on the same train on their way to a convention in Chicago. The fellowship was most delightful. While in Chicago waiting for my train I had the privilege of making a call on our Dr. Shelton Smith in his office, and had lunch with him. He is making a great name for himself in his important position as evidenced by the esteem in which he is held by his associates in the International Council of Religious Education. I reached Dover on schedule time, and to my great joy found all well and everything going at full speed in the Church under the able direction of father and Miss Denison.

And thus an errand for God was completed that took us through nineteen different States and which was estimated to cover over 8,000 miles. The work involved during the nearly four weeks in making public addresses, holding conferences and personal interviews was indeed strenuous at times. But the good Lord brought so many happy surprises across my pathway, and the appreciation of the pastors and laymen everywhere we went was so genuine that the consciousness of having been in the line of duty and having rendered a real service to the kingdom of our Lord in the interest of evangelism and life service made it all one of the richest experiences of my life. I rejoice in the wonderful privilege of being associated with the splendid men on the team, and in meeting so many hundreds of the Church leaders of the West. But I rejoice most of all in the knowledge that I represented our beloved Christian Church in this great work to the best of my ability. And I sincerely thank God for this special privilege afforded me to witness for Him in so many important centers and before so many people who, though of different names and creeds, have the same Bible, the same Christ, the same God, the same responsibility in service, and the same hope of immortality.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

March 15, 1925.

Subject: "Our Lord's Resurrection."

Golden Text: "The Lord is risen indeed."—Luke 24:34.

Lesson: John 20:1-18.

Devotional Reading: Psa. 16:5-11.

Reference Material: Matt. 28:1-15; Mark 16:1-11; Luke 24:1-12; John 20:19-20.

The women had been last at the cross. They had even followed the body of their loved one to the tomb and saw where it was laid. And now they were the first at the grave. Very early on the first day of the week, headed by Mary Magdalene, they came bringing spices and ointment, that they might anoint the body of Jesus. It was an act of love and devotion, and showed how full of affection were their hearts. And how empty of faith. For had they but trusted in the Master's words, they would have known that He would not be there.

Something as unique as it was mysterious had happened since they had followed the body of their Lord to its temporary resting-place and had seen the huge stone rolled before the door of the tomb and sealed with an official seal. For when they reached the tomb the stone had already been rolled away and they found not the body of their Lord and Friend. There were the grave clothes, and the napkin folded—evidently there had been no haste about the event—but the body of Him they sought was not there. He was gone. As Mary told Peter and John, they had taken Him away and she knew not where they had laid Him. She recounted, too, how an angel had told them in no uncertain terms that He wat not there. "Why seek the living among the dead? He is risen."

Peter and John, aroused by the strange news, ran at once to the tomb. John was the faster runner, for he beat Peter to the grave. But Peter, impulsive as ever, was the first to enter the tomb. And they found that it was as she had said, the Master was gone. "So the disciples went away again unto their own home."

But not so the woman. Love does not so easily give up its own. And weeping, she stooped to look again into the tomb. But her worst fears were confirmed—He was not there. As she turned, however, she was confronted by one whom she thought was the gardener, and she asked him where they had laid her Lord. In reply to her question, the Master—for it was He—simply said, "Mary," but it was enough. In that personal touch, she recognized her Lord and knew that He was alive. And she went and told the disciples.

There are other details, but such in brief is the story of the events on the first Easter morn. What do they mean?

Now, it must be admitted that there are factors in the story that are difficult of explanation, if, indeed, they are explicable at all. And it is as irrelevant as it is idle to attempt to explain them. But back of all of these four accounts, with their varying details, there stands out one supreme fact—He arose. Easter proclaims to the world that Jesus Christ lives. This is the kernel; the other things are the husk.

There are three things that must be taken in consideration by any one who attacks the fact of the resurrection:

1. The empty grave. Jesus Christ was buried, and His enemies took good care to see that He was made as secure as human hands could make anything secure. They not only sealed the grave with a large stone; they set a watch of Roman soldiers to see to it that no one molested the grave. And yet when loving friends came early on the first day of the week, they did not find a body in the tomb. This is a significant fact, for if the enemies of Christ had possession of the body, they would have produced it as irrefutable evidence that He was dead, and hence the arch-impostor of all time. If the disciples had done away with the body, how could they ever have believed that Christ lived? It is the pride and hope of Christianity that it points to an empty tomb. The grave was not able to hold Him who is the Lord of life.

2. The change in the disciples. They who had lost hope and courage were suddenly transformed into men with a moral passion and a deathless hope that sent them out to conquer the world. There have been many learned and futile attempts to account for this change, but after all is said and done, it can be accounted for in only one way—the disciples were convinced that Jesus Christ was alive. If this were a delusion, Christianity could nveer have survived in a world of reality. And millions today know that Christ lives because He lives in them.

3. The spiritual efficacy placed upon the positive, rather than upon the negative, claim touching the resurrection of our Lord. "The men who have for centuries been trying industriously to show that Jesus did not rise from the dead have not been able to show in themselves or in the feeble following they have gained that measure of moral passion, of capacity for heroic self-sacrifice in the cause of righteousness, of spiritual energy, which habitually attend the preaching of a risen Lord. 'Do men gather grapes of thorns or figs of thistles?' Are the worthiest and most enduring moral results the fruitage of illusion and falsehood, while spiritual feebleness attends the proclaiming of that which is true?' "

Jesus Christ lives! That is the message of Easter. And because He lives, we shall live also. Thanks be unto God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

Teaching Points.

1. The empty tomb gives meaning to the cross.
2. Women have done much for Christianity, and Christianity has done much for women.
3. Sentiment and devotion are often more powerful than logic.
4. Many supposed difficulties are not real.
5. Jesus Christ was and is and evermore shall be Lord of life.
6. Jesus Christ makes good His predictions and His promises.
7. The greatest assurance that Jesus Christ rose from the dead comes from a knowledge that He lives in us.
8. The resurrection seems like idle talk to those who do not believe, but it has meaning for those who accept Christ.
9. It is not necessary to know how the resurrection took place; to know that it took place is sufficient.
10. Many people think they have lost Christ when, as a matter of fact, they have found Him in a larger way.
11. It is as impossible to keep Christ in creeds and dogma as it was to keep Him in the grave.
12. The Scriptures take on new meaning in the light of the resurrection.
13. Because Christ lives, we, too, shall live.
14. The central object of worship in Christianity is not a dead hero, but a living Christ.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

March 15, 1925.

Subject: "Preparation for Winning Others to Christ."

Scripture References: Matt. 4:18-20; Acts 1:14.

1. Worship Service.

Song: "O Zion, Haste Thy Mission."
Read (or repeat in unison) the 100th Psalm.
Have some one sing (tune: "Just as I Am"):

"Just as I am, Thine own to be,
Friend of the young, who lovest me,
To consecrate myself to Thee,
O Jesus Christ, I come.

"In the glad morning of my day,
My life to give, my vows to pay,
With no reserve and no delay,
With all my heart I come.

"Just as I am—young, strong and free,
To be the best that I can be,
For truth, and righteousness and Thee,
Lord of my life, I come."

Song: "O Jesus, I Have Promised."
Sentence Prayer: Close with singing one verse of "Father Almighty, Bless Us with Thy Blessing."

2. Suggestions for Leader's Talk.

From the book "Story—Worship Programs—The Master Painter—A Story."

"Some young people become discouraged in their attempts to lead a Christian life because standards are so high and so difficult to attain. But when we become Christians we have the finest and strongest forces in the universe working with us.

"A painter was once trying to copy the masterpiece of his teacher. He worked for weeks and months, but without success. He could make the tracings all right and in many respects his picture looked like the original, but he could not reproduce the expressions of the face and other fine points.

"At last one day, tired and discouraged, he laid his head on the table and fell asleep. While he slept, the master came into the room and saw what his pupil had been trying to do. He saw the places where he had failed, and so picked up the brush which had fallen from the hand of the sleeper and touched the picture until it stood out like the original. Quickly he left the room.

"When the student awoke, he saw that the picture was finished, and very, very beautiful—and how happy he was!

"In this way the Christian who does his best to attain the ideal which seems so unattainable will find that he has achieved more than he expected, because the great Master of all lives has been working with him."

When we are trying so hard to live a Christian life and to prepare ourselves to win others, the great Master is working with us.

Topics for Short Talks.

The Greatest Preparation for Winning Others.

We can prepare ourselves best for winning others by giving God the greatest possible chance

(Continued on Page 11.)

Christian Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

The response to our call for sheets show that our good women are interested. I trust many Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies and other friends will help us by responding to this call and give us not only a shower, but, in the words of Bro. Jamison, superintendent of Connie Maxwell Orphanage, "a downpour." The good ladies of Berea Church, Nansemond County, Va., sent us a whole bolt of double-width, bleached sheeting. That's fine! what society will be next?

Our people are interested in our new building. This building could be easily built and paid for if all of our Church members would just help a little. In other words, "just a little help from you" will swell the funds so we can commence. Shall we have "just a little help from you?" If you cannot give a big contribution, give a small one. We are always grateful. I publish below two letters which breathe a sweet spirit, and I hope our Church membership and friends will join with these good people in this undertaking.

"Dear Uncle Charlie,—Since reading your article some weeks ago concerning the need of another building at the Orphanage, before more children can be cared for, I have decided to join in with the lady teacher and subscribe $125.00, to be paid in five installments, for a building fund. I inclose check for $25.00, same being the first payment on same. Yours in Christ,
"Star, N. C. W. H. FREEMAN."

"Dear Sir,—I think it is right for all to throw in and help to get a place for the orphan children, and I will do what I can. I don't have much, but am willing to give what I can, so I am sending you a check for $5.00 and will send more as soon as I can. It is a very little bit, but if every one that is interested in the work would send that much it would not be long before you could have the building completed. Your truly,
"MRS. ELIZABETH MOORE."

The following have been sent in since our last report: Mrs. V. R. Poff, Goshen, Ind., 1 box clothing; Mrs. Sarah E. Boyd, Richmond, Va., 6 pillow-cases; Mrs. Luther Carlton, Richmond, Va., 4 sheets for double beds, 2 counterpanes; Mrs. M. A. and Edith Walker, Burlington, N. C., 2 sheets; Mrs. W. H. Jones and Miss Doris Jones, Suffolk, Va., 4 sheets, 4 pillow-cases, 2 counterpanes; Ladies' Missionary Society, Berea (Nans.), Va., 1 bolt double-width, bleached sheeting; Mrs. Ben T. Holden, Louisburg, and Mrs. Annie Staley Calhoun, 15 yds. sheeting.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR MARCH 5, 1925.

Amount brought forward	$2,143.11

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Eastern N. C. Conference:
Morrisville	$ 2.00
Henderson	5.83
Bethel (W)	4.55
Pleasant Hill (J)	3.60
Oak Level	3.14
Wake Chapel	5.81
Damascus	2.70
		27.63
Western N. C. Conference:
Salem Chapel		1.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Danville, Third Avenue		3.50
Eastern Va. Conference:
Damascus	$ 5.00
Liberty	3.00
		8.00
Georgia and Alabama Conference:
Pisgah, Ala.	$ 1.00
New Hope, Ala.	2.05
		3.05
New Building Fund.
W. H. Freeman	$ 25.00
Mrs. Elizabeth Moore, Salisbury..	5.00
		30.00
Special Offerings.
Mr. Pervis Tilley	$ 30.00
Chas. D. Johnston, guardian.....	51.33
Mrs. J. J. Gomer, for baby home..	5.00
		86.33
Grand total		$2,302.62

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

(Continued from Page 10.)

to work in and through our own lives. God does not limit His own great power and strength when He grants us freedom. We are all free persons with freedom to decide how our own lives shall be spent. When we have determined above all else to be a Christian, then others will see Christ in others and will be won to Him. Being a Christian is the greatest influence in winning others.

Winning Young People.

Too often young people are asked to accept Christ and to become Church members to save their own souls. Christianity means so much to us because it means happiness on earth as well as in life after death; it means rich fellowship with other Christians; it means service—winning others to this rich fellowship and happiness and promise of eternal life.

"Who seek heaven
Alone to save his soul,
May keep the faith
But will not reach the goal.

"While he walks in love
May wonder far,
But God will bring him
Where the blessed are."

When young people become Church members, they should understand the great things which the Church has to offer, and should likewise understand thatt hey have something to offer the Church and the Church needs them. Every new Christian should know the joy of definite service in the Church.

Winning Others Through Understanding.

We do not win people so much by pointing out their sins as by showing them a richer, more abundant life in accepting Christ. We can lead the way, they must decide, and the spirit of Jesus will work in them, giving joy and peace.

Preparation Through Prayer.

If we would win others we must first of all pray—pray for those whom we would win and pray for strength in winning them. Prayer will give us the assurance and strength which comes from communion with God.

SUGGESTED TOPICS.

1. What I think a Christian should be.
2. Reasons for being a Christian.
3. Why I think Christianity should be given to all the world.

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

These Pens are of standard make, and will give good service. If you are in need of a Fountain Pen, order from us.
MEN'S PENS ..... $2.00 LADIES' PENS $2.00
Postage paid, and Pens guaranteed by the manufacturer.

LIMITED COMBINATION OFFER.—To a new subscriber, or for renewal (if not in arrears), $3.25, either Gentleman's or Lady's Pen, with guarantee of manufacturer. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 EAST BROAD STREET, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Mission Study Books.

Official List for 1924-1925.

ORDER BY TITLE OF BOOK.

FOR ADULT CLASSES.

For Home Mission Classes:
"The Romance of Home Missions," by S. L. Morris, D. D.. Paper, 50c; cloth..... $ .75
For Foreign Mission Classes:
"Ming Kwong—the City of Morning Light," by Mary Ninde Gamewell. Paper, 50c; cloth .75
"In China," by H. F. Williams, D. D..... .25

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

For Intermediate Home Mission Classes:
"The Land of All Nations," by Margaret F. Seelbach. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75
For Intermediate Foreign Mission Classes:
"China's Real Revolution," by Paul Hutchinson. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75
For Junior Foreign Mission Classes:
"Chinese Lanterns," by Minna McEwen Meyer. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... .75

LEADERS' HELPS.

Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Adult Classes) ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Young People's Classes)..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Land of All Nations"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Ming Kwong"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "China's Real Revolution".. .15
Leaders' Helps for "Chinese Lanterns"..... .15

Send all orders to—

THE CHRISTIAN SUN,
1536 East Broad Street - - Richmond, Virginia.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

A CALL TO DUTY.

"And the Lord came, and stood, and called as at other times, Samuel, Samuel."—Sam. 3:10.

Folded hands are ever weary,
Selfish hearts are never gay;
Life for Thee hath many duties,
Active be, then, while you may.

Be strong to hope, O heart!
Though day is bright,
The stars can only shine
On the dark night,
Be strong, O heart of mine—
Look towards the light.

—Anon.

Our faith and our success in life rests not on theory nor on idleness, even though there should be a plenty to carry us; but it rests on experience. We go forward by seeing, tasting, and handling, first hand, all the problems we meet, and we rise out of these experiences from what we are to what we ought to be.

Prayer.—Our Father, we thank Thee for the life of the past week and all things good of it. Help us to lay ourselves in devout consecration to the call of duty, today and every day. In His name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

HOUSEHOLD FOES.

"And a man's foes shall be they of his own household."—Matt. 10:36.

There are two classes of foes—those on the outside and those inside. Either class is bad enough, but those on the inside are by far the worst. The worst foe of government is the one within. Against those from the outside, the government may protect itself, but those within work so secretly and insiduously that often the harm is done before the doer is discovered. The worst enemies of the Church are on the inside. The history of the Church proves that persecution from the outside could not destroy it. Not only so, but it seems that the more it was persecuted from the outside, the more it grew. Her troubles have been internal rather than external. Foes on the outside unite the Church; those on the inside divide it. The worst enemy of the home, too, may be inside. In that terrible succession of temptations recorded in Job, the climax is reached when Satan makes the wife of Job say: "Curse God and die." A home may be happy surrounded by foes, but when they appear within, Satan has the victory. The household cup that should be always running over with happiness, how bitter it becomes when a foe from within has injected poison!

Prayer.—Our Father, bless our home, and may no foe arise within. May Jesus be our constant Guest, and may the number on earth be no less with Thee in Heaven. Amen.—T. E. White.

WEDNESDAY.

FORGIVING SINS.

"But that ye may know that the Son of man hath authority on earth to forgive sins."—Luke 5:17-20.

This sick man and his friends asked for healing of the body, but Jesus looked within and saw a greater need. He saw a longing for forgiveness greater than for bodily healing. Jesus read the heart. It is always hard for us to remember that the ills of this world are far more spiritual than material, and that if we have spiritual health, material things will largely care for themselves. This man confessed his need. This made possible his salvation. An honest confession opens the door to God's forgiving grace.

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, breathe upon us Thy healing breath, that we may be cleansed from sin and sickness. Reveal Thy power in the lives of men. Give us the sense of Thy companionship, that our voices may be full of gladness and that we may rejoice on our way. Amen.—Feelings of Prayer.

THURSDAY.

THE DEDICATED LIFE.

"And ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."—2 Cor. 6:14-18.

Do you say it is difficult to live well? Granted—and God be praised! For thus we find the greater satisfaction in living.

It is said that the friction of the rails robs a locomotive of one-fourth of its power. In such a case, what shall be done? Oil the track? Then the locomotives comes to a standstill. What shall be done now? Sand the rails, and away goes the locomotive! So difficulty does not hinder, but helps us in the long run.

Once on a time, God wanted a man to write an epic. He found him at an English university, arrayed in purple and fine linen, proud of his luxuriant locks. Milton was his name; they called him "The Lady of Christ's College." This was the youth whom God proposed to honor; but before he could address himself to his appointed task, the rails of life must be sanded. Difficulties came thick and fast. The light of his eyes at length went out. Then, in total blindness, he saw the visions of "Paradise Lost"; his spirit soared like an eagle to kindle its eyes at the full midday beam.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

FRIDAY.

THE NEED OF THE SAVIOUR.

"Every one that drinketh of this water shall thirst again; but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst, but the water that I shall give him shall become in him a well of water springing up unto eternal life."—John 4:13-14.

Frederick G. Fagley, of the National Y. M. C. A., has said, "When we look out upon the world around us and see want and sickness and evil, where we know God would have happiness, health and righteousness, we realize that the world needs a Saviour. When we look within and find too often unrest and selfishness and sin, where we know God would have peace, friendliness and goodness, we know that we need a Saviour."

Christ is the world's Saviour, and He is our Saviour.

Prayer.—Almighty God, be near us in Jesus, Thy Son, and save us. May our hearts be open to every holy affection and ready to receive and cherish every righteous impression. Let a portion of the spirit of our Saviour descend on us and fill us with the love of God. May every selfish passion be stilled and the peace of God keep us forever. In His name we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

CEASELESS PRAYER.

"Pray without ceasing."—1 Thess. 5:17.

It is hard to realize that a man of active duties, requiring close attention, application and energy, could possibly be engaged all day long in prayer and acts of devotion. And, if it happens to be a man of plenty, that he should feel the need of praying always.

Such an interpretation of this text misses the sublime spirituality it teaches. We are to understand that prayer at its highest is communion with, reliance on, and trust in God. It has its climax in complete surrender to His will. Its supreme satisfaction is in continual desire of the soul after God and in intercourse of our spirits with the Divine. It is the existence that is always conscious of God's presence, and always trusting, loving, serving, and following Him.

Prayer.—Our Father, that we shall doubt and miss the benefits and power of true prayer. Help us to love Thy Spirit so that our spirits in every want may turn to Thine and pervade our whole natures. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

SUNDAY.

A DAY OF REST.

"There remaineth, therefore, a Sabbath rest for the people of God."—Heb. 4:9.

Among our deepest feelings is the longing for rest, a feeling that grows stronger with advancing years, and nothing we do allows the desired repose but the Holy Scriptures, which tell of His rest which is above all earth's anticipations.

When Christ passed from earthly scenes of His labors into the spirit world, He entered into the eternal rest of God to prepare a place for us. Through His entrance we shall enter and find rest from all the earthly voices, burdens and cares.

The Sabbath has been given to us to cease from our labors, cares and anxieties; turn to the Lord and enter into that holy rest of God, wherein cares and troubles are set at naught and rest is secured.

Prayer.—Almighty God, Thy love is our hope, Thy Christ is our salvation, and Thy rest our satisfaction. Perfect, Thou, our weakness in Thy strength and keep us in Thy Sabbath rest forever. In His name we ask it. Amen.

BIBLES TO EUROPE.

The American Bible Society has responded to another urgent need in Europe by making grants of money with which to supply Bibles to theological students.

Acknowledging a supply of Hebrew Bibles received early in February, Dr. Adolf Keller, of Zurich, representing the Bureau of Relief for Evangelical Churches in Europe, says: "As every semester an army of young students is entering the schools, a continuance of these gifts for students would be highly appreciated."

The Bibles were distributed among students in Germany, Warsaw, Prague, Vienna, Hungary, France and Transylvania.

The World War so impoverished most of the theological schools in Central Europe as to make it impossible for them to furnish textbooks for poor students. The post-war economic situation has caused many worthy but poor young men to turn to the theological schools to prepare for the Christian ministry. Large numbers of these students could not afford even to purchase the Hebrew and Greek Scriptures which are used as textbooks.

Last year, the American Bible Society made possible the distribution of Nestle's Greek Testaments among theological students in Germany, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and Austria, and sent 5,000 French New Testaments to the Bible Society of France, the secretary of which is one of the justly famous "Blue Devils" of World War memories.

The American Bible Society has served a double purpose in sending money to Central Europe for the purchase of Bibles. The receipts of the European Bible societies furnishing these Scriptures have been greatly increased at a time when orders were scarce, and worthy young students have been provided with textbooks and enabled to carry on their studies.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

DEAR LITTLE AMERICANS:

This week you have all heard about George Washington again. I won't write you a story about him, for you already know the same story I know. Yes, it really is the same story I know—the hatchet and the cherry tree, and all that! There! I thought you had heard it. Well, it's the very bestest story of a great American that I ever heard. George was always truthful; and, yes-sir-ee, he was truthful when he became a man, too. He loved his country dearly, and all the people loved him.

But, now listen dears, March is here, and we can hear the wind just a-whistling through the trees—woo-oo-oo! and it's going to blow the clouds across the sky, and blow the birds back to us from the warm, warm South, and pretty soon now we can find some violets in the grass—

"Pretty little flower of blue,
How the children all love you!"

Oh-oo! the early days of spring—what fun they are! Come on, Kiddies, let's run out now and play and play and play. Woo-oo! how the wind does blow! Be careful, don't let it blow you away today while you are playing.

Your editor,
MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT.

"To be as great as Washington,
We could not if we would,
And so we have made up our minds
To try to be as good."

A PRAYER TO PRAY.

Into Thy loving care,
Into Thy keeping,
Thou who art ev'rywhere,
Take us while sleeping.

Let Thine almighty arm
Closely enfold us.
Nothing can hurt or harm
While Thou dost hold us.

GOD SEES, GOD SEES.

When I run about all day,
When I kneel at night to pray,
God sees, God sees.

When I'm dreaming in the dark,
When I lie awake and hark,
God sees, God sees.

Need I ever know a fear?
Night and day my Father's near—
God sees, God sees.

—Mary Mapes Dodge.

Our fathers and mothers and teachers are God's messengers to us. They tell us the message from God's Book. We will always listen to the message.

The oldest business record is a clay tablet, 3,000 years old, recently discovered on the site of Ur, a city of ancient Babylonia. The British Museum, which is conducting the expedition, has also discovered a Babylonian Hall of Justice, the court of which Nebuchadnezzar is believed to have planned.

PRINCESS POMEGRANATE'S PATTERN.

By Winifred Livingstone Bryning.

Once there lived two princesses, named Pomegranate and Almond Blossom. Pomegranate was bright and pretty, and so dearly beloved by her father and mother that they were inclined to spoil her. Almond Blossom was a frail little girl whom no one noticed much, but there was something very attractive about her clear skin and dark, almond-shaped eyes.

One day Pomegranate grew tired of teasing her parrakeet and decided to go out into the garden where the fountain was playing. As she strayed about the garden she came upon a beautiful lady seated on a taboret beside the fountain, working at a small hand-loom.

"What are you making?" asked Princess Pomegranate.

"Tapestry," said the lady. "These are to be hangings for the court."

"I should like some tapestry for my rooms," said Princess Pomegranate, with a little toss of her head; "I am the princess, you know."

"There are two princesses, are there not, asked the lady.

"Only my sister, Almond Blossom, and I," Pomegranate replied; "but every one calls me the princess because I am the elder. Almond Blossom is only—Almond Blossom."

"What kind of room have you?" asked the lady.

"I have several rooms, but my bedroom is ugly, and I hate it!" said Pomegranate with a stamp of her foot.

"What makes it ugly?" asked the lady.

"There are all kinds of patterns in it that annoy me. The walls are made of alabaster, and they are set with star shapes of precious stones—jasper and lapis lazuli and black onyx and great slabs of amethyst. I hate the sight of it!"

The lady's eyes opened wide. "All those precious stones!" she exclaimed. "What would some people not give to wear such jewels, and you have them to decorate your bedroom."

"I picked some of them out with a hairpin once," said Pomegranate with a little laugh, "and threw them into the fountain. The goldfish must have swallowed them."

The lady sighed. "So you want me to make you a piece of tapestry," she said. "What will you do with it? Since your walls are covered with precious stones, you do not need tapestry for them."

"I'll cover up the jewels," said Pomegranate.

"I have an idea," said the lady, choosing a beautiful rose-colored thread and beginning to weave again. "I shall make a small piece of tapestry for your highness as a gift, and I shall also make one for your sister Almond Blossom. You may choose your own colors, but I shall not let you see what I am weaving until it is all done. Now, what colors will you have? I shall not repeat the same colors in Almond Blossom's tapestry, so choose with care."

"I'll take rose and light blue and lavender and gold and dark green and pale pink and dark blue and red and jade and orange and yellow and violet and purple and saffron and light crimson—"

"Wait a moment!" cried the lady. "Leave some colors for Princess Almond Blossom. You have taken nearly all the colors in the rainbow."

Pomegranate frowned. "Well, Almond Blossom doesn't need bright colors; she's so dull anyway," she replied. "I want my tapestry to be beautiful—like me."

Some weeks later Almond Blossom and Pomegranite saw the lady at work by the fountain. She had two small rolls of tapestry beside her.

"Good day to Your Highness," she said. Here are your tapestries all finished. I shall spread them out on the lawn so that you can look at them."

She did it, and a moment later the princesses turned and took a long look at their tapestries.

Suddenly Pomegranate screamed with rage and stamped her foot. "What a hideous mess!" she cried.

It was true. Her tapestry was a strange jumble of gaudy colors. It did not even make a pattern. There were only splashes of bright color, and some of the colors did not look well together.

Almond Blossom studied her pattern with a smile on her face. It was a lovely piece of work with a background of deep brown, shading into soft tones of lighter tint. The design was neat and orderly and presented a little garden of white flowers with pale greenish-gray leaves growing on long, silvery gray stems. They looked like lilies.

"How beautiful!" murmured Almond Blossom. "And the tapestry is all for me? Oh, thank you, sweet lady."

Pomegranate was angry. "Why should my sister have a lovely pattern and I have such an ugly one?" she demanded. "It's just a hideous jumble of all the colors in the world!"

"You chose the colors yourself," the lady replied. "I have named your pattern the Pomegranate Pattern, and your sister's I have called the Almond Blossom Pattern."

"Why?" asked Pomegranate sullenly.

"Because your pattern is like yourself, and Almond Blossom's is like her. Sometimes you are gay and gaudy, and sometimes you are in a screaming temper and don't mind in the least what you say or do. You have no fixed plan in anything. You are just like a jumble of gaudy colors thrown carelessly together. Each color in itself is beautiful, but without a pattern the colors amount to nothing."

The Princess Pomegranate was too much astonished to reply. No one had ever dared to speak to her in such a way before. But there was something about the beautiful, stately lady that frightened her a little, and she did not retort sharply in her usual way. She was silent for some moments, thinking deeply. In her heart she could not help seeing that what the strange lady had said was true. Her pattern was like herself. She did have screaming tempers and was noisy and gaudy like a jumble of colors thrown together. Almond Blossom, on the other hand, was like white lilies growing against a soft brown background, always calm and sweet and gentle.

"Yes, I see now," said the Princess Pomegranate slowly. Tears suddenly rushed to her eyes. "I wish I had a pretty pattern like Almond Blossom! I mean—I wish I were pretty inside—"

"I shall be glad to weave Your Highness a beautiful tapestry," the lady said kindly as she saw Pomegranate's tears. She rolled up the ugly, gaudy tapestry and hid it in a workbox. "The very next time you do or say something sweet, Pomegranate, Almond Blossom must come and tell me about it, and I will work a blossom in a new tapestry. It shall be called Pomegranate's Pattern instead of the other."

"Thank you," said Pomegranate, drying her eyes; "I shall always keep it on a little table, and look at it often to remind me. I won't cover up the jewels on the walls, because they are pretty in their way."

"What is your name?" Almond Blossom asked the strange lady. She was curious to know, because no one had ever mentioned her name.

"I am called the Weaver of Patterns," the lady replied.

And that was all they ever knew about her, because she went as quietly as she had come.—Youth's Companion.

SPRING HATS.

Spring hats are in the windows of each gaily tinted shop, and women walking down the street are wont to gaze and stop! And men stop, too, to look at them, for oh! the hats are bright as flower gardens, fragrant with the perfume of delight.

Spring hats in windows—why, they are a symbol of the spring! They seem to laugh and smile at us, to chuckle and to sing. They are so fresh and new and smart; they fairly beam with pride. Of satin and of straw, they are, with lace and ribbon tied.

Clothes do not count—so people say; they do not count a bit! But any woman with a hat that's new is glad of it. It glorifies her point of view; it makes her hold her head as high as any lovely queen! A touch of green, or red, or vivid blue will brighten up her dingy winter gown, and make her feel as young and fair as any one in town.

Oh, yes, clothes may mean much, I think. They give us self-esteem; They lend to life a romance and a wonder and a gleam. And though our sweetness counts for more than clothes, and though our hearts mean more than hats, new clothes have helped full many play their parts!

The earth is freshened in the spring, the trees put on new dress; so it is fitting that new hats should bring us joy, I guess!—Christian Work.

TREE ROOTS BREAK THE NEWS.

The sap is flowing in the trees. Though snow and ice still hold the soil, the roots know spring is on the way. Underground wireless has sped the solar message that the turn of the year has come, and every rootlet is an antenna catching the news and sending it along stalk and reed and bole, aloft to the upper branches. Apparently nothing has changed at all. The ground is dead, the woods are gray, only the screaming jays add a new note to the scene; yet for all the surface sameness, a change is being wrought; life is stirring in the trees and in the feathered tribes. The roots know. The birds know. Everything that lives near the heart of nature knows. Yet everything seems the same. It is just so with the affairs of men. Things seem the same, but change is already here; one morning it will be apparent; those who have their roots deep already know.

THE 'PIT" RULES WHEAT PRICES.

The Royal Commission on Food Prices, sitting in London, has found that the Chicago wheat pit still rules the world's wheat prices. When London bakers raised the price of the four-pound loaf from 20 cents to 22 cents, it was made necessary by frenzied buying in the Chicago wheat market. "Over there," said one witness, "hotel lift boys, and even girls, dabble in wheat speculation." But look at the bread side of it. There are 45,000,000 of these loaves consumed in England every week. In 1900 they cost 7 cents; just before the war they cost 11 cents; in 1919 they cost 32 cents. Then in 1923 the loaves were brought down to 16 cents. Since that time, the price has steadily mounted, as conditions here have forced it. Jubilation on American farms is paid for by greater pinching in foreign homes. The American farmer does not want that any more than the London worker does. The fault lies in between. If America is to continue the granary of the world, she must do two things—make agriculture profitable to the farmer and at the same time make American wheat easy to buy. This can be done by short-circuiting the robbery that comes in between.

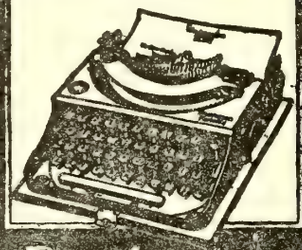
FIGHT OVER POSTAL BILL.

The Senate and House have been sending the postal pay and rate increase bill back and forth. The Senate rejected the House bill and substituted the measure which it had passed a couple of weeks earlier; then the House again rejected the Senate bill, and the controversy was referred to six conferees, who probably will not be able to agree in time to get the measure through at this session.

NEW CALENDAR FOR LEAGUE.

A League of Nations commission has been considering a proposal for a new calendar by which the year would be divided into thirteen months of twenty-eight days each, the extra day being December 29th. A proposal to fix the date of Easter also was being studied.

Something You Have Been Waiting For



Remington Portable Typewriter

—with Standard Keyboard and every other feature common to the larger machines. Case only four inches high.

Price, with case, $60.

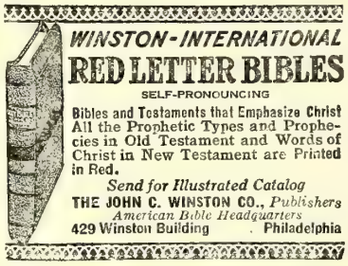
Send Your Order to THE CHRISTIAN SUN Richmond, Va.

WINTER TOURIST TICKETS
—ALL RESORTS—
SOUTH AND SOUTHWEST

CALIFORNIA
Via New Orleans and "Sunset Limited."

INFORMATION, ITINERATIES, RESERVATIONS
Furnished in Detail Upon Request.

Apply to Local Agent, or Address
F. H. POSTON, Division Passenger Agent,
Southern Railway System,
809 East Main Street, - - Richmond, Virginia.



WINSTON-INTERNATIONAL
RED LETTER BIBLES
SELF-PRONOUNCING
Bibles and Testaments that Emphasize Christ All the Prophetic Types and Prophecies in Old Testament and Words of Christ in New Testament are Printed in Red.
Send for Illustrated Catalog
THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO., Publishers
American Bible Headquarters
429 Winston Building Philadelphia

V. E. MAREAN
Pipe Organ Expert
TUNING — REPAIRING
REBUILDING
Motors Installed Yearly Contracts
P. O. Box 864, - Richmond, Va.
Phone, Boulevard 7011-J

Your doctor advises internal cleanliness

HE WILL tell you that the first results of constipation — headache, sleepless nights, biliousness, backache, etc.—warn that the body is flooded with intestinal poisons. In time these poisons may cause the breakdown of health and lead to serious disease.

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favour Lubrication

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. For sale by all druggists.

Nujol
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
For Internal Cleanliness

BROWER.

James D. Brower died February 4th, at the age of 73 years, 10 months, and 4 days. He was married to adelaide Edwards October 4, 1877. He is survived by his wife and five sons—Bascom M., of Liberty; Carl L., of Siler City; Geo. W., Dean D., and Vaughn, of Ramseur, N. C.; also three sisters, one brother, and several grandchildren.

Interment was made at Rehobeth M. E. Church in the presence of a large congregation of friends and relatives, and his grave was covered with beautiful flowers. May the Heavenly Father comfort the hearts of the bereaved. Burial service by the writer. T. J. GREEN.

WALKER.

On February 7th, Bro. U. Walker, of Auburn, N. C., departed this life. Bro. Walker was a member of the M. E. Church, Garner, N. C. He was born on April 21, 1869; died, February 7, 1925. He leaves to mourn his going a wife, four sons and two daughters and many friends. On Monday, the 9th of February, he was laid to rest in the cemetery at Mt. Moriah Baptist Church, Wake County, to await the coming of Christ.

May the comfort of the Spirit bring joy to the hearts of the loved ones. Funeral services conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. Mr. Fisher.

J. S. CARDEN.

ALLISON.

Mrs. D. S. Allison, mother of Mrs. J. S. Carden, departed this life February 13, 1925, and was buried on the 14th. She was in her eighty-fifth year and was loved by all who knew her. She was a faithful member of Little River Presbyterian Church, of Orange County, at which place the funeral services were conducted by the writer. She leaves to mourn their loss four daughters, four sons, 29 grandchildren, 19 great-grandchildren and two sisters, besides a host of relatives and friends. May God bless the bereaved ones. J. S. CARDEN.

COPE.

Miss Halsie Cope departed this life on February 4, 1925. She was twenty-three years old at the time of her death. All of her immediate family preceded her to the grave with the exception of one brother, who is left to mourn her going, with a host of relatives and friends.

She was a member of Ebenezer Christian Church in Wake County, N. C. She was buried in the family cemetery in Wake County, February 5th. Funeral by the writer. J. S. CARDEN.

WHERE HE "ACTS UP SOME."

I am twenty-five cents.

I am not on speaking terms with the butcher.

I am too small to buy a quart of ice cream.

I am not large enough to purchase a box of candy.

I am too small to buy a ticket to a movie.

I am hardly fit for a tip, but, believe me, when I go to Church on Sunday I am considered some money!
—Christian Evangelist.

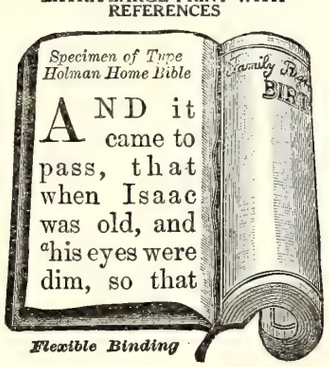
ELON COLLEGE---CO-EDUCATIONAL

WHITLEY AUDITORIUM BUILDING
One of the Group of Five New Buildings now Completed.

Elon, in her rebuilding program, has been looking to the future. Ten buildings, new and modern equipment, and a highly trained and efficient faculty are at the service of the future leaders of our Church. The phenomenal growth of Elon in the past two years indicates a larger growth throughout the whole denomination in the years just ahead. Make Elon your own Church College in a personal way by your patronage and prayerful co-operation.

HOLMAN BIBLES

For Old Folks and the Home
EXTRA LARGE PRINT WITH REFERENCES



Specimen of Type
Holman Home Bible
AND it came to pass, that when Isaac was old, and his eyes were dim, so that
Flexible Binding

Size when closed, 6½ x 9¼ inches

Printed from large Clear Pica Type, with Marginal References, Family Record and Maps. This HOME BIBLE is new and very desirable for every day use, containing all the advantages of a Family Bible in a compact size that can be easily handled, with Record for Births, Marriages and Deaths. The best Bible obtainable for old folks who need extra large clear print and a light-weight book.

No. 2014. Durably Bound in French Seal Leather, full flexible covers, round corners, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, gold titles.

Price—Post Paid..... 4.85

HOLMAN BIBLES

NEW BLACK-FACED TYPE TEACHERS' BIBLE

The very latest and newest Teachers' Bible published, and it includes every possible improvement in Bible making. The type is a clean, clear, sharp Black Face, which is printed on the finest paper obtainable. Easy to read (can be read in the dimmest light), and is just the page for those suffering from impaired eyesight. Compact in size, light in weight, easy to carry.

Absolutely flexible binding. Contains Old and New Testaments, Treasury of Biblical Information, Practical Comparative Concordance, Oriental Light on the Bible, Four Thousand Questions and Answers, Fifteen New Maps in Colors, about 1500 pages in all.

Size, 5¼ x 7¾ inches

Specimen of Type
THE LORD is my shephe not want.
2 He maketh me to lie green pastures: he leadeth the still waters.

No. 4412. Bound in Seal Grain Morocco, with overlapping covers, rounded corners, red under gold edges. Silk head bands and silk marker.

Price—Post Paid..... 4.20

No. 433X. Holman India Paper. Algerian Morocco, Leather Lined, Silk Sewed, Divinity Circuit, round corners, carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and Helps as above.

Price—Post Paid..... 9.35

MONEY TO LEND ON IMPROVED FARMS--FAVORABLE TERMS

Write for Details

SO. BOND & MORTGAGE CO.
627 E. Main St. - - Richmond, Va.

Medical College of Virginia

Medicine	Dentistry
Pharmacy	Nursing

New Buildings. Well-equipped Laboratories, under the direction of full-time, competent teachers.

The Memorial Hospital, Dooley Hospital, St. Philip Hospital, are owned and controlled by the Medical College of Virginia, and offer every facility for thorough clinical teaching.

Staffs composed of the Faculty of the College. Additional clinical facilities are offered through other institutions in Richmond.

For full information and catalogue, address—

J. R. McCAULEY, Secretary.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D.....Editor
W. W. STALEY, D. D.....Associate
W. A. HARPER, LL. D.....Associate
R. C. HELFENSTEIN, D. D...Associate
REV. S. C. HARRELL.....Associate
REV. S. M. LYNAM.....News Editor
P. J. KERNODLE....Managing Editor

Subscription Rates.

One Year $2.00
Six Months 1.00

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post-Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows the date of expiration. Please renew at least two weeks in advance.

Change of Address: Give both old and new post-office when asking that your address be changed.

When subscriptions are made for friends, state whether paper is to be stopped at end of the year.

Remittances: Make all remittances to "The Christian Sun," 1536 East Broad Street, Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and Marriage Notices, limited to 100 words, are published free of charge. All over 100 words, published at 1 cent a word. Remittance should accompany copy. Write names distinctly.

Advertising Rates: "Want Ads," 2 cents a word an insertion. Display Rates quoted upon request.

FOR SALE.

A 40-bbl., electric-driven, fully-equipped modern Flour Roller-Mill, Corn and Feed Mill, located right in the town of Elon College, near railroad siding, on acre lot; hard-surface and sand-clay roads leading out in all directions.. A good custom grain mill and good business opportunity for the right man, as well as advantage of a high-grade high school and high-class college.

Terms: Part cash; balance on long terms. Apply—

C. R. LOVE, - - BURLINGTON, N. C.

ATKINS.

Whereas, on Wednesday, December 17, 1924, God, in his transcendent wisdom, called our beloved friend and co-worker, Mrs. Minnie Harward Atkins, from a consecrated life of faithful service on earth to the enjoyment of her eternal reward in the mansion prepared for her; and whereas Mrs. Atkins was one of the most loyal members of the Durham Christian Church and all its organizations; therefore, be it

Resolved: 1. That in her death, this Church, the Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies have sustained the loss of a true and tried friend and a loyal promoter of all the interests of the Church. Her cheerful manner and genial spirit endeared her to all who knew her. Her deep, abiding faith, her sterling Christian life, her godly counsels, and her cherished friendship will ever be a precious memory and inspiration to us who mourn her departure.

2. To the family of our beloved sister we extend our heartfelt sympathy and commend them to our Saviour, through whom we have promise of a joyful reunion and life everlasting.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be placed upon the minutes of the Missionary and Ladies' Aid Societies, a copy be sent to the family, and a copy to The Christian Sun for publication.

MRS. R. J. KERNODLE.
MRS. W. B. BAGWELL.
MRS. J. E. HOWARD.

ALLRED.

Wade, Jr., infant son of Homer and Fannie Allred, died February 11, 1925, age 7 months, 29 days. He leaves to mourn their loss a father and mother, five brothers and two sisters—Lacy, Vernon, Elbert, Colon, Grady, Vada and Inez. Funeral and burial at Pleasant Ridge.

J. M. ALLRED.

OXFORD TEACHERS' BIBLES

An Oxford Teachers' Bible has references and 300 pages of helps that are a mine of information to Bible students. The helps are arranged in alphabetical order, like a dictionary. They are accurate, comprehensive and up-to-date. A few styles are listed here. Many others are described in our Bible catalogue, mailed upon request.

04403 [This size print] Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 6⅞ x 4¾ inches $4.00

0623x [Same Bible as 04403] Printed on Oxford India paper. Only 1 inch thick..... $6.00

04453 [This size print] French Morocco leather binding, overlapping covers, 7¼ x 5 in. $4.35

0773x [Same Bible as 04453] Printed on Oxford India paper. A remarkably thin and light Bible. (Only 1 inch thick) $7.75

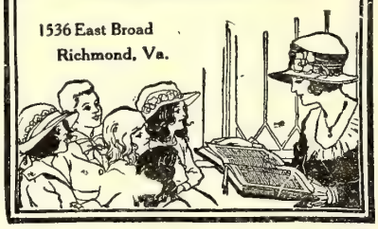
05453 [Same Bible as 04453] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $6.25

05453x [Same Bible as 0773x] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $8.75

04523 [This size print] A self-pronouncing Oxford Bible. Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 8½ x 5½ inches... $5.50

0923x [Same Bible as 04523] Printed on Oxford India paper, only 1⅛ inches thick... $9.75

ORDER FROM
"THE CHRISTIAN SUN"
1536 East Broad
Richmond, Va.



FOR GOOD HOME COOKING
MRS. COOK'S CAFETERIA
805 East Grace Street.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

A Co-Educational School
LOCATED AT
WADLEY, ALABAMA

This School offers the last two years of Academic work and the first two years of College work.

The following Courses are offered in the—

COLLEGE DEPARTMENT: English, Bible, Religious Education, Latin, French, History, Education, Mathematics and Science.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENTS: Music—Piano, Voice; Commercial Department—Bookkeeping, Typewriting, and Shorthand.

Due attention will be given Athletics, such as Tennis, Basket-Ball, Baseball, Football.

The government of the School is mild, but firm, endeavoring to create a home atmosphere as much as possible, not merely to maintain discipline, but to cultivate Christian character.

This is our own School, located within reach of all in this section, and the cost is less than any other College within reasonable distance of those who would attend School from this section.

Send for a Catalogue giving full description of Courses and entrance conditions.

S. L. BEOUGHER, President
Wadley, - - - - Alabama.

HOLMAN BIBLES

FOR CHILDREN
PICTORIAL BIBLES WITH HELPS

The text is self-pronouncing, by the aid of which children can learn to pronounce the difficult Scripture proper names.

Specimen of Type
27 And the boys grew: and Esau was a cunning hunter.
5 And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof.

Size, 5⅜ x 3½ inches.

With beautiful photo views of scenes in Bible lands distributed throughout the text. Also maps of Bible lands in colors. Also new Practical Helps to Bible Study, especially designed for instructing children in scriptural information.

No. 9111. French Seal Leather, overlapping covers, round corners, gold edges, gold titles.
Our Price—Post Paid..... 2.30

COLORED PICTURE EDITION

Portraying in natural colors, scenes and places taken from nature and life in the Holy Land.

No. 9211. Same as No. 9111, but with Beautifully Colored Pictures.
Our Price—Post Paid..... 2.40

FOR INTERMEDIATE SUNDAY-SCHOOL SCHOLARS

Large Clear Black Type, Self-Pronouncing, containing Helps to Bible Study, 4000 Questions and Answers, Maps in Colors, and Presentation Page. A Beautiful Gift Bible.

Specimen of Type.
22 And the prophet Isra-el, and said unto thyself, and mark, and for at the return of t

Size, 7 x 5 inches.

No. 215. Divinity Circuit Style, Bound in French Seal Leather, round corners, red under gold edges, with silk head bands and purple silk marker, gold titles, etc.
Our Price—Post Paid..... 3.10

No. 3215RL. Red Letter Scholars' Bible, same Bible as No. 215, with all the Sayings of Christ printed in Red, and with Red and gold INLAID PANEL SIDE TITLES, also Beautifully Colored Pictures.
Our Price—Post Paid..... 3.45

Holman Self-Pronouncing

VEST POCKET TESTAMENTS

Clearest Print in Smallest Size
4⅜x2¾x⅝ inches

Specimen of Type.
AND the third day there was a marriage in Ca'na of Gal'i-lee; and the mother of Je'sus was

2133K. Bound in durable Morocco Grain Semble Leather, flexible limp, gilt titles ..... .60

2113. French Morocco, genuine leather, flexible limp, gold titles, rounded corners, gold edges..... .70

2115P. French Morocco, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, with the Book of Psalms included $1.10

ILLUSTRATED VEST POCKET TESTAMENT
With Pictures of Holy Land Scenes

2814. French Morocco, limp, gold side title round corners, red under gold edges ..... .85

RED LETTER VEST POCKET TESTAMENT

With all the words of our Lord printed in red.

13RL. French Morocco, flexible limp, gold side title on red panel, gold edges. .85

15RLP. French Morocco, overlapping covers, flexible, gold side title on red panel, red under gold edges, with Book of Psalms included $1.25

INDIA PAPER VEST POCKET TESTAMENT
Thin as a Wafer

2136XP. Fine Grain Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lined to edge, with Psalms included $2.25

Send Your Orders to
THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY. 1956.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches,

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Official Organ of the Southern Christian Convention

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY. IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY. IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXVII. RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, MARCH 12, 1925. NUMBER 11.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

ROOSEVELT HEADS BOARD.—

It is interesting to note that Colonel Theodore Roosevelt has accepted the chairmanship of the Lay Board of Applied Christianity of New York City. The board is giving instruction to one thousand persons in several forms of Christian service, and has three thousand others on its waiting list at present.

NO RELIGIOUS TEST FOR TENNESSEE.—

A bill introduced into the lower house of the Tennessee Legislature would have, had it passed, prohibited county school boards from employing as teachers any person who did not believe in God and the Deity of His Son Jesus Christ. The bill was tabled by the lower house. Evidently there are to be no religious tests for the people of Tennessee.

SEEKS MONEY FOR EDWARDS' BUST.—

Dr. Lewis S. Mudge, secretary of the general council of the Presbyterian Church, has issued a call for three thousand dollars. This amount will be used to secure a bust of Jonathan Edwards, to be placed in the Hall of Fame. Jonathan Edwards was awarded a place in that honored company several years ago, and received the largest vote ever given a preacher or theologian. So far, the bust has never been placed in the hall, and Dr. Mudge is making an effort to secure funds for that purpose.

INDICTED FOR PEDDLING OBSCENITY.—

John Reardon, circulation manager of the New Fiction Publishing Company, and six Boston news dealers have been indicted in the Suffolk County Court for having in their possession obscene literature with intent to sell. The indictment was brought by the Ward and Watch Society of Boston, and grew out of a story in the October number of Snappy Stories. Mr. Reardon's attorney is quoted as declaring that he will fight the case through the United States Supreme Court.

STUDENTS ARE CHURCH MEMBERS.—

A recent canvass of the 8,652 students of the University of Michigan revealed that 5,700 held Church membership, and that only 1,515 had no religious preference. The Methodists headed the list, with 1,209 students in the university. Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Episcopalians, Roman Catholics and Jews followed in the order named. One of the startling facts revealed by the canvass was the fact that more men than women hold some Church affiliation. There were 4,195 men members of the Church, while only 1,505 women belonged to any Church. This university had a minister and a thinker at its head. It shows what may be done in a State institution most of which are supposedly without faith in the Church and religion.

SECRETARY HUGHES RETIRES.—

Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes retired from public office on March 4th, after eighteen years of almost continuous service. Mr. Hughes retires to private life, and does so joyously. His public career began with his election to the governorship of New York in 1906, and has been almost continuous since that time. When Mr. Hughes became Governor of New York, that office had the reputation of being a preliminary step to the presidency. He came as nearly tasting the presidency, not to have held the office, as ever any man did. In November, 1916, he retired, believing himself elected, and woke in the morning to find that it was not true. It speaks eloquently for the character of the retiring secretary that he came back, and for the past four years has served next to the President.

ANOTHER INAUGURATION.—

March 4th brought again the quadrennial event at the national capital. Calvin Coolidge took the oath of office administered by Chief Justice William Howard Taft, a former President of the United States, and pressed his lips to the first chapter of the gospel of St. John of a Bible given him by his grandmother when the President was five years old. Much of his early education was furnished by the Bible, and he has many sweet memories for the old Book. This is the first time in the history of the country that a former President has administered the oath of office to an imcoming President. It was also the first time that the inaugural ceremony was broadcast by radio.

One hundred thousand people attended the inauguration, and literally millions listened to the inaugural address over the radio. The inaugural ceremonies were of the simplest kind. The parade did not last more than an hour. No official ball was given, but there was a charity ball at which Vice-President and Mrs. Dawes represented President and Mrs. Coolidge, who did not attend, but remained quietly at the White House. Fourteen chief executives of States attended the great event, among them Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Wyoming, and the first woman Governor in the United States.

BORGLUM GIVING TROUBLE.—

Gutson Borglum, the sculptor in charge of the carving of the great Confederate memorial at Stone Mountain, about sixteen miles from Atlanta, Ga., who was discharged by the memorial association officials, is giving trouble. In less than four hours after his dismissal, he destroyed the models of the work. Warrants were sworn out by the association officials for Borglum and J. C. Tucker, the superintendent of the work, both of whom fled from the State. Borglum was arrested at Greensboro, N. C., and gave a five thousand dollar bond for his appearance.

The memorial association charged Borglum with gross neglect of duty, with offensive egotism, and with exorbitant demands for money which he had not earned. The sculptor, on the other hand, contended that the work at Stone Mountain is five months ahead of schedule, and that the association is now in debt to him some two hundred thousand dollars. The association officials are seeking four indictments against the sculptor, two for malicious mischief, one for larceny from the house, and one for simple larceny for the removal of the bust of Stonewall Jackson from the actual scene of operations. With the exception of two or three small models supposed to have been carried away by Borglum and Tucker, all the models have been located, most of them mutilated badly. It is said that the work will continue without interruption on the memorial.

DR. BURTON DIES.—

At the early age of fifty, Dr. Marion Leroy Burton, president of the University of Michigan, died on February 18th at Ann Arbor, Mich. Dr. Burton was a Congregationalist minister. He was a graduate of Carleton College, and held his doctorate of philosophy from Yale University. Following his pastorate of the Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, N. Y., he was elected president of Smith College in 1909. From that institution, he went to the University of Minnesota in 1917, where he remained until 1920, when he assumed the office which he held till his death.

In the death of Dr. Burton, the educational world has lost a leader of power. He was offered up, as the Chicago alumni of Michigan University declared, as a sacrifice, because of the great money problem confronting every institution. It is the form of torture which we particularly reserve for our college presidents. Dr. Burton was a minister and an educator. He found it possible to head a great State university and still retain his ideals as a minister, and in doing so he restored religion to the campus of the University of Michigan without offense to those who feel that Church and State must remain forever two separate and distinct institutions. In doing this, Dr. Burton has made one of the most powerful contributions to education and to the Church. His work has meant much to the Church and to the institutions which he has served. Dr. Burton's last great public appearance was in Cleveland, Ohio, last June, when he made the speech nominating Calvin Coolidge for the presidency of the United States.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Charlotte, N. C., says it is the greatest Church-going city in the United States, and, next to Edinburgh, the greatest in the world.

Dr. J. L. Kernodle, of Burlington, N. C., after attending the inauguration of President Coolidge on the 4th, gave the office a pleasant call.

The sum of $50,000 is to be spent for new furnishings and for repairing mechanical equipment in the White House. New rugs are to cost $12,000, and draperies $16,000.

Rev. J. A. Ledbetter, Gibsonville, N. C., is ready to assist in evangelistic meetings when our pastors may desire his services. Bro. Ledbetter is a valuable man and a very convincing preacher in revival services, and our pastors will do well to use him.

Miss Lucy Eldredge will be in the Eastern Virginia Conference April 10th to May 10th, and any Sunday School or Church desiring a visit by her should communicate at once with Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, Holland, Va., Conference Director Christian Education.

Many who pledged have either repudiated or neglected or ignored their Men and Millions obligations. On this account, of course, the Church and its interests and kingdom work must suffer, but not as much then as those individuals who could pay but do not.

Records of the United States Department of Agriculture show that of 10,160 farmers' business organizations reporting under date of March, 1924, there were 3,134 grain organizations, 1,966 associations handling dairy products, 1,598 handling livestock, and 1,232 fruit and vegetable organizations.

Have you read a little book called "American Tithers." It is worth while and greatly surprises one who did not know that so many of our leading business men were tithers. This plain biblical truth is coming to be understood and practiced more and more. THE SUN'S EDITOR will be glad to have the publisher send any one a copy for the price of 25 cents.

In this issue we publish what is supposed to be the only sermon ever written out in full by the late-lamented Rev. Mills Barrett. It is an exceptionally strong, clear and comforting utterance. Many SUN readers will peruse it with profit and joy. We are indebted to Dr. W. W. Staley, who secured the original manuscript, and then in his own hand copied it entirely, as it now appears.

One could wish that all our pastors would read an editorial this week telling of Dr. G. O. Lankford's experience in organizing the men of his Church for activity. "The greatest weakness of the Church is at the point of its greatest potential strength." And Dr. Lankford believes that one of the most striking weaknesses of the Church at present is the lack of organization or any sort of unified activity on the part of the men of the Church. Why not give the laymen of the Church an opportunity to serve in promoting the work of the Church and carrying forward its activity.

Rev. H. C. Caviness, who was received into the Christian Church and ordained as an elder at the last session of the North Carolina Conference, has been in a series of evangelistic services with our Clayton Church, Rev. J. E. Franks, pastor, since December. Bro. Franks writes that there have been many conversions, the work greatly built up, and that the meetings are to continue till the third Sunday (March 15th). Bro. Caviness devotes all his time, talent, energy and devotion to evangelistic work, and the Lord seems to own and greatly bless his labors in soul-winning. Any of our pastors desiring evangelistic aid will do well to write Bro. Caviness. His permanent address is Apex, N. C.

Rev. C. H. Rowland, D. D., and his people of First Church, Greensboro, are happy indeed over the results of a week's evangelistic campaign and enlistment services led by Rev. McD. Howsare, D. D., February 23d to March 1st. As a result of the week's services, seventy-four members were received into the First Church, and others were received in other Churches. An evangelistic effort that puts the preacher in the background and gets the members busy winning souls to Christ is a worthwhile undertaking, Dr. Rowland thinks. We live in a time when activity is demanded, and if the Church would demand more activity on the part of its membership, greater results in kingdom's service and in enlargement would follow.

None of us ever neglect a duty or repudiate an obligation until we have first justified ourselves in so doing by some sort of argument. Not even a most horrible crime is ever committed, jurists tell us, until the criminal has, by some argument, justified the act. So it is always easy to argue ourselves into not doing what we ought to do when doing the deed costs us something of sacrifice and of service. It is very easy for those to criticise our Men and Millions Movement who pledged to it but have not paid. Let us pay off our obligations to our Church before we criticise its interests and its enterprises. We will have plenty of time to criticise after we shall have paid our pledges, discharged our obligations, done our full duty to our Church, which has, through its Founder and Builder, made us what we are.

A CONWELL PAGEANT.

The famous Temple Sunday School in Philadelphia has just presented a pageant for two days in celebration of the eighty-second birthday of the Temple pastor, Dr. Russell H. Conwell, on February 15th. The pageant covered Dr. Conwell's life from his boyhood to a representation of the great institutions for which his Philadelphia pastorate has been responsible, including Temple University and the Good Samaritan Hospital.

BIBLE SOCIETY AIDS.

In a letter just received at the Bible House, on Astor Place, President Coolidge has expressed his interest in the presentation of Bibles to the 1,900 members of the Japanese battleship training squadron during their recent visit to San Francisco.

This presentation, which was made through the Pacific agency of the American Bible Society by the agency secretary, Rev. A. Wesley Mell, followed the broadcasting of the Scriptures in English and Japanese from Hale Brothers KPO. Bishop Charles Wesley Burns, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, read the English version, and the reading in Japanese was by Rev. S. Hata, president of the Association of Japanese Churches of Northern California.

The vice-admiral was so impressed with these manifestations of good will that he expressed a desire to attend a religious service in an American Church on Sunday morning. Arrangements were, therefore, made for him, with his entire official staff and the consulate-general of Japan, to attend the First Congregational Church, of which Secretary of the Navy Wilbur is a member. They were graciously received by the pastor, Dr. James L. Gordon, and the entire party seated on the platform. The welcoming speech and the sermon were broadcasted to all stations on the Pacific Coast and to ships at sea.

In responding to the presentation of Bibles by Mr. Mell, the vice-admiral made the following significant statement:

"If America and Japan will follow the teachings of Christ as expressed in the Bible, there will be peace on the Pacific and the two nations—America and Japan—will remain in friendship and brotherhood."

RELIGIOUS LITERATURE FREE.

Any reader of this announcement may have the following literature free by addressing Dean W. S. Athearn, Boston University, 20 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.::

"An Evaluation of the Projected Method as an Instrument of Religious Education," by Walter S. Athearn.

"The Mechanistic and Personalistic Psychological Contributions to the Field of Religious Education," by John E. Bentley.

"What is a Person?" by Earl Marlatt.

"Bibliography for Elementary Workers in Religious Education," by Alberta Munkres and others.

The annual announcement of the school of religious education and social service, which has the value of a treatise on the professional training of lay leadership for the Church.

These pamphlets are of excellent value to ministers, Sunday School officers and teachers, college professors, and any who are interested in the work of Christian Education.

W. A. HARPER.

DECEASED MINISTERS.

I have known and labored with many ministers of the Christian Church. Of this number, the following of my acquaintance, most of them dear friends in Christian service, have passed over the river and now await me on the other shore: W. G. Anderson, Alfred Apple, Solomon Apple, Robert Tinin, Jas. I. Hobby, E. W. Beale, W. T. Walker, E. T. Isley, William Franks, William Rollins, Fred Rollins, W. T. Herndon, William Gunter, Richard Drake, Atlas Boone, Jack Hatch, T. A. Moffitt, W. S. Long, J. D. Elder, Malcom L. Hurley, R. A. Ricks, John Jones, Lem Winston, S. B. Klapp, W. M. Brady, J. N. Terrell, Jno. S. Lawrence, Jeremiah W. Holt, L. I. Cox, C. C. Peel, J. P. Barrett, W. G. Clements, A. P. Barbee, Chasteen Allen, Thomas J. Fowler, W. B. Wellons, J. W. Albright, Joseph Pinnix.

I had great love for all these men. They have fought their battles, and fought them well. I am hoping to meet them all some day on the shining shore. J. D. WICKER.

Sanford, N. C.

NOTICE.

Eastern Virginia Woman's Conference.

The district missionary rallies will be held as follows:

Franklin District.—Mrs. J. A. Williams, superintendent; March 31st; Mt. Carmel; speakers: Dr. I. W. Johnson, Rev. J. H. Lightbourne.

Waverly District.—Mrs. Waverly Barrett, superintendent; April 1st; Spring Hill; speakers: Rev. F. C. Lester, Rev. J. G. Truitt.

Nansemond District.—Mrs. H. S. Hardcastle, superintendent; April 2d; Oakland; speakers: Dr. L. E. Smith, Rev. J. G. Truitt.

Norfolk District.—Mrs. J. E. Cartwright, superintendent; April 3d; Christian Temple, Norfolk; speakers: Dr. W. W. Staley, Rev. F. C. Lester. MRS. L. W. STAGG, Secretary.

PROGRAM.

Program for the district missionary rallies, to be held at Mt. Carmel, Spring Hill, Oakland and Christian Temple, March 31st, April 1st, 2d, 3d.

Song—"The Church's One Foundation."

Devotional—Scripture: Col. 1:13-20; 1 Cor. 12:12-20; Acts 17-24.

Minutes.

Superintendent's Message.

Address—Dr. J. O. Atkinson.

Special Music.

Address—(Delegate to North American Missionary Conference).

Appointment of Committees.

Offering.

Message Concerning Apportionments.

Afternoon Session.

Devotional.

Our Work Explained (each Superintendent will choose her speakers for this part of the program):

The Cradle Roll.

Willing Workers.

Young People.

Woman's Societies.

Special Music.

Address—(Delegate to North American Missionary Conference).

Reports of Committees.

Closing Exercise.

MRS. M. L. BRYANT,
MRS. W. V. LEATHERS,
MRS. R. T. BRADFORD,
MRS. R. T. STAGG,
Committee.

Y. P. MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR MARCH.

The following is the Woman's and Young People's Missionary program for March:

CHINA.

Hymn—"How Firm a Foundation!"

Business:

Roll Call (respond with verse of Scripture).

Dues Collected by Treasurer.

Reports of Officers.

Reports of Committees.

Devotional—Bible Lesson, "Jesus' Work for Individuals" (John 3:1-3; John 4:13-14; Matt. 15:21-28; John 8:10-11; John 1:41-43; Rom. 1:14).

Prayer—Call for Sentence Prayers.

Special Music.

Missionary Topic—"Ming Kwong: City of the Morning Light."

(a) Good Tidings.

(b) The Harvest.

(c) The Tares.

(d) A Strong Nation.

(e) The Glory of the Lord.

(Have room arranged attractively with Chinese lanterns and pictures. A set of six beautiful pictures can be obtained from Mrs. Powers, Room 25 C. P. A. Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, for 50 cents. Have the story of each picture told by various members. A little book in which the story of each picture is given accompanies the set of pictures.)

Reading from "Of One Blood," pp. 87 & 88.

Hymn—"The Morning Light is Breaking."

GERTRUDE BROWNE.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

We should be glad to furnish your Sunday School the following supplementary supplies, cash to accompany order:

Improved Uniform Series International Lessons.

1. Bible Lesson Picture Roll, 21x32 inches, per quarter $1.25
2. Sunday School Superintendent (to accompany the Picture Roll), per quarter..... .15
3. Pupils' Lesson Stories, per quarter..... .06

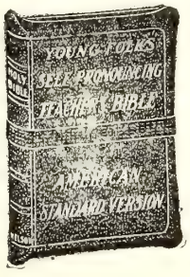
Group Uniform Series, Primary Course.

1. Group Bible Lesson Picture Roll, 16x20 in., per quarter 1.00
2. Group Pupils' Lesson Stories, Primary, per quarter ..... .07

In making order, be explicit and name the quarter for which supplies are wanted; thus: First quarter, January to March; second quarter, April to June; third quarter, July to September; fourth quarter, October to December.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.



These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The Illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the Number and prices.

TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Minion Bold-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4 7-8x 7 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

India Paper Edition, Size 4 7-8x7 Inches, 1 1-10 Inches Thick.

2152X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$6.00

Bourgeois Type, Size 5 3-8x8 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2167—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.00

2172—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.50

India Paper Edition, Only 1 1-8 Inches Thick.

2172X—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$8.50

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3¾x3⅜ inches, and 1 inch thick; with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black.

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations. Special book for Sunday Schools 95c

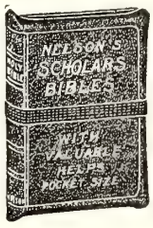
Ruby Type, Size 3¾x3⅜ Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps $2.50

Minion Type, Pocket Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick.

With 32 full-colored illustrations; also 25 outline maps through the text and 12 colored maps.

133—Bound in cloth, round corners, red edges, title stamped on side in pure gold $1.60



135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 15-16 of an Inch Thick.

135X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.75

Minion Black-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4¾x 7 Inches, 1¼ Inches Thick.

Printed from clear, large, black-face type, 32 full-page illustrations in Sepia and colors, 4,000 Questions and Answers, Harmony of the Gospels, How to Study the Sunday School Lesson, 25 outline Maps, 12 full-page colored Maps.

4152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold.....$3.25

TEXT BIBLES—AMERICAN STANDARD VERSION.

Printed from Easy-Reading Type, on Good Bible Paper, for Sunday School and Church Use.

Minion Type, Size 4x6 Inches, 1¼ Inches Thick, 25 Outline Maps, Bound in Black.

101—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, title stamped on back in pure gold..$1.10

112—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title on back in pure gold $2.75

India Paper Edition, Only ⅞-Inch Thick.

112X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

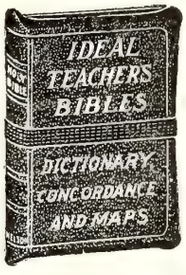
Reference and Text Bibles also in minion, brevier, bourgeois, long primer, pica and English type.

Thumb index cut on edge, 50c extra; name printed on any Bible in gold, 40c extra; extra wording, 40c per line.

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (v vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3-8x 8 1-2 Inches and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.



Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red;other parts of the book are printed in black. With concise Bible dictionary, combined concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.75

RED LETTER EDITION

With all the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands, title stamped on side and back in pure gold $3.25

Any of the above Bibles sent post paid. Address

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street, - - - Richmond, Va.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR.

J. O. ATKINSON, Elon College, N. C.

Contributing Editors.

W. W. STALEY W. A. HARPER
R. C. HELFENSTEIN S. C. HARRELL

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

MEN OF THE CHURCH.

Referring to a recent note in THE CHRISTIAN SUN about the men of the Church, Dr. G. O. Lankford, pastor of Burlington Christian Church, brings the glad news that his Church has recently formed an organization known as "Men of the Church." Although the organization is new, forty men have already joined. They plan to have monthly meetings and a program. This monthly program will be made up by the council of the organization, composed of executive committee and chairmen of various committees.

Up to the present, there have been formed eight committees—(1) Church attendance, (2) prayer-meeting, (3) visiting, (4) publicity and hotel (for extension of work in the community), (5) Orphanage, (6) college, (7) social and entertainment, (8) membership for organization.

The departments of work will include (a) spiritual life, (b) evangelism, (c) Christian training, (d) missions, (e) Christian education.

Dr. Lankford declares that the men of his Church are taking hold of the work with a grip that means deep determination and a desire to serve. Dr. Lankford has certainly emphasized a great truth in declaring that the greatest weakness of the Church today is at the point of its greatest potential strength. This is evidently true. If, somehow, the Church, every local Church, can organize its men for action, can unite the strength of its consecreated manhood in doing the work of the Church, results will show and great things will be achieved.

More than 900 Presbyterian laymen recently met in this State in a "Men and the Church Convention." It was the expressed purpose of this convention to secure the united activity of the men in the local Church in behalf of tasks and spiritual development of the Church. Our women have their missionary organizations, our young people have their Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavors. Think of it! Our strong, active, consecrated, willing men without organization, without any method or program of co-operation and activity in the Church, without any solidarity or unity of action in building up the work of the Church. Indeed, Dr. Lankford is right in declaring that the greatest weakness of the Church today is at the very point of its greatest potential strength.

One could wish that every pastor of the Churches of the Southern Convention could do as Dr. Lankford has already done, could do as the "Men and the Church Convention of the Presbyterians" advocated, namely: take steps to unify and direct the activity and efforts of the laymen of the Church in extending the work of the kingdom.

GROWTH IN SOCIAL CONCEPTS.

If there is one thing which is more characteristic of the Christian way than any other, it is the growth in its various concepts. Progress breathes throughout the revelations of the sacred Word. This applies to the concept of God Himself, of man, of destiny, of salvation, of sin, and of men's relationships one to another, to mention only a few of the directions in which growth and development have characterized the concepts of the Chrsitian way.

With particular reference to men's social relationships, we find four distinct stages of progress and development. When the Scriptures open we find that blood vengeance is recognized as an obligation on the part of men for one another. In order to mitigate this heartless practice, cities of refuge were established, to which the homicide might betake himself and so escape the vengeance of the blood avenger.

The next stage we find to be that of reciprocal justice as the ideal characterizing the relationships of man, according to which an eye should be given for an eye and a tooth for a tooth.

The third stage is that of mercy. The Hebrew prophets and seers were not satisfied with the concept of justice which was at the basis of the law, and so they preached for humane treatment and for mercy as a more becoming characteristic for those who would serve Jehovah.

When we come into the New Testament we find an atmosphere higher by far than that of the clear-visioned prophets. Here men are not only to be merciful to each other, but they are to crown mercy with love. According to the prophets, men were to do justly and to love mercy, but according to Jesus, men in their social relations are to love one another even as Jesus loved His disciples. There is no reciprocity of law here. This principle far transcends the Golden Rule. A man is not to be satisfied with doing for his neighbor what he would like his neighbor to do for him, but he is to love his neighbor to the extent that he will give his life for him.

The practice of this fourth and final principle, setting forth the ideal of Jesus for social relationships in life, will remove war and jealousy and every evil from the life of men. So, in Jesus we find the perfect conception of our social relationships. This is as we should expect, and we rejoice in the revelations which our Master has given us as to how we should live with reference to each other in the social relationships of our life.

NOT THE SWORD, BUT THE CROSS.

THE SUN'S editor wonders if many of our readers noted carefully the closing paragraph of the inaugural address on March 4th of President Coolidge. It was a most significant utterance. It is to be doubted if in recent years the chief executive of a great nation has given to his inaugural just such a turn and climax as our President did. He was evidently thinking of the hundreds and hundreds of missionaries out on the foreign field when he declared that "The legions which America sends forth are armed, not with the sword, but with the cross. The higher state to which she seeks the allegiance of all mankind is not of human, but of divine origin." Surely this is the utterance and the high purpose of the Christian spirit of America.

But let us quote the last few sentences of the President's inaugural address: "We should not let the much that is to do obscure the much which has been done. The past and present show faith and hope and courage fully justified. Here stands our country, an example of tranquility at home, a patron of tranquility abroad. Here stands its government, aware of its might, but obedient to its conscience. Here it will continue to stand, seeking peace and prosperity, solicitous for the welfare of the wage-earner, promoting enterprise, developing waterways and natural resources, attentive to the intuitive counsel of womanhood, encouraging education, desiring the advancement of religion, supporting the cause of justice and honor among the nations. America seeks no earthly empire built on blood and force. No ambition, no temptation lures her to thought of foreign dominions. The legions which she sends forth are armed, not with the sword, but with the cross. The higher state to which she seeks the allegiance of all mankind is not of human, but of divine origin. She cherishes no purpose save to merit the favor of Almighty God."

WHY GOD IS NOT REAL.

This brief editorial is written simply to stress and call attention to an article under the same heading, republished elsewhere in this issue, from Christian Work. We imagine that every pastor in THE SUN family who reads the article in question—and many will read it—will have a most cordial and hearty amen. Dr. Frederic Lynch, for he is the author of the article in question, has gone straight to the mark and makes out a case that no one can successfully refute or deny. God is not real to many of us for no other reason than that stated, namely: we will not let Him be real to us. We crowd Him out of most of our thinking. How can He be real when we do not think of Him enough to allow Him to seem real? We crowd Him into an hour's service on Sunday, when the atmosphere and surroundings speak of unreality, vagueness, far-offness—and then complain that "God is not real to us." We wish every SUN reader may read, ponder and inwardly digest what Dr. Lynch has said on this subject.

SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

Church mission secretaries, members of missionary societies, mission superintendents of Sunday schools, and missionary committees and pastors in the Virginia Valley Central Conference are hereby reminded of the school of missions to be held at Mayland Church on the first Saturday in May. All the above-mentioned persons are also urged to see to it that every Church in the Conference has one or more representatives at this missionary meeting.

The services are to begin at 10 A. M., and will continue only one day. Interesting speakers are to be present, and a large part of the time will be given over to open conferences and discussion. No Church or society can afford to miss this school of missions, and every one is urged to begin to plan now to spend the day with us.

J. F. MORGAN,
Conference Mission Secretary.

HEAVENLY RECOGNITION.

By Rev. Mills Barrett.

Dear Friends,—According to appointment and at the special request of a friend, I shall today preach a sermon on the comforting and consoling doctrine of "Heavenly Recognition." And, as it is a special subject and preached by special request, and as there are many things that I desire to say that might be forgotten or overlooked in an extemporaneous sermon, I have departed from my regular custom and have written this out and will read it. I will take my time in the reading of it, and hope the hearing of it will comfort your hearts as much as the preparing of it has comforted my poor heart.

I have spent hours of deep thought and much study upon this, to me, profoundly interesting subject, and will give you the result of that study. The text that I have selected for this occasion will be found in Paul's first letter to the Thessalonians (2:19-20): "For what is our hope or joy, or crown of rejoicing? Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at His coming? For ye are our glory and joy." We have lost friends. Loved ones have faded from the circle of our acquaintance. Little ones who once gladdened our homes with their smiles and songs are gone. Our mothers that taught us to lisp our evening prayers are with us no longer. Our fathers, where are they? A voice from the grave answers. Our wives, the sharers of our sorrows and partners of our joys, have left us broken-hearted and disconsolate. Ah!

"Friend after friend departs—
Who hath not lost a friend?
There is no union here of hearts
That finds not here an end."

'Tis sad to think of our friends dying, leaving us motherless, wifeless, childless; but in death are they lost? forever annihilated? No, these dear-loved ones have taken to themselves the wings of angels and flown away to the spirit land. Reason and revelation tell us that those dear departed ones still live in the home of innocense and love above. They are there among the angels of God, clothed in the robes of immortality, their brow flushed with the dawn of endless youth, and in their hands palms of victory.

One of the most interesting questions connected with these departed friends is, shall we know them when we get to heaven? Will the mother recognize her child there and know it as her child? will they be as strangers who never met before?

"Oft weeping memory sits alone,
Beside some grave at even',
And calls upon some spirit flown—
O say, shall those on earth our own
Be ours again in heaven?"

Revelation, as well as reason, teach us that we shall know our friends in the land of spirits; that parents shall recognize their children, and children their parents, and friends their friends there; that the love which exists between the mother and the child, and between friends, will survive death. This doctrine meets one of the deep wants of the soul and satisfies the earnest longings of the heart, for we all earnestly desire to know our dear departed loved ones in heaven.

In our text, Paul informs his Thessalonian brethren that they will be his crown of rejoicing in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at His coming. He did not know that they would ever meet again on earth, but he expected that they would be with him when Christ comes the second time without sin unto salvation. This was already his joy, for he was glad in the prospect of such a meeting. He had been instrumental in their conversion, and knew that they would shine as stars in his crown of rejoicing forever and ever. How could Paul cherish such a hope as this, unless he believed that he would know his brethren there? The manner in which he speaks of them shows that he expected to know them when they met in the presence of Christ. How could they be a crown of rejoicing to him there unless he had been instrumental in bringing them to Christ? If Paul had this hope of heavenly recognition, then we also may cherish the same, for one will have no advantage over another in this respect in heaven. If the apostle will be able to recognize those who were converted through his instrumentality, why shall not the mother be able to know her children there? If Paul hoped to meet and rejoice with his Thessalonian brethren in heaven, then the Christian parent may cherish the blessed hope of a reunion with his children there. In another passage, Paul intimates the same doctrine. "Knowing that he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise us up also by Jesus, and shall present us with you." When the apostle wrote this he was at Philippi, where he was greatly persecuted, and he intimates to his Corinthian brethren that their trouble may ever bring the mto death; but this he did not dread, for it could neither destroy nor separate them from each other, "for he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise us up also by Jesus, and shall present us with you."

How could this be unless he should be able to know them in that day? If there is no such thing as heavenly recognition, he would not know whether his Corinthian brethren were there or not. In a similar passage, he says, "We are your rejoicing, even as ye also are ours in the day of our Lord Jesus" (2 Cor. 1:14). He is here speaking of the mutual help and happiness which he and his Corinthian brethren had enjoyed together and affirms that this will be to them a source of mutual rejoicing "in the days of the Lord Jesus." This implies that they should know each other in that day. And Paul says again, "Now, we see through a glass darkly and only know in part; but, then, in heaven we shall see face to face, and know even as we are known." This to me is one of the plainest proofs of the comforting and soul-animating doctrine of heavenly recognition.

We find this doctrine in the teachings of Jesus Christ. Speaking of the duty of Christian benevolence, He says, "Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness, that, when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitations" (Luke 16:9). The most natural interpretation of this text is that those whom the good man befriends here in this life by his charity and has thus made his friends, will receive him with songs of welcome into the heavenly world. How can this be unless they will know each other there? Matthew records a very remarkable incident in the history of our Saviour: "And, after six days, Jesus taketh Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into a high mountain apart, and was transfigured before them; and His face did shine as the sun, and His raiment was white as the light. And, behold! there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with Him. Then answered Peter and said unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here; if Thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles—one for Thee, and one for Moses, and one for Eliah." Moses and Elias had lived in different periods of the world, six hundred years apart, yet we find them here together and acquainted. The disciples also recognized them. If they were able to know each other, though they had never met on earth, certainly we will be able to recognize our children and all other loved ones there.

Our Saviour, speaking of the heavenly enjoyment under the figure of a feast, "I say unto you, that many shall come from the East and West and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob in the kingdom of heaven." Luke adds: "And all the prophets." Here all the prophets and patriarchs are represented not only as being together, but as engaged in social intercourse, as at a feast where familiar friends meet and new acquaintances are formed. There can be no meaning in this passage unless it means that those patriarchs and prophets know each other and that those who come to sit with them would know them also. This passage clearly proves the doctrine of heavenly recognition. Here our Saviour represents heaven under the idea of social life analogous to that of earth; that in this heavenly communion exists all the warm and familiar social intercourse that characterizes the associations of dear friends on earth. This idea runs through all his allusions to the future state of man—and does not this clearly imply the doctrine of heavenly recognition? Take away this doctrine and you rob heaven of one of its richest sources of happiness. Well, what has the poet said:

"The saints on earth, when sweetly they converse,
And the dear favors of kind heaven rehearse,
Each feels the other's joys, both doubly share
The blessings which devoutly they compare.
If saints such mutual joy feel here below,
When they each other's heavenly foretastes know,
What joys transport them at each other's sight
When they shall meet in impyrial height?
Friends, even in heaven, one happiness would miss,
Should they not know each other in bliss."

This idea is more fully expressed by the Saviour in the following passage: "In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself: that where I am, there ye may be also." Here the sorrowing disciples are pointed to a "Father's house," embracing many mansions. When we survey the happy and lovely scenery of nature, and gaze on the sunlit prospect, in which every object is adorned with beauty, and hear the sweetest melodies wafted on the breeze, we reason like this, if this world wasted by the curse, be yet so fair, what must be the beauty and glory of the Father's house when all God's family are ultimately gathered together, and enjoy all the social endearments of an eternal home. This the place Christ will prepare for them.

He says, "I go to prepare a place for you." Then they are all to be collected and enjoy each other's society for even as one family. How can this be without their knowing each other? It is impossible to conceive. Can they be thus together in constant social intercourse through the countless ages of eternity without reviving their former connections on earth? How is it possible for them to be with the Saviour, know Him, and remember their connections with Him on earth, and not recollect each other? Heaven surely is the place of reunion and mutual recognition, and this hope is truly transporting.

"O renowned day!" exclaimed the Roman orator, "when I shall have reached the divine assemblage of those minds with which I have congenial predelictions and shall escape this untoward and uncongenial throng." The Saviour said to the weeking Mary, "Thy brother shall rise again." This he said to comfort her; but there would be no consolation in this if she could not

(Continued on Page 8.)

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The tendency in America is toward the cities. This tendency is fraught with danger to the republic. Ancient empires perished through their cities. No rural people have ever gone backward unless they were driven backward by more powerful peoples. Babylon may serve as example of city failure. The American Indians may serve as a rural people driven back by more civilized people. Nations are built upon natural and rural resources and not upon city populations. Farms, rivers, forests, mines, and the industry of rural populations in these fields are the foundations and the wealth of the nation. Waste or decay in any of these resources tends to impoverish the nation. It is as wasteful to decrease the rural population as to destroy the forests. This age is destructive of trees and rural population. Modern methods of business and education, of medicine and Church activities, all emphasize the value of city conditions as against rural conditions. Everything except the hard work must be done in the cities.

Consolidated schools and kid wagons are on the increase, and country schools are dying. Highways are constructed in favor of towns and cities, paralleling railroads and neglecting great country areas. Agriculture suffers by city industrial hours and wages. This process of education is false in the final analysis. Housing, fuel, food, clothing, are all less in the country, and the same wage for farm labor is not as necessary as it is for workers in mills and shops in cities where rents, food, clothes and petty necessary expenses are much greater. What the writers call a "living wage" does not touch the real question, but is based on the ideas of men whose lives are easy because their pay is large. The realities of life are largely overlooked in the idealism of impractical teachers and leaders. To take children from the country to school in town is to wean them from the country. It is true that part of the country population should go into city positions and life; but country population should no more be depleted than country forests; and education should develop people for the place they sought to dwell, the work they ought to do, and the life they ought to live. The whole tendency is to rob the country of country schools, country stores, country shops, country doctors, country teachers, and country preachers and Churches.

Then the writers enquire with heated zeal and anxiety, "What is to be done for the rural Church?" Education without real spiritual life is a menace to the human race. Modern implements of warfare, as submarines, airships, poisonous gas, bombs, and all the rest, have eliminated courage, bravery, heroism, patriotism and all the nobler elements that once made soldiers great. The elimination of the Bible from the public school is one step toward the overthrow of the republic. It was founded in religion, has been developed through Christianity and country Churches and schools, and will lose national health when city ideals and habits rob the country of her common sense, her simple faith, her contentment, and her love of home. Patriotism is rooted in the home. There is no tie so strong as the ownership of land. The criminals of the nation do not own land. There is no character so stable as that which rests upon its own acres. To care for the country home, Church and school is to safeguard the future of this Christian nation.

W. W. STALEY.

ELON LETTER.

"Kingdom Enlistment Week" began here with two splendid sermons by our pastor, Dr. Alexander, on Sunday, the first of March. Dr. McD. Howsare came on Monday night, flushed with a great victory in Greensboro. This letter is written in advance of results, and is descriptive of the method employed.

Dr. Howsare is a most forceful speaker, and his messages at the evening services and at the chapel hour each morning have been inspiring and uplifting. He could be an evangelist if he should so desire. He prefers, however, to train the membership of the local Church in the technique of soul-winning, so that when he is gone the good work will continue and the Church enjoy the benefits of constant recruiting.

There is no doubt that the permanent results of the method he employs will be greater than the revival type of campaign to which we are so accustomed. There is less emotional display, no public appeals, nothing spactacular. Teams of two visit those out of Christ and, face to face, discuss their entrance into the Christian life. Such personal work helps the soul-winner, strengthens his own faith, makes vitally real the essential things of the Christian program, and once having enjoyed the exhilaration of the soul-winning experience, the layman or laywoman will hunger and thirst to enjoy it again. This is a most decided advantage of the kingdom-enlistment method.

Another item of real value is the rounding up of transfers, whereby those living in the community with Church membership elsewhere are persuaded to join the local Church. This is a very excellent thing. If the community is good enough to live in, it is good enough to belong to Church in, says Dr. Howsare. When we move from one community to another, the Christian takes with him his every interest except his Church membership in many cases. When active Church workers move to other fields, it oftentimes happens that the community to which they move gain a group of excellent citizens, but the kingdom loses an equal number of efficient servants. It ought not to be so. We should pack our Church membership in our grip when we move from the old familiar scenes. Our best work for the kingdom can be done where we reside. Absentee Church membership is lost motion in kingdom service. We belong in every case not to the local Church, but to Christ. Kingdom enlistment week emphasizes this fact and aims to capitalize it for the kingdom of our Lord.

The wonderful results that Dr. Howsare is achieving wherever he goes are a startling and convincing testimony to the efficacy of his plan. It is certainly biblical for all Christians to be soul-winners, and whatever is biblical is found to be right.

W. A. HARPER.

A DEFENSE.

I submit that the blessed Word of God—the Holy Bible—when studied under the divine Teacher—the Holy Spirit—will throw light on all theological articles, theses and commentaries written by the wisest, best and most lucid pens, and having passed the censorship of all lexicographers. However, in defense of my article on "Missions," published in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, our Church paper, February 26th, I wish to quote Rev. Charles Carroll Everett, D. D., professor of theology, in his book, "Science of Thought," which has been used as a textbook in Elon College. In this book (page 220), he says: "If a man provides for his family, is faithful to his conjugal relations, is kind to the poor, merely because he recognizes all of these as his duties and is trying to act conscientiously, the development of his character is as yet very imperfect."

A man's character is what he is, and not his reputation.

Again, Dr. Everett says: "Judaism was a religion of law; Christianity is a religion of love. Judaism sought to control the life by a system of external rules; Christianity seeks to control the life by an inward principle of love. Every duty is susceptible of being performed on either of these planes, but none is complete until it has been translated from law to love, until, instead of being the result of a principle of duty acting upon one from the outside, it flows out of the inmost and essential nature of the person who performs the act."

Note, Judaism was; Christianity is. Judaism sought; Christianity seeks.

When Solon was asked if he had given his countrymen his best laws, he answered: "The best they are capable of receiving."

In Christ's kingdom no act, ever so good, can be perfect until it has been translated from the law of duty to the law of love.

"For the love of Christ constraineth us," etc. (2d Cor. 5:14). In this Pauline doctrine, substitute duty for love, then you have, "For the duty of Christ constraineth us," etc. Was Christ indebted to Paul?

Paul, before his miraculous conversion (or Saul, as his name then was) in performing duty as he saw it, stood by, consented to and kept the garments of those who slew Stephen; but when his heart was regenerated and his eyes opened, —duty swallowed up in love—he gloried in afflictions, and his work, though hard, became so easy and sweet and enjoyable. He was then not simply making a living, but living a life.

Peter, a Church member, denied his Lord and Master; but after that ten days' prayer meeting in Jerusalem, he stopped cursing and fervently preached the gospel of Jesus Christ. Under his preaching, we are told, that on the day of Pentecost about three thousand were added to the Church (Acts 2:41).

The law has not been abrogated, duty has not been set aside. Duty carries us to the perfection of the moral law only. The law of Christianity fulfills and comprehends the moral law and there begins the new dispensation, the law of which is the eleventh commandment, or the new commandment—love.

In Christ's inaugural sermon on the mount, He said (Matt. 5:17): "Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill." Then he proceeds to translate all law into love.

In one paragraph of His translation He says: "Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy. But I say unto you, love your enemies," etc.

Duty is a point, a seed plot, out of which, when properly cultivated, may spring love. This is love reciprocal and reflected. It comes from the power of divine love falling upon this seed plot of duty in the human heart, producing a sphere, not a plane; but a sphere of love, the radius of which is infinity and boundary God.

Oh! that the Church of Christ may not encamp around Sinai, but congregate at Calvary and be the seed plot of divine love to a lost world, preaching the divinity of Jesus Christ and not the divinity of dollar.

J. W. PATTON.

Elon College, N. C.

FOREIGN MISSION WORK.

In attempting a presentation of this work, it will, of course, be necessary to confine ourselves to the larger and more general aspects.

1. Ten Years Ago and Today.

First of all, we shall attempt to compare our work ten years ago and today. The facts given are taken from records compiled in the fall of 1914 and the fall of 1924. It must be remembered that the former record is at the beginning of the war, and any progress or failure noted should be considered in the light of this fact. The figures presented, however, will aid us considerably in our appraisal of the work today.

We have the same number of foreign mission fields now that we had ten years ago, namely: Japan and Porto Rico. Following is a comparison of the work during the past decade:

JAPAN.

	1914.	1924.	Gain.
Missionaries	9	10	1
Ordained pastors	13	14	1
Bible women	3	3	0
Organized Churches	15	18	3
Outposts	18	23	5
Kindergartens	2	5	3
Baptisms	59	89	29%
Total Ch. membership.	819	1,694	107%
Total S. S. enrollment.	2,168	3,436	12%
Total contributions	$ 777.90	$ 3,577.04	360%
Pd. on pastors' salary.	308.95	1,064.50	409%
Appropriation	13,390.00	$38,250.00	160%

PORTO RICO.

	1914.	1924.	Gain.
Missionaries	2	5	3
National workers	5	7	2
Organized Churches	5	5	0
Outposts	10	12	2
Kindergartens	0	2	2
Church membership	248	357	44%
S. S. enrollment	663	902	36%
C. E. enrollment	107	214	100%
Total contributions	$ 351.49	$ 994.36	295%
Pd. on pastors' salary.	.....	437.45	...
Appropriations	3,600.00	14,400.52	300%

PROPERTY VALUES.

	1914.	1924.
Japan	$ 20,000.00	$140,000.00
Porto Rico	15,000.00	40,000.00
Totals	$ 35,000.00	$180,000.00

RECEIPTS.

	1914.	1924.
General receipts	$ 20,124.33	$ 45,983.33
Specials	2,138.50	17,611.28
Totals	$ 22,262.83	$ 63,594.61
Permanent fund	$ 4,036.28	$ 15,710.36
Annuity bonds	775.00	5,650.00
Deficit	6,665.43	11,182.74

A few comments are in order. During the past ten years we have actually sent to Japan four new missionaries, but three of them proved to be only replacements, making the net gain only one. We have sent five to Porto Rico in that time, but two were compelled to return, leaving a net gain of three. While we have increased by only one native pastor in Japan and two in Porto Rico, we have in reality had four or five exceptionally well-trained men come in to take the places of men retiring. And while we had only one or two young men training for the ministry then, we now have seven in Japan and others coming.

A very commendable gain in Church membership is shown, it being 107 per cent in Japan and 44 per cent in Porto Rico.

The biggest gain has been in the contributions of the national Churches, which show a 360 per cent increase in Japan and a 295 per cent increase in Porto Rico. This increase on the part of our brethren across the seas is not quite matched by our foreign mission giving here, which shows an increase of 186 per cent last year over 1914.

Our property values have increased from $20,000 in Japan in 1914 to what we believe is a conservative estimate of $140,000; and in Porto Rico from $15,000 to $40,000.

In the face of severe economic difficulties crowned by the disastrous earthquake of 1923, the Japanese have steadily increased the support of their own pastors, the increase last year over 1914 being 409 per cent. Until three years ago, the Porto Rico Church had not begun the support of their own pastors. Last year they gave for that purpose $437.45.

2. Adapting Our Work to Changing Conditions.

On the fields we have sought to gradually adapt ourselves to changing conditions. Christian kindergartens have been found to be particularly helpful agencies for Christian teaching, and in both fields these are now thoroughly established. Taking advantage of the Japanese love of reading, a leading library of Christian books is reaching out by mail to many inquirers. The teaching of our missionaries in the public schools in Japan opens up great opportunities to reach the young men, and in recent years we have seen much accomplished with young women through sewing, cooking and singing classes. In the matter of buildings, too, we have sought to reflect the spirit of Japan by erecting for Church and parsonage and kindergarten use combination buildings after Japanese patterns. Our attention is now turning to the great opportunity for rural work, where, particularly in our northern field, we have a great opportunity.

During these ten years we have built or acquired in Japan two Churches, two parsonages, one kindergarten building, one new mission home, and three splendid combination Church-parsonage and kindergarten buildings. In Porto Rico we have acquired three mission homes, one parsonage and the new Church in Santa Isabel, especially designed for Christian education work.

Perhaps the outstanding step we have taken in the effort to adjust ourselves to changing conditions is that of forming what we call a co-operative board, composed of an equal number of Japanese and missionaries, who direct together much of the work.

In Porto Rico, the great step was in the establishing of the industrial work which has done so much to meet human needs, both nationally and spiritually.

In both fields, the past few years have witnessed unusual progress in co-operative work, and in the light of the great pronouncements made at this Convention regarding such effort, we are glad to say that the Christian Church in Porto Rico is one of the seven co-operating boards conducting, with marked success, a Union Theological Seminary, a Union Printing Press for the publication of Christian literature, and a Union Evangelical Association, whose slogan is "Porto Rico for Christ." In Japan, we co-operate also in a seminary, and literature society, and numerous other union enterprises, the most comprehensive of which is the great Japan Christian Council, in which missionaries and Japanese of all denominations work together for the winning of Japan to Christ.

We firmly believe that it is good business, and makes for the efficiency of kingdom work for us, as a Church, to unite with other Churches in types of work vital to our growth and yet which no one denomination can carry on successfully alone.

In both of our fields, we have reason to believe that we are now the best organized we have ever been to carry forward the work committed to our hand.

3. Present Needs.

As for our present needs (they are one), namely: sufficient funds to carry on the work already begun. There is little use now to talk about anything else. I am not forgetting the fact that a great volume of prevailing intercessory prayer needs to pour out of our hearts for this work, but I believe that right now the sincerity of our prayer-life must stand the acid test of sacrificial giving to the cause for which we pray.

There are overwhelming opportunities for new work on the fields. We ought to increase the scope of our industrial work in Porto Rico. Kindergartens in both fields ought to be multiplied to reach the thousands of children for whom we are definitely responsible. A visiting nurse should go to our Porto Rico field to bring health physically as well as spiritually to the 70,000 people living in our field without a knowledge of sanitary methods. At many points, Church buildings are needed to replace the rented shacks now being used. For every new missionary sent out, a home ought to be built. In a great suburb of Tokyo are forty thousand working people, where we have the only Church at present, and these hungry folk look to us for the ministry we ought to give them in Jesus' name. Hundreds of Japan's best young men—her future leaders—could be reached for Christ if we could establish Christian dormitories to care for them in their college days. The great northern field offers almost limitless possibilities for evangelism.

Yes, the fields are open to us, opportunity faces us on every hand, the need to increase our work confronts us all over our present fields. And not only that, but some of our finest young men and young women are prepared and ready to go. Young people from our own homes and our own Churches and our own schools ready to go to our own fields, where more than a million souls wait for the Christian Church to bring them the gospel. But we dare not think of accepting these new opportunities; we dare not think of sending these young people out. We must put them off with an indefinite answer, or frankly tell them it is no use to think of going until the Church rises to the one great need with money to carry on the work already begun.

Our present missionary force is handicapped and hampered on every hand because of lack of proper equipment. These capable, consecrated men and women must live on the mission fields and daily witness the tremendous needs and challenging opportunities, but because of lack of equipment they are forced to let much of it go by untouched. And all because the Church at home has not yet awakened to the greatness of the task.

When the Church is aroused and our present great financial burden is relieved, then, and not until then, can we think of advancing. But when the Church does respond as she should and as we confidently believe she will, we shall see such progress as we have never before witnessed.

The Christian Church should meet this present situation by raising immediately the present indebtedness, and then not content with so small an accomplishment she should give as God has prospered her until we shall be able not only to properly equip our present work and workers, but until we shall be able to meet every young man and young woman who comes to us ready for service, with the assurance that we will send them out to fulfill their Lord's command. The Christian Church can do this thing if she will.

W. P. Minton,
Foreign Mission Secretary.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

IN THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson is the Stewardship Secretary in this Convention. He invited me to assist him in holding ten stewardship institutes following the Washington Foreign Missions Convention. The institutes lasted one day and evening at a place. Noonday luncheons were served at the Church, and much time was thus saved for the institutes. In many cases the evening meal was at the Church. The pastors gave fine co-operation. Numbers of them attended two of the institutes, so that they might get all phases of the work, for they could not all be discussed at any one institute. Some of them drove fifty or seventy-five miles. Those pastors will be able to assist Dr. Atkinson in carrying the stewardship message and plans to every Church in their respective Conferences. Stewardship secretaries in the Conferences gave fine co-operation. Miss Gertrude Brown, field secretary for the Woman's Mission Board, attended seven of the institutes, assisting in several, thoroughly preparing herself to carry the stewardship message as urged by the General Woman's Board to all the Churches and women's gatherings. She rendered valuable service. Some of the subjects presented and discussed were: "Aims and Objectives of the Stewardship Department"; "Spiritualizing Our Gifts to the Church"; "The Scope and Principles of Christian Stewardship"; "How to Make a Church Budget"; "What is the Work of the Finance Department (or Committee) in a Church"; "Ten Points in a Successfully Financed Church"; "Tithing"; "How to Conduct the Every-Member Canvass Successfully"; "Teaching the Children Stewardship"; "Paul's Financial Plan"; "Stewardship in the Scriptures"; "How to Put a Stewardship Program into the Local Church"; "How to Develop the Grace of Giving"; "Practical and Available Stewardship Helps"; "Church Financial Plans."

The sessions were always open for questions and discussion. There was no attempt at speeches. The people brought their note-books, pencils and difficult problems. The institute always closed with a round-table discussion. They were ten full days, and the places were all strategic centers—five in North Carolina and five in Virginia. All Churches were urged to select a stewardship secretary who shall be the head of a stewardship department in the Church. Each Conference was asked to elect a stewardship secretary. Institutes were at—

Greensboro.—Dr. C. H. Rowland, pastor. This Church has just completed a $15,000 parsonage, and is beginning to talk a new Church building. They were already planning for a kingdom- enlistment campaign under the direction of Secretary Howsare.

Burlington.—Where the last general Convention was held; Dr. G. O. Lankford is pastor. This Church supports its own missionary, Miss Stacey, and has its own religious education director, Miss Moffitt.

Durham.—Where Rev. Stanley C. Harrell is doing splendid work and the Church goes forward in fine shape. They have recently remodeled and enlarged their plant.

Raleigh.—Dr. W. D. Parry, the able and energetic pastor, is reaching out into the capital city with a strong message. They have just completed their fine new stone Church, costing some $120,000. It is a beauty.

Henderson.—Here Rev. A. H. Hook is pastor. His father was once the pastor of my boyhood home Church at Huntersland, N. Y. Dr. D. A. Long, president of Antioch College, when I took both my B. A. and M. A. degrees, was present throughout the institute. Rev. J. A. Henderson, president of Franklinton Christian College, was present and offered prayer.

Driving that beautiful Sunday morning from Raleigh to Henderson, we passed Franklinton College and halted long enough to greet a few of the faculty and students. Thus we completed the five institutes in North Carolina and entered Virginia.

Holland was the first, and Monday did not prevent a good meeting. Rev. James Lightbourne is pastor, and is alive to the needs of the day. Dr. N. G. Newman had a fine delegation from his Holy Neck Church, and he accompanied us the next day to the—

Franklin institute, where Rev. F. C. Lester is the new pastor. He is also chairman of the stewardship committee of the Eastern Virginia Conference.

Suffolk was next in order. It has two pastors —Revs. W. W. Staley and H. S. Hardcastle— and they are both busy men. The day was rainy, but Bethlehem and other Churches, nevertheless, had delegations present. I think Dr. Harward had all of his Churches represented.

Norfolk, Christian Temple, Dr. L. E. Smith, had delegations from Newport News, Portsmouth (both Churches), Berkley (First Church), with Revs. Smith, Earp, Scott, Truitt, Dowding, Crawford, present. All these will co-operate with the Conference stewardship committee in bringing the message to all the Churches.

Richmond.—Dr. W. T. Walters, pastor, closed the series with a deep interest. The work there, so young, seems to be going nicely. All the Churches were urged to put on the every-member canvass annually in a thorough manner; to use the duplex envelopes, to have a carefully prepared budget, and to thoroughly inform the membership as to the needs of the work. The work will be further studied in the Eastern Virginia and the Piedmont Ministerial Associations. At nearly every institute several Churches were represented by earnest workers.

Warren H. Denison.

GREATEST MISSIONARY CONGREGATION.

It is claimed that North Carolina in these latter days leads in many particulars, some quite worth while, others not to be boasted of. There is one item of leadership and of superiority in which we think all peoples and faiths in the State will indulge a pardonable pride.

Dr. Julius Rickter, possibly one of the greatest authorities on missions in the world, a professor of missions in the University of Berlin, Germany, tells us that there is no other Church—that is to say, local congregation—in the world that is doing as much for missions as the First Presbyterian Church in Durham, N. C. This one congregation supports twenty-two home missionaries and furnishes one-half of the support of another. It supports seventeen foreign missionaries and furnishes one-half of the support of four others. This is a distinction indeed, and if any other congregation in the United States surpasses this, we have not heard of it. Think of this one congregation doing as much in the way of sending out missionaries as some whole conventions or denominations!

HEAVENLY RECOGNITION.

(Continued from Page 5.)

still, and that he would know him as such. He that Christ meant that he would be his brother understood him in this sense, and how full of comfort the thought of a reunion in heaven!

"Oh, blessed scene! when severed hearts
Renew the ties most cherished;
When nought the mourned and mourner part;
When grief with life is perished.
O! naught do I desire so well
As here to die, and there to dwell."

That we shall know one another in heaven is obvious from the fact that our memory will continue in the future life. That this earth is remembered in the spirit world is clearly taught in the Scriptures. The rich man remembered his former condition, and the five brothers he had left behind on earth. The redeemed in heaven remember their former lost estate, the nation to which they belonged, and who it was that redeemed them. John, in a vision, saw the mighty host of redeemed and heard them sing: "Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals, for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation." These facts show conclusively, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that memory survives death, and lives in the land of spirits. How can memory exist in a future state or life without our recognizing each other? How can we remember our redemption here and the kindred to which we belonged, and not know those kindred? Is this reasonable to suppose?

"Is ignorance found in the spirit home?
Is memory left in the dust?
Then, shall we not feel that we stand alone
As strangers among the just?
And can it be so, that in the city of light,
Where love is unfading and joy ever bright?

Is darkness found in that cloudless sky,
Vailing the life just passed;
Forgotten the friends who saw us die,
All faithful and true to the last?
And can it be so, shall we meet no more
When this feverish dream of life is o'er?

Then where is the pastor's "crown of joy?"
And where the reward of the saints employ;
And why do we cherish this restless love,
If all will be lost or forgotten above?
Oh! can it be thus, in that blessful place,
Where we see the redeemed ones face to face?"
Old associations are deep-seated and precious, and there is ever a strong desire to revive them. A desire after our friends is one of the first emotions of the soul when we enter a strange land. Our love for them begets this feeling. We think of them, enquire after them, and long for their presence with us. How can this memory and these feelings exist in heaven without leading to recognition? We will not only remember this world, but also our friends who have preceded us there, and one of the first enquiries of love will be for them. I look to recognize again through the beautiful mask of perfection the dear familiar faces of those I have loved on earth. I shall talk with them, with graceful tongue, of the storms and perils through which we have passed to gain fair Canaan's flower land.

The love that we cherish for our children here will survive death and will live in heaven. There are loves that will perish with this life—loves founded on self-interest and passion will pass away with the causes that produced them; but the know him in the resurrection state. It is evident pure love of the parent for the child is immortal. It will live when time is no more.

"They sin who tell us love can die;
With life all other passions fly,
All others are but vanity.
In heaven ambitions cannot dwell,
Nor avarice in the vaults of hell;
Earthly, these passions of earth,
They perish where they have their birth.
But love is indestructable,
Its holy flame forever burneth—
From heaven it came: to heaven returneth."

Blessed is this land of partings, is this glorious hope. Those fond looks of love, those smiles of joy, those cheerful expressions of countenance that faded away in the dark night of death, are still shining in heaven radiant with the beams of love. Oh! blissful thought that our love never, never dies!

The sacred singer of Israel, David, when his child died, said, "I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me." This thought was evidently a source of comfort to him. Yet it could be no consolation to him unless he expected to know his child there. What comfort would it be to him to go where his child was if it were to remain an eternal stranger to him? When he says, "I shall go to him," he evidently means I shall see him again, I shall know him again, I shall embrace him again. How sweetly sings the poet:

"My little one, my fair one, thou canst not come to me,
But nearer, dearer the numbered hours when I shall go to thee;
And thou, perchance, with seraph smile, and golden harp in hand,
Mayst come the first to welcome me to my Immanuel's land."

Then we shall not only meet our children, but we shall know them as such. Death takes us away from some friends, but it takes us to others. It separates, but it also unites. More than half of some families are already in heaven. They look forth from their home of innocense and purity, radiant with the light of love, watching for the coming of the other members of the family. This thought throws an influence around the heart that draws it up to heaven. The wife of Little Wolf, an Iowa Indian, died while in Paris of an affection of the lungs brought on by grief for the death of her young child in London. Her husband endeavored to comfort her and restore the love of life; but she constantly replied, "No! no! my four children recall me; I see them by the side of the Great Spirit. They stretch out their arms to meet me, and are astonished that I do not join them."

"No! no! I must depart
From earth's pleasant scenes, for they but wake
Those thrilling memories of the lost which shake
The life-sands from my heart.
Why do you bid me stay?
Should the rose linger when the young buds die,
Or the tree flourish when the branches lie
Stricken by sad decay?
Doth not the parent dove,
When her young nurslings leave their early home
And soar on joy's wings to heaven's high dome,
Deserted grove?
Why, then, should I remain?
Have I not seen my sweet-voiced warblers soar
So far away that love's fond wiles no more
May lure them back again?
They cannot come to me:
But I may go to them, and as the flower
Awaits the dewy eve, I wait the hour
That sets my spirit free.
Hark! heard you not a sound!
Sweeter than wild birds' note or minstral lay
I hear it echoing round.
It is the tuneful chime
Of spirit voices; 'tis my infant band
Calling the mourner from this darkened land
To joy's unclouded clime.
My beautiful, my blest!
I see thee there by the Great Spirit's throne,
With winning words and fond beseeching tone
They woo me to my rest.
They chide my long delay,
And wonder that I linger from their home;
They stretch their loving arms to bid me come—
Now, would you have me stay?"

We will not only renew old associations in heaven, but will also form new acquaintances. There we will meet the pious of all ages, and become acquainted with them. The disciples that were with Christ on the Mount of Transfiguration became acquainted there with Moses and Eliah, who had lived and passed away centuries before they were born. Christ says, "That many shall come from the East and West, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven. This implies that they shall become acquainted with such men as the patriarchs, prophets, apostles, holy martyrs, and the eminent servants of God in all ages. Who does not desire to become acquainted with such noble characters as Milton, Lock, Newton, Wesley, Whitfield, and Washington! We are familiar with the books of many who lived and passed from the shores of time long before we were born. Their pictures have hung in our homes until they seem like personal friends. When we meet them in heaven, we will doubtless be able to recognize them at once. Southy, in his ode on the portrait of Bishop Heber, suggests that many of past memories will gaze upon his effigy with reverential love till they shall grow familiar with its lines and know him when they see his face in heaven. There is, no doubt, truth in this beautiful thought. A writer says, "A little girl in a family of my acquaintance, a lovely and precious child, lost its mother at an age too early to fix the loved features in her remembrance. She was beautiful; and as the trend of the heart unfolded, it seemed, as if won by that mother's prayers, to turn instinctively heavenward. The sweet, conscientious and prayer-loving child was the idol of the bereaved family. But she faded away early. She would lie upon the lap of a friend who took a mother's care of her, and, winding her wasted arms about her neck, would say, "Now tell me about mamma." And when the oft-told tale had been repeated, she would ask softly, "Take me into the parlor; I want to see my mamma." The request was never refused, and the affectionate sick child would lie for hours gazing on her mother's portrait. But pale and wan she grew, bearing all her pains. The fatal hour came at last, and the weeping friends assembled to see the little child die. The dew of death was already on the flower as its life-sun was going down. The little chest heaved spasmodically. "Do you know me, darling," sobbed close in her ear that voice that was dearest; but it awoke no answer. All at once a brightness, as if from the upper world, burst over the child's colorless countenance. The eyelids flashed open, and the lips parted, the wan curdling hands rose up, in the little one's last impulsive effort, as she looked piercingly into the far above. "Mother!" she cried in transport and surprise in her tone, and passed with that breath to her mother's bosom. No doubt, she saw her mother, who had come to conduct her up to heaven, and knew her through the means of the picture upon which she had so long and fondly looked.

My own dear little boy lay dying, the clammy sweat had already gathered upon his pale brow, when even a beautiful and heavenly smile lit up his face which caused him to resemble an angel. I shall never forget the sight when he called, "Sister Adelia, here's my Ma!" a friend near said, "My son, your ma is in the other room," thinking that he had reference to my present wife, when he replied, "I am speaking of my own mother," and, pointing upward, he said, "There she is; she is surrounded with beautiful birds and others are with her." The friends around thought him delirious. I said, to show that he was in his right mind, "My son, can you tell me what time it is by the clock?" "It is five minutes to four," said he, which was correct, and in one hour more, with that same brilliant and joyful smile upon his countenance, his freed spirit was escorted, no doubt, by that mother to the mansions of glory and joy in heaven.

That child, no doubt, saw his dying moments, and recognized her as his own dear mother. The idea that we shall meet and recognize our children and other friends in heaven scatters the gloom that hangs around the grave, robs it of its terrors, and enables us to give up with the cheerfulness of hope. If we were to meet them only as strangers in heaven, it would rob that bright world of one of its brightest charms, and cast a dark shadow over our souls. This cannot be; it is at war with our nature and the spirit of our holy religion.

"Some tell us that earthly love must die,
Nor enter the heavenly land;
That friendship is not above the sky,
'Midst the happy and joyous band.
And can it be so? On that blissful shore
Shall we meet the loved we have lost no more?
They tell us that those unseen on earth
Shall be dear as an only child
And the mother beloved who gave us birth
Shall he met as the savage wild;
And can it be so in that land of love—
Are there no joys of reunion above?"

Parents, your absent little ones are not lost, your parents are not lost—they have only gone to the home of the pure in heart. When you reach heaven and you shall meet and recognize your own it will be a great consolation. It takes away the bitterness of separation. Death will only take you from home on earth to another. Rejoicing in the hope you have of reunion with eye of faith to see your sainted loved ones in glory, death is no terror. I have loved friends in the better land, and I live in hope on my way there. Oh! tell me not, cold despair, we shall not know each other there. Stand back, bold scepticism, the divine hand has painted a halo of light athwart the path and points forward to a happy death for friends and loved ones, and they shall meet again and they shall be happy in each other's society and be happy together and sing the song of redeeming love throughout the endless ages of eternity.

Dear congregation, hope on and take courage, for we shall know each other there. And may we not hope that this will stimulate us to greater activity, clearer inspiration, and enable us to bear our trials and bereavements patiently, knowing that presently death enable us to realize the dreams of earth, and then, with our loved angel friends, we will be carried to the home of the soul, the general assembly of the first-born in heaven. There we shall grasp anew the hands of our redeemed friends and with them forever in the presence of the God and Father of all.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

March 22, 1925.

Subject: "The Forty Days and the Ascension."

Golden Text: "Ye are witnesses of these things.—Luke 24:48.

Lesson: Luke 24:13-53.

Devotional Reading: Psa. 24.

Reference Material: Matt. 28:16-20; Mark 16:14-20; John 20:24-31, 25; Acts 1:1-11.

The title of the lesson includes two very distinct, but closely related truths. For there is a distinctive message from the forty days of Jesus' life and activity on the earth after the resurrection, and there is an equally distinctive message from the Ascension at the end of the forty days. And yet the messages are a unit in their testimony to the central facts that concern the human Jesus as the divine and eternal Christ. We will consider them separately and in their relation to one another.

The gospel accounts of the activities of Jesus during the forty days emphasize the fact that had already been established by the resurrection—Jesus Christ had arisen from the dead and was alive. When we consider how much is involved in the question as to whether Jesus Christ really did arise from the dead, we will see the significance of these gospel records. For if Jesus Christ did not rise from the dead, He was not the Son of God. His life and teachings had borne testimony to the fact that He was divine, but as Paul says, He was declared to be the Son of God with power according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead" (Rom. 1:4).

Whenever Jesus spoke of Himself as the Son of God in connection with His death on the cross, He always added that "on the third day He would rise from the dead." There is no mistaking the fact that the resurrection is vital in Christian thinking. "If Christ be not risen from the dead!—well, the whole thing is an idle dream, and we are of all men most miserable. But the testimony of the gospels—and certainly they are trustworthy records—bears witness in no unmistakable way to the fact that Jesus Christ showed Himself alive after His passion by many infallible proofs. Not only on one occasion and to one person, but on many occasions and to many persons over a period of forty days, He walked with them and talked with them and convinced them that it was He who was dead and was alive forevermore. There are elements of mystery in the story. For instance, how could a person who had such an intangible form that he could go through a door when it was shut, partake of broiled fish? Or how could one who had been talking with two men suddenly disappear from their sight? But back of all the mystery—and we must remember that whenever we deal with Jesus Christ, we are dealing with one who was the great miracle of all time—there is the foundation that standeth sure—Jesus Christ is alive. Christianity pays no homage to a dead hero; it worships a living Lord.

In connection with Jesus' activity during the forty days, it is significant to note that He continued to teach His disciples. As Dr. C. R. Erdman says, "He opened their minds that they might understand the Scriptures, and the facts which He impressed upon their minds are luminous with truths that are needed by the disciples of Christ today—the Scriptures contain authoritative messages concerning Christ; these messages can be understood only by those who believe in Christ and are guided by Him; the essential truths concerning Christ center in the facts of His death and resurrection; in witness of the salvation thus secured, repentance and forgiveness of sins can be preached; this salvation is to be proclaimed to all the world; the followers of Christ are the messengers by whom this good news is to be made known; the power for such proclamation is imparted by the spirit of Christ, who was manifested in new power on the Day of Pentecost, and who is now an abiding presence and a source of limitless strength to all who seek to do the will of Christ and glorify His name." They were to be His witnesses of these things, and they were to begin right where they were. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear this message of the Risen Lord.

The forty days ended with the ascension. He had gone with them over against Bethany, and He lifted up His hands and blessed them. "And it came to pass, while He blessed them, He parted from them, and was carried up into heaven." Luke says, in Acts, "A cloud received Him out of their sight." In one sense, the cloud has remained, for when we ask some questions we find ourselves groping in the mist. "How did He rise?" "To what height was He visible?" "Where did His body go?" "What became of His garments?"—these are questions which might be asked by those whose eyes have not been opened to the spiritual truth of the ascension. For when we speak of the ascension of Christ, "we do not mean that He went up and up and up until at last He arrived, no one knows where. We mean that He withdrew His visible, local, tangible presence from the eyes of men. He went into that unseen world of spiritual forces which are everywhere and forever effective." The story of the ascension tells us that the living Christ Jesus of the resurrection had become an ever-present presence which could be seen, not with the physical eye, but with the eye of faith, and could be enjoyed by the responsive soul through all the years to come. And in the light of this truth, His disciples are not to stand gazing into the heavens; they are to go out to spend and to be spent in that great movement of thought and feeling which would at last disciple all nations, baptizing them into the divine helpfulness of Father, Son and Holy Spirit.

Teaching Points.

1. Common-place roads and tasks become immortal when the Master walks with us.
2. The central fact of the ascension of Christ is not His physical remoteness, but His spiritual presence.
3. There may be differences among Christians as to the nature of the resurrection body; there must never be any difference as to the fact that there was a resurrection body.
4. Jesus Christ is universally accessible to all.
5. The risen Lord is the occasion for repentance for and the assurance of forgiveness of sins.
6. The spirit of Christ is essential to the proper understanding of the Scriptures.
7. Christ's message was "Peace be unto you."
8. Jesus Christ is often revealed in the simple acts of every-day life.
9. An understanding hand produces a burning heart.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

March 22, 1925.

Subject: "What Can We Do to Win Others to Christ?"

Scripture: 1 Pet. 3:8-16; 1 Thess. 1:8.

Song: "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee."

Leader: "O Jesus, Thou hast promised to all who follow Thee, that where Thou art in glory there shall Thy servant be; and Jesus, I have promised to serve Thee to the end; O give me grace to follow my Master and my Friend."

All: "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John 3:16.

Prayer: That each member of the Christian Endeavor Society may become vitally interested in winning others, and that the meetings may be such as will inspire a deeper devotion on the part of the members and may lead those who are not Christians to Christ.

Song: "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind."

Sentence prayers.

Other hymns which may be used: "Rescue the Perishing," "Work, for the Night is Coming," "Jesus Calls Us," "O'er the Tumult."

Suggestion for Leader's Talk.

The Church has no greater work than winning others to Christ. The Church as an organization came into being that Christians might worship together, that they might enjoy the fellowship which comes from communion together, and that they might have some definite means of winning others to the Saviour. As this is the purpose of the Church as a whole, so it should be the purpose of the individual members. They should never be satisfied until they have won their friends and all whom they have a chance to. This was the purpose of the Christian Endeavor Society as it was organized by Dr. Clark over forty years ago. This should be the purpose of this Christian Endeavor Society.

Ways in Which This Christian Endeavor Society Can Win Others.

1. Christian lives on the part of the leaders and members of the society. Living daily the high principles of living set forth in the Christian Endeavor meetings.
2. Such programs as will interest people who are not Christians in the Church and Sunday School. Do we always present the Church to others as attractive, and do we represent the Church to others as good members?
3. Special planned campaigns for winning others.
4. Talking personally with C. E. attendants who are not Christians.

What the Scripture Reference Says About Winning Others.

(1 Pet. 3:8-16.) (1) Love others. (2) Keep from speaking evil to others and about others. (3) Do good. (4) Seek to be peaceable. (5) God is caring for those who serve Him, and no harm will come to them. (6) "Be always ready to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you, with meekness and fear." That is to be a witness for Him. (7) Live a Christian life.

Does God Expect Me to Win Others?

He expects me to bring others to Him because Christianity is not worth much to any one if it is not the kind we would like to pass on to others. If it can save us, it can save others. It is unChristian and unselfish to keep the good for ourselves. We cannot be Christians and deny Christ to others. Christ gave us numerous direct commands to go and speak with others. This is the spirit of the entire New Testament. We believe in personal liberty and freedom to every one to form his own religious convictions, but we must

(Continued on Page 11.)

Christian Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

Our friends are becoming interested in our new building fund. My friend, Jesse F. West, Jr., of Waverly, Va., sent us a subscription for $100 this week. Bro. Jesse is always interested in the progress of our denomination and wants to see us do greater things. Our people should be interested in the growth of our institutions. If our institutions do not grow, how can we expect our denomination to grow? Our institution cannot grow unless our people make some sacrifice and give of their means to help them grow. Some people seem to get the idea that when money is given to the college and the Orphanage or missions, that it is gone forever; but that is the wrong way to look at it—it is not money given away. It is money invested, and well invested. For years and years, our denomination had no college, and we did not have an educated ministry, neither did we have an educated leadership; and did you ever think how slow we did grow and what poor progress we made as a denomination? Our Elon College has been in existence a little more than thirty years. We are educating our people for the pulpit and the pew, and we are growing in number and in influence, and we will grow faster as the years go by.

Have you thought of the many beautiful Churches we have built in the last few years and the larger work we are doing both in the home and foreign fields since we have become interested in missions and have contributed of our means to help these institutions of our Church. I am proud of every dollar I have invested in Elon College. I only wish I had more to invest. I see it is a wise investment. I am proud of every dollar I have invested in home and foreign missions. When I visit the many beautiful Churches that have been helped by our Mission Board and see the wonderful progress that is being made, I am happy and wish I had more dollars to place in that field. I see it is a most excellent investment.

Then, have you stopped to think that in the year 1907 we opened the doors of our Orphanage for the admittance of children. Yes, fatherless and motherless children without an opportunity in life. Do you know that since that date two hundred and fifty-two little children have had a home here? One hundred and forty-two have gone out to meet the problems that life brings to them. We hope by their stay in our Orphanage and the training and help they have received, they will be better prepared to face life each day. I feel proud of many of our children who have gone out, because they have reflected credit upon the institution that tried to mother them in their young and tender years. As we see the great results of the work our denomination has done and is doing in this line of its work, we are happy that we have had an opportunity to invest in our Orphanage work. It is a fine investment.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR MARCH 12, 1925.

Amount brought forward		$2,302.62
Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Mebane	$ 1.25
Catawba Springs	4.62
Chapel Hill	2.53
Ebenezer	5.00
		13.40
Western N. C. Conference:
Burlington	$ 84.30
Randleman	2.25
Ramseur	10.38
		96.93
N. C. & Va. Conference:
Main St. Ch., Durham	$ 5.00
Pleasant Ridge	1.55
Summerfield	1.03
Liberty	1.00
		8.58
Eastern Virginia Conference:
Union Surry	$ 3.00
Isle of Wight	2.50
First S. S., Richmond	6.56
Ocean View	2.17
		14.23
Valley of Virginia Conference:
Leaksville	$ 2.17
Dry Run	3.00
Winchester	8.09
		13.26
Georgia and Alabama Conference:
Richland, Ga.	$ 1.34
Beulah, Ala.	1.50
Kite, Ga.	2.31
		5.15
New Building Fund.
Miss Ora Scott, Mrs. J. A. Scott, Mrs. E. H. Davis		10.00
Special Offerings.
J. T. Jones, pledge on baby home	$ 15.00
R. B. Wicker, support of Edna	30.00
W. W. Brown	15.00
A. M. Allred	20.00
Chas. D. Johnston,, for Fields children	60.00
Philathea Class, Elon, N. C.	.90
Garland Horner	6.50
J. F. Burnett, Secy., Dayton, Ohio	23.76
		171.16
Grand total		$2,635.33

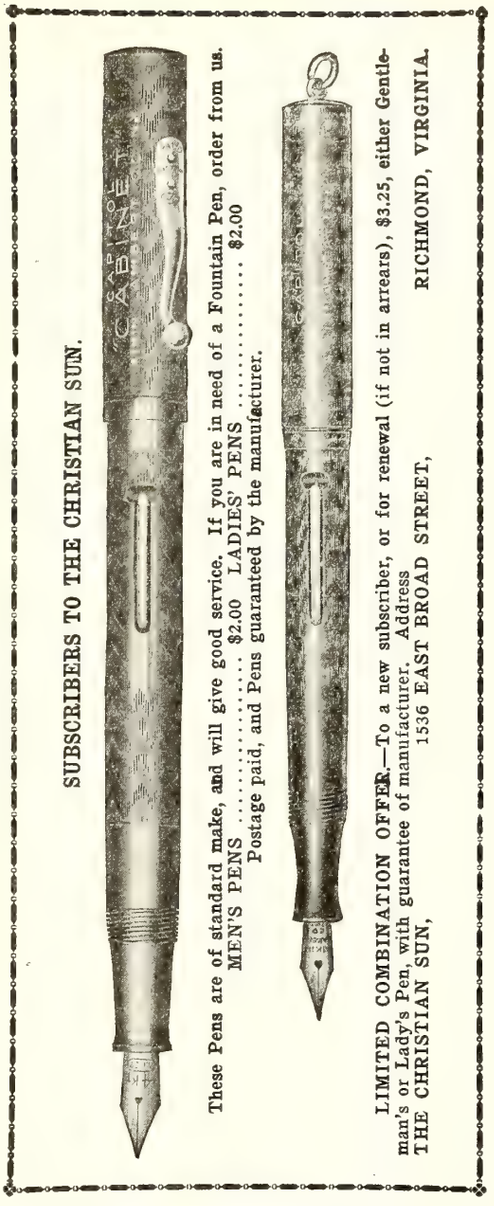
(Continued from page 10.)

give people a chance to think for themselves by starting them in the right direction—God-ward.

Speaking to Others.

We may speak to others of Christ through our own lives, by our words and deeds. "Let your light so shine that men may see your good works and glorify the Father." Many people have stayed out of the Church because of the lives of the so-called Christians. This is an altogether wrong attitude because it is judging the greatest and most powerful force in the world by a few, nevertheless it should cause us to be very careful of the kind of lives we live. A Christian should be the same all of the time.

We may speak to others personally about their religious convictions. We may win our friends by our conversation with them from time to time. Maybe our friends are holding us up to a certain standard and would be disappointed in us if we should fall below this. A girl once almost worshiped her high school teacher because of his splendid character. He represented the best to her because he always seemed to do just the right thing at the right time. But one day she saw him eating a "bean" sandwich, and her high opinion of him changed. To this high school girl, eating a bean sandwich was an undignified thing to do, and she was disappointed in him. And in the same way, our friends may be disappointed in us because of the little things we do. Many young people have been won to Christ because of the rich Christian lives of their Sunday School teachers more than what their teachers have said. A true Christian life seems to radiate goodness.



SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CHRISTIAN SUN.
These Pens are of standard make, and will give good service. If you are in need of a Fountain Pen, order from us.
MEN'S PENS ..... $2.00 LADIES' PENS $2.00
Postage paid, and Pens guaranteed by the manufacturer.
LIMITED COMBINATION OFFER.—To a new subscriber, or for renewal (if not in arrears), $3.25, either Gentleman's or Lady's Pen, with guarantee of manufacturer. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN,
1536 EAST BROAD STREET,
RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Mission Study Books.

Official List for 1924-1925.

ORDER BY TITLE OF BOOK.

FOR ADULT CLASSES.

For Home Mission Classes:
"The Romance of Home Missions," by S. L. Morris, D. D.. Paper, 50c; cloth..... $ .75

For Foreign Mission Classes:
"Ming Kwong—the City of Morning Light," by Mary Ninde Gamewell. Paper, 50c; cloth .75
"In China," by H. F. Williams, D. D..... .25

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

For Intermediate Home Mission Classes:
"The Land of All Nations," by Margaret F. Seelbach. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75

For Intermediate Foreign Mission Classes:
"China's Real Revolution," by Paul Hutchinson. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75

For Junior Foreign Mission Classes:
"Chinese Lanterns," by Minna McEwen Meyer. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... .75

LEADERS' HELPS.

Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Adult Classes) ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Young People's Classes)..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Land of All Nations"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Ming Kwong"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "China's Real Revolution".. .15
Leaders' Helps for "Chinese Lanterns"..... .15

Send all orders to—

THE CHRISTIAN SUN,
1536 East Broad Street - - Richmond, Virginia.

WHY GOD IS NOT REAL.

One of the commonest complaints a pastor hears when he gets on a confidential footing with men is that religion is not real to them as other things are real. Business is real, family life is real, play is real, politics are real, friendships are real, the town, the city is real—all these things are real, common, felt and understood, but when it comes to religion, that is—direct communion with God, the consciousness of spiritual contact with the unseen, that is not real. One who has had much contact with college youth constantly runs up against this feeling. The studies are real, football is real, fellowships are real, pleasures are real, but communion with God is not. The preacher preaches, the prayers are repeated, the hymns are sung, but any sense of communion with God as real as converse with a friend or the sight of a sunset, is impossible.

The consequence is that many, finding this real sense of communion with God impossible, come to the conclusion that the religious sense has been left out of them. When they have reached that conviction they very naturally begin to doubt if it exists in any one. Those who think they find God real are laboring under a delusion, they say. What one cannot feel himself or does not feel, he is apt to consider a delusion in others. This is of course the most illogical act the mind ever indulges in. It does not follow that if Wagner does not thrill me that he does not lift my neighbor into paradise on waves of tone. It does not follow at all that if a line of Keats or a sight of a Watteau landscape means nothing to me, it may not make my neighbor tremble. It does not follow if a starry night moves me not it may not take my friend's very soul out of him. Perhaps the realest things in the world are those which are not real to us. The man who laughs at the emotion a symphony or a picture or a poem or a landscape produces in other souls is simply proclaiming his own poverty. It is what the seer meant when he said, "The fool hath said in his heart there is no God." He was a fool, not because he could not see God, but because he denied others the power to feel and did not himself try to find Him.

Now, the pathos of all this is not that there are souls incapable of realizing God in the same direct, intimate, full sense in which they realize the things of this world, but rather in the fact that this lack of reality is due not to any congenital incapacity to experience unseen things, but simply to the fact that the reason these other things are real and communion with God is not is because all the waking hours of the week are spent in touch with the world, and only one hour a week or perhaps not even that, in touch with heaven. Always the real things of life are the things we are continually touching and thinking about. Things that we seldom think of always seem unreal to us. There is the fault, not the incapacity to know and experience God. It is the thing we practice that becomes real.

Nowhere has this been better expressed than in a recent sermon by Dean Inge before some Oxford undergraduates. We quote at some length, it is so helpful.

"Most men, during their working and playing hours, are chiefly concerned with concrete things. Even students are more occupied in loading their memories than in contemplating ideals. And so when we try to turn our thoughts to God, when we kneel to pray or endeavor to remember heavenly things at spare moments we find it very difficult. Our minds do not work easily or naturally on these subjects. There is something forced and unreal about our meditation or devotion. We find that we are not really praying at all, but only repeating words mechanically. And then comes the temptation to say: My religion is a sham, an unreality. I wonder if the religion of others is only make-believe, too? Now, I have one or two remarks to make about this. In the first place, it is quite natural and inevitable that if we spend sixteen hours daily of our waking life thinking about the affairs of this world and about five minutes in thinking about God and our souls, this world will seem about two hundred times more real to us than God or our souls. That must be so, however real and important the spiritual world may actually be. The fact that it seems unreal is no argument that it is unreal, if we hardly ever think about it. Things that we do not think about always seem unreal to us. Do not, then, argue that God is unreal because He seems unreal to you. Ask yourselves whether you have given Him, or rather yourselves, a fair chance."

The first step, then, for one who finds God unreal is to begin thinking about Him and practicing His presence. Most of us, even religious people, give God only one hour a week. The rest of the week we give to worldly things. Of course, they are real and God is not. Suppose we began to give God some part of each day. Suppose, for instance, that we began and closed the day with prayer. Suppose that now and then in the course of the day—at noon, or when alone in shop or field or office or home or on the street—we stopped and thought about God and spiritual things if only for a moment. Suppose we read our Bibles each day and other books that deal with the things of the Spirit. Read Mr. Philip Cabot's story of his enlightenment, and how he found God simply by reading the Bible and some religious books, while he was laid up with illness (see "Except Ye be Born Again"). Mr. Cabot is a well-known business man who belonged to that class that could not make God real. He admits that the reason was the one we are considering. He was living all the week with things—none of the time with God! What might happen if all of us spent as much time each day with the literature of God and the soul as we do with the newspaper! We need not enlarge on this. We simply want to emphasize Dean Inge's contention that the things we live with are always the real things, the world we live in the real world. If we live with God He will become as real as our family; if we live each day in the kingdom of heaven it will become as real as the streets of the city.

The other point we should like to emphasize is: Do not become discouraged if at first the realization of God does not increase quickly. Remember, you have been neglecting Him a long time. You do not even quite know the language of heaven. Practice will remedy this; each day's prayer will bring comprehension of the new world nearer. The man who goes to hear the symphony week by week soon learns the language of music and enters a new world. The man who frequents the art galleries soon comes under the spell of their wonders. He who reads the poets every day soon finds himself at home in the new world of beauty. He who lives and talks with God soon finds God the real and great companion.

Also, while you are seeking, learn to trust the saints. The man who knows God is just as much to be trusted when he talks about the things of the Spirit, as Mr. Huxley when he talks about the world of nature, or Mr. Lyell when he talks about the rocks, or Mr. Edison when he talks about electricity. The saints are the scientists of the soul, and their evidence in the world of the spirit just as much to be trusted as Mr. Edison's in the world of light or Mr. Burroughs' in the world of birds. Let us quote Dean Inge again:

"The saints are our masters in the spiritual life. They have the same kind of authority in their own sphere that the great poets and musicians have in theirs. We sit at their feet and learn from them what we are able to assimilate . . . the great saints have been men of genius, no less than Handel or Shakespeare. Why should we not trust them on their own subject?"—F. L., in Christian Work.

IMPORTANT MEETINGS.

Following a series of stewardship institutes in the Southern Convention, your Stewardship and Promotion Secretary attended two important meetings at Atlantic City. One was a meeting of the promotional secretaries of the various denominations. This meeting is held annually. A careful analysis was made of the promotional plans employed by the various denominations for the last few years. The present plans now used were thoroughly gone into. In nearly every denomination, as in ours, the plans of the promotional organization are being incorporated into the activities and program of the Church. Such subjects as the following were discussed: the annual every-member canvass; resenting the budgets of the denominations so as to make them live, grip the imagination and secure a more vivid attention from our people; permanent functional agency be concerned only with raising finances; what are the most effective methods of enlisting cooperation in the local Church; the advantages of having an organization in the local Church with which the denominational promotion agencies may maintain close contact; is the benevolent giving of this time larger than in the past generation in proportion to income and expenditures relatively as spent for self and pleasures. Such were the questions that were faced by this earnest group of leaders.

The second meeting was a committee on financial and fiduciary matters of the Churches. One hundred Christian leaders in this line had been assembled by the Federal Council to consider particularly the administrative side of the Churches' financial interests.

This meeting overlapped the first meeting at both ends, and the promotional secretaries were invited to attend all the sessions they could. Some of the subjects considered were the safeguarding of funds through bookkeeping, accounting, audits, the making of budgets, legacies, endowments, annuities, the acceptance and management of trusts, the building up of endowments, investments, permanent and endowment funds, the ethics involved in investments administered by religious organizations, wise public giving, the making of wills, legally drawn and wisely conceived, gifts through insurance, and many other kindred subjects.

These meetings simply go to show the ways and care that are being shown how to care for the Lord's money. This meeting was composed of treasurers, financial secretaries, lawyers, those who have to do with the handling and administration of funds for the kingdom. They were most suggestive and helpful.

WARREN H. DENISON.

The only existing copy of the June, 1923, issue of trade returns, published by the Japanese government printing office, is one mailed to the United States Department of Commerce a few hours before the earthquake which burned the others.

Galileo's discovery of the pendulum was put to use to perfect a clock, before which time no pendulum clock had ever been made.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

DEAR KIDDIES:

Your editor has a slight case of "flu" and is too ill to work, so I'm writing to you once more.

I wonder if you remember "Rusty" and "Dynamite"? Rusty is just as spoiled and lazy as ever and very jealous of Dynamite, who is a huge, husky fellow now and tireless in his efforts to play. I wish you could see them both. They are wonderful dogs, and give us such marvelous returns in love for the little kindnesses we show them.

I hope the children of the "Kiddies' Korner" are all feeling good and are getting along nicely. Our school has a junior music club, and recently they entertained the Parent-Teachers' Association with a doll show and program. All the invited guests carried their dolls and placed them on the stage, where they could get the full benefit of the program. Then all the members of the club sang and played and read for the audience, and the teacher was out in the auditorium, while only the dear little president of the club directed for them and played their accompaniments. It was splendid, and they did everything so well. Wish you could have been here.

I am sure, if all goes well, that your editor will be back on the job even before this letter is printed.

Some day I will tell you about some little tots that are friends of mine, as perhaps you are tired of dogs. Good-by. MRS. T. A. MOFFITT.

FROM A "KIDDIE."

My dear Editor:

This is my first letter. I hope you will like it well enough to publish it. My grandmother takes THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and after she finishes with it she gives it to me. I read the "Kiddies' Korner" and the stories. I like them. I hope we will have a good story next week.

I am a girl, thirteen years old. I have two sisters, one fifteen years old and one five years old. I have two brothers, one ten years old and one eight years old.

Your sincere friend,

Waverly, Va. ANTHIER VIRGINIA SHARPE.

TOT'S SELFISHNESS.

Aunt Addie shook her head dolefully behind the library curtain and sighed as she said to Aunt Lou, "Isn't it a dreadful pity that a child as bright and loving as Tot should be so spoiled and selfish?"

"Spoiled? selfish?" Aunt Lou asked, amazed; "why, Addie, you surprise me. I thought her as sweet and good as she could be."

"Then, it's because you haven't watched her as I have. Only yesterday I saw her trade her marble-bag to Dick for a big orange, and then pocket the fruit deliberately, although the twin babies were both hungrily waiting for her to share with them. I suppose she was waiting for a chance to slip off alone and eat it all herself."

"Perhaps she wanted to surprise them with it later," Aunt Lou suggested timidly.

"Nonsense!" her sister snapped. "Besides, not two hours afterward, I saw her climb the tree and pick off half a dozen of the very ripest peaches. To be sure, she did give one to each twin then, but I noticed she kept the four that were finest herself."

"Why, Addie! this is really quite dreadful. We must not let another day go by without trying to correct her of this monstrous fault. Her own mamma was the most generous and unselfish little body alive, and I can't help thinking that even in heaven it would grieve her if she could know of Tot's becoming greedy and selfish. But I can hardly believe it of dear little Tot."

While she was speaking, Aunt Addie was leaning farther and farther out of the window. "Well, I do wish you'd come here," she said with slow emphasis. "Look at that." And Aunt Lou did look, and what she saw nearly brought the tears to her pretty brown eyes. There stood Totty up against the dining-room wall, her arms full of daisies and bluebells, and there before her stood Dimple and Dot, the twin babies, begging with all their baby might for a bunch of the pretty blossoms.

"Surely she'll divide in a minute," Aunt Lou said. But though they strained their eyes, they saw no sign of relenting, and "the little pig," as Aunt Addie began to call her, only held her blossoms more tightly.

"You'd pull 'em to pieces, baby dears," they heard her say; "and I need 'em myself"—and off she went running, with Fido racing after her. They saw her stop, turn and hurry back again to the twins. Aunt Lou drew a breath of relief, saying softly, "She'll divide yet, you see"; but Tot only drew from her bunch two tiny flowers, handing one to each bright-eyed baby. "There, you darlings, I couldn't take them all from you; perhaps you need them, too," she said, and went speeding off again with her armful.

"Well, if that doesn't beat all," Aunt Addie said, crossly. "I suppose she thought she was very generous to give those two stingy little blossoms to the babies. Get our hats, Lou, I'm just going to follow that child and tell her what I think of such selfishness."

In a very little while she and Aunt Lou were hurrying toward the arbor, where they had seen Tot's tiny figure disappear a moment before. Screened by the heavy vines, they watched the busy little girl within. On her knees, they saw her hard at work with her blossoms, tying them into dainty clusters with strong bits of grass, and laying them bunch by bunch into the cool-looking little moss basket beside her. And all the while she was chatting with Fido as though he could really understand her thoughts.

"There, doggie dear, don't they look sweet? I 'most wish I could keep one little bunch to pin at my own lace collar; but mustn't, you know, 'cause they are all, all—what is that word that means things for God's other folks, and not for yourself? Anyhow, that's what they are. And now they are all ready, Fido, and you may come, too; but I couldn't take anybody else or tell about it, for that would be letting my left hand know what my right hand is doing, and that's what Mr. Wylie said we mustn't. Come."

And off they were again, Tot with the flowers and Fido almost bumping into the two aunties as they ran, yet too excited to see them.

Aunt Addie's face was a study. "Do you suppose she's going to turn flower girl and sell them to buy the wonderful doll-stove she talked of so long?" But Aunt Lou only shook her head in a puzzled way and followed down the path, keeping the merry little girl and her four-footed friend in sight. "I'm going to settle this thing," Aunt Addie said, hurrying.

At the turn of the road they saw the child dart into a shabby little house, and presently dart out again. On they followed, only to see one time after another the same swift little trip into some cottage and then the little racer hurrying on again. Finally, the aunties could stand it no longer, and when for the sixth time Tot turned into a gate at the wayside the aunties boldly turned in after her. It was rather a tumble-down place for so thriving a town, and the aunties hesitated about entering. Lingering at the doorway, they heard Tot's clear little voice with its cheery ring. "Did she like the peaches, Mrs. Flynn? I put 'em in the 'frigerator to keep 'em good and then ran all the way so she could get 'em before the cool melted out. I had a fever once myself and I know how you love to have your presents cool. I've brought these daisies today and the pinkest rose. She can't eat 'em, but they're so pretty I thought she'd like to have 'em any way just to look at."

"Sure, you little visitin' angel," Mrs. Flynn was heard to reply; "the peaches cooled the poor child as nothing has this fortnight, and between the fruit and the flowers and yer own little face comin' in like the sunshine, I think we'll have a well girl here instead of a sick one. Bridget Inness said it was the same thing ye were afther doin' for her Tommy till the doctor said there wasn't any spring tonic could stand beside ye."

The two aunties stopped to hear no more, and Aunt Addie was clearing a funny little choke in her throat as they beat an undignified retreat.

"So that's our spoiled, selfish, greedy little Tot," Aunt Lou said in her quiet way.

"I think I'll apologize to her when she comes home," Aunt Addie said slowly. "No, Lou, better yet; I'll not let her know how naughty I thought her, and my apology shall not be words, but tin-tin, four-sided, with a pipe and tiny little kettle on top. God bless the little girl, who sneaks her oranges off by herself, consecrates her flowers, and keeps from her left hand what her right hand doeth."—Herald and Presbyter.

QUARTERLY REPORT.

The following is the quarterly report of the Woman's Home and Foreign Mission Societies of the North Carolina Conference:

Women's Societies.
Burlington	$145.45
Danville	2.50
Durham	27.00
Elon College	59.40
Henderson	2.00
Mt. Auburn	44.20
Pleasant Grove	15.60
Pleasant Hill	5.55
Raleigh	8.40
Reidsville	4.20
Sanford	15.00
Shallow Well	20.55
Union, Virgilina	38.21
Union Ridge, N. C.	1.80
		$ 389.86
Cradle Roll.
Elon College	$ 2.55
Graham	2.82
		5.37
Young People's Societies.
Burlington, Junior		10.95
Willing Workers.
Burlington	$ 4.85
Mt. Auburn	12.00
Wake Chapel	4.60
		21.45
Total		$ 427.63

Henderson paid to Rev. M. T. Sorrell, for Rocky Ford Church building, $10.70.

MRS. W. R. SELLARS, Treas.

The chimes from the four huge bells that make up the new carillon of the basilica in Quebec are far sweeter than those of the old bells destroyed in the fire of December, 1922.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, it hath pleased our Heavenly Father to call from labor to reward Bro. W. H. Honeycutt, who was for more than thirty years a member of the Main Street Christian Church, and who during that time served his Church faithfully and well as a deacon, as Church secretary, as a Sunday School teacher, and in such other capacities as his Church saw fit to call him; therefore, be it resolved:

That we, the members of the board of deacons of the Main Street Christian Church, express our thanks to God for the life of Brother Honeycutt, and for the many years that he was spared for the service of his Church. And that we bow in humble submission to this decree of the Father that calls him from us.

That we take this means of expressing our recognition and appreciation of the value of the service rendered by our departed brother in the most critical periods of our Church's history, and we record our sense of distinct loss in his departure.

That we convey to the bereaved family our sympathy and love in the time of their great sorrow; and we commend them to Him, who has promised to be a father to the fatherless and a husband to the widow.

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be spread upon the minutes of the Church, and that a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

Signed on behalf of the board of deacons— D. L. BOON, Chairman.
C. C. MULHOLLAND, Sec.

BRADY.

L. E. Brady, a son of Rev. Wm. Brady, a pioneer preacher of the Deep River Christian Conference, was born July 12, 1851, and died February 27, 1925. He leaves to mourn their loss two children, Mrs. Maxie Brady, wife of E. A. Brady, and Lonny H. Brady; one brother, Milton Brady; fourteen grandchildren and fourteen great-grandchildren.

Bro. Brady was one of our oldest and most highly respected citizens. He was a member of Pleasant Grove Christian Church for fifty-six years, and deacon of the same Church for fifty-one years.

The large congregation that attended the funeral on Sunday, March 1st, to pay tribute to our deceased brother, testified to the high esteem in which he was held.

The Junior Order had charge of the burial services at the grave. Funeral by the writer. G. R. UNDERWOOD.

FIRE TAKES HEAVY TOLL FROM NORTH CAROLINA.

It is evident that North Carolina continues to supply plenty of material for the flames to feed on. Any doubt of this fact is removed by the figures of the State's fire waste during 1923, just issued by the National Board of Fire Underwriters. From its actuarial bureau, the center of American fire loss statistics, the National Board finds that to the grand total for the United States, $535,372,782, North Carolina contributed no less than $8,356,270. (The national figure includes 25 per cent for unreported and uninsured losses.)

This fire loss—which places North Carolina fourteenth among the forty-eight States—compares with destruction of $3,182,034 in 1918. It thus shows an increase in five years of $5,174,236.

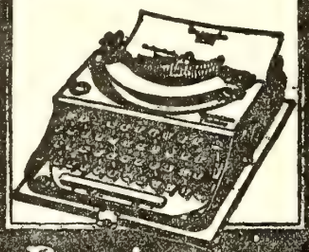
Analysis of the elaborate tabulation published by the National Board establishes the fact that, of the twenty so-called originating causes, sparks on roofs — usually wooden-shingle roofs—was chiefly responsible for this monstrous wastage. Its share of the damage inflicted was $337,638. Following "sparks on roofs" came "sparks from combustion," with $297,669, and "defective chimneys and flues," to which was attributed $263,113 loss. All three fell within the "strictly preventable" or "partly preventable" classifications, which lends support to the contention of fire-prevention engineers that fully 75 per cent of the country's perennial fire destruction always is clearly avoidable because to that extent it is due to public habits of carelessness and to ignorance.

DAHLIAS.

100 finest varieties. Write for Catalog. One extra tuber with each order for $1.00 or more when mentioning this paper.

GUILFORD DAHLIA GARDENS
U. G. Thompson L. C. Thompson
Proprietors
730 Tuscaloosa St. Greensboro, N. C.

Something You Have Been Waiting For



Remington Portable Typewriter

—with Standard Keyboard and every other feature common to the larger machines. Case only four inches high.
Price, with case, $60.
Send Your Order to
THE CHRISTIAN SUN
Richmond, Va.

WINTER TOURIST TICKETS
—ALL RESORTS—
SOUTH AND SOUTHWEST

CALIFORNIA
Via New Orleans and "Sunset Limited."

INFORMATION, ITINERATIES, RESERVATIONS
Furnished in Detail Upon Request.

Apply to Local Agent, or Address
F. H. POSTON, Division Passenger Agent,
Southern Railway System,
809 East Main Street, - - Richmond, Virginia.

WINSTON-INTERNATIONAL
RED LETTER BIBLES
SELF-PRONOUNCING
Bibles and Testaments that Emphasize Christ
All the Prophetic Types and Prophecies in Old Testament and Words of Christ in New Testament are Printed in Red.
Send for Illustrated Catalog
THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO., Publishers
American Bible Headquarters
429 Winston Building Philadelphia

V. E. MAREAN
Pipe Organ Expert
TUNING — REPAIRING
REBUILDING
Motors Installed Yearly Contracts
P. O. Box 864, - Richmond, Va.
Phone, Boulevard 7011-J

Your doctor advises internal cleanliness

HE WILL tell you that the first results of constipation — headache, sleepless nights, biliousness, backache, etc.—warn that the body is flooded with intestinal poisons. In time these poisons may cause the breakdown of health and lead to serious disease.

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favour Lubrication

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. For sale by all druggists.

Nujol
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
For Internal Cleanliness

SHANE.

Joseph H. Shane was born September 24, 1875; died March 2, 1925; age 49 years 5 months and 4 days. He leaves a wife and four children (two boys and two girls), two sisters and a number of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. He was a faithful member of the Christian Church at Pleasant Cross since 1911. Always loyal to the Church, he was secretary of the Church at the time of his death. He was a Mason and was buried by the Masons at Pleasant Cross in the presence of a large congregation of people.

The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. E. Shaw and Bro. Scott, of Franklinville.

JOHN M. ALLRED.

MISSION OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

Mission motives and aims are often misunderstood in the East. Sometimes we are thought of as furnishing the religious side to imperialism. Many of the non-Christians suspect that we are in the pay of the governments; others, that big business is behind us as the forerunners of later exploitation. It is well that we, therefore, clarify the issue and make known our aims and motives.

First, we are not there to westernize the East. I would not turn over my hand to westernize the East. I trust I will give my life to Christianize it. We are not trying to make the East a pale copy of the West.

Again, we are not there to implant western forms of Christianity in the East with no other alternative but to accept them whether or no. Our Christianity must necessarily be through western forms, but we say to the East that she may take as much or little of them as she may finally find suitable to her purposes. However, we are there to give them Christ, and we will allow and urge them to interpret him according to their own national genius and past.

The finished product of the different faiths might be stated to be as follows: Greece said, "Be moderate; know thyself." Rome said, "Be strong; order thyself." Confucianism says, "Be superior; correct thyself." Buddhism says, "Be disillusioned; annihilate thyself." Hinduism says, "Be separated; merge thyself." Mohammedanism says, "Be submissive; bend thyself." Judaism says, "Be holy; conform thyself." Modern materialism says, "Be industrious; enjoy thyself." Modern dilettanteism says, "Be broad; cultivate thyself." Christianity says, "Be Christlike—give thyself."

If the end in view of Christian missions is the production of Christlike character around the world, we have no apology to make, for we knew nothing higher.—Stanley Jones, in the Washington Convention.

An uncollected balance of $15,000,000 on centenary pledges due the Methodist church of the South proves that it is more difficult to pay pledges than to make them.

ELON COLLEGE---CO-EDUCATIONAL

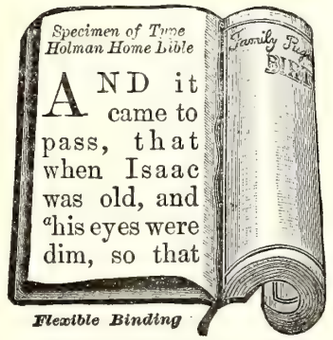
WHITLEY AUDITORIUM BUILDING
One of the Group of Five New Buildings now Completed.

Elon, in her rebuilding program, has been looking to the future. Ten buildings, new and modern equipment, and a highly trained and efficient faculty are at the service of the future leaders of our Church. The phenomenal growth of Elon in the past two years indicates a larger growth throughout the whole denomination in the years just ahead. Make Elon your own Church College in a personal way by your patronage and prayerful co-operation.

HOLMAN BIBLES

For Old Folks and the Home

EXTRA LARGE PRINT WITH REFERENCES



Flexible Binding

Size when closed, 6½ x 9¼ inches

Printed from large Clear Pica Type, with Marginal References, Family Record and Maps. This HOME BIBLE is new and very desirable for every day use, containing all the advantages of a Family Bible in a compact size that can be easily handled, with Record for Births, Marriages and Deaths. The best Bible obtainable for old folks who need extra large clear print and a light-weight book.

No. 2014. Durably Bound in French Seal Leather, full flexible covers, round corners, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, gold titles.

Price—Post Paid 4.85

HOLMAN BIBLES

NEW BLACK-FACED TYPE TEACHERS' BIBLE

The very latest and newest Teachers' Bible published, and it includes every possible improvement in Bible making. The type is a clean, clear, sharp Black Face, which is printed on the finest paper obtainable. Easy to read (can be read in the dimmest light), and is just the page for those suffering from impaired eyesight. Compact in size, light in weight, easy to carry.

Absolutely flexible binding. Contains Old and New Testaments, Treasury of Biblical Information, Practical Comparative Concordance, Oriental Light on the Bible, Four Thousand Questions and Answers, Fifteen New Maps in Colors, about 1500 pages in all.

Size, 5¼ x 7¾ inches.

Specimen of Type

THE LORD is my shephe not want.
2 He maketh me to lie green pastures: he leadeth the still waters.

No. 4412. Bound in Seal Grain Morocco, with overlapping covers, rounded corners, red under gold edges. Silk head bands and silk marker.

Price—Post Paid 4.20

No. 433X. Holman India Paper. Algerian Morocco, Leather Lined, Silk Sewed, Divinity Circuit, round corners, carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and Helps as above.

Price—Post Paid 9.35

MONEY TO LEND ON IMPROVED FARMS--FAVORABLE TERMS

Write for Details

SO. BOND & MORTGAGE CO.
627 E. Main St. - - Richmond, Va.

Medical College of Virginia

Medicine Dentistry
Pharmacy Nursing

New Buildings. Well-equipped Laboratories, under the direction of full-time, competent teachers.

The Memorial Hospital, Dooley Hospital, St. Philip Hospital, are owned and controlled by the Medical College of Virginia, and offer every facility for thorough clinical teaching.

Staffs composed of the Faculty of the College. Additional clinical facilities are offered through other institutions in Richmond.

For full information and catalogue, address—

J. R. McCAULEY, Secretary.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D.....Editor
W. W. STALEY, D. D.....Associate
W. A. HARPER, LL. D.....Associate
R. C. HELFENSTEIN, D. D...Associate
REV. S. C. HARRELL.....Associate
REV. S. M. LYNAM.....News Editor
P. J. KERNODLE....Managing Editor

Subscription Rates.

One Year $2.00
Six Months 1.00

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post-Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows the date of expiration. Please renew at least two weeks in advance.

Change of Address: Give both old and new post-office when asking that your address be changed.

When subscriptions are made for friends, state whether paper is to be stopped at end of the year.

Remittances: Make all remittances to "The Christian Sun," 1536 East Broad Street, Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and Marriage Notices, limited to 100 words, are published free of charge. All over 100 words, published at 1 cent a word. Remittance should accompany copy. Write names distinctly.

Advertising Rates: "Want Ads," 2 cents a word an insertion. Display Rates quoted upon request.

FOR SALE.

A 40-bbl., electric-driven, fully-equipped modern Flour Roller-Mill, Corn and Feed Mill, located right in the town of Elon College, near railroad siding, on acre lot; hard-surface and sand-clay roads leading out in all directions.. A good custom grain mill and good business opportunity for the right man, as well as advantage of a high-grade high school and high-class college.

Terms: Part cash; balance on long terms. Apply—

C. R. LOVE, - - BURLINGTON, N. C.

FOOTBALL AND PRAYER.

The famous Bo McMillin, formerly of Center College, Ky., is to go as coach to the great Geneva College at Beaver Falls, Pa.

This is the man who made piety a part of football practice at Center, and prayer a part of football performance.

When people wonder how you can carry the whole life—the life of business, the life of politics, the life of sports—to the Lord of all life, let their attention be directed to Bo McMillin, who showed the whole football world how devotion to our Lord Jesus Christ can be a part of every purpose of human life and who showed the world how much more powerful is the human creature when animated by the Holy Spirit.

It is not to be doubted that Geneva, with all its sanctified memories and its exalted principles, will give to Bo McMillin and his squad such support as to continue this vital admonition to the world: Everything in life belongs to the Lord of life; and nothing should be attempted in life upon which His blessing cannot be invoked. —Christian Statesman.

WIDOW ELECTED TO CONGRESS.

Mrs. Florence Prag Kahn, widow of Julius Kahn, has been elected to the House of Representatives from California to fill the vacancy caused by his death.

HONORED IN NAZARETH.

The only two pictures in the schoolhouse at Nazareth are those of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, said Joe Mitchell Chapple on returning from a tour of the Near East.

OXFORD TEACHERS' BIBLES

An Oxford Teachers' Bible has references and 300 pages of helps that are a mine of information to Bible students. The helps are arranged in alphabetical order, like a dictionary. They are accurate, comprehensive and up-to-date. A few styles are listed here. Many others are described in our Bible catalogue, mailed upon request.

04403 [This size print] Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 6⅞ x 4¾ inches $4.00

0623x [Same Bible as 04403] Printed on Oxford India paper. Only 1 inch thick..... $6.00

04453 [This size print] French Morocco leather binding, overlapping covers, 7¼ x 5 in. $4.35

0773x [Same Bible as 04453] Printed on Oxford India paper. A remarkably thin and light Bible. (Only 1 inch thick) $7.75

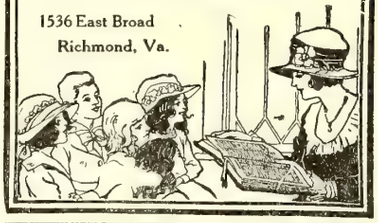
05453 [Same Bible as 04453] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $6.25

05453x [Same Bible as 0773x] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $8.75

04523 [This size print] A self-pronouncing Oxford Bible. Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 8½ x 5½ inches... $5.50

0923x [Same Bible as 04523] Printed on Oxford India paper, only 1⅛ inches thick... $9.75

ORDER FROM
"THE CHRISTIAN SUN"
1536 East Broad
Richmond, Va.



FOR GOOD HOME COOKING
MRS. COOK'S CAFETERIA
805 East Grace Street.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

A Co-Educational School
LOCATED AT
WADLEY, ALABAMA

This School offers the last two years of Academic work and the first two years of College work.

The following Courses are offered in the—

COLLEGE DEPARTMENT: English, Bible, Religious Education, Latin, French, History, Education, Mathematics and Science.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENTS: Music—Piano, Voice; Commercial Department—Bookkeeping, Typewriting, and Shorthand.

Due attention will be given Athletics, such as Tennis, Basket-Ball, Baseball, Football.

The government of the School is mild, but firm, endeavoring to create a home atmosphere as much as possible, not merely to maintain discipline, but to cultivate Christian character.

This is our own School, located within reach of all in this section, and the cost is less than any other College within reasonable distance of those who would attend School from this section.

Send for a Catalogue giving full description of Courses and entrance conditions.

S. L. BEOUGHER, President
Wadley, - - - - Alabama.

HOLMAN BIBLES

FOR CHILDREN
PICTORIAL BIBLES WITH HELPS

The text is self-pronouncing, by the aid of which children can learn to pronounce the difficult Scripture proper names.

Specimen of Type
27 And the boys grew: and Esau was a cunning hunter.
5 And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof.

Size, 5⅜ x 3½ inches. With beautiful photo views of scenes in Bible lands distributed throughout the text. Also maps of Bible lands in colors. Also new Practical Helps to Bible Study, especially designed for instructing children in scriptural information.

No. 9111. French Seal Leather, overlapping covers, round corners, gold edges, gold titles.

Our Price—Post Paid..... 2.30

COLORED PICTURE EDITION

Portraying in natural colors, scenes and places taken from nature and life in the Holy Land.

No. 9211. Same as No. 9111, but with Beautifully Colored Pictures.

Our Price—Post Paid..... 2.40

FOR INTERMEDIATE SUNDAY-SCHOOL SCHOLARS

Large Clear Black Type, Self-Pronouncing, containing Helps to Bible Study, 4000 Questions and Answers, Maps in Colors, and Presentation Page. A Beautiful Gift Bible.

Specimen of Type.
22 And the prophet Is'ra-el, and said unto thyself, and mark, and for at the return of t

Size, 7 x 5 inches.

No. 215. Divinity Circuit Style, Bound in French Seal Leather, round corners, red under gold edges, with silk head bands and purple silk marker, gold titles, etc.

Our Price—Post Paid..... 3.10

No. 3215RL. Red Letter Scholars' Bible, same Bible as No. 215, with all the Sayings of Christ printed in Red, and with Red and gold INLAID PANEL SIDE TITLES, also Beautifully Colored Pictures.

Our Price—Post Paid..... 3.45

Holman Self-Pronouncing

VEST POCKET TESTAMENTS

Clearest Print in Smallest Size
4⅝x2¾x⅝ inches

Specimen of Type.
AND the third day there was a marriage in Ca'na of Gal'i-lee; and the mother of Je'sus was

2133K. Bound in durable Morocco Grain Semble Leather, flexible limp, gilt titles ..... .60

2113. French Morocco, genuine leather, flexible limp, gold titles, rounded corners, gold edges..... .70

2115P. French Morocco, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, with the Book of Psalms included $1.10

ILLUSTRATED VEST POCKET TESTAMENT
With Pictures of Holy Land Scenes

2814. French Morocco, limp, gold side title round corners, red under gold edges ..... .85

RED LETTER VEST POCKET TESTAMENT
With all the words of our Lord printed in red.

13RL. French Morocco, flexible limp, gold side title on red panel, gold edges. .85

15RLP. French Morocco, overlapping covers, flexible, gold side title on red panel, red under gold edges, with Book of Psalms included $1.25

INDIA PAPER VEST POCKET TESTAMENT
Thin as a Wafer

2136XP. Fine Grain Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lined to edge, with Psalms included $2.25

Send Your Orders to
THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY, 1956.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Official Organ of the Southern Christian Convention

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY. IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY. IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXVII. RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, MARCH 19, 1925. NUMBER 12.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

NOMINATION NOT CONFIRMED.—

By a vote of 39 to 41, the Senate has declined to confirm the nomination of Charles Beecher Warren as Attorney-General. The dispute arose from the fact that Mr. Warren, in private life, had defended a case against the government. Some of the most prominent Senators opposed confirmation. Mr. Warren seems very competent to fill the office for which President Coolidge named him, but it seems, too, that a number of the Senators think otherwise. Vice-President Dawes was not present when the vote was taken. He had gone to his hotel to rest, having been assured by both sides that no vote would be taken during the day.

HUGHES STATES A DEFINITION.—

Addressing a men's Bible class at Calvary Baptist Church, Washington, D. C., Ex-Secretary of State Hughes gave a definition of the balanced Christian life. He stated that to live well, one needed to keep his attention on the best things. He enumerated these best things as health, knowledge, loyalty, and faith. Concerning faith, he said that a balanced life consists of the Christian life—faith without credulity, conviction without bigotry, charity without condescension, courage without pugnacity, self-respect without vanity, humility without obsequiousness, love of humanity without sentimentality, and meekness with power. That is our ideal, he declared, and we would all agree with him, no doubt. Such a life would indeed be balanced, and one competent to do the will of Him whom to serve is joy.

LOST TO THE BEYOND.—

Within the past month, death has claimed three men, the like of whom the world cannot too readily spare. James Lane Allen, the author, who has succeeded in making the Kentucky background for stories so particularly romantic. His "Kentucky Cardinal" is an unforgetable story, as is his "Choir Invisible" and his "Mettle of the Pasture." In his passing, the literary world has lost a great figure. Marion Leroy Burton, whose death we noted last week, had a career not so frequent these days, and Robert A. Woods, for thirty-four years head of the university settlement work in Boston, believed intensely in the work he was trying to do, and he kept the social work properly balanced, remembering always that the inner temper of a man counts for much. We can ill afford to spare such men, and we must seek to grow a reserve corps of such noble spirits to replace them as they are lost to the great beyond.

GERMANY'S FIRST PRESIDENT DIES.—

Just four months before the end of his seven-year term, the first German President, Friedrich Ebert, died. The late President began life as an apprentice to a saddle-maker. He appealed to the Socialist party because of his force of character and reliability. They chose him President. He took the position that he represented all the people, and quelled violence wherever it arose. Nothing marks so plainly the difference between Germany the monarchy and Germany the republic as did the procession which accompanied the body of the dead ruler from the hospital to the presidential palace. Instead of the helmeted soldiers who would have marched beside a dead emperor, there was a cortege of men bearing torches. The Monarchist papers admitted, however grudgingly, that he had administered justice justly. The two most prominent candidates to succeed Ebert are Chancellor Hans Luther and Ex-Chancellor Marx. The former represents the Liberal party, while the latter is the candidate of the party of the Right.

PHENOMENAL PROGRESS.—

In 1914, the Southern States were giving 184 negro boys and girls a high school education in eight county training schools. Ten years later, with some private aid, they were giving over six thousand negro boys and girls high school education in 204 county training schools. North Carolina has led in this, as in many other things. In 1914 the South was appropriating about ten thousand dollars, while in ten years the appropriations had grown to something more than six hundred thousand dollars. Higher education for the colored race, too, has received a powerful impetus during the last decade. Last year a number of negro institutions received large gifts. James B. Duke gave $1,800,000 to Johnson C. Smith University. Miles Memorial College, Birmingham, Ala., received $75,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation, and the Palmer Memorial School, at Sedalia, N. C., received a like amount from Mr. and Mrs. Galen Stone contingent on its duplication from other sources. Hampton and Tuskegee were made richer by a million dollars each from George Eastman, Rochester, N. Y., besides a million from the Rockefeller Foundation, $250,000 from an anonymous giver, and $25,000 from the Phelps-Stokes fund, and a similar amount from Mrs. Aaron E. Malone, St. Louis.

These facts mark a vast progress in the education of the negro throughout the South. It was a long time after the Civil War before the South had any money to spend either on children of whites or blacks; but when they could they did. Within the last four years, North Carolina alone has appropriated to four normal schools and to the Agricultural and Technical College, all devoted exclusively to the education of negroes, the sum of $2,200,000. It is the duty of the South, and an excellent investment for the South. Educated negroes will be an asset, not a liability; but ignorant people, black or white, are dangerous in any land. The South has come to realize this, and that accounts for the phenomenal progress in negro education which has characterized the last ten years.

DR. FOSDICK SAYS FAREWELL.—

On Sunday, March 1st, Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick said farewell to his congregation at the First Presbyterian Church, New York City. In his sermon, he declared that during his five and a half years of ministry to that Church he had always stood for the reality of the living God, the Saviourhood of Christ, and the available presence of the Holy Spirit. He declared that he did not believe that the present economic system, the present international system, the present industrial system were Christian. He declared that he hated war and would never bless another. Then the departing pastor told the congregation that he bore them on his heart as heretics were not popularly supposed to do. He urged that they, that day, give themselves to Jesus Christ. He proclaimed that if heresy was what his opponents said it was, he was proud to be a heretic. He would be ashamed to be anything else in the present generation. What he and his Church have been standing for, the minister told his audience, the whole Church will come to, for, he declared, what is heresy in one generation is orthodoxy in the next, and some time the world would wonder why the things for which he stood were ever new and strange. He then pled with his people that, in his going, he should leave behind him not personal partisans. The true leader does not make friends for himself, but draws them on beyond himself to a cause. He then quoted the words of Sir Philip Sidney to his nephew, "Wherever you see a good fight, you had best get into it," and urged the young people of his Church to get into this good fight. His enemies, he said, had but built a sounding-board for him which made his message reach farther than ever he dreamed. "We are saying farewell," he told them; "but not farewell to the cause, not to the verities for which we have stood together."

For the next few months Dr. Fosdick will preach in various parts of the United States, and then with his family he will spend a year in Palestine. The New York Times made his farewell service its leading news story on Monday following, and commented on the sermon and Dr. Fosdick's long conflict with the Presbyterian Church, and declared that Dr. Fosdick need not worry about himself, but that the Presbyterian Church which had done this thing to Dr. Fosdick needed to worry.

NOTES-PERSONALS

The choir of the First Christian Church of Richmond is preparing to render an Easter cantata April 12th.

Dr. W. W. Staley was in Richmond this week to meet a committee on some special State work, and made a welcome visit to THE SUN office.

Mr. Charles Leech Gulick, one of the leading organists of America, will give an organ recital Friday evening, March 27th, at the First Christian Church of Richmond, Va.

Maybe the method of conducting our Men and Millions campaign and collecting pledges has been disagreeable to some, but, at any rate, no higher motive ever prompted any movement, and certainly no movement ever accomplished nobler and better results.

Rev. H. C. Caviness, who recently closed an evangelistic meeting in our Clayton, N. C., Church, after a continuous and very successful service of nearly three months, was to begin a meeting at Liberty, Vance, Sunday, March 22d, assisting Rev. J. E. Franks, the pastor.

What shall it profit if you have acquired books and lost the love of reading; acquired influence and lost the joy of usefulness; acquired power and lost the pleasure of service? He that thus gains his life loses it in the gaining. This is an enigma. Ponder it.—Lyman Abbott.

Total payments on Men and Millions pledges for February were $3,327.92. We trust March, being a longer month, will witness larger payments. If any SUN reader who is due something on pledge failed to pay in February will he or she not make a faithful effort to pay something in March?

As a result of "Kingdom-Enlistment Week" at Elon College, March 1st to 8th, fifty-five persons united with the local Church, fifteen on confession of faith, and the others by transfer. Some fifteen others have signed cards to unite, but were not present last Sunday. As previously noted, Rev. McD. Howsare, Dayton, Ohio, was at the college four days directing the campaign and delivering very helpful and inspiring messages.

Much impaired in health, indeed quite ill, our faithful sister and loyal missionary, Miss Olive Williams, of Salinas, Porto Rico, is returning to the States, hoping to find rest and a return of strength. Rev. D. P. Barrett cabled March 12th that on that day they had put Miss Williams on a boat sailing for New York and that she was quite ill. Prayers will be offered in many a home and sanctuary for the restoration of our dear sister in Christian service.

We are informed by the pastor, Rev. B. F. Black, that they have a campaign on at Rosemont to raise $1,000 for the parsonage, and that they have also a campaign on at Berea (Norfolk) for $3,000 for a new parsonage and hope to break ground July 1st. When this is paid for, Berea hopes to have full-time preaching; and also Rosemont will have full-time preaching, and Sunday Schools at both Churches are at top notch. Berea is having the best Church attendance in years.

Miss Anna B. Palmer is superintendent of religious education and assistant to the pastor in our Washington Street Church, Portsmouth. Miss Palmer has had training for such work and some successful experience. She began work with our Portsmouth people March 1st, and Dr. Dowding, the pastor, writes, March 14th: "Miss Palmer is being received very favorably by both Church and community, and we already feel the benefit of her presence in renewed activities and larger attendance.

What meaneth this movement among the men of the Church? Last week THE SUN told of "The Men and the Church" convention, held in Greensboro, N. C., by the Presbyterian laymen of the State. The Western Recorder of March 12th tells now of "Baptist Men" of Kentucky in a great State gathering at Louisville. The leading spokesman at this convention is quoted as saying, "Meetings like this are a return to the New Testament order. In the New Testament, the laymen were to the front and very active." Dr. G. O. Lankford, Burlington, has organized in his Church a "Men and the Church" society. When laymen begin, as they should, to give their business judgment, time, talent, wisdom, to affairs of the Church, there will be a mighty awakening in kingdom activity.

The following from the Burlington News should be of interest to other pastors and Church members: "The men of the First Christian Church recently organized themselves under the name 'The Men of the First Christian Church.' This organization is to be known simply as 'The Men of the Church.' The purpose of the organization is the cultivation and promotion of the spirit of brotherhood among the men of the Church and the community, and the advancement of the cause of Christ in our midst. It has been decided that meetings shall be held once a month, and the first regular meeting, with a program, will occur tomorrow night at 7 o'clock at the Church. Supper will be served by the Ladies' Aid Society of this Church, and Rev. E. N. Caldwell, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, of Graham, will speak. All members of the organization and the men of this congregation who desire to become members are cordially invited to be present."

Many of us who may at will read our Bibles, never consider what it has cost in martyrdom, death, burnings, crucifixions for us to have the open Bible for our own reading and interpretation. William Tyndall, the man who first dared translate the Bible and print it in the English language, was tried by the Church of his day for heresy, and was strangled to death and then burned on October 6, 1536—eleven years after he had given to the English-speaking world its first Bible in its own language. Tyndall was cruelly tortured and put to death by order of the Church, but the good he had done continued to live, even if the Church did order every Bible in the English language to be burned. Seventy-five years after Tyndall had been strangled and burned, namely: in 1611, the King of England, James I, through the work of forty-seven scholars whom he summoned to the task, gave us what is now known as the Authorized Version, a translation from the Hebrew and the Greek.

BETHLEHEM EXPENSES ARE HIGH.

An appeal is being made for one thousand persons to give five dollars each to meet the deficit on the running expenses of Bethlehem College for this school year, and the following persons have responded: Rev. J. H. Dollar, Carl Jennings, W. A. Jennings, Mrs. Thyra Swint, Mrs. A. M. Johnson, C. A. Weldon, Dr. Job G. Holland, O. O. Mitchell, Dr. J. M. Welch, Mrs. M. M. Welch, J. T. Gibson, Mrs. Eva Gibson, Prof. Herbert Scholz, Purity Drug Company, John R. Harris, Mr. Perry, Zona Stephens, Minnie Evans, Dr. J. T. Clack. Those who gave $1.00 each: Henry Lee Swint, J. J. Carter, Dr. Denney, Mrs. E. M. Carter, Mr. Carter.

We need the money at once in order to carry on our work and pay our teachers salaries. This is in addition to the one hundred thousand dollars asked for in our drive for funds to build and equip buildings to carry on our work. We cannot understand why our people do not respond by the hundreds to this worthy cause. We will look for the $5.00 bills and checks to come rolling in next week, so please do not disappoint us.

Wadley, Ala. S. L. BEOUGHER,
President.

JUDGE B. F. LONG.

(Judge Long was a brother of Dr. D. A. Long and of our late-lamented Dr. W. S. Long, and a college class-mate of Dr. W. W. Staley. Judge Long died at his home in Statesville, N. C., on March 14th, and Editor Clark, of that city, who knew Judge Long many years, wrote of him as follows, editorially, in the Greensbor Daily News, March 16th.)

Whether he ever thought of a scriptural injunction as his motto, Judge Ben F. Long, of Statesville, who has fallen upon sleep, followed strictly the exhortation of the Preacher of Ecclesiastes, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." The distinguishing characteristics of this eminent lawyer and judge were untiring industry and outstanding ability. He was not a brilliant man as that word is commonly understood. He was a worker, a student, a thinker. He kept everlastingly at it. He took nothing for granted, he delved and found it for himself. He was thoroughness complete. With him work seemed to be a religion. He never loafed on the job; he never shirked. In the practice of his profession, in his public service, conspicuous as State's prosecuting attorney and judge, he could have said with the apostle, "This one thing I do." He had natural ability, and none of his talents rusted for lack of use. He re-enforced by honest, painstaking work until he stood among the first of his profession in the State.

Much of the half-century of his life spent in Statesville, Judge Long gave to the public service as solicitor of the county court, Mayor of Statesville, district solicitor and judge of the Superior Court. He was on the bench a little more than twenty-two years. His public service was outstanding. He left his mark as Mayor. He was a noted presecuting officer. He lived up to what he conceived to be his duty and his oath of office as judge. He was not a popular man in the sense that he was hail fellow well met; and seemingly he didn't court popularity. Probably he didn't know how to do so if he tried. But the strong support he always received when he was a candidate was an expression of popular belief in his integrity and his outstanding ability; in his sincerity and his determination to do his duty. His ability, his industry, his devotion to his duty as he saw it was Judge Long's strength with the people, not a winning personality. It is probably the greatest tribute that could be paid the dead jurist—and it is a tribute to merit—that he won popular respect, confidence and support, made a large place for himself, by his devotion to his work and because he gave that work the best that was in him, without consideration of personal popularity.

WAKEFIELD, VA.

It has been quite a long time since we had anything to say through the pages of THE SUN about our work and people of the Wakefield charge. Our work has been handicapped very badly this winter due to the conditions of the roads and so much rainfall. It has prevented us from getting to some of our services, but in spite of all this our congregations have held up nicely. This has been a trying year, so far, on rural work, but we do not find fault, neither do we complain, for we are trusting Him who doeth all things well, and causes good to come out of what may seem to be a handicap.

We are planning to observe the second Sunday in March as foreign mission day in our field. We have the promise of our beloved friend and brother, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, to be with us on that date and will bring us a great message on the subject, which he always does. He will speak at Wakefield in the morning and Barrett's in the afternoon, and Ivor at night. We are also planning to have a get-together day in this field some time in the spring, when all four of our Churches may come together and become more and better acquainted and formulate some plan, if possible, whereby we may make this field of service a strong one. We find the people ready, and most of them are willing to be used in the Master's cause. We find them generous and big-hearted people. The prayer of the writer and pastor is that he may lead them safely to larger and greater things in the vineyard of the Lord.

G. C. CRUTCHFIELD.

CHRISTIAN CHAPEL.

While the people of the Christian Chapel section knew that Rev. W. J. Stephenson, of the Corinth community, is some kind of an orator and expert in biblical discourse, we, too, took him to be, as Moses of old, somewhat "slow of speech" and probably below the average in the pulpit.

But when our pastor, Rev. J. Fuller Johnson, called him to fill his appointment at our Church the second Sunday, the congregation learned that Bro. Stephenson is old at the work and can perform it to satisfaction. He kept his audience at attention and his sermon was most appropriate and gained the approbation of the large congregation.

Our present pastor, Rev. J. Fuller Johnson, is considered one of the best preachers we have had for a time, but Rev. W. J. Stephens filled his pulpit to the degree of a second, and delivered a sermon that will be long remembered.

Bro. Stephenson was formerly a Primitive Baptist minister, joined the Christian Church here a few months ago, as a deacon, and was ordained at our last Christian Conference as a minister.

Merry Oaks, N. C. A. M. COTTEN.

ALBANY, N. Y.

The First Christian Church at Albany, N. Y., is planning to conduct a community evangelistic campaign, beginning March 15th and continuing for ten or more days.

Rev. W. C. Hook, pastor of the Church, will do the preaching and will be assisted by Rev. J. F. Morgan, of Winchester, Va., director of music and personal work, and Mr. Sam Davis, of Norfolk, Va., the noted blind pianist, and Mrs. Sam Davis, his wife, soloist and evangelistic worker.

Mr. Hook has worked hard and prayed earnestly to launch this much-needed revival in the city of Albany, and we are expecting great things.

CATHERINE M. PARVIS.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

We should be glad to furnish your Sunday School the following supplementary supplies, cash to accompany order:

Improved Uniform Series International Lessons.

1. Bible Lesson Picture Roll, 21x32 inches, per quarter $1.25
2. Sunday School Superintendent (to accompany the Picture Roll), per quarter..... .15
3. Pupils' Lesson Stories, per quarter..... .06

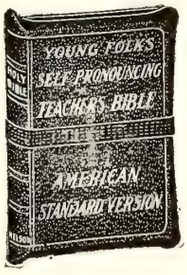
Group Uniform Series, Primary Course.

1. Group Bible Lesson Picture Roll, 16x20 in., per quarter 1.00
2. Group Pupils' Lesson Stories, Primary, per quarter ..... .07

In making order, be explicit and name the quarter for which supplies are wanted; thus: First quarter, January to March; second quarter, April to June; third quarter, July to September; fourth quarter, October to December.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.



These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The Illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the Number and prices.

TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Minion Bold-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4 7-8x 7 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

India Paper Edition, Size 4 7-8x7 Inches, 1 1-10 Inches Thick.

2152X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$6.00

Bourgeois Type, Size 5 3-8x8 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2167—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.00

2172—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.50

India Paper Edition, Only 1 1-8 Inches Thick.

2172X—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$8.50

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3¾x2⅝ inches, and 1 inch thick; with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black.

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations. Special book for Sunday Schools 95c

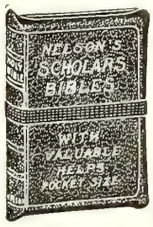
Ruby Type, Size 3¾x2⅝ Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps $2.50

Minion Type, Pocket Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ inches Thick.

With 32 full-colored illustrations; also 25 outline maps through the text and 12 colored maps.

133—Bound in cloth, round corners, red edges, title stamped on side in pure gold $1.60



135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 15-16 of an Inch Thick.

135X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.75

Minion Black-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4¾x 7 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick.

Printed from clear, large, black-face type, 32 full-page illustrations in Sepia and colors, 4,000 Questions and Answers, Harmony of the Gospels, How to Study the Sunday School Lesson, 25 outline Maps, 12 full-page colored Maps.

4152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold.....$3.25

TEXT BIBLES—AMERICAN STANDARD VERSION.

Printed from Easy-Reading Type, on Good Bible Paper, for Sunday School and Church Use.

Minion Type, Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick, 25 Outline Maps, Bound in Black.

101—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, title stamped on back in pure gold..$1.10

112—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title on back in pure gold $2.75

India Paper Edition, Only ⅞-Inch Thick.

112X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

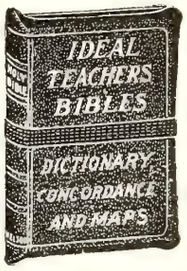
Reference and Text Bibles also in minion, brevier, bourgeois, long primer, pica and English type.

Thumb index cut on edge, 50c extra; name printed on any Bible in gold, 40c extra; extra wording, 40c per line.

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (v vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3-8x 8 1-2 Inches and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.



Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With concise Bible dictionary, combined concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.75

RED LETTER EDITION

With all the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands, title stamped on side and back in pure gold $3.25

Any of the above Bibles sent post paid. Address

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street, - - - Richmond, Va.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR.

J. O. ATKINSON, Elon College, N. C.

Contributing Editors.

W. W. STALEY W. A. HARPER
R. C. HELFENSTEIN S. C. HARRELL

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHURCH.

One is not surprised at the ignorance of the members of our Church about the principles and polity of their Church when it is recalled that there is such paucity of teaching those principles. One is tempted to ask this question: "When are the principles of the Christian Church taught?" Where are they taught? Who is supposed to teach them?" Or this question may be asked: "When is it in order for a pastor in a Christian Church to preach on the principles of the Church?" When does the pastor consider it worth while to preach on these principles? When has the pastor who may read this line deemed it worth his while to lay before his people the meaning and import of the principles of the Christian Church? Or if a layman is reading this line, let him ask himself the question, "When did I hear my pastor preach about the principles of the Christian Church? When have I heard our Sunday School superintendent speak of them? When and where have I heard Sunday School teachers referring to these principles?" In brief, who are they that are taking it upon themselves to make known to the world the high and holy polity and principles of the Christian Church?

Yes, we have five fundamental or cardinal principles all right. These we may have picked up or absorbed from some source: (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church; (2) the name Christian is a sufficient name for the Church; (3) the Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice; (4) Christian character is the only test of fellowship in the Christian Church; (5) the right of private judgment should be accorded to and exercised by all.

And yet, with all their simplicity and beauty, one will be surprised to find out how few of our own people are actually acquainted with these five wholesome biblical truths which we state as the foundation on which we stand as a Church. The pity seems to be that our children are not taught at least these principles at some time or somewhere at the Sunday School or Christian Endeavor. It would seem to be a pity that these great principles do not appeal more often to the preaching and teaching of our pastors and Sunday School teachers. They are fundamental; they are biblical; they are unquestioned in worth, merit and ability to abide eternally while the Church militant is fighting its way in the world. True, the Church teaches much else beside these, but if we could get fixed in the minds of our people, even these five fundamental facts, and then tell and teach their significance, and full meaning and import, our Church would have a new meaning in the world and our work would take on new life.

GOD'S SOLUTIONS TO HUMAN PROBLEMS.

Every individual has his problems. And at times in his life he has problems he can't solve. Here comes in the benefit of worship and the need of God. No human arithmetic, no human skill can solve these problems. God so ordained. He creates problems; and then He creates men and women for the task of solving them. When God has a great problem to be solved, a great issue to be settled, a great event to be met—He does not call an assembly, summons a legislature, or convene a congress and there write a code or a constitution. He finds a man or a woman to solve it.

When He wanted to show the world what faith was, and could do, He called Abraham and faced him with a real trial to see if he had faith. When He wanted to show the world how a trickster, a schemer and a shrewd man of the world could be made into a meek and lowly and humble servant of God, He raised up Jacob. When He wanted to build a nation whose God should be the Lord, a nation of kings and priests unto God, He called Moses. When He wanted to teach the world what patience was and could do, He called Job.

When He wanted to show the world what sacred song was, He called David. When He wanted to prepare the people for His Christ, He called John. And when He wanted to have the gospel carried to the Gentiles He called Paul.

The solution of every human problem is the God-called man. I do not know what your problems are. I know you have them. And I know that God is seeking to solve some human problems through you. As surely as the stars in the heavens run true to their courses, and have courses in which to run, God has a place for each of us and some problem to solve through us.

"Commit thy way unto the Lord," says the Good Book. "Trust in Him, and He shall bring it to pass" (Psa. 37:5). God has sent each of us into the world to solve some problem, work out some task for and through Him. Our problems are God's problems, and He is seeking to solve them through us.

MOSES AS JUDGE AND STATESMAN.

As the wonderful character of Moses emerges out of obscurity, he manifests a striking personality. He caught a vision of service while standing beside the burning bush. And because he was true to his convictions; because he recognized the eternal principles of God; because he accepted his mission in behalf of his people—he became one of the greatest judges of all time.

The burning bush became in reality to him the burning desire of his life to serve his fellowmen. With unflinching purpose, he proclaimed to men the divine law. He was untiring in his efforts in settling controversies of his fellows. His rulings were not in error, for he consulted the higher authority. He was impartial in his decisions, dealing with every man alike. He executed the law not to please the popular mind, but to contribute to the common good.

But a man must have more than mere conviction in order to be a good judge. Some of the greatest tragedies in history have resulted from men who, though of conviction, lacked the necessary wisdom rightly to carry out their purposes. Moses was well prepared for the work set before him. He was a student. He received his information direct from God. He was not afraid to consult the Eternal. Moreover, he was a student of humana nature. He saw the people's needs, and realized their weaknesses. He was a man of great intuitive ability. And this was highly essential in order to solve the new problems confronting his people. He was very practical in his deliberations.

The labor which Moses performed as a judge led him into the position of a statesman. His decisions were so essential to the welfare and happiness of his people that, though for years they were unwritten law, they were observed as being divine. Their intrinsic value caused them later to be put into written form. His unwaivering devotion to truth and justice established for him a great name. It mattered not whether it was in public life or in private duty he taught the divine truths to his people. The bold, fearless, dauntless Moses as a judge and as a statesman furnishes an ideal that any young man, aspiring to either position, might well keep in mind.

GAINING OR LOSING.

During recent years, numerical statistics have come to be accepted as a sort of barometer of the Church's activity and progress. We hear religious speakers quoting figures of numerical increases in membership to prove the enlargement of spiritual activity. The religious press makes much of this statistical showing. It has ever become good news items for the secular press. Frequently we see the secular press even going so far as to moralize upon the showing of these statistics.

But statistics are dangerous things upon which to base a conclusion. Much depends upon who has compiled them, the method of compiling, and the sources from which they are derived. No one knows how unreliable Church statistics are so well as the one who has the task of compiling them. To begin with, Church secretaries and clerks are not statisticians. Sometimes they are not even mathematicians. Many times they omit items that would materially affect the showing of the figures that are given. And no matter how careful and conscientious the secretary may be, when he compares the showing his Church makes on paper with the actual working membership, one wonders if he does not have to sign the report he has made with his fingers crossed. The makers of statistical tables have equally as difficult a task. Nat all the figures can be given. Many items that are vital, if the totals are not to be misleading, are not available.

The statistical tables shown in "The Christian Annual" of the Southern Christian Convention generally show the membership of the present and of the previous year. Manifestly, the difference between these totals will show the gain or loss. But let us see if it does. One Conference shows a net gain of 297 by taking the number reported last year from the present membership. But the figures given in the Church reports of increase and decrease tell a different story. The increase is reported under two heads—those who are received upon profession of faith, and those received by letter. The decrease is shown under three headings—death, letter of transfer, and through delinquency. The increase was by profession of faith, 308; by letter of transfer, 109—making a total increase of 417. The decrease was, by death, 40; by letter, 122; and by delinquency, 98—making a total decrease of 200. These figures give us a net gain of 157, as against the statistical table showing of a net gain of 297.

Let us consider these various items shown. There were 122 members given letters of transfer, and 109 received by letter of transfer. What of the other 13? They may be received later; they may have gone into Churches of other denominations or of other Conferences; or both letters and members may have been laid away for a nice long rest. In general, the gains and losses by letter about offset one another. The losses by death are certainly unavoidable, so far as the Church is concerned. But what of the comparison between those received upon confession of faith and the number dropped as delinquents? Three hundred and eight new converts; 98 dead Church members. Almost one-third as many lost through delinquency as was gained by all our evangelistic effort. Is that the sort of record to boast about?

What can be done about it? Ought anything to be done? There are those who hold that once a member is received into the Church, his name should be retained and he should be counted as a member until death, or until a letter is granted to unite with another Church. Others believe that when a member becomes inactive, such a member should be stricken from the roll. It is not our purpose to discuss now the relative merits of these conflicting views. This much may be said, however, if the doctors were as slow to pronounce their patients dead as is the average Church in deciding that its members are dead, conditions would be very bad. It is frequently the case that members of a Church have been dead physically for several years, while they were still numbered among the active members of the Church. Among the older and larger Churches, perhaps a majority of them are carrying as members individuals whose whereabouts is unknown, and neither pastor nor the official board could testify as to whether they are living or dead.

We are not attempting to fix responsibility for such conditions. We are unable to tell how they are to be corrected. We are trying to lay the facts before the minds and upon the hearts of our people. We are awaking to the necessity of enlarged and intensified evangelistic effort. We have boards, and commissions, and secretaries of evangelism. They are doing splendid work—much-needed work. They are approaching their task intelligently, systematically and diligently. Their work needs to be multiplied many fold. But when the Churches of a Conference report 308 new converts, and 98 dead Church members as the result of one year's work, is it not time to study, and plan, and work; to hold, to train, to nurture, and to keep alive those whom we have won?

GIVE OR ACCEPT CHARITY.

In a Methodist Church of a neighboring town, The Sun's editor was recently told that when the every-member canvass was made, if any members declined to pledge to the Church, then the Church must pledge to help them. The pastor and finance committee of said Church decided that all members should help or be helped.

Now, Judge Lewis L. Fawcett, of Brooklyn, N. Y., goes one notch further, and declares from the bench that "Any man not contributing to support some Church or organized religious work is living on charity." That is to say, every man who does not help the Churches with his support is really living on charity—"riding on some other man's transportation," to quote the judge's words.

It is a remarkable story, full of human interest and fraught with deep meaning, especially for all parents. The New York Herald-Tribune says Judge Fawcett has been on the bench eighteen years, during which time he has had 4,500 boys under twenty-one years of age charged with crimes of various degrees, and out of this number only three—think of it, parents and teachers—only three were attendants at Sunday School. To quote the words of the judge:

"Even these three exceptional cases were technical in character and devoid of heinousness, so that they are scarcely worth mentioning. All three cases had a girl in them. In one, a young man who wished to make a pleasing impression on a new sweetheart, and not being well clad, stole an overcoat. In another, the young man was arrested for carrying a pistol without a permit. He said that he wished to protect himself against a gang member, who had become aggrieved because he had taken his girl from him. In the third, the young man drew a penknife on his opponent in a quarrel over a girl.

"In view of this significant showing, I do not hesitate to express the conviction that attendance by young men at Sunday School or other regular religious work, with its refining atmosphere, is signally preventive against crime and worthy of careful study by those who are dismayed by the increase of crime on the part of the young men of America.

"In 1,092 suspended criminal sentences, only sixty-two of the young men were brought back for violation of the conditions of their paroles. In each suspended sentence case I insisted upon the return of the youth, if he was a Protestant, to a Sunday School; if a Roman Catholic, to attendance at mass, and, if a Jew, to attendance at a synagogue or a temple. In each instance I had the earnest co-operation of the minister, the priest or the rabbi, and in each case I saw to it that the young man had a job to go to as soon as he was freed on parole. In virtually all of the suspended sentence cases the reform was quick and, I believe, permanent.

"The sustained, wholesome, moral atmosphere imparted through habitual attendance upon Sunday School and Church will expel criminal impulses.

"Any man not contributing to support some Church or organized religious work is living on charity—riding on some other man's transportation. If he really desires abatement of crime, he should ally himself with those agencies which prevent or abate crime."

SCRIPTURES FOR THE PLOW BOY.

Nineteen twenty-five marks the four hundredth anniversary of the first printing of the Bible in English—William Tyndale's translation of the New Testament. Tyndale, studying Greek at Oxford and Cambridge, became acquainted with Erasmus' edition of the New Testament in Greek, first printed in 1516. When he became tutor and chaplain in the household of John Walsh, in Gloucestershire, he "perceived by experience how that it was impossible to establish the lay people in any truth, except the Scripture were playnly laid before their eyes in their mother tongue. Which thing onlye moved me to translate the New Testament."

He attempted to interest the Bishop of London in his plans, but in vain. So he departed for the continent, visited Luther at Wittenberg, and finally began printing his translation in Cologne. But after ten sheets were completed, news of the work reached the authorities and Tyndale had to flee to Worms. There, with funds supplied by a number of English merchants, he completed an edition of his Bible in 1525. The English eagerly bought the Book, but the next year the English bishops publicly denounced the translation and burned every copy that they could find. They worked so thoroughly that only one complete copy of the first printing of the translation remains. It is at Bristol, England. Cardinal Wolsey and others tried to bring Tyndale back to England for punishment, but he stayed on the continent.

In Antwerp for a time, he worked on a translation of the Hebrew Old Testament, and brought out revised editions of his New Testament. Eventually he was betrayed and imprisoned in Vilvorde Castle, near Brussels. The Church found him guilty of heresy, and he was strangled and burned on October 6, 1536.

Wycliffe's translation of the New Testament from the Latin in 1382 was never published and exerted no wide influence. Tyndale's translation shaped the whole course of the translations that followed. He had a greater influence on the form of the English New Testament than any other man. And he made good his promise of 1522: "If God spare my life, ere many years I will cause a boy that driveth a plow shall know more of the Scripture than thou (the bishop) doest."

RELIGIOUS POPULATION OF THE WORLD.

According to the most reliable estimates available, the religions of the world roughly number the following:

Christian—Catholic and Protestant, 510,000,000, or 36 per cent of the world's population (Roman Catholics, 295,000,000, or 17 4-10 per cent; Orthodox Catholics, 125,000,000, or 7 4-10 per cent; Protestants, 190,000,000, 11 2-10 per cent); Confucianists and Taoists—310,000,000, or 18 3-10 per cent; Mohammedans—235,000,000, or 13 9-10 per cent; Hindus—218,000,000, or 12 9-10 per cent; Shintoists—25,000,000, or 1 5-10 per cent; Jews—15,000,000, or 9-10 of 1 per cent; unclassified—16,000,000, or 9-10 of 1 per cent.

It is difficult for us to realize that after 2,000 years of Christian experience and propaganda in the world, there are at least three pagan religions, each of which far outnumbers the number of Protestants in the world. The missionary task of the Church, the biggest task of the Church, the one worth-while work of the Church, that for which the Church was established and sent into the world, is yet in a large measure to be accomplished. Some one recently declared that the biggest work in the world today was that of missions—that is, of making the world what it ought to be under the leadership of the Lord Jesus Christ.

"I am not an Anglomaniac. But I will say to my fellow-Americans that unless we get together and work together to establish in our country a reign of respect for law approximating that which exists everywhere under the British flag, we not only shall become merely respectable instead of forceful in the family of nations, but we shall invite into our fabric that social disintegration preceding anarchy."—John Hays Hammond.

"Never do something you do not approve of, more quickly to accomplish something that you do approve of, for there are no safe short cuts in piloting a business or a ship."

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The question of benevolence needs careful study and prayerful decision. There are so many solicitors out begging for money for so many causes that one wonders where the end will be. The fact is that America, if matters do not change, will become a nation of beggars. Little children are sent out to beg for this cause or that without the right to solicit or discretion. Groups of people organize and go before the people for contributions. One nation has no right to solicit funds from another nation. One congregation has no right to solicit funds from another congregation. The right to ask for money is limited to a constituency. A State has the right to ask for money from its citizenship. It is very embarrassing to have people ask you for money to do this or that, and you do not feel that they have the right to ask you, and you do not feel able to give to every cause that others may present to you. The result of such effort is very limited. Those who want to give to good causes and do give, get in the habit of giving a little here and a little there without the proper liberal motive and consideration.

It has crept into the public schools. Appeals are made by organizations for funds; school officials present the claim to the children. Some of the children can give because their parents are able to give them the money. But a poor widow has five children in the school, and their pride prompts them to want to give as much as other children. Their parents are not able to give as much as parents with more and only one child in school. The public school was conceived and founded to give the poorest children the same opportunity in education as the richest, and not to embarrass parents by conditions that are unequal. In addition to what the children are urged to give, they go out a little army of beggars, asking everybody they meet for money. Such a course cultivates the habit of begging. If all the beggars of this day fare like Lazarus of old, Abraham's bosom will be full. There should be real authority behind all solicitations for money. Self-appointed solicitors are too numerous. Unless public opinion puts a check upon promiscuous solicitations for money, this will be a nation of beggars. As a rule, professional solicitors do not give much themselves, and those who do give would give more liberally if they were not called upon by so many people representing so many different organizations.

This custom not only affects individuals, but affects business as well. Every little movement for some good cause sends agents to solicit help from storekeepers, public servants, officials, business men. Refusal is taken as indifference and provokes the "we trade with him or them," and the whole question of benevolence is made personal or commercial and lifted out of its true position of real help on Scriptural and human grounds. There are too many organizations soliciting money. The State, the Church, chartered institutions, and duly accredited organizations may justly solicit funds for legitimate purposes, but the agents to solicit should be duly authorized for such work. This is not intended to teach that people should give less, but more in a different way. The kingdom's benevolences would prosper more with a smaller army of beggars.

W. W. Staley.

ELON LETTER.

Elon was thirty-six years old legally on March 11th. On that date, in 1889, the Legislature of North Carolina chartered the college, which then existed in the minds and hearts of a few of our leaders, such as Dr. W. S. Long, Dr. J. Pressley Barrett, Dr. J. W. Wellons, Dr. G. S. Watson and their associates, constituting the original trustees of the college then in process of being born.

On this same date thirty-six years later, the first public exercise of a collegiate character was held in the fifth building of the greater Elon rebuilding program. Chapel exercises for the first time were held on that day in the Mooney Christian Education Building. The week-day school of religion began there on the 3d of February, and the Citizens' Sunday School two days before. The first formal college exercise was reserved for the birthday of our college.

Students and faculty gathered for this initial service in a spirit of real satisfaction, and evidently enjoyed the simple, but impressive services, which consisted of the following:

Piano Prelude—Miss Nolan.
Hymn—"Blest Be the Tie that Binds."
Scripture—Dr. W. S. Alexander.
Prayer—Prof. S. A. Bennett.
College Song—"Here's to Dear Old Elon."
Remarks—W. A. Harper.
Remarks—Dr. J. U. Newman.
Hymn—"The Church's One Foundation."
Benediction—Rev. J. E. McCauley.
Piano Postlude—Miss Nolan.

Dean A. L. Hook presided throughout the services. Prof. O. W. Johnson led the singing.

Just following Dr. Newman's remarks, which he concluded with an earnest and uplifting prayer, Dr. T. C. Amick offered the following resolution, which was promptly seconded by Dr. W. P. Lawrence, and unanimously adopted by faculty and students:

"We, the faculty and student body of Elon College, and friends of Elon College, assembled for chapel service for the first time in the Mooney Christian Education Building of Elon College, wish to express to M. Orban, Jr., and to his good wife our sincere and heartfelt thanks and gratitude for their gracious kindness and devotion to us and to the cause of Christian education, and for their expression of that devotion in this magnificent building in which we are now assembled, built by them for our spiritual and social uplift and advancement and for the blessing of those who follow us at Elon College."

The wall around the campus is also finished. The grounds and walkways are nearly completed, and ere long the new Elon will be a reality physically. God grant that she may also increasingly become a new Elon in those vital spiritual achievements which will make her aim of Christian character effective in all her organizations and life.

W. A. Harper.

BETHLEHEM LETTER.

We are now conducting a campaign to raise one hundred thousand dollars to build an administration building and establish an endowment fund for Bethlehem College.

The campaign proper covers the Counties of Clay, Randolph, Chambers and Tallapoosa, of the State of Alabama, but will be extended wherever we can get money for the furthering of our building program.

Bethlehem College has forty-five acres of land and one three-story brick building with modern improvements. The girls' dormitory is the third floor, class-rooms are on the second floor, and the basement is used for the laboratory, dining-room and kitchen.

We are determined to raise $100,000—$50,000 for an administration building and $50,000 for endowment. We must have the equipment to take care of all the students that desire to take work here. Our attendance has doubled over last year, and if we have the facilities to take care of them we can have next year double the attendance we have this year.

If our folks who have means could realize just how much the college means to our Church in this Far Southland and what it will mean throughout the years to come, they surely would help us to build Bethlehem College. I need not try to acquaint you with the needs of this section, which is our gracious opportunity. The youth are eager for an education, but are not financially able to go very far away from home to get it.

When Bethlehem College gets two more new buildings and equipments and one hundred thousand dollars endowment, it will be able to supply this need. The people of Wadley and the surrounding community are going their limit in order to maintain a college here, and they are deserving of aid from others.

We expect to continue our appeal until we get the funds to supply our present needs. We are hoping that some of our large givers will come to our rescue soon. When you are asked to give to Bethlehem College, don't count the dollars you are giving—count the returns. Bethlehem's call must not go unanswered. You can answer! Will you?

S. L. Beougher.

Wadley, Ala.

THE MASTER IN COMMAND.

Self-willed service is always unfruitful. It is only Christ-directed service which bears fruit, and then brings forth the "more fruit" our Lord desires. It would seem one lesson would be enough to teach us the uselessness of any human-laid plan in divine service. But how quickly we forget. We go on laying beautiful plans, and in imagination we see great results. When they are worked out, however, we see them fall to pieces and see barren results. Again we are set to work for the Lord in a way we do not know, having only light for one step ahead. We take that step and there is light given for the next, the next and the next, until we see a work more beautiful and complete than any human mind could plan, or any human hand could execute.

Peter learned the folly of self-directed service, and the other disciples learned the folly of depending upon human leadership that night when Peter resolved to return to his old occupation. The sin was not in fishing. In the days before Jesus had come into their lives it was all right. But He had called them from that work to a greater one. They had left all to follow Him, and now their Christ-appointed work was fishing for men. The sin was in going back. There should be no backward or downward steps by Christ's followers, but always pressing onward and upward.

All night they toiled, but the result was "nothing." It always is when we turn from the Christ-appointed way to the way of our own choosing. When the morning came, bringing Jesus with it, when He took command and the disciples obeyed, how different the result! Obedience to the Master always means success. It was the result which followed their obedience to His command by which they knew Him, and led the disciple who had been in closest touch with Him to exclaim, "It is the Lord!"

When we faithfully serve where He says, and do what He says, there is not a day but we, because of some special blessing, are compelled to say, "It is the Lord." We see His hand in each event of our lives. The Lord reveals His nearness to His faithful ones. He makes plain the fact that He is staying them up, and helping in the work He has called them to. When we act in self-will, disobediently choosing and planning our own service, Jesus leaves us to ourselves. When we yield to His will, our Lord not only keeps His hand upon the work, but He also keeps it upon the worker.

When the Lord calls us from one work to another, when He leads us to higher ground, when He admits us to the inner circle, it is sin to return to the old plane. We are to reach down to help others up, but our feet must never stand upon a lower plane than the highest elevation we have attained. The Christian's course is ever upward, on and on, higher and higher, until the pearly doors, resplendent, swing open to admit us to the land of endless day, when we shall stand faultless before the throne.

"Up," "on," "into" are the Christian's words. It is up toward Zion; it is enter into the joys of the Lord; it is on to victory. If we let our Lord and Saviour lead and choose the way for us, we will be up and doing. We will, through His name, press on from one victory to another, until we enter into the place He has gone to prepare for us, and so shall we ever be with the Lord.

Mt. Vernon, Ohio. MINNIE LOHR.

LOG HUT AT ELK SPUR.

The old log school-house standing on the mission grounds at Elk Spur was erected fifty years ago. My father sent me, with an ox-team, to haul the sills from Stockner's Knob. As I was but a boy and could not load them alone, Mr. David Strickland went with me.

The chimney was built by Anderson Allen, David Strickland, Wesley Strickland, Jeff Ayers, James Guynn and my father, all of whom lived in the neighborhood. A log six feet in length could be rolled into the big fire-place.

The first school was taught before a floor was laid, and the sleepers were used as seats. Two schools were taught before there were any windows in the room. Finally a window of medium size was placed in one side, and another eight feet in width and ten inches high extended along another side. Just beneath this window was a high bench, which served as a writing-desk.

The Elk Spur Privitive Baptist Church was organized in this building about forty-five years ago. We had a short term of school each year until two years prior to Miss Hedgepeth's coming.

It is unto this old log school-house that Mr. Sorrell puts Johnny Ford for rest now. It has served its purpose, but stands in contrast to our nice, new Church-school building that the Christians have build and in which we now have an active Church and a good school.

Fancy Gap, Va. G. W. EDWARDS.

ORGANIZATION FOR READING CONTESTS.

As stated previously in THE SUN, it is to be hoped that several of our Churches will put on a reading contest. Many of our Churches have tried it out and it most wholesome and helpful, creating wide interest and greatly helping its Church in many ways. Dr. W. H. Denison has kindly sent THE SUN the following as the organization for a reading contest:

1. Pastor.
2. Stewardship department secretary (general director).
3. A leader for each group.
4. An assistant leader for each group.

All of these may constitute an executive committee. Sometimes a recording secretary is used, but usually each group leader keeps the record for his group and reports to the stewardship secretary.

Instructions.

Each group leader should keep his group supplied with literature.

Each leader should keep the record of the reading of the individuals of his group.

Group leaders should hold frequent group meetings for inspiration and pep.

Probably a group should have approximately twenty-five readers (this may be changed to suit local needs).

The day, hour and place is to be fixed well in advance for the opening and full announcement made.

The reading should be thoughtful, and where one person sometimes reads to several others—say from a book—there should be discussion by the group listening. If one reader reads sometimes to several people, it counts for those read to. This should be done fairly and with discussion.

Credits are given on the honor and word of the leader.

Sign up tithers as fast as they decide definitely to become tithers.

We suggest that the pastor preach three sermons on stewardship on different Sundays, and credit be given for the attendance of all the readers, the same with two prayer meetings on stewardship.

Enlist the whole Church, if possible, in reading.

The group leaders and pastor should meet together frequently. Double credit should be given for outside readers who may be enlisted.

The number enrolled in each group at the opening of the contest should remain unchanged. Other persons may be invited to read with the group and their credits be included in the final report.

Some recognition should be given to the winning group—a banner or pennant, perhaps

Some recognition should be given to the person in each group scoring the largest number of credits. It may be a pennant, a stewardship book or a public recognition.

Groups.

Old and young, from every walk of life, will find not only enjoyment, but social, intellectual, and spiritual profit in this reading. Whether members of the Church or not, all should be invited to join some group. After the groups are formed, the number should remain fixed. Others may be persuaded to read with them, but in figuring the average for the group, the divisor will be the original number, in order to be fair.

The opening may be after a Sunday morning or evening service, after the midweek service, or at other suitable time. The names of all officers and contestants, by groups, should be posted conspicuously and, if convenient, listed in the local papers.

At the hour appointed, the officers should assemble, receive final directions, apportion the literature already at hand and distribute it among their groups. The contest is now open. As fast as new literature arrives, it should be fairly and promptly distributed. Diligent watch should be kept by director and team leaders that a sufficient supply be constantly on hand, so that no reader may lose a fair chance to win.

The local committee should determine how long a group may keep a given book. The length of time will depend upon the number of books and the number of groups.

The ultimate purpose of the contest is not to defeat an antagonist, but to promote the largest measure of stewardship knowledge, loyalty, and devotion, and to enroll as tithing stewards as large a number as possible. Careful attention should, therefore, be given through the contest, and particularly at its close, to the enlistment of tithing stewards.

Credits.

BOOKS.	Points.
"Money the Acid Test" (McConaughey)	75
"Life as a Steward" (Morrill)	40
"Women and Stewardship" (Pearce)	25
"Stewardship for All of Life" (Lovejoy)	75
"The Message of Stewardship" (Cushman)	100
"The Christian and His Money Problems" (Wilson)	100
"Church Finance" (Agar)	40
"A Man and His Money" (Calkins)	125
"The Larger Stewardship" (Cook)	60
"The Victory of Mary Christopher" (Calkins)	50
"You and Yours" (Morrill)	100
"Stewardship Lessons for Juniors" (Baldwin)	25

PAMPHLETS.	Points.
Any pamphlet 8 pages or less	5
Any pamphlet from 9-16 pages	10
Any pamphlet from 17-24 pages	15

Fifteen credits will be allowed to each person who commits to memory the eight stewardship mottoes adopted by the United Stewardship Council. Ten credits each will be given for reading the following passages of Scripture: Mal. 3:1-18; Luke 12:13-53; 2 Cor. 8th & 9th chapters. Five credits will be given each of the following: Gen. 28:10-22; Matt. 6:19-34; Matt. 25:1-30; Acts 4:23-37; Heb. 7:1-28. Church attendance, when stewardship sermons are preached, 2 points; prayer meetings, when stewardship is the theme, 2 points.

In case the stewardship secretary or pastor have other good pamphlets or books, they, together, shall determine the number of points to be allowed each. There will be a tremendous demand for reading matter, and the contest will be most interesting.

Sometimes, during the contest, and more especially at its close, playlets, pageants, dramatization works are given. That all depends upon the talent and wish of the congregation and pastor. If so, certain points may be awarded the individuals who take part, or if one group puts it on, it should benefit thereby.

The following is from a Henderson, N. C., paper and has reference to a recent meeting of the two Christian federations of that city: An audience that comfortably filled the Sunday School auditorium of the First Baptist Church yesterday afternoon heard Dr. D. A. Long, of Franklinton, deliver an able and inspiring discourse based upon the theme of Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress." Dr. Long told the story in a very effective manner and at frequent intervals made practical and forceful moral and spiritual applications of the incidents occurring in the journey of Christian. The speaker's language was beautiful, but more beautiful still were the impressive thoughts and truths so beautifully clothed in words and uttered with inspired eloquence. The two Christian federations in Henderson are indeed grateful to Dr. Long for the message he brought.

The Ziczac, a little bird, walks about inside the mouth of the crocodile, cleaning the reptile's teeth by picking up food scraps.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

By Warren H. Denison, D. D., Secretary.

Many Churches put on the every-member canvass in June. If you do, then it is time to begin your plans now. The congregation needs to be instructed thoroughly in the work of the Church and in stewardship. The finance department (or committee) has much early preliminary work to do. The budgets need to be carefully made out, duplex envelopes ordered, constituency list prepared, and the non-resident members recorded. Then the training of the canvassers is the crux of it all. Decide that the every-member canvass in your Church shall be made according to approved schedule. Begin at least two months in advance to get ready for your every-member solicitation.

Rev. R. W. Page, president of Eel River Conference, says: "I have thought the every-member canvass to be the only plan for Churches and Conferences to adopt. I surely will do my best and urge every Church in this Conference to join in the work."

Mr. J. P. Ames, secretary Rockingham Conference, says: "We have for the past two years strongly urged the different Churches to adopt this business method. Our Church adopted it and the budget idea four years ago, and now we wonder why we did not adopt it before. As long as I am connected with the Conference, I shall always advocate the budget and the every-member canvass."

Mr. E. B. Hoover, stewardship secretary of the Ontario Conference, says: "The every-member canvass was taken up at our last Conference session, and a recommendation favoring its adoption was well received. I, myself, think it is the only solution to properly carry out the Lord's work in a systematic manner, both financially and spiritually. The Toronto (Bathhurst) Church has adopted the duplex envelope, with excellent results."

Will your Conference be one of those which will strive to be a model Conference in the matter of putting on the every-member canvass? Will you make an effort to put on the canvass in all the Churches simultaneously? Of course, all will not do it the first time; but will your stewardship secretary and other Conference officers try to do it? It will not do itself. It takes a man back of the plan.

It is very important that every Church work to the plan adopted by our General Convention at Burlington, that each Church and organization plan definitely to increase its benevolent offerings at least 15 per cent over the preceding year. It is time now to check up on your General Convention offering due in January. Please look up the figures and see if it went 15 per cent over last year's. Now, the March foreign mission offering is on. Is your Church already going its 15 per cent above last year? The principle involved—that of a growing budget for the Church—is an important one. We cannot grow if we give no more than we did before.

While in the Southern Convention, holding stewardship institutes, it was our good fortune to visit Uncle Wellons a few minutes at Greensboro. It is a great pleasure to sit by his side a brief minute. His keen interest in the whole Church is surprising as he nears the hundred mark.

We had one hour also at Elon—our first since the great fire. It is a great plant, far better than we expected. It was a great inspiration to spend even one hour there.

MEN AND MILLIONS COLLECTIONS DURING FEBRUARY.

North Carolina Conference.

Mt. Auburn	$ 82.00
Burlington	197.20
Amelia	24.00
Morrisville	10.00
First Church, Greensboro	150.00
Mt. Zion	37.00
Monticello	10.00
Shallow Well	12.00
Mt. Bethel	10.00
Union, Va.	35.00
Asheboro	10.00
Zion	1.00
Chapel Hill	53.00
Six Forks	10.00
Amelia	13.00
Happy Home	100.00
New Lebanon	20.00
Franklinton	12.00
Mt. Bethel	24.00
Ingram, Va.	150.00
Union Ridge	26.00
Long's Chapel	44.00
Bethlehem	5.00
Elon College (2 bonds)	400.00
New Center (Liberty loan)	50.00
		$1,485.20

Eastern Virginia Conference.

Franklin	$825.00
Liberty Spring	80.00
Newport News	18.20
Berea, Norfolk	162.00
Christian Temple	50.00
Johnson Grove	4.00
First Church, Norfolk	109.60
Oakland	18.50
Burton's Grove	20.00
Holland	300.00
Holy Neck	25.00
		1,612.30

Valley of Virginia Conference.

Mt. Olivet (G)	$ 20.00
Linville	120.00
Winchester	15.00
Bethlehem	16.00
Dry Run	4.42
Leaksville	15.00
		190.42

Georgia and Alabama Conference.

New Hope, Ala.	$ 30.00
N. Highlands	10.00
		40.00
Total collections for month		$3,327.92

The above amounts were paid to Mr. C. D. Johnston, executive secretary, and all parties and Churches duly receipted.

J. O. Atkinson,
Secretary of Missions.

MEN AND MILLIONS.

We have raised in cash as follows:

All benevolences	$1,027,828.31
Local Church extension	807,087.92
Total	$1,834,916.23
Of this amount, Men and Millions fund	138,194.80

February collections, in another column, amount to $3,327.92, and are included in the above.

The treasurer of one of our large Churches in Eastern Virginia Conference, which is not in the 20 per cent class, told me that his Church would pay its entire pledge to Men and Millions. This is encouraging. February collections also show continued interest.

In the North Carolina Conference, Burlington, Greensboro First Church, Happy Home, Elon College, and Ingram, deserve special mention. In the Eastern Virginia Conference, Franklin goes from 38 to 46.6 per cent, and Berea, Norfolk First Church, Norfolk and Holland deserve special mention. In the Valley of Virginia, Linville deserves special mention.

We are looking for good reports for March and April.

J. E. West,
Chairman.

WHAT AND WHY OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

By Arthur J. Brown.

There are now twenty-eight thousand Protestant foreign missionaries in non-Christian lands, and 22,408,900 adult communicants, with an enrolled Christian community of 5,145,386 persons. In 36,610 Sunday Schools, there are two million pupils; 703 hospitals and 1,234 dispensaries treating over three million patients a year; a total of 245 orphanages, twenty-five institutions for the blind and deaf mutes, 39 leper asylums, 21 homes for untainted children of lepers, 21 rescue homes for fallen women. The educational work includes 109 colleges and universities, 2,114 boarding and high schools, 36,478 elementary schools, 376 kindergartens, 30 medical colleges, 98 schools and classes for nurses, 406 theological and Bible-training schools, 209 industrial schools and 240 normal schools.

The Christian people of Europe and America gave last year for the maintenance of these varied activities $44,448,000. A movement so vast, representing such a great constituency of intelligent people in Europe and America, and recognized by the governments of the world as a force of the first magnitude, challenges the attention of all thoughtful persons.

The reasons for foreign missions are:

1. Because Christ commanded His disciples to give His gospel to all men.

2. Because a true Christian experience prompts us to seek the world. Christianity is a world faith. We believe our faith to be true. That conviction prompts us to give it to all who do not possess it; and by one of the paradoxes of the Christian life the more religion we give away the more we have left at home.

3. Because all men need the gospel which we possess. God is not a national deity, but the Sovereign and Father of the race. Jesus Christ is "the propitiation for our sins, and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world." We are told that non-Christian peoples have religions of their own; but if Confucianism and Buddhism are not good enough for us, they are not good enough for the Chinese and the Siamese.

4. Because Christ can do for all men what He has done for us. The experience of a hundred years has shown that additional chapters in the Book of Acts might be written. Already there are transformed lives and great social reforms testifying to the continued power of the Gospel. The peoples of China, India and Japan are far higher in the scale of civilization than our ancestors were when the first foreign missionary found them. We are not sending missionaries to these peoples because they are our inferiors, but because they are our brethren.

5. Because we have passed the age of provincialism and entered the age of cosmopolitanism. Thirty-five years ago my predecessor said that foreign missionary efforts was for peoples who did not touch our lives at any point. He could not say that today. Steam and electricity have brought together the most distant nation. China is nearer to New York than California once was. The inter-relations of Asia and America have become so close that we can no longer be independent of Asiatics, nor can they be independent of us. We must make them better or they will make us worse.

6. Because we want to face the whole modern problem of the Church. No Christian program today is adequate which ignores the greater part of the world. No narrow provincial or sectarian undertaking will stir the modern layman. He is planning big things in other spheres of action and he is ready to plan big things in religion. It is a vast undertaking which confronts us. Such work calls for breadth of mind to comprehend, for statesmanship to plan, for volunteers to go, for money to equip, and for large-hearted men at home to sustain the majestic enterprise by sympathies and prayers as well as by gifts.

7. Because "He is able." My soul is stirred every time I think of those three words of our Lord. We are not dealing with an impotent Christ, but with the Lord and King of the whole race of men. His thought comprehends the world. We face this stupendous undertaking in His name and in His might.—Christian Work.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION ACTIVITIES.

International Council.

The meetings of the executive committee of the International Council of Religious Education, preceded by the meetings of the professional advisory sections, held in Chicago last month, were the greatest meetings ever held under the auspices of the council. This great midyear conference on Christian education met on Monday, when about 300 men and women gathered for a conference on daily vacation Bible school work. Our Church was represented at this meeting by Miss Lucy M. Eldredge.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, we were represented in the advisory sections by Dr. W. P. Fletcher in the adult, by Mr. Hermon Eldredge in the editorial section, and by Miss Lucy M. Eldredge in the young people's section. Mr. Eldredge delivered an address on "Editorial Fellowship," and Miss Eldredge was elected secretary of the young people's section for the coming year.

On Thursday and Friday, the meetings of the executive committee were held, when representatives from thirty-six denominations, from States and provinces, from universities, and from many organizations interested in the Christian education of youth came to plan how they might work together in their common program. One of the most constructive acts of this body was the adoption of the new standards for leadership training proposed by the committee on education. Dr. H. Shelton Smith, formerly with our Department of Christian Education and still a member of our Board, is superintendent of leadership training and leading in a very fine work.

One of the most pleasant, informal features of the week was a dinner meeting of Christian Church leaders on Wednesday evening. The group at this dinner included Dr. and Mrs. H. Shelton Smith, Miss Effie Bowden, Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Hurst, and Rev. and Mrs. Lester Proctor, who are doing graduate work in the University of Chicago; Rev. Harry Rowe, superintendent of young people's work of Indiana; Miss Lucy M. Eldredge, Dr. Fletcher, and Mr. Eldredge.

On Thursday evening, the session was given over to a memorial hour in honor of Marion Lawrence, the great Sunday School leader. Many personal tributes were given, which proved that "The Great Chief," as he was lovingly referred to, still lives in the hearts and lives of hosts of men and women.

Midyear Staff Conference.

On Monday, February 23d, the midyear staff conference of the workers in the Christian Education Department was held in Dayton. Dr. Harper, Dr. Fletcher, Mrs. Bullock, Miss Eldredge and Mr. Eldredge.

General plans for field work for the coming six months were made. One of the most important phases of the work discussed at length was that of leadership training. Mr. Eldredge reported an increase in number of classes, and in interest in this work. Plans were discussed for the promotion of the use of the standard course units in local schools, in community schools and summer schools, on a basis which will permit interchange of credits. To do this, it is necessary to conform to the requirements of the International Council, with accredited instructor, approved textbooks, length of term and general work accomplished. It was also agreed that colleges should make the standard course a regular one-year course for students, and that our Department of Christian Education should keep in touch with students doing this work in college or community schools.

The dates for "Children's Week" this spring were approved by the International Council as May 3d to May 10th, and "Mothers' and Daughters'" Week will be observed nationally May 10th to May 17th. The Christian education will furnish programs and special material for both of these weeks at a nominal cost, and assist any Church in every way possible to observe this important occasion.

Plans were made for further improvement of the Journal of Christian Education and our other publications for issuing leaflets in the near future on Boy Scout and Camp Fire Girls' work, and a survey blank for the use of the local Church. Also plans were discussed whereby the department might render more service to Churches which are looking forward to building new Churches, or remodeling old ones, that their equipment for Sunday School might be of the best. It was reported that six sample lessons of the group graded series are being issued this month by the Christian Publishing Association for experimental use in a number of our Churches before the entire series is issued. Plans for meeting the needs of our colleges, for promoting the work of the summer schools, for the taking of the spring survey, and in every way possible to promote our whole Christian education program were considered. The report on the Christian education offering, showing a marked increase now over last year's entire offering, was very gratifying, but there are still a number of our Churches which have made no response to the call this year.

Conference on Summer Schools.

On Tuesday, February 24th, a conference on summer schools was held, to which had been invited a representative from each summer school, the head of each department of our Church, and the field workers workers of the Christian Education Department. The following were present: Dr. F. G. Coffin, Dean George C. Enders (representing Dr. Caris), Dr. W. H. Denison, Dr. Omer S. Thomas, Dr. W. P. Minton, Rev. W. J. Hall (representing Dr. Helfenstein), Dr. W. A. Harper, Dr. A. M. Kerr, Dr. W. P. Fletcher, Mrs. F. E. Bullock, Miss Lucy M. Eldredge, Mr. Hermon Eldredge. Communications were received from Dr. Martyn Summerbell, Dr. W. T. Walters, Prof. J. N. Dales, Miss Pattie Coghill.

The object of the meeting was to consider the summer schools for 1925, to adjust dates or any conflicts as might be possible, and to plan for the general promotion of this work. The pastors' schools are under the direct supervision of the Home Mission Department. The work of the Christian Education Department, it was agreed, was to suggest plans to the schools, to correlate the work, and to promote generally all of the schools. Eight schools will be held this summer at Palmer College, May 26th to June 5th; Kirton Hall, June 29th to July 5th; Metropolitan at Lakemont, July 6th to 12th, tentative; Craigville, July 7th to 17th; Defiance Young People's, June 29th to July 4th; Defiance Pastors, July 6th to July 17th; Elon, July 27th to August 5th; Bethlehem, August 10th to 16th.

General plans for presenting the work of the various departments, for increasing the value of the gatherings to the pastors and workers, and for promotion were discussed. The outlook is most encouraging for the best summer school work this summer that we have ever had, and especial attention will be given to the program for young people, in the schools which enroll this group in large numbers. In the near future, information will be sent to all Churches regarding the school in their section. At any time, information may be secured through the Christian education office or through the president of the institution where the school is to be held.

LUCY M. ELDREDGE.

DISTRICT RALLIES.

All interested will please note the following leaders, places and dates for district missionary rallies of the North Carolina Woman's Conference:

Warren-Vance—Mrs. J. A. Kimball, Manson, N. C., superintendent; Mt. Auburn, April 4th.

Alamance—Mrs. J. D. Kernodle, Graham, N. C., superintendent; Burlington First Church, April 7th.

Durham—Miss Lillian Long, Chapel Hill, N. C., superintendent; Chapel Hill, April 9th.

Guilford—Mrs. M. F. Cook, Greensboro, N. C., superintendent; High Point, April 14th.

Halifax—Mrs. T. W. Chandler, Virgilina, Va., superintendent; Danville, Va., April 16th.

Lee-Chatham—Miss May Gunter, Sanford, N. C., superintendent; Zion, April 12th.

Randolph-Montgomery—Mrs. D. A. Cornelison, Seagrove, N. C., superintendent; Seagrove.

Wake-Johnson—Mrs. L. L. Vaughan, Raleigh, superintendent; Wake Chapel, April 26th.

SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

Church mission secretaries, members of missionary societies, mission superintendents of Sunday schools, and missionary committees and pastors in the Virginia Valley Central Conference are hereby reminded of the school of missions to be held at Mayland Church on the first Saturday in May. All the above-mentioned persons are also urged to see to it that every Church in the Conference has one or more representatives at this missionary meeting.

The services are to begin at 10 A. M., and will continue only one day. Interesting speakers are to be present, and a large part of the time will be given over to open conferences and discussion. No Church or society can afford to miss this school of missions, and every one is urged to begin to plan now to spend the day with us.

J. F. MORGAN,
Conference Mission Secretary.

We would tell you something you already know if we should say that THE CHRISTIAN SUN has some big-hearted friends. Join in with them and send your subscription. You will certainly be in good company.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

March 29, 1925.

Review: "Closing Period of Christ's Ministry."

Golden Text: "Jesus Christ is the same yesterday and today; yea, and forever."—Heb. 13:8.

Devotional Reading: Rev. 1:9-18.

These notes on the review of the lessons for the quarter simply suggest a few outstanding truths of the respective lessons.

1. Christ's Triumphal Entry. Jesus Christ comes as King, but it is as a King of love, and His conquest is by peaceful methods. He would be King of our lives, and we should allow Him to enter every phase of our lives.

2. The Last Judgment. There is to be a judgment of the nations. Men will fall eventually into two classes—the sheep and the goats; the good and the bad; the righteous and the wicked. They will be judged in terms or on the basis of their deeds, and not their creeds. Omission will loom as large in the final judgment as commission. The judgment will be fair, for Christ will be the Judge.

3. The Lord's Supper. Jesus wanted to be remembered. He knew His disciples needed to remember Him. He instituted a memorial which was simple, appropriate, universal and inspiring. It is also symbolic of one of the central truths of Christianity, the intimate relation of Christ to His disciples and their dependence on Him. It is a reminder of His life and death and a pledge of His final victory.

4. Jesus Comforts His Disciples. Jesus knew that trouble and sorrow would come. He prepares His disciples in advance. He reminds them that as a revelation of God, He (Jesus) can vouch for the fact that God cares and will provide for His own. He promises that His disciples shall do greater works than He has done, and promises to give them power to do these things. The Spirit which He would send would be sent if they obeyed His commandments, and this Spirit would be with them forever as the Spirit of truth.

5. The Vine and the Branches. Christianity is not a creed—it is a life; and the relation between Christ and a Christian can be best expressed by the relation that exists between a vine and the branch. Christians are intended to "bear fruit." Apart from Christ, they cannot bear fruit. God is glorified when they bear fruit, and their fruit shall remain.

6. Christ's Intercessor Prayer. Jesus prayed for others, and inasmuch as He is our great example, we ought to pray for one another. He prayed for His disciples, that they might be kept from worldliness and from the evil, and that they might be one. He also prayed for Himself that the glory which He had with the Father might be His again. He prayed that His disciples might be with Him where He was.

7. Jesus in Gethsemane. Gethsemane is the place where a man decides to do the will of God. Christ had His Gethsemane. He had to make His own decision. He gave His life; it was not taken from Him. He who comes from Gethsemane committed to the will of God need have no fear of men.

8. Good Citizenship. Man is a citizen of two worlds. Over and above his earthly citizenship is his heavenly citizenship, and the best preparation for earthly citizenship is faithfulness in living up to his heavenly citizenship. A good citizen is law observing and law enforcing.

9. Christ Before Pilate. It was Pilate who was on trial. Every man is on trial when he comes face to face with Jesus Christ. We must make a decision as to what we will do with Christ. We must make a decision as to what kind of spirit we will release in the world, the spirit of Barabbas or the spirit of Christ.

10. The Saviour on the Cross. Jesus Christ died for our sins. The cross shows the awfulness of sin, the depth of God's love, the power of vicarious sacrifice, the strange ways of God to accomplish His purpose.

11. Our Lord's Resurrection. Jesus Christ rose from the dead. We have not a dead hero, but a living Saviour. Life is master of death, and love can never lose its own. Because Christ lives, we shall live also. Christ continues to manifest a personal interest in His disciples.

12. The Forty Days and the Ascension. The fact that Jesus did arise and lives is unimpeachable. His spirit is active in the world. He has become glorified and He is universally accessible to all men. We are to be witnesses for Him and to tell the whole world.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

March 29, 1925.

Subject: "Friendliness as Expressed through Evangelistic Missions."

Bible Reference: Matt. 9:35-38; Acts 8:35-37.

Suggestions for Leader's Talk.

Can missions be anything except evangelistic missions? We usually speak of missions as bringing the gospel to people who do not know Christ, either in the home land or the foreign lands, and by evangelism we mean giving Christ to people also—telling to others the message of Christianity.

Medical missionaries do more than heal the body; they minister to the soul. The aim of all the various types of missionary work is to evangelize, and when we are assisting in this kind of work we are bringing people to Christ. If the Churches could get a vision of the great work which needs to be done and become so awake to the task, results throughout the work would soon be seen. If the Church could realize its task now when the nations are so concerned about international relations and world peace, much permanent good could be accomplished. We sometimes think world peace and world brotherhood something beyond our reach, something which we can have such a small part in realizing; but it remains for the Church to bring about. For this reason, every Christian Endeavor Society and every other organization of the Church should make it one of their chief concerns.

The youth movement, made up of students from all parts of the world, has pledged itself to the task of bringing about world peace. They want peace, not only in our country, but in other countries, and there is no better way of bringing about an understanding than through the young people who will later direct the affairs of the world.

Suggested Topics for Short Talks.

1. Christ and World Evangelism:

Matt. 9:35-38 pictures Christ as He went from village to village, from one synagogue to another, preaching and healing, and spreading the gospel. When Jesus had seen the conditions of the people He was sorry for them and said to His disciples: "The harvest is truly plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray, ye, that the Lord will send forth laborers." There have been people since the time of Christ who have realized the need of workers and have volunteered their lives, but only too few. The need is so great at the present time and the opportunity for service so inviting, that our young people cannot keep from giving their lives.

2. World Evangelism and the Present Generation:

"Let us write on the very door-steps of our Churches and homes, and on our gates, this grand motto: 'The whole world to be evangelized in the present generation.' It can be done; it ought to be done; it must be done."A. T. Pierson. The present generation has a greater contact with the foreign lands than of the young people of any other age, because so many things have made the world seem smaller and the people closer together.

Pastor's Short Talk—"The Church at Work."

Pass slips of paper, and ask every one present to answer the question, "Do you believe in missions?"—either "yes" or "no"—and then to write out the reason for the answer. Collect the papers, without the names, and read the answers. It will make the members think for themselves.

DOVER, DEL.

The annual congregational meeting of People's Christian Church, which was postponed from January 14th to February 11th on account of the pastor being on the Pacific Coast as a member of the Federal Council Evengelistic Team, was held last Wednesday night in the Church chapel. The Delaware State News gives the following account of the meeting:

After the devotional service which was conducted by the pastor, Dr. R. C. Helfenstein, Mr. John B. Hutton, secretary of the board of trustees, was unanimously elected chairman of the meeting. The reports covered the calendar year of 1924.

Prof. Wesley Webb, chairman of the board of trustees, reported for that board, stating that, in addition to the splendid new building which had been completed and equipped during the year at a total cost of over $150,000, which amount was all pledged before dedication day, that the Church had also secured, as an expression of appreciation of the splendid new building by a friend, the four adjacent properties to the Church at a cost of over forty-five thousand dollars for the purpose of a Church lawn or park. This will give the Church a beautiful open space with a 275-foot frontage. The houses are to be cleared off as soon as practicable, and the ground beautified by shrubbery, flowers, and a fountain.

He told of the fact that eight additional chimes and a Westminster chimes clock had been secured since dedication day, making as complete a set of chimes as can be found in any Church Cathedral in the world. It was also stated that a beautiful new home for the pastor's family is nearing completion, and that the old parsonage had been sold for $8,250. The new home is of colonial style, and is located in the New Highland Park division of Dover. The new home represents a valuation of eighteen to twenty thousand dollars, the cost being already provided for.

The report of the official board was made by

John S. Collins, treasurer. The report showed that during the year 1924 the amount of $9,340.04 had been paid into the regular Church treasury through the weekly duplex envelope system of finance, and that after all bills were paid, a balance of $298.57 remained in the treasury at the close of the year. The amount does not include any moneys paid into the building fund, nor does it include the money raised by the Sunday School and the other organizations of the Church.

The treasurer's report showed that the children, as well as the adults, of the congregation have a part in the financial interest of the Church. The weekly pledges showed that during the year 1924 eleven members subscribed 5 cents a week, thirty-five 10 cents a week, five 15 cents a week, six 20 cents a week, sixty-nine 25 cents a week, two 35 cents a week, fifty-four 50 cents a week, thirteen 75 cents a week, thirty-one, $1.00 a week; three $1.10 a week, two $1.15 a week, five $1.25 a week, seven $1.50 a week, four $2.00 a week, two $2.50 a week, two $2.75 a week, two $3.00 a week, two $5.00 a week, two $6.00 a week, and sixty varied amounts.

The Church responded to all the Conference and denominational calls during the year, in contributing to home and foreign missions, the Board of Education, Near East Relief, Anti-Saloon League, the orphanages and the Home for Aged Ministers.

The Church employs a director of religious education and secretary to the pastor, and also supports a foreign missionary in Tokyo, Japan.

The chairman of the membership committee, Mr. A. G. Massey, reported that one hundred and twenty-one members had been received into the Church during the year, one hundred and nine being received on confession of faith in Christ, and twelve by letter of transfer. This makes four hundred and twenty-three new members that have been received into People's Church during the present pastorate, which, allowing for the loss of 86 members by death and removal during the past four years, brings the present membership of the Church up to 602.

The reports of the Sunday School, the Woman's Missionary Society, the Young People's Missionary Society, the Lend-a-Hand Society, and the St. Paul's Brotherhood and the various standing committees were all of an unusually high order, showing the increased activities of these various organizations.

The reports of the pastor, Dr. R. C. Helfenstein, and of the director of religious education, Miss Martha Denison, reviewed the remarkable achievements of the Church and Sunday School during the past year, and outlined a proposed program of activities for the year 1925, which program was enthusiastically endorsed by the meeting. The pastor complimented the Church on having such an efficient official board to look after the business interests of the Church.

One learns with surprise, not to say deep regret, that some of our Sunday Schools do not use our own literature. One is persuaded that this comes about not from quality, but quantity. Possibly some non-responsible house, selling to thousands, is able to undersell our own house, and so some schools fall easy pray to the appeal for cheapness—even in the use of that real character-builder known as religious literature. Our Church has carefully selected the men and women of brains, Christian character and unquestioned loyalty and devotion to their Church and their God to edit and prepare our Sunday School literature. We ought to patronize these.

Christian Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

Ten applications in the last ten days. One each day. I wish you could read the letter in regard to two little children who are in dire distress. Our buildings are full to the limit. We never tire of helping the fatherless ones, but delight to render helpful service. We need another building if we are expected to do a greater work. A lady visitor was talking to us a few days ago. She asked us what the new building would cost, and I told her it would cost $30,000, and she replied that "The Christian Church ought to raise that amount easily." I think so, too; one dollar per member in the Southern Christian Convention would build the building. How easy!

Have you ever made a special donation to help the Orphanage—your Orphanage? If not, don't you want to help it some, too? If you have, ask yourself the question, "Have I been a real friend to the Orphanage and have I done my part?" Come! let's build the building for the little children. Let's build it this year. It can be done.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

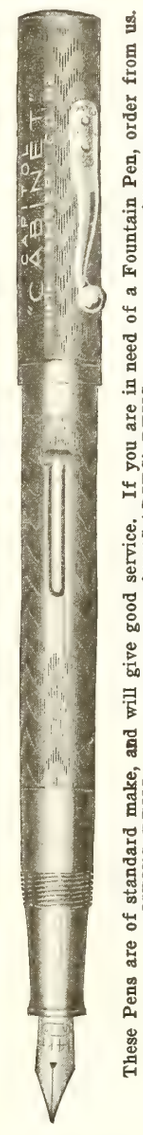
REPORT FOR MARCH 19, 1925.

Amount brought forward		$2,635.33
Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Wentworth	$ 10.41
Lebanon	1.15
Piney Plains	8.00
Turner's Chapel	1.15
Oak Level	1.11
		21.82
N. C. and Virginia Conference:
Danville, Third Avenue	$ 6.17
Mt. Auburn	8.29
New Lebanon	2.00
Baracca Class	2.00
Durham	10.85
		29.31
Eastern Virginia Conference:
Waverly	$ 15.00
First Church, Portsmouth	8.10
South Norfolk	3.30
Pleasant Grove	3.00
Antioch	6.00
Mt. Carmel	11.25
Holland	10.00
Suffolk	25.00
Elm Avenue	3.50
		85.15
Valley of Virginia Conference:
New Hope		3.00
Georgia and Alabama Conference:
N. Highlands		1.07
New Building Fund.
L. R. Jones, Franklin, Va.	$ 25.00
A. J. Willoughby	1.00
		26.00
Special Offerings.
M. & M. 11th distribution	$200.00
A Friend, Durham	15.00
		215.00
Grand total		$3,016.68

NOTICE.

Miss Lucy Eldredge will be in the Eastern Virginia Conference April 10th to May 10th, and any Sunday School or Church desiring a visit by her should communicate at once with Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, Holland, Va., Conference Director Christian Education.



SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

These Pens are of standard make, and will give good service. If you are in need of a Fountain Pen, order from us.
MEN'S PENS ..... $2.00 LADIES' PENS $2.00
Postage paid, and Pens guaranteed by the manufacturer.

LIMITED COMBINATION OFFER.—To a new subscriber, or for renewal (if not in arrears), $3.25, either Gentleman's or Lady's Pen, with guarantee of manufacturer. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 EAST BROAD STREET, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Mission Study Books.

Official List for 1924-1925.

ORDER BY TITLE OF BOOK.

FOR ADULT CLASSES.

For Home Mission Classes:
"The Romance of Home Missions," by S. L. Morris, D. D.. Paper, 50c; cloth..... $ .75
For Foreign Mission Classes:
"Ming Kwong—the City of Morning Light," by Mary Ninde Gamewell. Paper, 50c; cloth .75
"In China," by H. F. Williams, D. D..... .25

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

For Intermediate Home Mission Classes:
"The Land of All Nations," by Margaret F. Seelbach. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75
For Intermediate Foreign Mission Classes:
"China's Real Revolution," by Paul Hutchinson. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75
For Junior Foreign Mission Classes:
"Chinese Lanterns," by Minna McEwen Meyer. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... .75

LEADERS' HELPS.

Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Adult Classes) ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Young People's Classes)..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Land of All Nations"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Ming Kwong"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "China's Real Revolution".. .15
Leaders' Helps for "Chinese Lanterns"..... .15

Send all orders to—

THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

1536 East Broad Street - - Richmond, Virginia.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

KINSHIP WITH THE SAVIOUR.

"My mother and my brethren are these that hear the Word of God, and do it."--Luke 8:16-21.

The nearness of our relationship to Christ is measured by our willingness with all consecration to submit to Him as our Lord and Saviour. If we do this we are admitted to spiritual fellowship with Him—a relationship closer than that of blood, and more intimate; a fellowship eternal and blessed forever.

"It is only in the spirit that real union is born. We can dove-tail many pieces of wood together and make the unity of an article of furniture, but we cannot dove-tail items together and make a tree. And it is the union of a tree that we require, the union born of an indwelling life. Many members of the same family may bear the same name, may sit at the same table, and yet have no more vital union than a handful of marbles. But let the spirit of common love dwell in all hearts and there is a family bound together in glorious union. The spirit of God dwelling in all our spirits attunes them into glorious harmony."

Prayer.—Loving Father, wilt thou deepen the spiritual fellowship among men? Help those who grope for the light of Thy fellowship. May there be true union of hearts. In the joy of a common Redeemer, may we all become one. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE GREAT FUNDAMENTAL.

"And He said unto them, Where is your faith?" —Luke 8:22-25.

Jesus did not so much consider the little things of character as He did those essential to full spiritual manhood. Steadfast faith was one essential.

"The highest security against temptation lies in the steady development of an affirmative life. The final aim in life is to be something rather than to avoid or to escape something. The best form of defense lies in spiritual attack. If we walk in the grip of some splendid, far-reaching purpose, we shall put down temptation under our feet. We are in the conyueror's path if we walk in the Spirit; we shall then walk secure from attack."

In what is your faith? Is it in material things, machinery, wealth, position, health? Let us guard against absorption in these things. "Have faith in God." Put first things first.

Prayer.—Eternal God, we pray Thee to make our lives centers of living faith. Let there be an outflow from our hearts that will cause men to turn their thoughts to Thee. May we put our faith in things everlasting. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE MISSION OF THE DISCIPLES.

"And He sent them forth to preach the kingdom of God."—Luke 9:1-9.

Sent forth to preach the kingdom of God, this is the commission of every believer. The ways of preaching are as manifold as the needs of men —by work, by kindly deed, by example, by leadership in the world's work. No man is compelled, but all are invited to this ministry.

"A man must show himself a true man by choosing the great adventure. The drifter, the morally lax, the man whose spirit sinks down into flesh does not get on well in the midst of the mysterious facts of life. A man must gird himself tightly and move out boldly after Christ. He must take up life resolutely and put it decisively into Christ's enterprise, to be and to do all that an unfolding sense of duty may reveal."

Prayer.—Our Father God, may Thy kingdom be powerfully preached by Thy believing children. Let the minds of men be open to Thy gospel, their attention arrested and their minds subdued. Teach us faithfulness in the work of Thy kingdom at home and abroad. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE REWARD OF FAITHFULNESS.

"But whosoever shall lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it."—Luke 9:18-27.

There are some values that cannot be had by striving for them directly; they come only as indirect results. No man can say, behold now I shall live a great life and experience life's greatest blessings. But if a man does good today and tomorrow, as opportunity offers, he comes to the end of each day with the consciousness that he has truly lived. Christ was continually anxious that men should have true goals and worthy motives. Where this is true, real life follows as a natural and direct result.

"Self-denial, sacrifice and obedience result in the only experience worthy of the name 'life.' "

Prayer.—Gracious God, teach us to see the duty that lies nearest at hand. May we find ways of working with our fellows to do the work of the world, that we lose not the sense of Thy divine companionship. Let us live in heavenly places with Christ Jesus our Lord. Amen.

FRIDAY.

GOD'S CHOSEN ONE.

"This is my Son, my chosen; hear ye Him."— Luke 9:28-36.

Jesus Christ embodied in His life and teachings the supreme purpose of God for men. The law and the prophets found fulfillment in Him. Henceforth, men need not search in vain to know what is right, they are to "look to Jesus" and to shape their lives by Him.

"To recognize in Jesus of Nazareth the Son of God, the Saviour of mankind, is to receive a pledge of the absolute and unutterable help of God in bearing all burdens, in meeting all temptations, in solving all human problems. To know Christ is to come into living relationship with help inexhaustible. The moral vigor, the confident assurance, the unquenchable hope are begotten by this firm faith. Look up, then, with eager expectant faith to Jesus Christ, Son of man and Son of God. The representative Man on earth, the Eternal prototype of the Being of God."

Prayer.—Our Father God, we would hear Thy voice and know Thy meaning. Let us share in Thy love. May we ever be thankful for Thy Son our Lord and in all our ways follow His life and His truth. Amen.

SATURDAY.

FINDING GOD IN CHRIST.

"Whoever shall receive me receiveth Him that sent me."—Luke 9:46-50.

Jesus associated Himself with God in an entirely unique manner. He said He was the way to the Father's heart, "no man cometh to the Father but by me." He could speak as from God, "Come unto me . . . and I will give you rest." He was the source of life, "I am the way, the truth and the life"; and of the life eternal, "I am the resurrection and the life." He was the source of regeneration of humanity, "I am the true Vine," and through Him we are to come to God, "I am the door; by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved." He was the revelation of the Father, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father," and he was eternally joined with the Father in the world's redemption, "If a man love me, he will keep my words; and my Father will love him and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." We come near to God when we approach Christ.

Prayer.—Our Saviour, may our fellowship with Thee be very real. Let us know Thy way of life, that we may follow Thee to God. Help us to discover hidden riches of companionship and teach us new duties that, through obedience, we may come to know Thee better. Amen.

SUNDAY.

NEIGHBORLINESS.

"Which of these three, thinkest thou, proved neighbor unto him that fell among the robbers?" —Luke 10:25-37.

Neighborliness is a prime quality of religion. In the mind of Jesus no one might call himself truly religious who did not have an attitude towards his neighbors such as he desired them to have towards him. "Good neighbors look out for each other's interests." But as Jesus showed in this parable, neighborliness is not to be limited to race or personal acquaintance, but by the needs of others. Today, with our wireless and quick modes of travel, all the world is at our door. How shall we prove neighbors to those of alien race and in distant lands? This is the crucial problem of Christian nations today. Our Christianity is tested by the quality of our neighborliness.

Prayer.—O God our Father, we pray that Thou wouldst bind us to our brothers in deeper and more spiritual kinship. Teach us how to live to promote true neighborliness among men. Let us remember that we belong to a great family, and may we so live that the life of all men may be enriched and that the brotherhood of nations and of men shall become real. Amen.

"DON'T SHAVE—EXERCISE."

"If shaving interferes with your morning exercise, don't shave!"

So says Dr. James H. McCurdy, professor of physical education at the Y. M. C. A. College, Springfield, Mass., in an interview in the American Magazine. He is characterized in the article as "one of the most famous physical directors in the world."

"Doctor, I Feel Myself Slipping," is the title of the story and, according to Dr. McCurdy, one of the commonest confessions made to medical men. Most people would not be slipping, the doctor believes, if they had given a little care to their health.

"Any man," Dr. McCurdy says, "will spend ten minutes a day in shaving and fixing himself up to look the best that he can. But he balks at spending an equal length of time in keeping his body in good repair so that it can perform its functions normally. And this, notwithstanding that health is more important than looks.

"I'm no advocate of whiskers; but if you can't both shave and exercise, I'll come out flat for a program of exercise, and let the whiskers grow where they will."

Dr. McCurdy outlines a few simple exercises by which any one can test his body to see if it is in condition, and a few others by which he can help to keep it in condition. Some items on the daily schedule that he recommends are eight hours' sleep, seven or eight hours' work, one hour of wholesome physical recreation out-of-doors or in a gymnasium, ten minutes of definite exercise, and at least two hours spent in eating—a half-hour for breakfast, a half-hour for lunch, and one hour for dinner. Also, don't overeat, especially if your waistline is increasing!

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

DEAR KIDDIES:

Well, well! Hello there! We are feeling good again—but, oh my! our knees are terribly shakey. We didn't like to stay away from our work, and we didn't like to take beautiful (?) pink and white pills—uh! uh! But it was nice to eat all the pleasant things they brought us on a pretty tray and read a book and all the letters that came and all the cards. One of my cards said:

"You lucky thing to lie a-bed
With lots of pillows at your head,
Good things to eat, good things to read—
Now, really, what more could you need?"

I hope all my Kiddies are better, too, and are running around in this spring weather. Don't run too much, though, dears, and get another flu germ in your little noses. Oh! that'll mean more pink and white. But, shaw! let's play like we have forgotten 'em, and stay as well as well can be. We'll try, won't we, angels?

Write to your editor real soon, please. She wants to hear if you have seen Peter Rabbit in your spring garden yet. Love to all.

From your editor,
MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT.

HOW MANY HAVE YOU BROUGHT?

An eleven-year-old boy in Korea has brought seventy-nine other boys to his Sunday School as new pupils. This boy's parents were not Christians, but he has been going to Sunday School and has learned to be a Christian. He has been attending a heathen school every day. Such schools ordinarily hold classes on Sunday just as on the other six days of the week, but this one scholar persuaded all the pupils to go to Sunday School with him, and the other school had to be closed on Sunday. A few months ago he brought his mother and father with him to Church and now they are Christians, too.

A PICNIC IN PERSIA.

Every child in the Kernanshah Orphanage, in Persia, was up by daybreak on Saturday morning and all were dressed in their Sunday clothes, for this was the Saturday for the picnic.

Near the door stood eight donkeys. Of course, that wasn't nearly enough to go around, but no one expected to ride all the way, and three children can easily ride on one donkey. No one would have to walk all the way.

It was four miles to the pretty garden in which the picnic was to be held, and there were lovely shade trees along the way, and a spring at a cool, resting place, so before any one was very tired, the children clapped their hands and said, "There's the garden!"

"GIVE ME A PICTURE CARD."

One day, Miss Florence Pike went to visit a Chinese village to which no missionary had ever been. Two Bible women, Mrs. Lo and Mrs. T'aam, were with her.

Now, suppose you went to a village in which no one had ever been to Sunday School or to Church, and no one had ever seen a Bible or heard the name of Jesus, what would you say first? Some Chinese boys helped Miss Pike to begin. When they saw she had picture cards in her hand they surrounded her, begging, "Give me a picture card."

"If you will come and listen to the story I have to tell, each one of you shall have a picture card," she promised.

In less than five minutes, thirty men, women and children crowded around her. They did not wait for her to begin talking. They began by asking the two Bible women many questions about the white woman.

"What's the matter with her skin that all the color has faded out of it?" "Why does she have such white skin instead of real skin-colored skin?" "What does she eat for her meals?"

While they asked questions, Miss Pike was busy tacking a Bible chart to the outside of one of the mud houses. Mrs. Lo told the story of the prodigal son. They interrupted her several times to ask questions.

As she talked, more people came to listen, and Mrs. T'aam gathered some of them into another group and told them the story.

The children surrounded Miss Pike and her pictures, and kept her busy telling them stories for an hour. They memorized the verse, "Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners," and each child received the promised picture. There was great excitement and a general reaching out of hands until the cards were all distributed, and as Miss Pike went on she wished for more picture cards, and for more missionaries to tell the Bible stories and to give out the cards.

THE HAIR-NET MAKER.

By Janet Gargan.

She sits in the door, a blue-trousered maid,
And her fingers swiftly fly
As she knots the meshes of filmy nets
That foreign women will buy;
The summer has come, the moonflower vine
Trails green o'er the courtyard wall,
But her bright, black eyes may not watch it bloom,
Nor ears heed the pigeons' call.

The court behind her is dirty and close,
And noisome its darkened air,
So she seeks the sun that filters between
The tall pine trees growing there;
She wonders (while working) if foreign maids
Have never an hour for play,
If, to earn a pittance for rice and fish,
They must toil the live-long day.

She sits in the door, a blue-trousered maid,
And sunshine about her gleams—
While her fingers fly in knotting the nets,
Her heart has wondering dreams.

DOTTY HAS A MOST PLEASANT SURPRISE.

"Goodness me!" Dotty exclaimed, as she almost stumbled over the big grayish-brown bird and a flock of tiny yellow balls. "Did I hurt you or are you just startled?"

For the largest bird began to limp on one leg and drag one wing along the ground as if in pain.

"I'm so sorry," said Dotty softly. "I don't know who you are, but I'm a friend of Happy Giggles, and—"

"Good gracious me!" and the bird straightened up in a jiffy. "Come, babies," she called. "That's different. I thought you were a hunter, searching for me and my family. I'm Mrs. Ruffled Grouse. Come, babies; come, babies!" and Mrs. Ruffed Grouse made a queer drumming sound with her wings, and out from the bushes where they had been hiding scampered ten little yellow balls of feathers. "Children, this little girl is a friend of Happy Giggles, and—"

"Dotty is my name," laughed Dotty. "Why, I wouldn't harm a feather on your pretty heads."

"So you are Mrs. Ruffed Grouse? I don't think I've ever seen you before."

"I'll bet your Uncle Johnny has, all right," chuckled Mrs. Ruffed Grouse.

"So you've never seen me before? Then have a good look; I don't mind," and Mrs. Ruffed Grouse turned all around so Dotty could see her.

She was about sixteen inches long, upper parts chestnut, varied with grayish and yellowish.

"Not as pretty as our friend, Mr. Peacock, but not a bad-looking tail, do you think?" she said.

It was a pretty tail—yellowish-brown, rather rusty looking, beautifully barred with irregular bands, half buff and black.

"Indeed, it is a pretty tail," agreed Dotty. "I think you are a pretty bird. Does your husband look anything like you?"

"Well, yes, we dress just about the same," laughed Mrs. Ruffed Grouse. "Only I don't believe my colors are quite as vivid as his. Then on the sides of Daddy Ruffed Grouse's neck you'll find a large tuft of glossy greenish-black feathers, tipped with brown of a lighter shade. I haven't them. Some of my female friends wear these side decorations, but I haven't any.

"I hope the next time you see me you'll know me at once," and giving a queer little whirring sound, Mrs. Ruffed Grouse and her yellow babies scooted under the bushes and that was the last Dotty saw of them for a long time.

STUDYING GOD'S WORD.

It is very essential for us to study God's inspired Word if we would make a success in our Christian life. Let us take, for instance, "what the occupation for our daily work consists of." The cook must study the cook-book very closely if she would make a success of her work. The same is required of civil service men, typists, stenographers, etc., and the same applies to our spiritual life.

Paul, in writing to the young man Timothy, said, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God: a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2d Tim. 2:15). And how can we rightly divide the word of truth except we study the Word? You will find in the following chapter (15th verse) that from a child he had known the Holy Scriptures; but it was essential for him to study to show himself approved unto God. But many would say, why? The 17th verse answers the quqestion—that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. For "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful. But his delight is in the law of the Lord, and in His law doth he meditate day and night" (Psa. 1:1-2). We must study God's Word if we would be blessed of Him, and, too, we need it for a "lamp unto our feet and a light unto our pathway" (Psa. 119:105). "Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? By taking heed thereto according to Thy Word. A prayer: "We know, O Lord, that Thy judgments are right. They that fear Thee will be glad when they see Thee, because they have hoped in Thy Word. Let Thy tender mercies come unto us, that we may live, for Thy law is our delight; Thy Word, O God, is better unto us than thousands of gold and silver. Our hands will we also lift up unto Thy commandments, which we have loved. Remember the Word unto Thy servants upon which Thou hast caused us to hope. This is our comfort in our affliction. O let us not wonder from Thy commandments, for we ask it in Jesus' name. Amen."

Brethren, let us pray that we all may study God's Holy Word more in the future than in the past. "God is our refuge and strength; a very present help in trouble" (Psa. 116:1).

Danville, Va. P. H. RICKETTS.

CHILD MARRIAGES.

More than two-thirds of a million persons living in the United States today have been child-brides who were less than sixteen years of age when they married, or have been married to brides under that age—the great majority of these, contrary to popular belief, are native white of native patronage. These are a few of the many startling facts revealed in an extended study of child marriages, a preliminary report on which was made public here today by the Russell Sage Foundation.

This situation is due in large measure to two causes, says the report. The fact that many states require no better evidence of age than the affidavit of one of the candidates for a marriage license; and that the legal minimum marriageable age is still only twelve years for girls and fourteen years for boys in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Louisiana, Virginia, Florida, Tennessee, Maryland, Rhode Island, Colorado, Idaho, Maine and Mississippi.

The seriousness of the situation becomes even more impressive when it is known that the foundation's report classes as child-brides only those under sixteen years of age; that it does not take into account the many marriages of children over sixteen, but under eighteen; and that the total of 667,000 child-brides and husbands of child-brides is increased each year by thousands of additional child marriages. Nor have the foundation's investigators included in their estimates boys married at seventeen or younger to girls or women older than fifteen, because the number of such marriages is relatively small.

The investigatotrs, working under the direction of Mary E. Richmond, nationally known authority on family welfare work, have visited ninety cities in twenty-eight States; their field work was followed by exhaustive statistical studies, library research and extended interviews and correspondence with representatives of social agencies, jurists, public officials, physiologists, and other authorities on the many phases of the problem. The study, which is still under way, covers not only the child-marriage problem, but the whole subject of the administration of marriage laws. The sections of the report dealing with child marriages, prepared by Miss Richmond with Fred S. Hall as collaborator, will be published within a few weeks and will immediately be brought to the attention of leagues of women voters, marriage-law administrators, school authorities, State and local legislators, clergymen, and social welfare agencies throughout the country.

As an illustration of the public apathy in the matter, the section of the report made public today cites the fact that in fourteen States it is legally possible for a girl to marry at an earlier age than that at which she is permitted to become a wage-earner. The marriageable age of girls has remained an inactive issue in these States, says the report, while their educational and child-welfare agencies have kept the age of leaving school and of entering industry a burning one.

"This century has often been misnamed 'the century of the child,'" says the report. "In sober truth, with a quarter of the full term behind us, it must be acknowledged that the twentieth century is no such thing; certainly not when conditions in a country as intelligent as the United States still make possible the marriage of children. Such conditions constitute only a small part of the body of evidence against exaggerated claims of advance in the matter of child welfare, but they are a part which has not yet been developed in any detail. In the matter of child marriages, no group in any section of the United States has yet given serious attention to the social effect of existing laws and to their necessary daily adaptation in the license offices."

"It should be noted," says the introduction to the report, "that these facts concern the general public also, and parents more than any other one section of the public."

WHITE—WARREN.

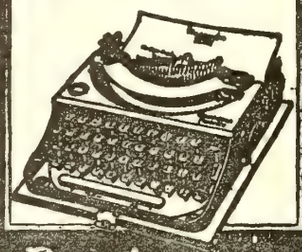
Mr. John White and Miss Nomie Warren, of Murfreesboro, N. C., were united in marriage by the writer at the Holy Neck parsonage, Holland, Va., on March 9, 1925.

Mr. White is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim White, and the bride the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Warren, all of Murfreesboro, N. C. They will make their home at Murfreesboro. May their wedded life be long and happy.

N. G. NEWMAN.

An uncollected balance of $15,000,000 on centenary pledges due the Methodist Church of the South proves that it is more difficult to pay than to promise.

Something You Have Been Waiting For



Remington Portable Typewriter

—with Standard Keyboard and every other feature common to the larger machines. Case only four inches high.

Price, with case, $60.

Send Your Order to THE CHRISTIAN SUN Richmond, Va.

WINTER TOURIST TICKETS

—ALL RESORTS—

SOUTH AND SOUTHWEST

CALIFORNIA

Via New Orleans and "Sunset Limited."

INFORMATION, ITINERATIES, RESERVATIONS Furnished in Detail Upon Request.

Apply to Local Agent, or Address

F. H. POSTON, Division Passenger Agent,

Southern Railway System,

809 East Main Street, - - Richmond, Virginia.

WINSTON-INTERNATIONAL

RED LETTER BIBLES

SELF-PRONOUNCING

Bibles and Testaments that Emphasize Christ All the Prophetic Types and Prophecies in Old Testament and Words of Christ in New Testament are Printed in Red.

Send for Illustrated Catalog

THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO., Publishers

American Bible Headquarters

429 Winston Building Philadelphia

V. E. MAREAN

Pipe Organ Expert

TUNING — REPAIRING

REBUILDING

Motors Installed Yearly Contracts

P. O. Box 864, - Richmond, Va.

Phone, Boulevard 7011-J

Laxatives do not overcome constipation

LAXATIVES and cathartics provide temporary relief only. Their continued use leads to permanent injury. In time, says an eminent physician, an almost incalculable amount of harm is done by the use of pills, salts, mineral waters, castor oil and the like.

Physicians advise lubrication for Internal Cleanliness

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt the habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

Nujol

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

For Internal Cleanliness

ROSCOE.

Mrs. Rachel Elizabeth Roscoe was born May 8, 1856, and quietly, as if pausing to rest from bearing a heavy burden, she passed to her reward March 12th, and in the presence of a large concourse of friends and relatives she was laid to rest beneath a band of beautiful flowers in Greenview Cemetery, Reidsville, on the afternoon of March 13th. The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. Bro. Goode, pastor of First Baptist Church, Reidsville, and Rev. Bro. Moore, pastor of the First M. E. Church, South Reidsville, from the Reidsville Christian Church, of which Sister Roscoe was a charter member.

She was married on March 8, 1883, to our dear Bro. E. R. Roscoe, who still survives her. She was the mother of seven children—six boys and one girl—and, with the exception of one boy who recently preceded her to the grave, survive her, besides five grandchildren.

At the time of her death she was 68 years, 10 months and 4 days old, and it may be truly said of her in consolation to her loved ones who mourn her going, as well as her numerous friends, that she was a faithful wife, a devoted and loving mother, a trusted friend and, most of all, she was a gentle Christian.

R. A. WHITTEN.

Reidsville, N. C.

PHILOSOPHER DEFINED.

Kant, the philosopher, used to tell the following anecdote with great glee: A traveler once showed Lavater, the physiognomist, two portraits—the one a highwayman, who had been broken upon the wheel; the other the portrait of Kant. He was asked to distinguish them. Lavater took up that of the highwayman. After attentively considering it for some time, he said: "Here we have the true philosopher; here is penetration in the eye, and reflection in the forehead; here is cause, and there is effect; and here is combination, there is distinction; synthetic lips; and analytic nose." Then, turning to the portrait of the philosopher, he exclaimed: "The calm, thinking villain is so well expressed and so strongly marked in his countenance that it needs no comment."

WHAT IS EDUCATION?

I believe that education is the fundamental method of social progress and reform. . . . I believe that education is a regulation of the process of coming to share in the social consciousness. . . . I believe that the school is primarily a social institution. Education being a social process, the school is simply the form of community life in which all those agencies are concentrated that will be most effective in bringing the child to share in the inherited resources of the race, and to use his own powers for social ends. I believe that education, therefore, is a process of living and not a preparation for future living.—John Dewey.

To feed their population, England, Scotland and Wales have to import more than nine months' food supplies.

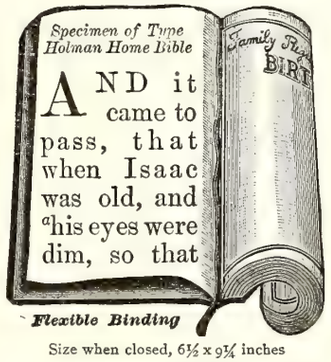
ELON COLLEGE---CO-EDUCATIONAL

WHITLEY AUDITORIUM BUILDING
One of the Group of Five New Buildings now Completed.

Elon, in her rebuilding program, has been looking to the future. Ten buildings, new and modern equipment, and a highly trained and efficient faculty are at the service of the future leaders of our Church. The phenomenal growth of Elon in the past two years indicates a larger growth throughout the whole denomination in the years just ahead. Make Elon your own Church College in a personal way by your patronage and prayerful co-operation.

HOLMAN BIBLES

For Old Folks and the Home
EXTRA LARGE PRINT WITH REFERENCES



Specimen of Type
Holman Home Bible
AND it came to pass, that when Isaac was old, and his eyes were dim, so that Family Record
BIBLE
Flexible Binding

Size when closed, 6½ x 9¼ inches

Printed from large Clear Pica Type, with Marginal References, Family Record and Maps. This HOME BIBLE is new and very desirable for every day use, containing all the advantages of a Family Bible in a compact size that can be easily handled, with Record for Births, Marriages and Deaths. The best Bible obtainable for old folks who need extra large clear print and a light-weight book.

No. 2014. Durably Bound in French Seal Leather, full flexible covers, round corners, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, gold titles.

Price—Post Paid 4.85

HOLMAN BIBLES

NEW BLACK-FACED TYPE TEACHERS' BIBLE

The very latest and newest Teachers' Bible published, and it includes every possible improvement in Bible making. The type is a clean, clear, sharp Black Face, which is printed on the finest paper obtainable. Easy to read (can be read in the dimmest light), and is just the page for those suffering from impaired eyesight. Compact in size, light in weight, easy to carry.

Absolutely flexible binding. Contains Old and New Testaments, Treasury of Biblical Information, Practical Comparative Concordance, Oriental Light on the Bible, Four Thousand Questions and Answers, Fifteen New Maps in Colors, about 1500 pages in all.

Size, 5¼ x 7¾ inches.

Specimen of Type
THE LORD is my shephe not want.
2 He maketh me to lie green pastures: he leadeth the still waters.

No. 4412. Bound in Seal Grain Morocco, with overlapping covers, rounded corners, red under gold edges. Silk head bands and silk marker.

Price—Post Paid 4.20

No. 433X. Holman India Paper. Algerian Morocco, Leather Lined, Silk Sewed, Divinity Circuit, round corners, carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and Helps as above.

Price—Post Paid 9.35

MONEY TO LEND ON IMPROVED FARMS--FAVORABLE TERMS

Write for Details

SO. BOND & MORTGAGE CO.
627 E. Main St. - - Richmond, Va.

Medical College of Virginia

Medicine	Dentistry
Pharmacy	Nursing

New Buildings. Well-equipped Laboratories, under the direction of full time, competent teachers.

The Memorial Hospital, Dooley Hospital, St. Philip Hospital, are owned and controlled by the Medical College of Virginia, and offer every facility for thorough clinical teaching.

Staffs composed of the Faculty of the College. Additional clinical facilities are offered through other institutions in Richmond.

For full information and catalogue, address—

J. R. McCAULEY, Secretary.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D.....Editor
W. W. STALEY, D. D.....Associate
W. A. HARPER, LL. D.....Associate
R. C. HELFENSTEIN, D. D...Associate
REV. S. C. HARRELL.....Associate
REV. S. M. LYNAM.....News Editor
P. J. KERNODLE....Managing Editor

Subscription Rates.

One Year $2.00
Six Months 1.00

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post-Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows the date of expiration. Please renew at least two weeks in advance.

Change of Address: Give both old and new post-office when asking that your address be changed.

When subscriptions are made for friends, state whether paper is to be stopped at end of the year.

Remittances: Make all remittances to "The Christian Sun," 1536 East Broad Street, Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and Marriage Notices, limited to 100 words, are published free of charge. All over 100 words, published at 1 cent a word. Remittance should accompany copy. Write names distinctly.

Advertising Rates: "Want Ads," 2 cents a word an insertion. Display Rates quoted upon request.

FOR SALE.

A 40-bbl., electric-driven, fully-equipped modern Flour Roller-Mill, Corn and Feed Mill, located right in the town of Elon College, near railroad siding, on acre lot; hard-surface and sand-clay roads leading out in all directions.. A good custom grain mill and good business opportunity for the right man, as well as advantage of a high-grade high school and high-class college.

Terms: Part cash; balance on long terms. Apply—

C. R. LOVE, - - BURLINGTON, N. C.

EMORY.

Mrs. Nora G. Emory departed this life March 4, 1925, after a few days of sickness at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. H. Bulls, Portsmouth, Va.

Mrs. Emory had successfully passed her fifty-fifth mile-post. She was a woman truly devoted to her home and her Church. She was a faithful member of Burton's Grove Christian Church, and served it well until a few years ago, when she moved from the neighborhood to live with her daughter in Portsmouth, Va. She was loved by all who knew her. She leaves to mourn their loss one son, Joe Emory; one daughter, Mrs. J. H. Bulls; three grandchildren, three sisters and one brother and a host of friends.

The burial service was conducted by the writer, and her body was laid to rest in the old family burying ground near Manry, Va. May the one who is concerned of our grief and He who sees the sparrow when he falls, comfort the bereaved ones. G. C. CRUTCHFIELD.

Wakefield, Va.

APPLE.

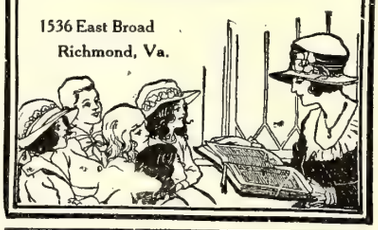
Margaret Elizabeth Wyrick Apple was born March 3, 1844, and died February 15, 1925. She was married to J. W. Apple September 16, 1873. She was a member of Apple's Chapel Christian Church, having joined in early life. The funeral was conducted at Apple's Chapel by the writer, and her body placed in the Church cemetery. She leaves behind a husband, five children, twenty-four grandchildren and one great grandchild, together with a host of relatives and friends. May the Lord bless those that remain. J. F. APPLE.

OXFORD TEACHERS' BIBLES

An Oxford Teachers' Bible has references and 300 pages of helps that are a mine of information to Bible students. The helps are arranged in alphabetical order, like a dictionary. They are accurate, comprehensive and up-to-date. A few styles are listed here. Many others are described in our Bible catalogue, mailed upon request.

04403 [This size print] Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 6⅞ x 4¾ inches $4.00
0623x [Same Bible as 04403] Printed on Oxford India paper. Only 1 inch thick..... $6.00
04453 [This size print] French Morocco leather binding, overlapping covers, 7¼ x 5 in. $4.35
0773x [Same Bible as 04453] Printed on Oxford India paper. A remarkably thin and light Bible. (Only 1 inch thick) $7.75
05453 [Same Bible as 04453] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $6.25
05453x [Same Bible as 0773x] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $8.75
04523 [This size print] A self-pronouncing Oxford Bible. Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 8⅛ x 5½ inches... $5.50
0923x [Same Bible as 04523] Printed on Oxford India paper, only 1⅛ inches thick... $9.75

ORDER FROM
"THE CHRISTIAN SUN"
1536 East Broad
Richmond, Va.



FOR GOOD HOME COOKING
MRS. COOK'S CAFETERIA
805 East Grace Street.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

A Co-Educational School

LOCATED AT

WADLEY, ALABAMA

This School offers the last two years of Academic work and the first two years of College work.

The following Courses are offered in the—

COLLEGE DEPARTMENT: English, Bible, Religious Education, Latin, French, History, Education, Mathematics and Science.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENTS: Music—Piano, Voice; Commercial Department—Bookkeeping, Typewriting, and Shorthand.

Due attention will be given Athletics, such as Tennis, Basket-Ball, Baseball, Football.

The government of the School is mild, but firm, endeavoring to create a home atmosphere as much as possible, not merely to maintain discipline, but to cultivate Christian character.

This is our own School, located within reach of all in this section, and the cost is less than any other College within reasonable distance of those who would attend School from this section.

Send for a Catalogue giving full description of Courses and entrance conditions.

S. L. BEOUGHER, President
Wadley, - - - - - Alabama.

HOLMAN BIBLES

FOR CHILDREN
PICTORIAL BIBLES WITH HELPS

The text is self-pronouncing, by the aid of which children can learn to pronounce the difficult Scripture proper names.

Specimen of Type

27 And the boys grew: and Esau was a cunning hunter.
5 And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof.

Size, 5⅜ x 3½ inches. With beautiful photo views of scenes in Bible lands distributed throughout the text. Also maps of Bible lands in colors. Also new Practical Helps to Bible Study, especially designed for instructing children in scriptural information.

No. 9111. French Seal Leather, overlapping covers, round corners, gold edges, gold titles.
Our Price—Post Paid..... 2.30

COLORED PICTURE EDITION

Portraying in natural colors, scenes and places taken from nature and life in the Holy Land.

No. 9211. Same as No. 9111, but with Beautifully Colored Pictures.
Our Price—Post Paid..... 2.40

FOR INTERMEDIATE SUNDAY-SCHOOL SCHOLARS

Large Clear Black Type, Self-Pronouncing, containing Helps to Bible Study, 4000 Questions and Answers, Maps in Colors, and Presentation Page. A Beautiful Gift Bible.

Specimen of Type.

22 And the prophet Is'ra-el, and said unto thyself, and mark, and for at the return of t

Size, 7 x 5 inches.

No. 215. Divinity Circuit Style, Bound in French Seal Leather, round corners, red under gold edges, with silk head bands and purple silk marker, gold titles, etc.
Our Price—Post Paid..... 3.10

No. 3215RL. Red Letter Scholars' Bible, same Bible as No. 215, with all the Sayings of Christ printed in Red, and with Red and gold INLAID PANEL SIDE TITLES, also Beautifully Colored Pictures.
Our Price—Post Paid..... 3.45

Holman Self-Pronouncing VEST POCKET TESTAMENTS

Clearest Print in Smallest Size
4⅜ x 2¾ x ⅝ inches

Specimen of Type.

AND the third day there was a marriage in Ca'na of Gal'i-lee; and the mother of Je'sus was

2133K. Bound in durable Morocco Grain Semble Leather, flexible limp, gilt titles ..... .60
2113. French Morocco, genuine leather, flexible limp, gold titles, rounded corners, gold edges..... .70
2115P. French Morocco, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, with the Book of Psalms included $1.10

ILLUSTRATED VEST POCKET TESTAMENT
With Pictures of Holy Land Scenes

2814. French Morocco, limp, gold side title round corners, red under gold edges ..... .85

RED LETTER VEST POCKET TESTAMENT

With all the words of our Lord printed in red.

13RL. French Morocco, flexible limp, gold side title on red panel, gold edges. .85
15RLP. French Morocco, overlapping covers, flexible, gold side title on red panel, red under gold edges, with Book of Psalms included $1.25

INDIA PAPER VEST POCKET TESTAMENT
Thin as a Wafer

2136XP. Fine Grain Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lined to edge, with Psalms included $2.25

Send Your Orders to
THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY. 1956.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Official Organ of the Southern Christian Convention

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY. IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY. IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXVII. RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, MARCH 26, 1925. NUMBER 13.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

LONG-DISTANCE TICK.—

The ticking of a watch, which was broadcast by a station at Havana, March 23d, was heard distinctly by Clayton B. Straw, at his home, at West Hopkinton, N. H.

A PARAGRAPH WORTH STUDYING.—

An analysis of the parentage of persons listed in "Who's Who," America's great biographical reference book, shows that it takes 48,000 unskilled laborers to have one son qualify for inclusion in the volume. The same number of skilled laborers would have thirty such sons; business men, 600; professional men, except clergymen, 1,035; and clergymen, 2,400. The tabulation appears in "The Character of Races" by Ellsworth Huntington."

ERECT RELIGIOUS EDUCATION CENTER.—

The local Kiwanians have just erected a religious education center at Ensley, a suburb of Birmingham, Ala. The religious education building occupies a site next to the high school, and will be used for nonsectarian religious training for the children in a week-day school of religion. The building was erected by a local firm on a nonprofit-making basis. It would be a great thing for the religious world could other city organiazations be induced to erect similar centers in other cities. It is not realized that the Sunday School, good as it is, cannot meet the full need for religious instruction now so urgent.

BUILDING STILL LARGER AIRSHIPS.—

In Great Britain they are preparing to build two airships, each twice as large as our Shenandoah or Los Angeles, for service between England and India. Each will have a capacity of about five millions cubic feet and will be 720 feet long and 140 feet high. Seven oil-burning engines, each of six hundred horsepower, will furnish the motive force. The maximum speed will be seventy miles an hour, and there will be accommodations for one hundred passengers. The government will build one, and a private company the other. Unless the present plans miscarry, the service will begin in 1927.

This will be another step toward making the whole world a big neighborhood. Having made it a neighborhood, the next thing will be to make it a brotherhood, a work which we are happy to believe is going on steadily and rather rapidly.

WHY THE SOUL CANNOT DIE.—

The same principle now applies to the human soul. As it is a center and agent of mental activity, a finite copy of God's infinite Spirit, it can change the form and direction of its activities, but its activities themselves can never cease; its spiritual energy can never be spent and vanish. It is a bit of the immortal energy of God and can never die. There is no escape from this conclusion unless we annul the principle of the conservation of energy, which is one of the most solidly established principles of our modern scientific thought. And this law applies to the soul, even though we hold, which idealistic philosophy does not hold, that the physical energy of matter and the spiritual energy of the soul are of a different nature; for we can no more think of spiritual reality than we can of physical reality as lapsing into nothingness. We have thus, at this point, hitched our wagon to one of the most splendid stars of science.

WHAT IS SAID ABOUT THE PRESIDENT.—

If President Coolidge had time to travel through the country, and if the people would tell him what they really think, which they never do, he would realize that he has lost hundreds of thousands of personal friends and hurt the Republican party by allowing General Mitchell to be humiliated and demoted, to "save the face" of Mr. Weeks, who was put into the Cabinet by influences with which President Coolidge is not well acquainted.

The President, of course, does not know the part played by the battleship builders and other big business, in building of Cabinets. He apparently does not realize that the people of this country are at least 98 per cent against Mr. Weeks and in favor of Brigadier General Mitchell in the aircraft controversy.

It is a disadvantage to be surrounded by individuals that bow and scrape and always say, "Yes, Mr. President."

LAST WEEK'S STORM.—

Revised casualty lists indicated little change from the first estimates as Wednesday afternoon's cyclone plowed its destructive course into five Middle West States. Fairly systematic checking in thirty-five cities and towns in the storm's path indicated a death list of between 700 and 800, with approximately 3,000 injured and many others homeless. It was believed, however, that many bodies were still to be recovered, as entire towns were demolished and isolated. Identified dead in five States totaled 466.

A check of the devastated areas had not progressed far enough to permit even a rough estimate of property losses, although sums of millions were mentioned from many points. Officials of the Red Cross in Washington characterized the storm as the greatest disaster since the Ohio Valley flood of 1913, when $500,000,000 worth of property was laid waste.

Additional light on the characteristic behaviour of the great tornado was provided by Prof. Henry J. Cox, government forecaster at Chicago, who called it a typical Middle West spring-time storm. It originated over the Gulf of Lower California, he said, passed harmlessly over Colorado, dipped to Arkansas and then took a path of least resistance along the Ohio Valley. There its major force was spent, and it rushed off on a high wind in the direction of Iceland.

Prof. Cox explained that in the spring the sun heats the air in certain regions, causing warm whirling currents which strike colder waves from the North. The result is a great circular movement of air over a large area, which is called a cyclone. Tornadoes, varying from a mile to five miles in length, develop on the edges of the cyclone and cause the damage by their violent movement.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. TO MEET.—

Fifty-one countries will be represented at the World's W. C. T. U. convention, which will be held in Edinburgh, Scotland, June 19-24. Miss Anna A. Gordon, of Evanston, Ill., president of the World's, as well as the National White Ribbon organization, will preside at this convention, which will be the twelfth held since its formation in 1883. Convention sessions will be held in the Free kirk.

Youths' year (1925) as inaugurated here in the United States by the National W. C. T. U., will be especially recognized by the world's organization, which will feature children and young people throughout its program events. During the past year the young people's branch has been developing a spirit which will tend to better international understanding among young people the world over, through individual correspondence work. Mrs. Oswald Carver, of London, England, will report on this phase of the work, which includes the exchange of letters between youthful members. These letters show that the problems of young people are the same whether they live in the Orient, South Africa, or the U. S. A. Methods of handling these problems, however, differ because of tradition, education and social conditions. South Africa is sending a full delegation to the convention and delegates from the following have also made reservations: China, Japan, India, Australia, New Zealand, France, Germany; in fact, all of continental Europe, and even from the newer countries, Latvia, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland, which have more recently formed W. C. T. U. organizations affiliated with the world group.

It is estimated that more than two thousand delegates will attend this convention.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Have you your Easter programs and plans for your offerings arranged?

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, was in Richmond, Va., last Saturday and called at this office. Wherever he goes he carries good cheer and a smiling face, and we assure the doctor that this visit was highly appreciated.

Of the more than one hundred and fifty active ministers of the Southern Christian Convention, would it be asking too much at this early date that some one or more formulate some plan or proposition on which their interests might be concentrated?

The First Christian Sunday School, of Richmond, of which D. J. Kelley is superintendent, made a new high record for attendance last Sunday—104 were present, or 89 per cent of the entire enrollment, and five classes of the school had every member present.

On March 2d we sent out quite a number of letters from THE SUN office, seeking co-operation in respect to the circulation of the paper. Already replies are being received, and it is earnestly requested that each person to whom a letter was sent be interested to the extent of making a reply.

The steamship "President Arthur" put out from New York harbor recently, sailed under a Jewish flag, said to be the second ship sailing under Jewish colors in 2,000 years. The liner carried 450 Jews bound for Jerusalem, where they are to attend the opening of the Jewish college on April 30th.

April 30th will conclude the five-year period of our Men and Millions pledges. Here is devoutly hoping that as many as possible will pay up in full all they pledged by that date. Our enterprises need the money, and we who made these pledges need to come square with ourselves, our Church and our God in paying them if we can.

Rev. W. L. Wells, after quite a continued illness, is now strong again and feels able to take up his work where he left it when his illness began in December. He expects to return to the Seminary at Richmond in a few days. Here is wishing for Bro. Wells successful spring work in the pursuit of his studies for further preparation in ministerial work.

The date of the organ recital at the First Christian Church, by Mr. Charles Leech Gulick, has been changed to Monday evening, March 30th. Mr. Gulick comes highly recommended, and as this is his only recital in Richmond this season, the Church should have a packed house to hear him. All members of the Church are urged to attend and to invite their friends by personal invitation.

We note with great sorrow the sudden death of our friend and brother, Rev. L. W. Fogleman, about which event and about whose life, his pastor, Rev. J. E. McCauley, writes in our obituary columns this week. Bro. Fogleman was a splendid type of Christian man, devout in all his attitudes and undertakings, and lived a life of faithful devotion and service to his God. Our sympathies go out to the widow and the four fatherless children and for the members of the Church of which he was the beloved pastor. A truly good and devout man has gone to his reward.

One of the most revered pastors by his people is Rev. G. D. Hunt, Wadley, Ala. Others often wonder how this pastor grips his people as he does and wins their universal esteem and deep devotion. If any of this mind see this line, let them turn to Bro. Hunt's letter elsewhere in this issue and see if they cannot in that letter discover a line that lets out the secret of Bro. Hunt's wonderful success as pastor and real leader.

Rev. G. D. Hunt writes, "We are actively engaged in trying to raise enough money to put up an administration building at Bethlehem College. We must have more room. It is a necessity. We have some $20,000 to $25,000 pledged on that new building, and some paid in cash. The canvass is still on. This is a most worthy and commendable undertaking. They are greatly handicapped in not having ample room at Bethlehem.

"The sermon in THE SUN of March 12th by Rev. Mills Barrett on 'Heavenly Recognition' is comforting. We wish to pass it on to others. Please send me two extra copies if you have them." So writes one of our good minister's wives who has herself been bereaved and has a dear one gone on to the better world. It is indeed a most readable, comforting and thoughtful discourse, supposed, as stated before, to have been the only written sermon ever preached and so left behind by the late-lamented Rev. Mills Barrett.

We are advised that the executive committee of the Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor Convention of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference has changed the time of the meeting of this Convention from Tuesday after the second Sunday in July to Sunday, July 26, 1925. Let us hope that this change will prove for the best interest of the work, as this Conference has not had for several years a Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention. By meeting on Sunday it may give an impetus and an advertisement to the Convention and a larger delegation from the Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor Societies. Rev. J. E. McCauley, Elon College, N. C., is the president of the Convention; Bro. W. E. Walker, R. R. 6, Burlington, N. C., vice-president; Miss Gertrude Brown, of Elon College, N. C., is secretary. Bro. McCauley is exceedingly anxious to have a large delegation of our young people present for this Convention and to get their counsel and wisdom for carrying on the work of the young people in the Church. The place of meeting is Shallow Ford, Alamance County, N. C.

Bro. E. W. Neville, one of our faithful and loyal laymen, of Chapel Hill, writing under date of March 18th, says: "We are getting along fine in our Church work. Received six substantial members Sunday. All heads of families, who should be of great help and service to us." This is a fine way to put it. We often go out after members with the thought in mind of the favors and privileges we confer upon them. We should tell them, on the other hand, of what service they could be to us. When Jethro, the pagan father-in-law of Moses, went to visit his son-in-law, Moses, the great law-giver, Moses, invited Jethro to remain and to go on with the Israelites, saying: "Come with us. We will do thee good." Jethro, following the dictates of human nature, respectfully declined the invitation. Moses had the good grace, however, to put his invitation in a different light on receiving this refusal, and say: "Come with us; you can do great good and be instead of eyes to us in this wilderness journey." That invitation reached Jethro, as such an invitation usually does when extended in the right spirit.

From Greensboro Daily News, March 16th: The Woman's Missionary Society of Elon College was reorganized this morning at the Shallow Ford Christian Church, near here. After the Sunday School hour, under the direction of a special committee, composed of Mrs. S. W. Caddell, leader of Circle No. 4, of the Woman's Missionary Society of Elon College, and Mesdames W. S. Alexander and H. D. Lambeth, the society was reorganized, with eleven active members and four honorary members. Prior to the talks made by the ladies of the committee, Rev. Mr. Pollard made an inspirational talk. A society had several years ago been organized, but interest seemed to have been lost and a request had been made for reorganization. The members enrolled were: Mrs. O. B. Pitts, president; Miss Odessa Barber, vice-president; Mrs. H. P. Tickle, recording secretary; Mrs. J. B. Gerringer, treasurer; Mrs. Wade Squires, Mrs. Thurman Gerringer, Misses Virginia Cable, Thelma Tickle, Ethel Faucett, Thelma Truitt. The honorary members are Mesdames S. W. Caddell, W. S. Alexander, H. D. Lambeth, and Rev. Mr. Pollard and O. B. Pitts.

NOTICE.

Miss Lucy Eldredge will be in the Eastern Virginia Conference April 10th to May 10th, and any Sunday School or Church desiring a visit by her should communicate at once with Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, Holland, Va., Conference Director Christian Education.

WHERE IS THE CHURCH DRIFTING?

By Rev. V. T. Crawford,

Portsmouth, Va.

In religion, as elsewhere, it is profitable for us to take a retrospective view of the progress which has been made in recent years; and the writer admits that in many respects very marked progress has been made in the organization and administration of the affairs of the Church, and of religion as a social institution. But if we take the pains to examine the grounds of the faith of multitudes of people today, the condition of their religious consciousness and practice, we find ourselves face to face with a situation which has two very widely different aspects, both of them marked. We see the progress which religion has made in its physical growth and social activity. We notice with pride the commendable, larger outlook upon the world in which the Church is to do its work, in setting up the kingdom of God, and of teaching men the righteousness, peace and joy of abiding under the kingship of Jesus Christ.

But there is another side of the picture which presents to us, we think, the peril of the situation, and the setting forth of which is the purpose of this article. Just as it is possible for us to give our attention so much to one particular truth, or phase of truth, as to miss altogether the importance of other truths, so it seems to us that in our consideration of the social, physical and intellectual progress of the Church, we have failed to so much as glance at the other side of the picture and note the general direction in which our religious craft, from a spiritual viewpoint, is drifting.

Let us look. One of the first things to greet our vision is the general trend toward the putting of things which are spiritual, supernatural, eternal, upon the plane of the natural. It is one of the devices of the adversary. This is being done by inducing many of the religious leaders and teachers of our time, in educational institutions, in pulpits and elsewhere, to renounce the faith of the fathers and accept the views commonly held and maintained by the enemies of vital religious truth. Upon these views, they have sought, and are still seeking, to build up the Church along lines which, according to their theories, should meet the conditions of the new age and usher in a new religious era.

Thus, with a Bible robbed in part, if not entirely, of its divine inspiration; a Christ robbed of the glory which should be His; the virgin birth either denied or ignored; the person and work of Jesus Christ robbed of the qualities and attributes which make Him the Son of God and the Saviour of the world, these leaders of modern religious thought put forward their perverted views in the name of Christianity and call it the new religion.

The writer recently visited a large, wealthy Church in a nearby city and sat upon the platform during the service. How effectively the clear and unmistakable note of the gospel was kept out of the discourse! There was an element of moral teaching in it, but little of the Lord of heaven and earth who "was bruised for our iniquities" and "bore our sins in His body on the tree."

There are schools and colleges in our land, some of them established for the express purpose of training ministers, that are absolutely unfit and unsafe for the training of future citizens, much less leaders and teachers of Christian thought. The thousands of young men and women entering such schools leave them, in many cases, robbed of the true faith in God, if not rank infidels.

These are indeed perilous times for the true faith. The Church of God is beset upon all sides by the devil. Many today prefer a religion of form to one of power. The calvary route to heaven is being less and less recommended. It is too rugged and uninviting. It requires too many sacrifices. It is hallowed with too much blood and tears. The religious seeker of today is told in many quarters that all he needs to do is to resolve to live right, and he has religion; that all this sorrowing for sin, as penitents did formerly, is unnecessary to one's soul's salvation. The adversary has succeeded in injecting into the minds of many the delusion that there is no repentance preceding the new birth.

It is not the desire of the writer to unjustly accuse any one, but for our own safety, and the safety of all those who one day must meet God, there is but one position that a true minister of Christ and a Christian layman can take. We must positively refuse to have anything to do with those who are perverting and denying the teachings of God's Word. The Church has many present-day problems to solve, but it cannot begin to solve them until it follows the teachings of Jesus Christ. The gospel, which is as old as the Christian religion, must be preached and practiced. The "old-time religion," the true faith which is as new today as it was when first declared unto the saints, must be our religion. We shall then have a passion for souls and be equipped for Christian service. We shall not be ashamed, no, not even in the presence of the enemy, for as it is declared in Isaiah 40:31, "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary; they shall walk and not faint."—Old-Time Religion.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

We should be glad to furnish your Sunday School the following supplementary supplies, cash to accompany order:

Improved Uniform Series International Lessons.

1. Bible Lesson Picture Roll, 21x32 inches, per quarter $1.25
2. Sunday School Superintendent (to accompany the Picture Roll), per quarter..... .15
3. Pupils' Lesson Stories, per quarter..... .06

Group Uniform Series, Primary Course.

1. Group Bible Lesson Picture Roll, 16x20 in., per quarter 1.00
2. Group Pupils' Lesson Stories, Primary, per quarter ..... .07

In making order, be explicit and name the quarter for which supplies are wanted; thus: First quarter, January to March; second quarter, April to June; third quarter, July to September; fourth quarter, October to December.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The Illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the Number and prices.

TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Minion Bold-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4 7-8x 7 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

India Paper Edition, Size 4 7-8x7 Inches, 1 1-10 Inches Thick.

2152X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$6.00

Bourgeois Type, Size 5 3-8x8 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2167—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.00

2172—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.50

India Paper Edition, Only 1 1-8 Inches Thick.

2172X—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$8.50

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3¾x3⅝ inches, and 1 inch thick; with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black.

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations. Special book for Sunday Schools 95c

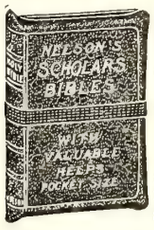
Ruby Type, Size 3¾x3⅝ Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps $2.50

Minion Type, Pocket Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ inches Thick.

With 32 full-colored illustrations; also 25 outline maps through the text and 12 colored maps.

133—Bound in cloth, round corners, red edges, title stamped on side in pure gold $1.60



135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 15-16 of an Inch Thick.

135X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.75

Minion Black-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4¾x 7 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick.

Printed from clear, large, black-face type, 32 full-page illustrations in Sepia and colors, 4,000 Questions and Answers, Harmony of the Gospels, How to Study the Sunday School Lesson, 25 outline Maps, 12 full-page colored Maps.

4152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold.....$3.25

TEXT BIBLES—AMERICAN STANDARD VERSION.

Printed from Easy-Reading Type, on Good Bible Paper, for Sunday School and Church Use.

Minion Type, Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick, 25 Outline Maps, Bound in Black.

101—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, title stamped on back in pure gold..$1.10

112—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title on back in pure gold $2.75

India Paper Edition, Only ⅞-Inch Thick.

112X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

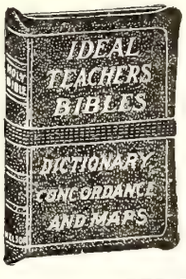
Reference and Text Bibles also in minion, brevier, bourgeois, long primer, pica and English type.

Thumb index cut on edge, 50c extra; name printed on any Bible in gold, 40c extra; extra wording, 40c per line.

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (v vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3-8x 8 1-2 Inches and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

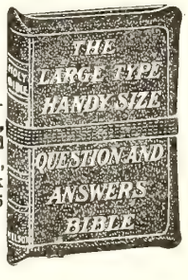


Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red;other parts of the book are printed in black. With concise Bible dictionary, combined concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.75

RED LETTER EDITION

With all the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.



1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands, title stamped on side and back in pure gold $3.25

Any of the above Bibles sent post paid. Address

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street, - - - Richmond, Va.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR.

J. O. ATKINSON, Elon College, N. C.

Contributing Editors.

W. W. STALEY W. A. HARPER
R. C. HELFENSTEIN S. C. HARRELL

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

WILLIAM TYNDALE AND OUR ENGLISH BIBLE.

The Protestant Churches throughout the world are this year celebrating the four hundredth anniversary of William Tyndale's translation of the New Testament. It is a most significant celebration because of the fact that not until within the last twenty-five years has the world appreciated the great contribution that Tyndale made to Protestantism and, through Protestantism, to the progress of civilization.

The Bible was in an unknown tongue to the common people until the fourteenth century—the Old Testament being in Hebrew and Chaldaic, and the New Testament in Greek and the Latin Bible. This meant that the Bible was literally a closed Book to the people. The Pope and the priests desired it should be kept so, for they well knew that if the people were able to read the Bible, they would lose confidence in the Pope and in the regime of the Roman Catholic Church. The story of the early translation of the Bible is full of interest to every devotee of the Protestant faith.

In the fourth century, Jerome translated the Bible into the Latin. This translation was called the Vulgate. It was a masterful work, but of use only to students. John Wicliff translated the Vulgate into the English language in 1382. This was a great contribution to the enlightenment of the people, but as he did not go back to the original sources—the Hebrew and the Greek—it was but a translation of a translation. Martin Luther, "the fighting monk, who fought the Pope with pen and ink, and the devil with an inkbottle," was a natural linguist. He was determined that the German people should have the Bible in their own language, and in 1522 finished his translations of the original sources into the German language. About this time, William Tyndale was cherishing a growing ambition to translate the original sources into the English language.

Tyndale was a vigorous young Welshman, though he has often been spoken of as an Englishman. He was born in Wales in 1492—about the time Columbus discovered America. Few men, if any, of his day were better educated than was he, and few men of any day have been so well trained in the classics as was he. He was graduated from Oxford University with high honors, and then took graduate study at Cambridge University, thus having the benefit of the two greatest schools of his generation in the whole world. He was too well-trained to remain blind to the inconsistencies and injustices of Catholicism, and so early in his life he manifested the disposition of a reformer. Without question, he was one of the chief promoters of the Reformation in England. He was known as a progressive; as one who was not afraid to let his convictions be known, even though he cut cross-grain with the interests of the Pope and Catholicism. He was called a heretic, and as such was bitterly despised by the clergy, but greatly admired by the laity.

In this connection, it is interesting to note that nearly every man who has made a large contribution to the progress of Christianity was despised as a heretic by his contemporaries. History shows how universally the men who have really counted in the realization of God's program for humanity have not been appreciated in their day. And not until their life and work have been viewed through the telescope of time has their real worth been realized. And thus the heresies of one generation become the orthodoxies of the next generation. Jesus was called a heretic because He did not believe as did the Pharisees of His day. Paul was a heretic because he did not concede the correctness of Peter's point of view. Tyndale and Luther and hundreds of the greatest minds and noblest hearts down through the ages were condemned as heretics simply because they saw more of God's program, and understood more of God's mind than their contemporaries could comprehend. But, strange to say, the great Protestant Church was created by the heretics of the middle ages, and out of their heresies Protestantism had its inception.

But what a tragedy that men have had to die, and their work defy the tooth and claw of time for centuries before they were appreciated! Their contemporaries killed them. But posterity enshrines their memory in monuments of stone and in temples of worship. While they lived, they were called heretics. But succeeding generations recognized them as saints. Thus, all men in every walk of life who have really helped to push the world forward have been opposed in their efforts to serve. Tyndale, with countless other noble souls, was a victim of "this sad irony of fate."

The fact that the Pope and the priests wished to keep the common people in ignorance about the Bible, created in young Tyndale a determination to translate the Bible into the vernacular—the language of the common people. And with the courage of a hero, he made known his purpose to the priests, who argued against him—"If God spare my life, ere many years, I will cause a boy that driveth the plow shall know more of the Scripture than thou doest."

On account of opposition and persecution in England, he was compelled to escape to the continent early in 1525, in order to carry out his purpose. He set himself with holy zeal to the arduous task of translating the entire Bible from the original sources, beginning with the Greek texts of the New Testament. Finishing the New Testament in 1525, he immediately began the translation of the Old Testament from the original Hebrew and Chaldaic texts, using in each case, merely as reference for comparison, Wicliff's translation of the Vulgate, or Latin, texts, and Luther's German translation. He was several years in making his translation of the Old Testament, finishing the task in 1530. The celebration this year is in commemoration of his translation of the New Testament. But his translation of both the Old and the New Testaments is practically the same as our Authorized Version, or the King James translation, which came nearly a century later, in 1911. Scholars have declared that nine-tenths of the King James translation is an exact copy of Tyndale's translation.

When Tyndale's translation was published, the Pope issued a death sentence on Tyndale for his gross insubordination in daring to ignore the Pope's ruling against all translations of the Bible into the vernacular.

The Pope also issued an edict of excommunication against any one who was found to have a copy of the translation. Effort was made to find every copy printed and have them burned. Tyndale was hunted down as a criminal, and was driven from place to place seeking safety.

He was finally betrayed by a supposed friend. A Judas Iscariot sold him for the sake of ecclesiastical preferment. This man of God, this servant of the ages, was fiendishly betrayed and then compelled to suffer the unspeakable miseries of a damp, cold and unlighted prison. The torture to which he was subjected was terrible. And why was he thus punished? All because he wanted to do good. All because he wanted to translate the Bible, that even "the plow boy" might read and know God. But in the spirit of his Master, he bore his cross of suffering uncomplainingly and with joy in his heart. His one request was for his old Hebrew books and a little light so he could continue his translations. What a wonderful index that request was on his character and his devotion to his task. People who contend that the world is growing worse should ponder over the way not only that the world but even the Church treated men like Tyndale four hundred years ago.

He was finally sentenced to death October 6, 1536. And what a terrible death—strangled and then burned! His last words were, "Lord, open the King of England's eyes."

Tyndale was an apostle of liberty; a champion of progress. His place in history has never been fully appreciated. He was a pioneer in religious advancement. Many of the most illustrious leaders of the Reformation lighted the lamp of their faith at the candle of his life. It was William Tyndale whom we may rightly call "the father of our Authorized Version of the Bible." It was William Tyndale who did more to shape the religious vocabulary of the English-speaking world than all other translators combined, according to the testimony of the greatest Hebrew and Greek scholars of our day. Nor is it a strange coincidence that, with the translation of the Bible into the language of the common people, a new light was shed over the entire realm of human interest, and the whole world began to move forward in commerce, in science, in art, in literature and in religion. The Bible has held a most important place in inspiring and in determining the world's progress. But it would have continued to remain a lifeless, and a meaningless and a useless thing, unrelated to the world's needs, if it had not been translated into the language of the people. Not until the books of the judgment unfold will mankind be able to appreciate all that Tyndale's translations have meant to the Church and to the world.

ABLEST SCHOLAR IN NORTH CAROLINA.

The Biblical Recorder made a serious blunder in discussing the salaries paid at State institutions of higher learning and the appropriations made for them when it referred to President Poteat, of Wake Forest, as the ablest scholar in North Carolina.

All the facts the esteemed Recorder set forth relative to the extravagance of the State's institutions of higher learning will be discounted by that one odorous comparison. Dr. Poteat may be the State's ripest scholar, though it would be interesting to know how our contemporary arrived at that decision. Was it by ballot? Is it because he believes in evolution? Did he apply the much-celebrated mental test to President Poteat and the State's other scholars?

The writer of the article in question perhaps esteems Dr. Poteat to be North Carolina's ablest scholar because, in his judgment, he is the ablest among the Baptists, and there are so many more of them than of the rest of us that the ablest Baptist scholar must necessarily be the State's ablest. This result does not necessarily follow. The doctrine of chances does not apply to the production of scholars.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN suspects that there are many men in the Baptist Church that stand right beside our good President Poteat in scholarship; perhaps rise above him. It is difficult for us to think that there are not in our other colleges and our State University men who have devoted their lives to scholarly pursuit rather than to educational administration who rank far beyond President Poteat or any other college president in scholarship.

The Recorder's position that our denominational college presidents are paid far too little for their services in comparison with the executives of the State schools is sound. It may mean, however, that the denominational college should pay more, and not the State's schools less. Ability of a high order is required in a college executive, and the salary should be large enough to leave his mind free for administrative work. To stint those who direct our educational work is false economy, is rather a foolish extravagance. There are far more scholars than executives. That is why scholarship commands a smaller salary. President Poteat's power as Wake Forest's head is not his scholarship, but his executive and administrative ability. If he is North Carolina's ablest scholar, it is a bitter shame that the Baptist brethren made him quit teaching and become a college president. This is said in all sincerity.

But to return and to conclude, we doubt if the Biblical Recorder can prove its claim that President Poteat is North Carolina's ablest scholar. What about Archibald Henderson? What about Dr. Venable? What about a dozen others we could name? A hundred years from now we shall know, but no man can settle that matter for us now.

It was the rare privilege of the writer of this column to occupy the pulpit at Liberty (Vance) Sunday A. M., March 15th, and Mt. Gilead the same day at 3 P. M. What a privilege and a pleasure! These are two of our strong, vigorous, active rural Churches, of which Rev. J. E. Franks is the beloved and faithful pastor. Both Churches have strong, wide-awake Sunday Schools, and large, attentive congregations at the preaching hour. Rural Sunday Schools have one habit and custom, glory be! that many city schools do not have, namely: they all stay for Church service after Sunday School is over.

THE MOST DANGEROUS PERSON.

By Dr. R. C. Helfenstein.

"Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor."—Ex. 20:16.

The person who is most to be feared, the most dangerous person, is the person who has the least regard for this Ninth Commanwment. We have little to fear from the man who has fallen a victim to strong drink and who is his own worst enemy. We have little to fear from the gambler who merely squanders his own time and money. We have little to fear from the thug and the marauder, for the police force give us protection from them. We have little to fear from the thief and the robber, for we can lock our homes and keep our valuables in the safe-deposit vault of the bank. And so it is with the various other types of undesirable citizens—the law protects us from them.

But you can't protect yourself against the evil designing of people who break the Ninth Commandment by bearing false witness against you. No matter what a person's financial or social standing may be, if he or she is guilty of breaking this holy commandment, they are more dangerous to the peace and happiness of a community than all the thieves and bootleggers put together. These trouble-makers are the delight of the devil, the abomination of earth and the greatest menace to society.

False witnessing may take on different forms. It may be in the nature of slander, false report, a baseless surmising, malicious insinuations, wrong interpretations, etc. People who have itching ears for slander and morbid surmisings usually have loose tongues to freely repeat what they hear. The most despicable reputation any one can have, man or woman, is that of being known as a person who delights in peddling gossiping lies. The most despised and utterly abominable member of society is the person who is so troubled with an overly-active imagination that they find their chief delight in trying to pry into the sacred precincts of other lives in order to manufacture out of the whole cloth some false tale that is in reality an abominable lie against another.

Some people live such lives of black vileness and deceit themselves that they expect everybody else is doing the same. They measure everybody else by the yardstick of their own sinful lives. The people who never can repeat a thing as they heard it, but who always add to, and the people who willfully make wild guesses as to possibilities, and give their wild guesses as actual facts undermine the very foundation of honesty and integrity of a community, and cause ever the truth itself to be held question. But the people who put question marks after other people's character and motives, and handle their names without regard of facts are even more dangerous to a community. Business gossip, and social gossip often fall to a very low level—even beneath the dignity of self-respecting people, but the gossip that involves the character, motives and good name of other people is the vilest filth belched out of hell. And the people who delight in such trash should be kept out of decent society. It is a pity that a community cannot quarantine itself against such maligners.

Such people are the most dangerous menace to society, because they bring more sorrow and gloom to the lives and homes of a community than all the other contributing agencies of the devil put together. Your character is not safe in their presence, nor is your character safe with them in your absence. Somebody's home burns down and instantly such people begin to put out their question marks in relay fashion. One will say, "I wouldn't be surprised, if the truth were known, but that—," and another says, "I wonder if—" and the next one says, "I heard—" and the next one says, "Do you know—" And thus the devil's work is carried on. Some young couple quit going together for perfectly good reasons. But one of these gossiping friends starts the menacing report by simply saying, "I wouldn't be surprised, if the truth were known—" And the next one grabs a hold and carries it farther with her, "I wonder if—" And the next one says to her neighbor, "I heard so and so—" But the next one tells her neighbor, "Do you know—?" And thus the report starting as a mere evil surmising is sent out as an actual fact.

Some husband goes away from home on business and after an absence of several weeks or months, during which time his heart has been lonely for those he loves back home, but for whom he is willing to make the sacrifice that he may better provide for them. Every day he writes his letter to his little family, and every day he receives the message of love from them. But some split-tongued, devil-prompted gossiper learns of his extended absence from home and so quietly she says to some neighbor, "I wouldn't be surprised, if the truth were known about why so and so is away so long—," and then the natural progression of the gossip takes on its usual form, as the second person relays it to the third person. "I wonder if—" And then the next person tells the next, "I heard so and so." And the next person carries it further by saying to her neighbor, "Do you know—"

Wild speculations as to the explanations of incidents are often the worst kind of false witnessing. Such reports never lose anything with repetition. But, like a snow-ball rolled downhill, they grow larger and larger with every turn.

Think of the heartaches such people have caused! Think of the homes they have wrecked! Think of the communities they have contaminated! In central Iowa a few years ago, a fine, noble, young woman with spotless character went into a certain town to teach school. She was cheerful, and happy and friendly with everybody. Her noble life was a benediction to the school and community. But a brainless, devil-prompted woman circulated the absolutely ungrounded report that the young woman's relation with one of the members of the school board was too intimate, and that "if the truth were known," etc.

The report grew with repetition. The poor, defenseless young woman whose life was as pure as the sunshine from heaven, had never acted in any way to cause any suspicion whatever. But the idle-minded gossiper started the report as a surmise from the memory of her own misguided conduct in youth no doubt, and the innocent young woman was the victim of this gossiper's evil imaginings.

When the report found the ears of the young teacher, she gave a shriek of despair and went into hysterics at the thought of the baseless lie. It was more than she could stand, and she literally died of a broken heart. Months afterward the woman who started the report was so bitterly punished by her conscience that she went to the girl's mother and told her that she was the one who started the report, that there was nothing to it, and that she wanted to confess her sin. And, in pitiful grief, the mother told the woman, "Oh, why did you tell the infamous lie? Why, oh why? You tell me now that you are to blame. But it is too late. My daughter lies beneath the snow tonight in yonder cemetery. And you murdered her by your evil tongue."

A hardened gossiper, whether a man or a woman, causes more misery and more ill feeling in

(Continued on Page 9.)

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

There are two payments of money that do not get the real heart support they deserve. Taxes and Church dues are the two payments that seem hard to pay. One represents the citizen; the other represents the Church member. The average citizen and the average Church member does not take the time to consider the value of the State and the Church. They are separate institutions in this country, but their relation to the people is similar. They are essential institutions to the welfare of the people. All people benefit by their existence—the rich and the poor alike. Religion in its present state would not meet the needs of society without the State; and the State would not give protection to life, liberty, and property without the moral support of the Church.

The rich man could not become rich without the protection which government gives; and the poor man would not enjoy privileges and benefits which he now enjoys but for government. The man who is too poor to pay tax can walk on paved sidewalks, send his children to the public school, cross streams on bridges, send his mail through the post-office, with the same freedom as a rich man. If courts do not meet out equal justice to all, it is not the fault of the State, but of the men who administer the laws. It may be the judge, it may be the jury; but it is not the State that is partial, but citizens; and without the State, it would be much worse. In the last analysis, citizens mistreat themselves. But above all injustice and oppression, the State represents equal treatment to all citizens. Injustice will prevail as long as citizens withhold loyal and willing support to the Church. The State does often oppress its citizens by unjust and unequal taxation; but that is because the representatives of the people are not the friends of the State and its citizens. The petty thief is a saint compared with the official who serves his own interest in his position. Political position is a great responsibility, and the honest representative is a noble character.

The Church is the best institution and blesses all. The State itself would fail but for the Church. The Church is even more liberal than the State. It offers its benefits to all, and does not require financial support. Its doors are open, its seats are free, and a glad welcome awaits all who will come. Its Sunday School is an invitation to all grades and all conditions of people. Any thought or feeling, any suggestion or expression, that doubts the hearts welcome of the Church to all sorts and conditions of people is not of the Church nor its members. The safety of the home, the virtue of the young, the honesty of traders, the refinement of society, the benevolent institutions, as almshouses, homes for the incurable, or phanages, free hospitals, homes for imbecils and tuberculars, and all the rest, grow out of the Church. It is the garden in which grow all beautiful and useful ideas and service. The good done by the State is inspired by the Church. It is even more important to pay to the Church than to the State; and it should be done heartily, liberally, willingly, as unto the Lord. It should be considered a privilege and a joy for members to pay systematically to the support of the Church.

W. W. Staley.

ELON LETTER.

A generation ago the sciences and modern languages were clamoring for recognition in the curriculum of higher education. Latin, Greek, and mathematics, the so-called humanities, held the major part of the attention of educators. They now hold relatively unimportant rank in the institutions of higher learning. Many think the pendulum has swung too far, and that the present curriculum does not produce the same strong type of thinker.

For the past few years, business administration has been clamoring for recognition in the colleges and universities and has in many cases won its demand. Fear is being felt in many quarters against the entrance into the curriculum of higher education of this new competitor for honors, on the ground that the moral and ethical and altruistic element in a liberal education will be eliminated by it. This issue is felt so keenly in some of the larger universities whose business administration departments are being literally thronged with students—students whose sole aim appears to be to get along in a financial way—that questionnaires are being sent out to college presidents soliciting their judgments.

Boston University recently sent the writer such a questionnaire, and on March 13th debated over the radio the following question: "There is danger in the present tendency to place too great stress upon business courses in the leading universities."

The following reply was sent:

"I have your letter of March 3d, and in reply am very frank to say that it is possible to put too much emphasis on business courses in the leading universities. Business is more or less inclined to be selfish, and unless these universities are able, while they teach the technique of business, to infuse at the same time the spirit of altruism and sacrificial service, the next generation will be, for the most part, encased in selfishness.

"In other words, business men may be a menace or a blessing to a community, according as to whether they are socially or selfishly motivated. It will depend upon the university in every case as to the result that is to be achieved in those it trains as business administrators, executives and captains of industry."

Unless the institutions of higher learning do actually motivate those who pursue their business courses with the spirit of Christian service and altruism, the admission of these courses to the academic curriculum will prove a serious handicap to the spiritual progress of our country.

W. A. Harper.

REV. G. D. HUNT'S FIELD.

Dear Bro. Editor:

For the encouragement of my people, as well as others, I write a few lines from my field of labor. At Antioch we are planning to recover the Church and otherwise improve the building. The whole Church seems delighted with the idea. We have a fine Sunday School, and the Christian Endeavor was to reorganize last Sunday night. This Church has a great future, and I do most humbly pray that they may never become selfish or narrow in their service.

They have responded nobly to the call of Bethlehem Junior College, and quite a number take The Christian Sun. They support the general enterprises of the Church and also pay their pastor. I trust they may go on to larger usefulness and Christian joy.

At New Hope we are planning to paint the building on the outside and beautify the interior. They have about $200 in bank and are just waiting for the weather to open up so the work can be carried to completion. A good Sunday School, a Christian Endeavor just reorganized, and a Woman's Missionary Society, all unite to help carry forward the work of God in this community. This dear old Church responds to every call for kingdom service, and in its fold are many tithers and all are happy in His service. I trust they may go on to yet greater achievements. The only way for a Church to grow is to go, pray, and give.

Our little band at Roanoke are faithful and courageous. We are still paying on our lot. We must pay for it and begin building next fall. We have a fine Sunday School, a Woman's Missionary Society, and will soon have organized a Christian Endeavor. We have a long, uphill pull at Roanoke, but God will give us victory. We are planning to locate a man there for next year, and it must be done.

At Beulah, my home Church, we have a loyal band of young people, as well as a goodly number of older ones who are doing service for the King. We have Sunday School, Christian Endeavor and Ladies' Aid Society, which is a great help to the pastor and Church. I have labored here for thirty-four years and I have lived here twenty-three years, and have enjoyed every moment of service with them. It has been my rule as a pastor to get my people to support every Church claim; I have even taken the lead in the general support of every enterprise of my Church, and I know by personal experience that when the pastor leads, the Church will follow. "There is that that withholdeth more than is meet; and it tendeth to poverty. There is that that scattereth abroad and yet increaseth."

I pray that God may give our pastors a larger vision of kingdom service, and that they may be able to lead the Church ever onward and upward.

Wadley, Ala. G. D. Hunt.

MONTICELLO C. E. SOCIETY.

Since our last report, in December, our society has had the opportunity of making the Christmas holidays brighter for a mother and six small children who were in sore need of both food and clothing. To this cause the members responded most generously. When these things were presented, a number of the members visited the home and held a short service with the family. At this time a number of Christmas carols were sung, followed by a Scripture lesson, prayer and talk.

We, as members, feel sure that all who were present had a deeper realization of what the spirit of Christmas means after such an experience, and that it truly is "more blessed to give than to receive." In addition to this, many hours have been made brighter and more pleasant for the sick by flowers, books and magazines, as well as visits by the society members.

At the last business meeting, ways and means of raising more money for charitable work was discussed. Following the business meeting, the members were entertained by music, a reading, a debate and contests.

It is the hope of the society in the next three months to increase its membership, also the efficiency of its present members; and by this means do much toward developing the spirit of service for mankind and thus develop a stronger desire to do the work of Him whom we should all serve daily.

Lelia Wagoner.

Brown Summit, N. C.

THE CHEERFUL CRIPPLE.

For several years now, THE SUN'S editor has had occasion to correspond with Mr. Upton G. Wilson, of Madison, N. C., now known far and wide as "The Merry Cripple." It would seem to one that to look upon this man's face would be a source of inspiration and of courage to many SUN readers. Think of a man stricken down nearly thirteen years ago and never since that date being able to walk a step! And of how his courage has baffled the physicians and kept him alive when experts said that he could not live. The Winston-Salem Journal recently carried a story of this wonderful young man, and we wish CHRISTIAN SUN readers to share the joy of this story and thus of knowing Mr. Wilson as we ourselves have known him through business dealings and friendly correspondence for several years. The Journal has the following to say:

The story of the success of Upton G. Wilson, "Cheerful Cripple," of Madison, N. C., dates back through a number of years and shows how mere grit and stick-to-itiveness won a victory well worth recording.

A severed spinal cord with total paralysis below the ninth vertebra has not been sufficient to place Mr. Wilson in the discard. Instead, he has proved by his splendid fight for success, happiness, and even life itself, that though a man may be down he is never out until he himself admits it.

In the early evening of July 24, 1912, without any warning whatever, Mr. Wilson was shot through the spine and lungs by a cowardly negro, whom he had just discharged for intoxication and disorderly conduct. Paralysis of that part of the body below the wound instantly resulted. Double pneumonia quickly developed, and for weeks life hung by a thread, but during all this time and later when his life was dispaired of, he never lost courage. When asked how he felt, he always replied, "I am feeling fine." He still feels that way.

From the first, surgeons pronounced his case hopeless, and after seven weeks in a hospital, sent him home to die. But immediately upon reaching home, the young man showed the stuff he was made of by beginning to get better, and three months later entered a hospital to go under the surgeon's knife, for prior to this time he had been too ill for an operation. After careful examination, doctors and surgeons again decided that he was too nearly dead to be operated on. Back home again on Christmas Eve he went to try to get strong enough to go through the ordeal of having his broken back mended. After three months more of waiting, during which time he gradually gained strength, he underwent a major operation. The shattered vertebra was taken care of, and the spinal cord, dead two inches below the injury, was wrapped with a gold wire and put back into position. But while the operation eventually made him more comfortable, it proved conclusively that he would never walk again.

Followed months of mental readjustment as Mr. Wilson began to realize that he must spend his life in bed. Finally the "little blue devils" which crept often to his bedside when he first began to cast about for employment suitable for a man whose lower limbs and more than half of his back were without any sense of feeling or motion whatever, were conquered, and the "Cheerful Cripple" emerged ready to meet life with a smile. He won his appellation honestly and retains it fairly.

As soon as his strength would permit, he began doing something. At first he took a correspondence course in cartooning, for which he had a natural bent, but soon found this too taxing. He must do something else. It chanced that this next something was the soliciting of magazine subscriptions. At first, he sold subscriptions for but two or three publications. Results were so gratifying that he widened his activities and eventually began issuing little catalogs offering all of the better-known magazines. As a result of careful management, his business has shown consistent growth. He has served more than 50,000 customers and issues from 5,000 to 10,000 catalogs annually.

Through his work as a subscription agent, Mr. Wilson has become known to thousands of people in all parts of the South as the "Cheerful Cripple," and his name is a synonym for fair and honest dealings. He makes it a practice to please his customers regardless of the time and trouble necessary to do so, and places all orders within twenty-four hours after they are received. His service now covers every periodical in America.

UPTON G. WILSON.

Today he is a successful, cheerful business man, with an outlook on life that is the envy of his friends. Folks like to visit him. Strangers passing through town often stop by for a chat. Friends and strangers admire his courage and resourcefulness.

In addition to conducting a subscription agency, Wilson does quite a bit of writing. He is local correspondent for a number of out-of-town papers and occasionally writes feature articles for the newspapers he represents. These usually are of a humorous trend and are widely read and commented upon.

More than a year ago, Mr. Wilson was sworn in as justice of the peace for his township. Since that time, he has tried some interesting cases of minor importance and has united in marriage quite a number of couples of fond young lovers. He performs the wedding ceremony with all the ease and dignity of a member of the clergy.

"The Cheerful Cripple" lives his title. He radiates good cheer and optimism. He is a Church worker, often leads in community betterment enterprises, and takes a keen interest in local, State, and national affairs. In fact, with the exception that he lives it from bed, he lives a normal, useful life. He is a confirmed nature-lover and never tires of watching the wonders the changing seasons bring. Birds are his especial hobby. Stories which he has written of his feathered friends have attracted favorable comment. About his home are large numbers of many kinds of birds. Even the shy thicket-loving cardinal nests each year in a spot that he can see from his window.

On the left side of his bed is his desk, at which he works assiduously when lying on the left side. On the other side of his rolling table on which his radio and telephone are within easy reach. Within reach also is his little typewriter table which is often in use. Members of the family are awakened many mornings by the click of the typewriter as he writes letters for the early mail or prepares a news article.

To the young men and boys around him, Mr. Wilson is both pal and adviser; to the older people, he is a trusted friend; but to all with whom he comes in contact, he is the personification of truth and optimism.

It should be remembered that Upton G. Wilson is much more physically helpless than is the avarage paralytic. He is unable to turn himself in bed without assistance, and is forced to lie on an air cushion to prevent the congestion that would otherwise naturally cause more serious affliction.

He is most comfortable while lying in bed, and does his best work there. He was twenty-three years old when injured, and still retains his youth. The "C h e e r f u l Cripple" is never pessimistic. Warm-hearted, courageous, and friendly, he greets the world with a smile, and is living proof that life can be usefully and happily ived even though it has to be lived within the limited confines of bed and wheel-chair.

A BALANCED LIFE.

"A truly Christian character is revealed in a balanced life," said the Hon. Charles E. Hughes in a recent speech.

In the balanced life is experienced with increasing richness that more abundant life which the Master came to give. In this we find life's joy, its untiring pursuits, its fresh victories.

"To have life more abundantly," said Mr. Hughes, "look not too far abroad, but search at home. Every walk of life can be made interesting if it is considered intelligently. Study your job; study the activities of which it is a part. Know all about it that can be known. Knowledge and contemplation can lift us above the drudgery of daily work."

Health, knowledge, loyalty, character, faith—these, Mr. Hughes named as the worth-while things.

Character that is worth while, Mr. Hughes described as "not an assumption of superiority, not narrowness of vision, not fixity of habit, but dependableness, self-respect and sense of honor."

You are invited to send in your subscription, new or old, to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Why do you hesitate?

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

BY WARREN H. DENISON, D. D., Secretary.

One who gives any thought to this matter is strongly impressed with the need of the stewardship message. Pastors and others have an urgent duty to make the message clear. Often Christians and Churches have strange ideas about the finances of the kingdom. Sometimes Church officials allow things done in Church matters that those same persons would condemn in the business world. Take the matter of the misuse of funds. In ordinary life, misappropriation of funds is a crime and severely punished, yet that very thing is quite frequently done in Churches without hesitancy. Money given for one purpose is used for another purpose. Both purposes may be very worthy, but that gives no authority to divert from one cause to another. Money is "borrowed" from one treasury to use in another temporarily, is "forgotten" and never replaced. Sometimes pastors have seemingly approved of such transactions. Every benevolent board, such as missions, can tell incidents that come to them from this Church or that. Two things will help to prevent such occurrences, and we urge them for all Churches—one is that of a Church auditor, elected as a regular officer of the Church, who shall audit all books of the Church at least annually. Men who handle funds should want their books audited. The other is that all Churches should have two treasurers, one for the current expenses and one for the benevolences.

There are other strange ideas that people get about the funds of the kingdom, due frequently to the lack of stewardship instruction, such as—

(a) That removing from one community to another automatically relieves one from meeting obligations previously assumed. One subscribes a definite amount per week to a Church for a year, and during the year moves away and never pays any attention to settlement of the account definitely assumed and upon which the Church has depended. He seems unconcerned about his just obligation.

(b) That changing denominational relations frees one from all financial obligations assumed to the former denomination. Perhaps it is educational funds borrowed to help through school. It may be other funds. I have ministers and laymen write me, when I have asked for the payment of their Forward Movement subscriptions, that they had joined another denomination now. They assumed that they were under no obligation to pay legal and solemn obligations held by the former Church. They pass it off seemingly without any compunction of conscience. Sacred obligations, definitely assumed, legal, deliberately made, were thrown to the winds with no seeming conscience in the matter. They would not think for a moment that changing communities, or changing Church or denominational relationship would relieve them from paying a definitely assumed, legal grocery bill. There is great need of the teaching of the real stewardship message.

(c) That funds subscribed for a definite purpose, legally made, with definite times of payment, can be used for some other cause without the consent of the party holding the obligation. One subscribes a definite amount per year to one of our colleges for a certain number of years, or to the Forward Movement. The college or Church plans its work on that sacred obligation held in hand. Upon notice that payment number two is due, the subscriber replies that he gave that payment to some other cause, "repairing our Church" or "Near East Relief," and counts his subscription as paid and seems to have no conscience in the matter. He seems to think that giving to some worthy cause is all that is necessary, regardless of the definite obligation assumed. As much as to say that paying one's grocery bill also pays his dry-goods bill!

These are only a few of the ways that are ever emphasizing the great need of stewardship teaching. They are not bad people, and would not like to be called dishonest, or be charged with misappropriation of funds; but that is really what it is, and they must be set right in their thinking on money matters in relation to the kingdom.

STEWARDSHIP AND THE BIBLE.

(1 Pet. 4:10.) According as each hath received a gift, ministering it among yourselves, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God.

(Luke 16:10-13.) He that is faithful in a very little is faithful also in much: and he that is unrighteous in a very little is unrighteous also in much. If, therefore, ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches? And if ye have not been faithful in that which is another's, who will give you that which is your own? No servant can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one and love the other; or else he will hold to one and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon.

(Psa. 1.) Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the wicked, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of scoffers; but his delight is in the law of Jehovah. And on his law doth he meditate day and night. And he shall be like a tree planted by the streams of water, that bringeth forth its fruit in its season, whose leaf also doth not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper. The wicked are not so, but are like the chaff which the wind driveth away. Therefore, the wicked shall not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous. For Jehovah knoweth the way of the righteous; but the way of the wicked shall perish.

VIEWS OF WASHINGTON CONVENTION.

The great convention at Washington reminded me somewhat of a gathering of Shathaliya dervishes which I once attended in Bagdad. They were seated in a large circle and seeking communion with God and absorption in His supreme greatness. They knelt and repeated incessantly in solemn chorus the Arabic pronoun, "He, he"—no other word, or sound, or thought—the weird reverence of Islamic mysticism.

The apostle Paul, in the first chapter of Colossians, is so absorbed in contemplating the glory of Christ that he does not even mention His name, but only uses the pronoun "he."

The convention at Washington was Christocentric. In its preparation, its personnel, its program, its addresses, its worship of prayer and praise from first to last, from President Coolidge to Robert E. Speer, Christ Jesus our Lord was not only prominent but He was pre-eminent. All topics on the program pointed to Christ. He was held up as the solution of the world's problems. He only has the message needed for the individual, for society and for nations. His name is already in India, the name above every name. He is winning hearts in Africa among primitive peoples and in the provinces of China. The growing native Churches find their center and pivot not in Western ecclesiastical systems, but in the universal Christ.

One of the most impressive things of the convention was the constant emphasis on what has been called "factual Christianity." Early in the sessions, one speaker asserted, "The Bible gave us our Christ, and Christ gave us our Bible." Who can forget the devotional hours, as when Dr. Douglas Mackenzie, of Hartford, referred to the facts of Calvary, with the phrase, "See from His head, His hands and feet, sorrow and love flow mingling down"—and asked the dramatic question, "whose sorrow and whose love?" One caught a new glimpse of the cost of the atonement to the heart of God. In another hour of intercession, Dr. J. Ross Stevenson, of Princeton, held the audience spellbound as he recited the great missionary passages of the New Testament, woven together into one narrative, ending with a new hallelujah chorus of the Redeemed from every land and nation.

The Washington convention reminded one of the words of Count Zinzendorf, "Ich habe nur ein passion es ist er und er allein—I have only one passion, it is He and He alone." The chief strength of the Washington convention was that there Jesus Christ was given His rightful place of pre-eminence.—Samuel M. Zwemer, of Cairo, Egypt.

STUDENTS ARE BEST PREACHERS.

The students in the theological seminaries are preaching sermons seventy per cent better than those of ordained ministers, according to the Rev. Dr. John Barlow, of the Memorial Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn. Dr. Barlow believes that the undergraduates are approaching the modern needs of religion with a freshness of viewpoint that augurs a brighter future for the Churches of America.

"I have just finished reviewing several hundred sermons composed by undergraduate students of the theological seminaries for the annual homiletic review contest," Dr. Barlow says; "and the average of these sermons, I think, is 70 per cent higher than the average of those sent in by the ordained ministers for the last competition.

"It is one of the most encouraging things to see the earnest, thoughtful ability of the young men who are coming up to take our pulpits in the next few years. They seem to have a soothing understanding of the unrest that is rampant, and project their thoughts with force and conviction.

"Our Churches will surely have a bright future when they are committed to this body of really splendid and able young preachers. They are a great hope for the Churches of America."

E. Jerome Johanson, of the Hartford Theological Seminary, is announced as the winner of the homiletic review prize for the best sermon by an undergraduate theological student. Mr. Johanson's theme is "The Hiding of God."

Carl H. Wilhelm, of the Yale Divinity School, is awarded second prize for his paper, "The Revealing Darkness," and Ernest A. Hull, of Drew Theological Seminary, is ranked third with his theme, "His Hands." The sermons will be published in a future issue of the Homiletic Review, a magazine that is devoted to the interests of ministers.

Five minutes spent in Bible reading and prayer at the beginning of each day will have a wonderful influence in molding the character and strengthening one for his daily tasks.

WHAT CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR ACCOMPLISHES.

By H. M. Rhodes.

We do not always succeed in our undertakings; we do not always accomplish what we plan, yet without the undertaking and planning, we would fall far short of the good we seek to do. So in the discussion of the topic, "What Christian Endeavor Accomplishes," my aim is to hold up to you some of the standards of Christian Endeavor. You may, therefore, see to what degree accomplishment may be made and on what success in Christian Endeavor work depends.

First, let us understand the purpose of Christian Endeavor. A brief definition would be "The Christian Endeavor Society is the training institution of the Church for young people in Christian work." In the Sunday School we learn and teach God's word; in Christian Endeavor we are trained to use our knowledge and how to work in Christian service. Today, as never before in its history, the Church of God needs trained, consecrated workers.

1. Christian Endeavor offers definite standards of service. How that should appeal to every enthusiastic Church worker! The field is always white here, but the help is always short and reenforcements are needed. In the local Church there are calls often for some one who has had a Bible-study course to teach a Sunday School lesson or for some one who has prayed in a C. E. prayer meeting to lead the opening prayer, or for the one to make a talk who, before his group in C. E., has made and improved upon his first talk. When the leader is absent it is necessary for some one to take his place, and that person should be trained for the emergency. "The busiest man gets more business." The trained worker always has work waiting for him.

2. Open confession of Christ and speaking for him according to ability. A man's character will never have full development until he accepts Christ and openly lives up to his profession. To the one who believes the Christ principles, it is a pleasure to speak for Him. C. E. endeavors to bring out the salient points in its pledge and seeks to train its young people in the knowledge of Christian work. While living up to the high standard of Christian fellowship, it is necessary that young people be trained in the habit of expression. C. E. offers this medium in the religious way. Christ values and gladly accepts even the weakest effort spoken in His behalf, and it will be abundantly rewarded. Dare to falter or even break down for Christ. Speaking for Him "according to ability" is all that is required, and when the consecrated C. E. worker does that, a great effort has been made for the Christ cause.

3. The cultivation of the devotional life by regular prayer and Bible study. Without these two pyramid points, C. E. cannot and could not accomplish. Its effort would, in a large measure, be fruitless. The time spent in prayer and Bible study is secondary to the necessity for having a regular period each day for this. C. E. seeks to stress the importance of daily meditation and study and Bible reading. Time spent in this way may prove of inestimable value in the future as regards one work and influence. Young people trained in this direction may be dynamoes of power for Christian leadership and the championship of Christian principles.

4. Training in Christian service by a variety of Committee work. Every C. E. Society that is progressive has a number of committees with its wide-awake members placed thereon. Training of the most valuable kind is received here, in cooperation and team-work, as weil as in the knowledge of the branches of Christian work.

5. Personal soul-winning and effectual use of the Bible. C. E. trains its young people in the use of the Bible, which is the Christian's surest weapon. Thus equipped, a member may go out seeking to save lost souls. The surest way to influence those who are lost is to make the personal effort. However, without tact and knowledge, that effort may be worse than fruitless.

The standards and ideals of service of Christian Endeavor are the most praiseworthy to be found in the field of Christian work. Christian Endeavor has spread into every country on the globe, and is found in more than eighty evangelical denominations.

There are many more features of C. E. work, but I may not take time to name and discuss them all. In conclusion, I would sum up as its most vital and essential principles four things, namely:

1. Confession of Christ.
2. Service for Christ.
3. Loyalty to Christ's Church.
4. Fellowship with Christ's people.

With these four basic principles, C. E. has succeeded gloriously, and today is stronger and more vital than ever before in its history. Whatever C. E. has accomplished, it has accomplished because it has cleaved closely to Christ. There are many possibilities yet. Every accomplishment of the past points the way to a more glorious future, if we will all be true to our C. E. ideals.

WHY PEOPLE GO TO CHURCH.

An extensive survey made by the Christian Herald to ascertain why people do not go to Church reveals the fact that often the Churches do not supply the need felt by the people. Here are some of the reasons given:

"Church services usually poor"; "Preachers not interesting"; "Members not social"; "The preachers do not discuss the great religious truths, but devote themselves to subjects of little importance."

In other words, when people go to Church they do not always get what they have a right to expect the Church to give to them.

We are a religious people. There is within every one that which reaches out after the eternal. Many will not admit it, but all have a decided religious inclination. The Church is recognized as the place one should go to learn of his duty to his God and toward his fellow-men. When the Churches stoop to the level of movies and the vaudeville, people may not recognize why, but, nevertheless, they see incongruity in the whole procedure and are apt to lose interest in the Church.

The Church service should make people realize their sinful condition and teach them what they must do to be saved and to remain saved and to be a blessing to the world. If all Churches would be faithful in this, the Church attendance would, in the long run, be solved, and solved right.—World Evangel.

(Continued from Page 5.)

a community than the worst old drunkard that ever staggered down the street. We all have reason to be more afraid of a confirmed gossiper who delights in manufacturing false reports or in circulating false reports manufactured by some one else than we would need to be afraid of a rattlesnake hiding in the grass. The rattlesnake always makes known his presence and gives a warning by his rattle that he is about to strike.

Some years ago in an Eastern city a prominent society woman whose idle mind gave her plenty of opportunity to imagine a great many things that never happened, dropped malicious insinuations about a man in public office by saying that "she wouldn't be surprised, if the truth were known, the people would find so and so." The mere surmise was repeated as an "I heard—" And when the malicious insinuation took on the form of an actual fact, the man whose character was involved, but whose life was above reproach, heard the report and demanded that the source of the report be given, threatening to sue for libel the guilty party. Each person in the chain of gossipers told in self-defense the source of their information until it was traced back to this society woman, who was compelled to pay libel damages of over $200,000. It was an object lesson to her and to hundreds like her. Every community would be better off if such an object lesson were made of some of its malignant gossipers.

The Bible says, "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor." To carry a false report manufactured by another implicates a person as much as the perpetrator of the lie himself. To bear false witness—to carry a false report is a violation of this holy commandment. And a person is not excused simply by saying, "I heard so and so." One has no right to pass any report that involves the honor or good name of any one else without knowing positively that the report is correct.

It is impossible to understand what the motive of such people is. Their attitude is evidence of a diseased mind and soul. Some people are so constituted that they are anxious to believe the worst. They are only concerned about morbid stories and tragic lives. Such people are dangerous! Their false witnessing has ruined hundreds and thousands of reputations and has sent many to an untimely grave.

The man who comes to your home under the cover of the midnight darkness and cuts the glass in your window to enter your home, that he may steal your money is a thousand times less dangerous than the person who, under the cover of friendship, pries his way into your affairs and seeks to steal your honor by circulating mere surmises and false interpretations.

All the world hates a liar. It hates the person who handles another's name or reputation as they would handle a brick-bat.

Our business is to shun such people as we would shun a poisonous reptile. When thrown in their presence, we should refuse to let them set their trap for us, by getting us to pass on their evil surmisings. Such people should be taken to task and asked every time they start their infamous reel of "I wouldn't be surprised if the truth were known" or "I heard so and so," etc., they should be asked if they know it is a truth? Can they prove it? And insist that they go with you to the person whose name is involved and find out.

If we practice the Golden Rule—if we act the part of noble men and women—we will refuse to allow the name or home of any friend to be maligned in our presence when the friend is not there to defend himself.

Human life is too precious—one's character is too sacred for malicious gossipers to be allowed to carry on their loathesome work by putting question marks after other people's lives and motives unless they have absolute facts to substantiate it. Every community needs to sound the alarm against those menacing individuals who bear false witness.

It will be terrible in the day of judgment for these false witnesses, for these menaces to society. No matter what their other virtues in life may be, when they appear before God in judgment, they will hear the word: "Inasmuch as you did the wrong to the least of these ye did the wrong to me." "Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity."

Dover, Del.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

April 5, 1925.

Subject: "The Blessing of Pentecost."

Golden Text: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit."—Acts 2:38.

Lesson: Acts, chapter 2.

Devotional Reading: Joel 2:28-32.

The master had given His disciples a commission to evangelize the whole world. There is no more convincing evidence of the Master's faith in men than the fact that He would entrust the work to which He had given Himself with such a passion, and which meant so much, into the hands of eleven men, men who had already forsaken Him in the hour of need. One stands in awe as He sees here in this one incident an eternal truth—God's recourse to and dependent upon men to carry out His purpose of redeeming the world.

The bearers of this great commission were to begin at home. They were to begin where they were. They were to show the sincerity of their desire to evangelize the men on the other side of the world by their honest efforts to evangelize the men on the other side of the street. But they were not to be concerned only with the man on the other side of the street. They were to be just as eager to win the man on the other side of the world. Christian love knows no barriers. There is no conflict between home and foreign missions. The one does not stand over against the other. They are one in fact if two in name.

Jesus knew that these men had a tremendous task on their hands. He knew that human resources would be of no avail for such an impossible task. He frankly told His disciples as much. But said He, "All power has been given me in heaven and in earth. Go ye, therefore." They were to tarry until they had been endued with power, and then they were to go. He who would do work for Christ must have Christ's power. Apart from Him, we can do nothing. We can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth us.

The disciples—those of Christ's day and of our day—were to be witnesses. They were to tell what they knew. That is the business of a witness. Is it not possible that one of the main reasons why we do not bear witness for Christ is because we have nothing to tell? It is not enough to have had an experience of God twenty years ago; one must have an ever-new and ever-richening experience of God. And he who is not witnessing for Christ now will do well to take stock of his spiritual life to see if he has anything worth telling to the world.

God keeps His promises. Jesus had told the disciples to tarry until they were endued with power from on high. They waited with one accord in one place, and they were endued with power from on high. It came with the sound of a mighty, rushing wind and appeared as tongues of fire. Whatever may be the significance of these phenomena, they imply power and energy. At any rate, the disciples felt that whatever had been lacking in their lives had become available and they started at once to evangelize the world. And they began at Jerusalem. Peter preached the opening sermon of a campaign that still goes on throughout the world. And such a sermon as it was! Simple, direct, spiritual, convicting. He told his hearers in a very direct way that the man Jesus whom they had delivered over to death was the Messiah; that God had raised Him from the dead, for death could not hold Him; and that being exalted at the right hand of God, He had shed abroad His spirit, the manifestations of which they had seen for themselves. And so earnestly did he declare his message, and so vivid was the spiritual atmosphere, that his hearers were convicted in conscience and pricked in heart. They cried out, "What, then, shall we do?" We need more of this spirit of conviction today. And when we have scriptural preaching in spiritual atmosphere we will have it.

Peter's answer was simple, but profound. They were to repent—that is, change their minds in regard to Christ, and this change in mind was to be so profound that it was to change their manner of life. "Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." Then they were to show in a definite, public way that they had changed their minds—they were to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ. If they did this, they were to receive the remission of their sins. These men had the power, even as have the power, to tell men that if they confess their sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins. And if they did this, Peter went on to say that they would receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. "His spirit beareth witness with our spirit that we are the sons of God."

It was a great sermon and a great meeting. Three thousand responded and were baptized. But the work did not stop, for the Lord added day by day those who were saved. A special evangelistic service is good, but all-year-round evangelism by which men and women who are saved are added day by day is better. He that winneth souls is wise.

The life of the disciples in those stirring days was rich. They were united in spirit and purpose, and the spirit of brotherhood was genuine. Paul said that where the spirit of the Lord was, there was liberty. He might have added that there was brotherhood and Christian fellowship. The spirit of Christ lifts men above the petty things of color and creed.

Teaching Points.

1. God depends upon us to carry on His kingdom.
2. Divine power is needed for Christian work and service.
3. The resources of God are available for those who undertake the program of God.
4. We are to bear witness by word and life for Christ.
5. World evangelization begins with the one next to us.
6. World evangelization stops with the one farthest away from us.

(Continued on Page 11.)

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

April 5, 1925.

Subject: "What Should the Church Expect of Me?"

Plans for the Meeting.

This is the monthly consecration meeting, and the appropriate topic will make it possible to carry out a very impressive meeting. Perhaps the meeting will be the means of leading some young people to become Church members.

The preliminary part of the meeting could be arranged as a regular Church service, with Church hymns, the regular order of service, and ushers. A special Christian Endeavor choir might sing "The Church's One Foundation," "Jesus, with Thy Church Abide," and "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord."

Ask your minister to speak for ten minutes at the close of the meeting on "What Christian Endeavor Can Mean to the Church."

Suggestions for Leader's Talk.

The leader may read the Christian Endeavor pledge or have the members repeat or read it in unison. The leader should call attention to the meaning of the pledge, the obligations and responsibilities one assumes in signing it, emphasizing especially what is said about the Church and Church attendance. Follow this by reading the obligations which the Church member assumes upon becoming a member. (This may be obtained from your pastor.)

The leader should show the connection between Christian Endeavor membership and Church membership. Something of the history of the early Church should be given, when being a Christian might mean persecution and when many devout Christians were so true to their convictions that early Christianity spread in spite of the many obstacles. At the present time a Christian is given perfect freedom in his worship and in the expression of his beliefs. Church membership and the Christian life should mean more than anything else in the life of a person because religion is fundamental and deserves our every loyalty and strength of purpose.

Each member may then add one thing which the Church has a right to expect of the Christian Endeavor Society.

Topics for Short Talks.

1. Christian Endeavor and the Sunday School:

The Christian Endeavor Society has a definite responsibility toward the Sunday School. First of all, it should see that its program is in harmony with that of the Sunday School. The ideal Christian Endeavor Society has its program correlated with the Sunday School program, with the Sunday evening young people's meeting a part of the general young people's work of the Church. The two programs could be worked out together to avoid overlapping and to make a more complete program.

Christian Endeavor members should, by all means, attend the Sunday School and be ready to assist the superintendent and teachers whenever needed. They should be under obligation to improve the work of the Sunday School whenever possible and to get others to attend.

2. Christian and Church Giving:

Christian Endeavor members should learn stewardship of money, of time, talents, and personality. Every Christian Endeavor Society should pledge itself to give a certain amount of money each year, and this should be systematically given. It should give to missions, both home and foreign, and for definite things in the community. Every Christian Endeavorer should contribute to the regular Church expenses by giving as much as possible each week.

3. Why I am Glad to Be a Church Member:

Questions to be asked in the meeting: (1) How can the Christian Endeavor Society help the pastor? (2) Why is it better to become a Church member early in life? (3) What do we mean by a working religion? (4) What ways do you think young people can definitely help the Church?

Christian Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

If your humble writer had the power to get our people to realize the great need of a larger work in the Orphanage work, or the ability to get our people to see the beautiful opportunity they have of doing a real charity work, I know they could not resist the promptings of their heart to lend a helping hand to the fatherless ones or help relieve the needy circumstances of the widow in her distress. Then if we had the art in impressing upon our people the simple and easy way by which our Church could accomplish this thing, we could raise enough money in one day to build our new building and no one would have to make any large sacrifice, everybody would feel happy and the widows and fatherless ones would rejoice. We have about thirty thousand members in the Southern Christian Convention. Suppose each Church would undertake to raise one dollar per member for their Church, and this can be done; but I don't mean that every member will give one dollar—some won't, some cannot be reached—but some who are able can give $25.00, $50.00, $100.00, and perhaps more; and others might give $5.00, $10.00, and $15.00 and make up for the ones who cannot give or wont give.

Why the need of this new building? The two buildings we now have are full, and we have no more room. Yet we have more than fifty on our waiting list. Worthy appeals. I want to cite you just one to show you the need. Last week a member of our denomination died. He was reared in the Christian denomination. His people have always been faithful and loyal to our Church, he was a splendid man, of excellent character, honest and faithful. His Church, of which he was a member, has been one of the loyal supporters of the Orphanage, and their monthly offerings come each month as regular as the clock ticks. This brother was not greatly blessed in this world's goods. He leaves a widow with four little children, none over six years of age. They have appealed to the Christian denomination through its Orphanage for help and a home. What are we going to do to help this widow in distress and to answer the call of these four little helpless ones. Our brother loved his Church; he had faith and confidence in the brotherhood. He was loyal and true all along the journey. Now he has left us. His widow and little ones knock at the door of your heart for sympathy and help. Will you say no? How much do you want to invest in this building, that they may have a home? Mail us your check.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

REPORT FOR MARCH 26, 1925.

Amount brought forward		$3,016.68
Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Christian Light	$ 4.24
Auburn	4.50
Liberty, Vance	4.64
Pleasant Union	14.00
Plymouth	2.95
Sanford	6.56
Shallow Well	2.66
Damascus	1.20
		40.75
Western N. C. Conference:
Zion	$ 1.25
Pleasant Ridge	1.59
Pleasant Hill (A)	2.79
		5.63
N. C. & Va. Conference:
Monticello	$ 4.05
Bethlehem	3.07
First Church, Greensboro	26.16
Reidsville	6.34
Elon	2.00
Palm Street	8.00
Ingram	5.00
		54.62
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea, Nansemond	$ 10.00
Franklin	5.00
		15.00
Valley of Va. Conference:
Timber Ridge		2.25
Georgia and Alabama Conference:
Pisgah	$ 2.22
Bethany	2.30
		4.52
New Building Fund.
Willie Staley Holden, Louisburg	$ 10.00
Annie Staley Calhoun, Louisburg	10.00
J. C. Beale, Franklin, Va.	12.50
R. I. Beale, Franklin, Va.	12.50
		45.00
Special Offerings.
Mrs. H. B. Parsons, Brushart, Ky.	$ 10.00
Boone Bible Class	15.00
E. M. Davenport	75.00
Interest on note	9.33
Mrs. H. A. Culver, Punta Gorda, Fla.	30.00
New Lebanon Philathea Class	2.00
Holt Endowment Fund	150.00
Sale of calf	13.00
Pleasant Cross, Thanksgiving of'g.	4.50
		308.83
Grand total		$3,493.28

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR DOINGS.

A Christian Endeavor Society has recently been organized in the Church at Wakefield, Va., where Rev. G. C. Crutchfield is pastor. There are about twenty-five members, and P. A. Hines, Jr., is the new president, and Miss Mayie Hines is secretary.

A letter from Mrs. T. M. Hall, Pisgah, Ala., states that a new Christian Endeavor Society has been organized in the Church there, and already fifty members have been enrolled.

The Christian Endeavor work seems to be moving along nicely, with a number of new societies and good work on the part of the old ones. We hope that each society will plan to send at least one representative to the Chautauqua and the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention this summer.

PATTIE COGHILL,
Field Secretary.

(Continued from Page 10.)

7. Men may be divided in intellectual belief, but they must be united in spirit and purpose to receive the blessing.

8. The Spirit of God is a mighty, purifying force.

9. The fact that the Spirit expressed itself in forms as of tongues implies that the gospel is for all men.

10. The man Jesus became the Lord Jesus Christ.

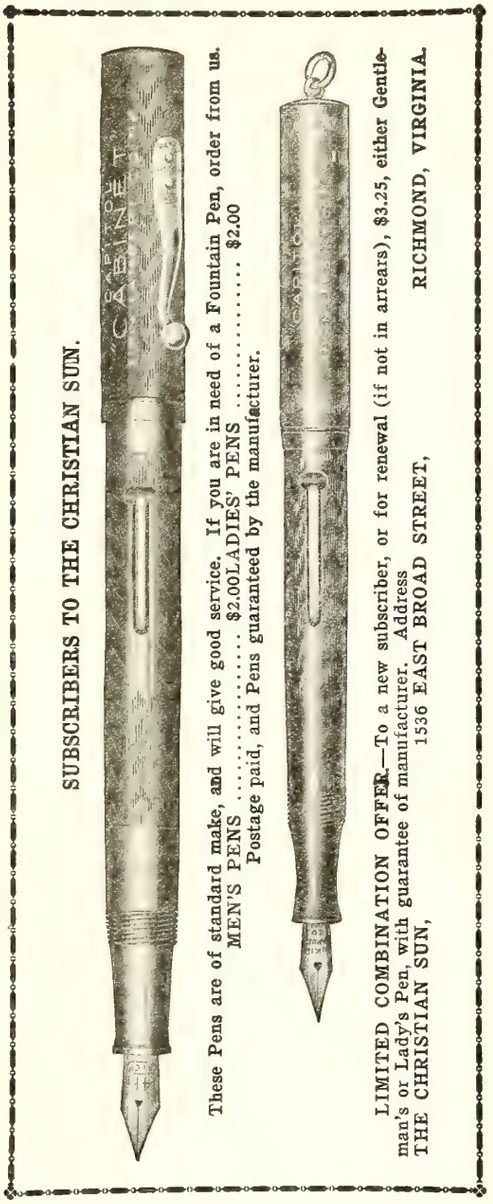
15. Prayer is a vital factor in kingdom progress.

16. Real loyalty to Christ unites men.

11. God honors Scriptural preaching.

12. Atmosphere counts for much.

13. The central theme of gospel preaching is Jesus Christ.



SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CHRISTIAN SUN.
These Pens are of standard make, and will give good service. If you are in need of a Fountain Pen, order from us.
MEN'S PENS ..... $2.00LADIES' PENS $2.00
Postage paid, and Pens guaranteed by the manufacturer.
LIMITED COMBINATION OFFER.—To a new subscriber, or for renewal (if not in arrears), $3.25, either Gentleman's or Lady's Pen, with guarantee of manufacturer. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 EAST BROAD STREET, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Mission Study Books.

Official List for 1924-1925.

ORDER BY TITLE OF BOOK.

FOR ADULT CLASSES.

For Home Mission Classes:
"The Romance of Home Missions," by S. L. Morris, D. D.. Paper, 50c; cloth..... $ .75

For Foreign Mission Classes:
"Ming Kwong—the City of Morning Light," by Mary Ninde Gamewell. Paper, 50c; cloth .75
"In China," by H. F. Williams, D. D..... .25

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

For Intermediate Home Mission Classes:
"The Land of All Nations," by Margaret F. Seelbach. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75

For Intermediate Foreign Mission Classes:
"China's Real Revolution," by Paul Hutchinson. Paper, 50c; cloth..... .75

For Junior Foreign Mission Classes:
"Chinese Lanterns," by Minna McEwen Meyer. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... .75

LEADERS' HELPS.

Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Adult Classes) ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Young People's Classes)..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Land of All Nations"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Ming Kwong"..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "China's Real Revolution".. .15
Leaders' Helps for "Chinese Lanterns"..... .15

Send all orders to—

THE CHRISTIAN SUN,
1536 East Broad Street - - Richmond, Virginia.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

POISE.

"Thou art anxiaus and troubled about many things."—Luke 10:38-42.

Life ever tends to become complex. We undertake to do too many things and are too hurried in our preparation. Jesus commended Mary for sitting at his feet and learning the lessons of life and at the same time cautioned Martha about her anxieties. That we might take time to think and to plan our lives with care! Then we should not so frequently lack poise and self-control.

"Thine own self-will and anxiety, thy hurry and thy labor, disturb thy peace and prevent me from working in thy life. Look at the flowers, they quietly open their petals and the sun shines into them with gentle influences. So will I do for thee, if thou wilt yield thyself to me."

Prayer.—O Lord, Thou art as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land. Support us all the day long, and as the shadows lengthen and the feverish work of the day is done, grant us time to think of Thee and of Thy mercy and love. Help us to choose the best part and to yield our lives to Thy life-giving power. Amen.

TUESDAY.

PRAYER.

"One of His disciples said unto Him, Lord, teach us to pray."—Luke 11:1-13.

The disciples were daily witnessing Christ's use of prayer as they saw Him heal and heard Him preach. They knew the source of His power was in His union with God, which was continually made real through prayer. They desired this power and yearned in their hearts to know the Father as Jesus knew Him. They asked Jesus to teach them the way to the Father in prayer, and He gave them the simple words that have become the humble petitions of millions of hearts. In this prayer there is but one request for material things—"for our daily bread"—all other requests are for spiritual blessings and the welfare of all men. For these the heart truly yearns and for these we should learn to pray to the Father, who longs to give us all good things. We pray to "Our Father" of infinite mercy and of tender love.

Prayer.—O God, our Father, who hast such riches for the children of men, prepare our hearts for Thy blessings. Win our minds away from material things. May we not be easily daunted nor turned aside, but may we move towards Thee and there abide. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"Be not anxious . . . for the Holy Spirit shall teach you . . . what ye ought to say."—Luke 12:11-12.

Jesus knew well the manifestation of God in the Holy Spirit. The "Comforter" was with Him and spoke to His inner life in no uncertain way. We may not understand all the mysteries of divinity, but the Bible teaches with authority, and the experience of men has satisfied their hearts that God manifests Himself through the ministry of the Holy Spirit. May we have the assurance of the constant presence of the Spirit of God in our lives!

"When we know the Father as revealed in Christ, follow the Son in the shaping of our conduct, there comes to us the sense of a personal presence dwelling within our hearts, taking the things of Christ—His words, His deeds, His life, His death and resurrection—and showing them to us. Their richer meaning is spiritually revealed, and thus we are guided into a fuller knowledge of the truth."

Prayer.—Holy Spirit of God, we pray that Thou wilt quicken our lives into more vigorous spiritual growth. Let our communion with Thee be more and more intimate. May our spiritual aspiration become as a great hunger that shall draw us into the very presence of God. Amen.

THURSDAY.

FAITH.

"Be not anxious for your life, what ye shall eat; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on."—Luke 12:22-34.

Faith is the cure for anxiety. We should remember that this is God's world, and the prevailing current is towards righteousness. If we first of all set the current of our life in the direction of the main stream of the kingdom, we shall move forward in spite of back currents and the little eddies and whirls of life. The cure of anxiety is to set the mind resolutely on the far goal, on the ultimate end of life's endeavors, and not lose faith nor slacken efforts in achieving that end.

"As the marsh hen secretly builds on the watery sod,
Behold! I will build a nest on the greatness of God;
I will fly in the greatness of God as the marsh hen flies,
In the freedom that fills all the space 'twixt the marsh and the skies.
By so many roots as the marsh grass sends in the sod
I will heartily lay me a-hold on the greatness of God."

Prayer.—Our gracious Lord, let each new day disclose some new trust in Thee. Thou art our life. We would that our lives should be in sweet accord with Thine. Change our fear into boldness and our indecision into strength, through Christ. Amen.

FRIDAY.

WATCHFULNESS.

"Be ye ourselves like unto men looking for their Lord."—Luke 12:35-48.

In this story, Jesus pictures to His disciples a man's joy when he finds a welcome on his return home. This sort of a reception Jesus craves in our hearts. God's spirit is ever waiting to enter human life, but the Spirit does not enter where there is no hearty welcome.

"God is an ever-present fact to be ready every hour for every demonstration God may make is to live. If we are trustfully ready to own Him in an hour when confession means sacrifice, eagerly ready to go forward with Him when His kingdom advances, humbly ready for the judgment of His Son. If we are ready for God, it makes no difference whether we are rich or poor."

Prayer.—Our Father, may we be this day as watchers on the wall, alert to guard our lives against the approach of evil. Anxious to welcome all good influences. Let us watch not only our own lives, but be ever ready to guard the best interests of all Thy children. Through Christ. Amen.

SATURDAY.

REPENTANCE.

"I tell you, Nay, but except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish."—Luke 13:1-9.

The question continually comes to our minds, Why are not evildoers punished? Why do they prosper when there is no sign of repentance? God's ways for others we need not know. We are to be concerned with our own lives. The mercy of the Lord is long suffering, but the fruit of disobedience will surely ripen. Repentance is a matter of desire and will. If we desire the good with all our hearts and put forth our will to turn resolutely from all selfishness and sin and hold fast to the faith, we shall have the assurance of forgiven sin. God is waiting to help every man who truly repents.

"God is wide-awake. Nothing is hid from his sight. There is no unrecognized factor that can take Him by surprise. He is wide-awake on the far-off furrow. He is wide-awake on the field of common labor where some young disciple finds it hard to keep clean hands while he earns his daily bread."

Prayer.—Our Heavenly Father, keep us ever in mind of Thy laws. May they be as a shield against temptations. Then shall we seek true repentance and labor earnestly that all Thy wandering children may find the way back to Thy heart of love. Amen.

SUNDAY.

SAVIOUR'S BROAD SYMPATHIES.

"For every one that exalteth himself shall be humbled; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted."—Luke 14:12-24.

Jesus' sympathies were always with those whose needs were vital. This was the guiding principle of His ministry. He taught His followers that they were to give themselves in like service and that the need of another should be the measure of their giving; that to give service where no personal gain might come was "to eat bread in the kingdom of God."

"Love may always be known by its expenditure, its self-crucifixions. Love is always laying down its life for others. And this is the life, the love-life, which the Lord Jesus came to create among the children of men. It is the gracious purpose to form a spiritual fellowship in which every member will be lovingly concerned about his fellow's good. At the fountain of eternal love we, too, may become lovers, becoming partakers of the divine nature and filled with all the fullness of God."

Prayer.—O Lord, make our hearts ever stronger in friendliness, so that our constant prayer shall be for the resources of love and sympathy with which to meet the needs of others. Amen.

(Copyright, 1925, F. L. Fagley.)

MISSIONARY FACTS.

Dr. Arthur Judson Brown gave the following late missionary statistics at the Washington Conference in January:

There are now twenty-eight thousand Protestant foreign missionaries in non-Chrsitian lands, and 2,408,900 adult communicants, with an enrolled Christian community of 5,145,236 persons. In 36,610 Sunday Schools there are two million pupils; 703 hospitals and 1,234 dispensaries treating over three million patients a year; a total of 245 orphanages, twenty-five institutions for the blind and deaf-mutes, thirty-nine leper asylums, twenty-one homes for untainted children of lepers, twenty-one rescue homes for fallen women. The educational work includes 109 colleges and universities, 2,114 boarding and high schools, 36,478 elementary schools, 376 kindergartens, thirty medical colleges, ninety-eight schools and classes for nurses, 406 theological and Bible-training schools, 209 industrial schools and 240 normal schools. Last year the Christian people of Europe and America gave $44,448,000 for the maintenance of these varied activities. A movement so vast, representing such a great constituency of intelligent people in Europe and America, and recognized by the governments of the world as a force of the first magnitude, challenges the attention of all thoughtful persons.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

DEAR EASTER BUNNIES:

Hurry as fast as ever you can, for Easter will soon be here, and you know we can't have Easter without you Bunnies. One big ol' Easter Rabbit was sitting in a shop-window this morning as we passed, and he looked so saucy and so fat that we just went in and bought him for a prize for the story hour Kiddies.

Who wants an Easter story next time? Watch out, dears! you never can tell what an Easter Bunny will ever do, and next week he may tell me a story about himself and his little baby Bunnies. Who knows? Let's look out for one anyway.

We are going to have a doll show—and let's invite all the so funny little ol' Rabbits; and all the Kiddies, too, and all their mothers! Oh, dear me, I forgot, some of the Kiddies are still sick with the influenza. Hurry, Kiddies, all who are sick, and get well 'nuff to help have all those good times that Easter always brings.

Here's lots of love from the Easter Bunnies and your editor. Maybe you'll be better now, real, real soon.

Oo-oo— here comes an April shower, sure as the world. Get in the house quickly, dears.

Your editor,
MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT.

LIKES "KIDDIES' KORNER."

My dear Editor:

I have decided to write you a few words for the Kiddies' Korner. We are a family—mother, father and six children. The oldest are twin sisters thirteen years old. I am next, and am eight years; one brother five years; Star is three, and Hope is one. We three oldest go to school at Sunbury. Mamma, papa and twins, Bergal and Bernice, all belong to the Christian Church, and we take THE CHRISTIAN SUN. I love to read the Korner and all of it that I can.

ELSIE VIRGILIA EASON.

P. S.: Am in the high school, third grade; my twin sisters are in the sixth grade, high school.

BIDDY'S EASTER EGGS.

The topknot biddy with yellow legs
  Was Harry's, and every morn
He gave her orders for Easter eggs,
  While he scattered the oats and corn.
Day by day for a week he fed
  Rations of every hue—
Chosen ears of yellow and red
  And squaw corn white and blue.

"Now, Biddy Topknot," I heard him say,
  "Easter will be here soon.
A dozen eggs at least you must lay
  By tomorrow afternoon—
Red ones, Biddy, the nicest kind,
  And yellow and blue, real bright,
Speckled and striped and spotted,
  Now mind zat you make 'em zackly right."

But in spite of feeding and coaxing, too,
  His Biddy would only lay,
Instead of red and yellow and blue,
  Just one white egg a day.
And Harry's patience was sorely tried,
  But he waited and watched the nest
And stroked his Biddy and softly sighed:
  "I fink she will do her best."

On Easter morning, wasn't it fun
  To look at him through a crack?
He went to the nest, as he'd often done,
  But soon came capering back
With his apron full of Easter eggs,
  Striped and speckled and gay.
The topknot Biddy with the yellow legs
  Was petted and praised that day.

He told mamma just how it befell;
  She listened again and again.
'Twas such a pleasure to hear him dwell
  On the skill of this wonderful hen.
And when he had gone to share his prize
  With Susy and Katy and Ned,
The dear mamma looked ever so wise,
  But never a word she said.

—Zion's Herald.

A GARDEN PATH.

By May Justus.

There is a little garden path
  (I play it is a street),
And you could never guess, I know,
When in it I a-walking go,
  How many folks I meet.

There's funny Mr. Hoppy Toad,
  Quite elderly and fat,
Who always winks and hurries by
And will not wait for me, though I
  Should like to have a chat.

And Mrs. Snail, who takes her house
  Wherever she must go;
I longed to get a peep inside,
But as the door's not very wide
  I couldn't quite, you know.

One day a whole procession passed,
  A lovely ant parade.
They went like soldiers marching by,
They seemed so orderly and spry
  And not a bit afraid.

I like the little garden path,
  And so, I'm sure, would you.
If you will go with me some day
I'll show you all along the way,
  And all the people too.

THAT OTHER GIRL.

By Susan E. Carter.

Said a little lass to her fond mamma:
  "Oh, dear! what shall I do?
I cannot find a perfect girl,
  Whom I'd like to be friendly to."

Said her fond mamma: "My dear little girl,
  You're surely in a fix,
Now, what's wrong with Ruthy Brown
  Or that other girl called Trix?"

"Dear me, those girls are not my kind at all—
  I can't be friends with Ruth,
Because she's always rude in school,
  And then she never tells the truth.

"And the other girl is a goody-good—
  The one whom we call Trix,
I don't like her a single bit;
  Oh, dear! oh, dear! it's such a fix!"

"My dear girl," said her fond mamma,
  "Do you always tell the truth?
Do you always do just as you should?
  Are you so much better than Ruth?"

Then her mamma told her that she must try
  To be very, very good,
Before she criticized other girls,
  If they failed to do as they should.

PEGGY HAS A CHAT WITH A FUNNY FAMILY.

When Peggy spied the little dark, shiny, brown-and-tan animal in the bush, she turned as if to run, when it called to her in a soft voice:

"Don't be afraid, child; I know you're one of Squeedee's friends, and so am I. I'll admit I bear the name of the worst robber in the woodlands, but I wouldn't harm a friend of Squeedee's. I'm Mr. Otter. May I ask your name?"

"Of course, you may," replied Peggy, coming back to the bush again. "I'm Peggy. But, you see, I've never seen an animal like you before; that's why I ran away. You look somethink like Billy Marten, don't you?"

"Yes, we do resemble one another somewhat," Replied Mr. Otter, glancing at his reflection in the water of the stream. "Yet my body and tail are more pointed and longer than Billy's. I guess I'm built that way so I can swim through the water easily."

"My goodness!" Peggy laughed; "you're not a water animal, are you? I should think you'd ruin your fur to get it all wet."

"Well, you see, I'm not what you would call a water animal," replied Mr. Otter. "But I do love to eat fish and crabs, and the only way I can get them is to go in after them. And that's just what I do—catch them myself. My fur, if you'll notice, is short, stiff and waterproof. Look at the top hairs. Don't they make you think of fish scales? Then look at my feet," and he showed Peggy his five-toe feet fastened together with webbing. "They make fine rudders. Haven't you ever met my wife? Come on over to our house and see her," and without waiting for a reply he started for a burrow down the stream in the side of the bank, and Peggy trotted along with him.

There in the side of the bank in the dearest little dugout you could imagine, they found Mamma Otter with her four little baby otters.

"My goodness me, isn't that a shame!" Peggy cried when she saw the wee little otters; "they're blind, aren't they? Too bad!"

"Certainly, they're blind," chuckled Daddy Otter, as if he were proud of the fact. All otters are born blind. Didn't you know that?"

"How should she, Daddy," laughed Mamma Otter, "when she has told you she never saw an otter close before?"

"Well, when I first saw Daddy Otter I thought he didn't have any eyes or ears, either," Peggy laughed. "But when I got a close look at him I saw they were hidden under his fur. How long before your youngsters will be able to see, Mamma Otter?"

"Just eight days after they come into the world they will be able to see," replied the proud mother. "Then, I'll have to look out for them until they are about two months old."

"When they're that old, Mamma Otter will begin her fishing lessons," chuckled Daddy Otter. "At two months, any otter is old enough to fish for himself.

"Well, if you'll excuse me, I'll go downstream and see if I can find some fish." And Peggy bid her new friends good-by, and she and Daddy Otter ran back to the meadows behind Peggy's house. She watched Mr. Otter catching fish until her mamma called her into the house.

FARMER.

Albert Scott Farmer, second son of Parthena Boyd and James Farmer, was born July 9, 1856, and died February 9, 1925. On December 21, 1911, he was married to Rebecca, the youngest daughter of Obediah Farmer. Bro. Farmer professed religion and joined Pleasant Grove, Va., Christian Church in early manhood and remained a faithful member through life. He was a popular and highly respected citizen, and with his passing goes another of the old type of the Virginia gentleman. Bro. Farmer held, with his kindly and courteous manner, a large number of friends.

During his lingering illness of several years, he never complained, but bore his suffering with Christian grace and fortitude. He is survived by a faithful and devoted wife, two brothers—Sandy J. and Morgan H. Farmer—and many nieces and nephews. The Church gives its deepest sympathy to his loved ones, and asks the Heavenly Father to comfort and sustain them in this hour of sorrow.

The funeral services were held at Pleasant Grove, Va., Church, by Rev. C. W. Maxwell, of the Prsbyterian Church, of South Boston, Va., together with the Masonic lodge of Halifax, Va. Both services were beautiful and impressive. In the Church cemetery, under a mound of beautiful flowers, the body was laid to rest to await the resurrection morn.

By order of P. G. Church in session.

ELIZABETH SIPE, Sec'y.

JONES.

Delila Josephine, wife of Alfred Jones, was born October 4, 1847, and died on February 27, 1925. On February 14, 1872, she was married to Alfred Jones, who survives her with the following children: Thomas William Daniel, Obed, Mrs. G. C. Elliott, and Mrs. George Elliott; many grand-children and great-grandchildren. Sister Jones was one of the oldest members of Pleasant Grove, Va., Church, having joined the Church whn a young woman and remained a loyal member through life. To her Church she was ever faithful; in her home a devoted wife and mother; to her neighbors, a kind friend. Sister Jones lived a quiet life, but did good to those that came in contact with her.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. C. W. Maxwell, of Presbyterian Church, South Boston, Va., in the Pleasant Grove Church. Interment in the Church cemetery. To the loved ones, especially the invalid husband, that is left behind, the Church offers its deepest sympathy to each, and may the loving Father help each one to look up and say through their tears, "Thy will, not mine, be done."

Done by order of the Church.

MRS. D. J. SIPE.

ROSS.

James M. Ross was born October 24, 1837; died March 5, 1925; aged 87 years, 4 months and 11 days. He was married to Miss Sarah Sutton August 14, 1862. To this union were born six children, all of whom survive. The funeral was conducted in Bethlehem Church by his pastor. His body was laid to rest in the Church cemetery. He joined Bethlehem Church in early manhood, to which he lived a faithful and devoted member.

He was a soldier in the Confederate Army, volunteering at the beginning of the war. After the war, he came to his home, near Bethlehem, where he was a successful farmer, a good citizen, and a brave soldier in the army of the Lord.

May the Lord bless those who mourn and help us all to be good soldiers in the army of the Lord.

J. F. APPLE.

WALKER.

Eliza Walker, wife of Lorenza Walker, was born October 8, 1852; died March 8, 1925. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. Margaret Weaver, and one son, Paul Walker; also two grandchildren, a daughter and son of Paul. She professed faith in Christ when young, and joined Olive Grove Baptist Church, in Granville County. She remained a member there until death. For several years she had lived near Auburn, Wake County, with her children, who are now members of Auburn Christian Church. She was a great sufferer in her last years, and died trusting Jesus to receive her into the Christian's home, where suffering is no more. Her body was placed beside that of her husband at the old home in Granville County. Funeral services by the writer.

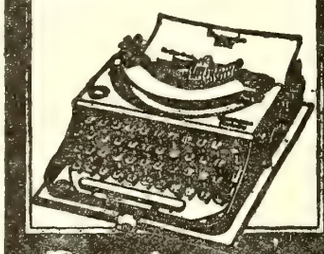
J. E. FRANKS.

SUTTON.

Little Velma Elizabeth Sutton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Sutton, died at the early age of 4 months and 4 days, and was buried at the home Church of her mother, Apples Chapel, February 26, 1925. It has been said by one: "Hell has no children; heaven has them all."

T. J. GREEN.

Something You Have Been Waiting For



Remington Portable Typewriter

—with Standard Keyboard and every other feature common to the larger machines. Case only four inches high.

Price, with case, $60.

Send Your Order to THE CHRISTIAN SUN Richmond, Va.

WINTER TOURIST TICKETS

—ALL RESORTS—

SOUTH AND SOUTHWEST

CALIFORNIA

Via New Orleans and "Sunset Limited."

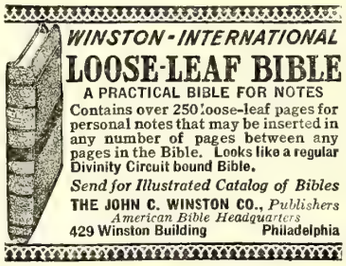
INFORMATION, ITINERATIES, RESERVATIONS Furnished in Detail Upon Request.

Apply to Local Agent, or Address

F. H. POSTON, Division Passenger Agent,

Southern Railway System,

809 East Main Street, - - Richmond, Virginia.



WINSTON-INTERNATIONAL

LOOSE-LEAF BIBLE

A PRACTICAL BIBLE FOR NOTES

Contains over 250 loose-leaf pages for personal notes that may be inserted in any number of pages between any pages in the Bible. Looks like a regular Divinity Circuit bound Bible.

Send for Illustrated Catalog of Bibles

THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO., Publishers

American Bible Headquarters

429 Winston Building Philadelphia

V. E. MAREAN

Pipe Organ Expert

TUNING — REPAIRING

REBUILDING

Motors Installed Yearly Contracts

P. O. Box 864, - Richmond, Va.

Phone, Boulevard 7011-J

Internal cleanliness protects against disease

IN CONSTIPATION, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness, including the gravest diseases of life.

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favour Lubrication

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

Nujol

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

For Internal Cleanliness

LISKEY—ESTEP.

On February 25, 1925, Mr. Hubert Liskey and Miss Stella Estep motored to my home and were quietly united in matrimony. They are popular young people from the New Hope neighborhood and are members of the Church there. For the present, they will reside with the groom's father, Bro. J. R. Liskey, and engage in farming. They have many friends who wish them well and happy in their married life. A. W. ANDES.

KNICK—BUSH.

Mr. Henry R. Knick and Miss Bessie Bee Bush, both of Harrisonburg, Va., were united in the holy bonds of matrimony at my home on March 3, 1925. The bride is a popular saleslady in a clothing store in Harrisonburg. The groom is a railroad engineer, running on the B. & O. between Harrisonburg and Lexington. The best wishes of their many friends will follow them through life. A. W. ANDES.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Creation.

Q. 1. Who made you?

A. God; God made all things.

Q. 2. Why did God make you and all things?

A. For His own glory.

Q. 3. How can you glorify God?

A. By loving Him and doing what He commands.

Q. 4. Why ought we to glorify God?

A. Because He made us and takes care of us.

Q. 5. Are there more Gods than one?

A. There is only one God.

Q. 6. In how many persons does this one God exist?

A. In three persons—the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost.

God and His Attributes.

Q. 7. What is God?

A. God is a Spirit.

Q. 8. Where is God?

A. God is everywhere.

Q. 9. Can we see God?

A. No; we cannot see God, but He always sees us.

Q. 10. Does God know all things?

A. Yes; nothing can be hid from God.

Q. 11. Can God do all things?

A. Yes; God can do all things, according to His holy will.

The Bible.

Q. 12. Where do we learn how to love and obey God?

A. In the Bible alone.

Q. 13. Who wrote the Bible?

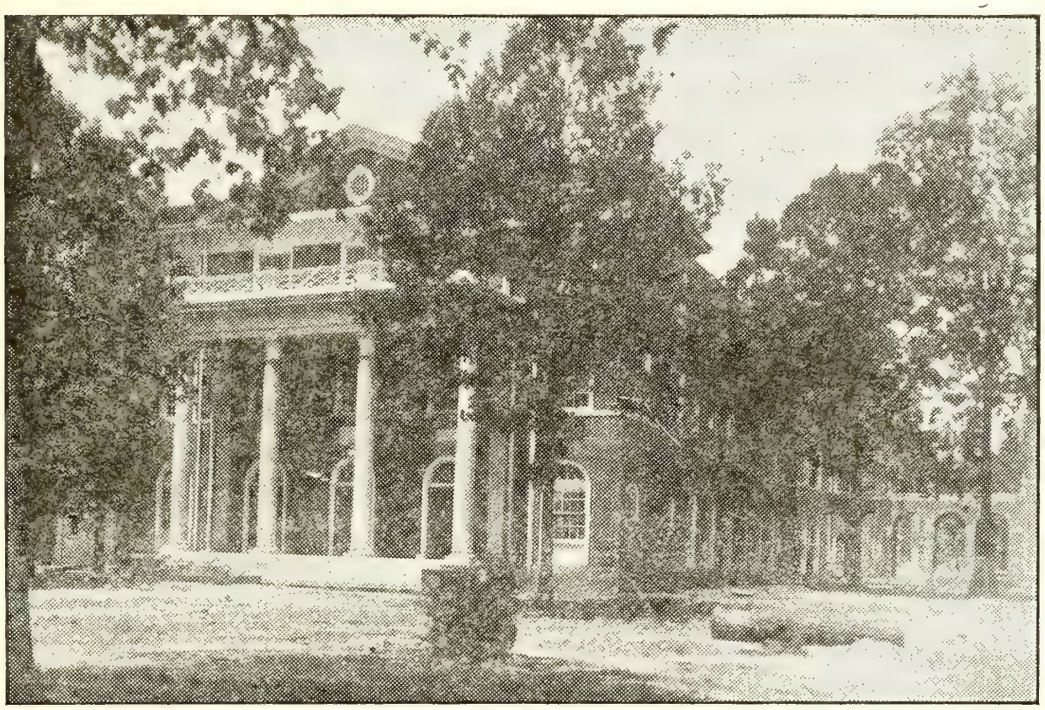
A. Holy men, who were taught by the Holy Ghost.

BARBER.

Mrs. Martha L. Barber died March 12, 1925, at the age of 69 years, 9 months and 27 days. She was married July 15, 1886, to J. D. Barber. She is survived by her husband and two sons and several grandchildren. In early life she professed faith in Christ, and during her sickness she often expressd her readiness to depart. May the Heavenly Father comfort her loved ones. Interment was made at Shallow Ford. Burial service by the writer. T. J. GREEN.

ELON COLLEGE---CO-EDUCATIONAL



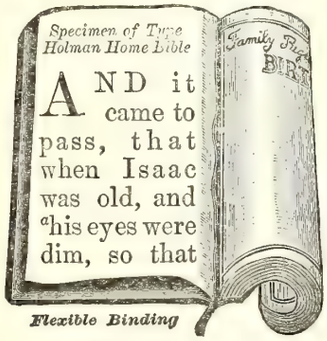
WHITLEY AUDITORIUM BUILDING
One of the Group of Five New Buildings now Completed.

Elon, in her rebuilding program, has been looking to the future. Ten buildings, new and modern equipment, and a highly trained and efficient faculty are at the service of the future leaders of our Church. The phenomenal growth of Elon in the past two years indicates a larger growth throughout the whole denomination in the years just ahead. Make Elon your own Church College in a personal way by your patronage and prayerful co-operation.

HOLMAN BIBLES

For Old Folks and the Home

EXTRA LARGE PRINT WITH REFERENCES



Flexible Binding

Size when closed, 6½ x 9¼ inches

Printed from large Clear Pica Type, with Marginal References, Family Record and Maps. This HOME BIBLE is new and very desirable for every day use, containing all the advantages of a Family Bible in a compact size that can be easily handled, with Record for Births, Marriages and Deaths. The best Bible obtainable for old folks who need extra large clear print and a light-weight book.

No. 2014. Durably Bound in French Seal Leather, full flexible covers, round corners, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, gold titles.

Price—Post Paid..... 4.85

HOLMAN BIBLES

NEW BLACK-FACED TYPE TEACHERS' BIBLE

The very latest and newest Teachers' Bible published, and it includes every possible improvement in Bible making. The type is a clean, clear, sharp Black Face, which is printed on the finest paper obtainable. Easy to read (can be read in the dimmest light), and is just the page for those suffering from impaired eyesight. Compact in size, light in weight, easy to carry.

Absolutely flexible binding. Contains Old and New Testaments, Treasury of Biblical Information, Practical Comparative Concordance, Oriental Light on the Bible, Four Thousand Questions and Answers, Fifteen New Maps in Colors, about 1500 pages in all.

Size, 5¼ x 7¾ inches.

Specimen of Type
THE LORD is my shephe not want.
2 He maketh me to lie green pastures: he leadeth the still waters.

No. 4412. Bound in Seal Grain Morocco, with overlapping covers, rounded corners, red under gold edges. Silk head bands and silk marker.

Price—Post Paid..... 4.20

No. 433X. Holman India Paper. Algerian Morocco, Leather Lined, Silk Sewed, Divinity Circuit, round corners, carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and Helps as above.

Price—Post Paid..... 9.35

MONEY TO LEND ON IMPROVED FARMS--FAVORABLE TERMS

Write for Details

SO. BOND & MORTGAGE CO.
627 E. Main St. - - Richmond, Va.

Medical College of Virginia

Medicine Dentistry
Pharmacy Nursing

New Buildings. Well-equipped Laboratories, under the direction of full-time, competent teachers.

The Memorial Hospital, Dooley Hospital, St. Philip Hospital, are owned and controlled by the Medical College of Virginia, and offer every facility for thorough clinical teaching.

Staffs composed of the Faculty of the College. Additional clinical facilities are offered through other institutions in Richmond.

For full information and catalogue, address—

J. R. McCAULEY, Secretary.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D.....Editor
W. W. STALEY, D. D.....Associate
W. A. HARPER, LL. D.....Associate
R. C. HELFENSTEIN, D. D...Associate
REV. S. C. HARRELL.....Associate
REV. S. M. LYNAM.....News Editor
P. J. KERNODLE....Managing Editor

Subscription Rates.

One Year $2.00
Six Months 1.00

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post-Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows the date of expiration. Please renew at least two weeks in advance.

Change of Address: Give both old and new post-office when asking that your address be changed.

When subscriptions are made for friends, state whether paper is to be stopped at end of the year.

Remittances: Make all remittances to "The Christian Sun," 1536 East Broad Street, Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and Marriage Notices, limited to 100 words, are published free of charge. All over 100 words, published at 1 cent a word. Remittance should accompany copy. Write names distinctly.

Advertising Rates: "Want Ads," 2 cents a word an insertion. Display Rates quoted upon request.

FOR SALE.

A 40-bbl., electric-driven, fully-equipped modern Flour Roller-Mill, Corn and Feed Mill, located right in the town of Elon College, near railroad siding, on acre lot; hard-surface and sand-clay roads leading out in all directions.. A good custom grain mill and good business opportunity for the right man, as well as advantage of a high-grade high school and high-class college.

Terms: Part cash; balance on long terms. Apply—

C. R. LOVE, - - BURLINGTON, N. C.

FOGLEMAN.

Rev. L. W. Fogleman passed to his reward Monday, March 16, 1925. Bro. Fogleman had been in declining health for some time, but his condition was not considered serious. Monday before noon he seemed to be better than usual. A short while after dinner, while walking, death claimed him and in a few minutes he was ushered into eternity.

He was thirty-seven years old. In 1917 he was graduated from Elon College. Since that time he has been an active minister in the Christian Church. At the time of his death he was pastor of Antioch Church, Randolph County, N. C. He leaves to mourn their loss a wife, four children, a father, stepmother, several brothers and sisters, and a host of friends and relatives.

This good man was always faithful to every duty. In the home he was a kind husband, a devoted father and a friend to all. Pleasant Hill Church, of which he has been a devoted member for twenty-three years, will always remember him for his loyal support and faithful attendance. While we, as a community, Church and home have sustained a great loss, we feel sure that our brother has gained that reward which comes to those who are faithful until death. The funeral services were held at Pleasant Hill Church, Alamance County, and conducted by his pastor, J. E. McCauley, assisted by Drs. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro, N. C.; W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C.; P. H. Fleming, Burlington, and his former pastor, and Rev. O. W. Lindley, of the Methodist Protestant Church. Interment was made in Pleasant Hill Cemetery, witnessed by a large concourse of friends and relatives.

JOSEPH E. McCAULEY.

OXFORD TEACHERS' BIBLES

An Oxford Teachers' Bible has references and 300 pages of helps that are a mine of information to Bible students. The helps are arranged in alphabetical order, like a dictionary. They are accurate, comprehensive and up-to-date. A few styles are listed here. Many others are described in our Bible catalogue, mailed upon request.

04403 [This size print] Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 6⅞ x 4¾ inches $4.00

0623x [Same Bible as 04403] Printed on Oxford India paper. Only 1 inch thick..... $6.00

04453 [This size print] French Morocco leather binding, overlapping covers, 7¼ x 5 in. $4.35

0773x [Same Bible as 04453] Printed on Oxford India paper. A remarkably thin and light Bible. (Only 1 inch thick) $7.75

05453 [Same Bible as 04453] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $6.25

05453x [Same Bible as 0773x] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red $8.75

04523 [This size print] A self-pronouncing Oxford Bible. Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 8½ x 5½ inches... $5.50

0923x [Same Bible as 04523] Printed on Oxford India paper, only 1⅛ inches thick... $9.75

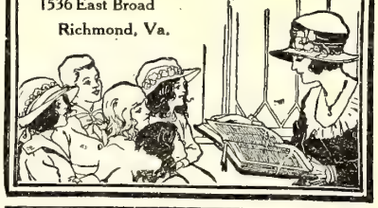
ORDER FROM
"THE CHRISTIAN SUN"
1536 East Broad
Richmond, Va.



FOR GOOD HOME COOKING
MRS. COOK'S CAFETERIA
805 East Grace Street.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

A Co-Educational School

LOCATED AT

WADLEY, ALABAMA

This School offers the last two years of Academic work and the first two years of College work.

The following Courses are offered in the—

COLLEGE DEPARTMENT: English, Bible, Religious Education, Latin, French, History, Education, Mathematics and Science.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENTS: Music—Piano, Voice; Commercial Department—Bookkeeping, Typewriting, and Shorthand.

Due attention will be given Athletics, such as Tennis, Basket-Ball, Baseball, Football.

The government of the School is mild, but firm, endeavoring to create a home atmosphere as much as possible, not merely to maintain discipline, but to cultivate Christian character.

This is our own School, located within reach of all in this section, and the cost is less than any other College within reasonable distance of those who would attend School from this section.

Send for a Catalogue giving full description of Courses and entrance conditions.

S. L. BEOUGHER, President
Wadley, - - - - Alabama.

HOLMAN BIBLES

FOR CHILDREN
PICTORIAL BIBLES WITH HELPS

The text is self-pronouncing, by the aid of which children can learn to pronounce the difficult Scripture proper names.

Specimen of Type
27 And the boys grew: and E'sau was a cunning hunter.
5 And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof.

Size, 5⅜ x 3½ inches.

With beautiful photo views of scenes in Bible lands distributed throughout the text. Also maps of Bible lands in colors. Also new Practical Helps to Bible Study, especially designed for instructing children in scriptural information.

No. 9111. French Seal Leather, overlapping covers, round corners, gold edges, gold titles.

Our Price—Post Paid..... 2.30

COLORED PICTURE EDITION

Portraying in natural colors, scenes and places taken from nature and life in the Holy Land.

No. 9211. Same as No. 9111, but with Beautifully Colored Pictures.

Our Price—Post Paid..... 2.40

FOR INTERMEDIATE SUNDAY-SCHOOL SCHOLARS

Large Clear Black Type, Self-Pronouncing, containing Helps to Bible Study, 4000 Questions and Answers, Maps in Colors, and Presentation Page. A Beautiful Gift Bible.

Specimen of Type.
22 And the prophet Is'ra-el, and said unto thyself, and mark, and for at the return of t

Size, 7 x 5 inches.

No. 215. Divinity Circuit Style, Bound in French Seal Leather, round corners, red under gold edges, with silk head bands and purple silk marker, gold titles, etc.

Our Price—Post Paid..... 3.10

No. 3215RL. Red Letter Scholars' Bible, same Bible as No. 215, with all the Sayings of Christ printed in Red, and with Red and gold INLAID PANEL SIDE TITLES, also Beautifully Colored Pictures.

Our Price—Post Paid..... 3.45

Holman Self-Pronouncing

VEST POCKET TESTAMENTS

Clearest Print in Smallest Size
4⅜x2¾x⅜ inches

Specimen of Type.
AND the third day there was a marriage in Cā'nā of Gāl'i-lee; and the mother of Je'sus was

2133K. Bound in durable Morocco Grain Semble Leather, flexible limp, gilt titles ..... .60

2113. French Morocco, genuine leather, flexible limp, gold titles, rounded corners, gold edges..... .70

2115P. French Morocco, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, with the Book of Psalms included $1.10

ILLUSTRATED VEST POCKET TESTAMENT
With Pictures of Holy Land Scenes

2814. French Morocco, limp, gold side title round corners, red under gold edges ..... .85

RED LETTER VEST POCKET TESTAMENT

With all the words of our Lord printed in red.

13RL. French Morocco, flexible limp, gold side title on red panel, gold edges. .85

15RLP. French Morocco, overlapping covers, flexible, gold side title on red panel, red under gold edges, with Book of Psalms included $1.25

INDIA PAPER VEST POCKET TESTAMENT
Thin as a Wafer

2136XP. Fine Grain Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lined to edge, with Psalms included $2.25

Send Your Orders to
THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Official Organ of the Southern Christian Convention

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY. IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY. IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXVII. RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, APRIL 2, 1925. NUMBER 14.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

RESTORED TO DUTY.—

Postmaster-General New has directed the restoration to duty, with demotion, of each of the six postal supervisory officials suspended January 2d for their connection with efforts to influence legislation at the time of consideration of the postal-pay increase bill. What has been accomplished? Don't meddle. Somebody must be head.

THEATER OPENED WITH PRAYER.—

A new theater at Willoughby, Ohio, was opened by prayer by the Rev. W. Guy Raines, an Episcopal rector of that city. In the prayer, the theater was dedicated to the service of the community. If the theaters could all be dedicated to the service of the community and a little less to the operators' purse, we might have cleaner shows and a wholesome amusement life. We are of the opinion that the Ohio rector is headed in the right direction.

PRESIDENT'S CHURCH MAY BUILD.—

The latest meditated skyscraper Church is that now being contemplated by the First Congregational Church, of Washington, D. C. This is the Church which President and Mrs. Coolidge attend. The proposed structure would be ten stories high, with the upper floors devoted to apartments or offices. Such buildings are becoming increasingly popular. The National Council of the Churches has given its approval to the plans, but the Church has not finally acted on the matter.

THE PARISH CHURCH OUTGROWN.—

Dr. John Hayes Holmes, pastor of the New York Community Church, in a sermon recently, declared that the old type of parish Church was outgrown. He pointed out that the institutional Church, the union Church, the parish Church had come and were going, and that in their stead was coming the community Church, led by a staff of preachers and teachers, and manned by a corps of trained experts, and organized like a university or a government for efficient public service. It may be well to think on these things to which Dr. Holmes calls attention.

PUBLISHER APOLOGIZING.—

In a number of articles appearing in the publications of Cyrus H. K. Curtis, the famous Philadelphia publisher, references to Roman Catholic ceremonies have appeared. Mr. Curtis is now publishing apologies for those references. The first occurred in connection with a series of articles on the Philippines by Miss Katherine Mayo, and the latest, with reference to the dogma of the Immaculate Conception, in an article by Mr. E. V. Lucas. The first series was handled by the Public Ledger Syndicate, and the second by the Ladies' Home Journal.

AN OLD FLAG UNFURLED.—

The "President Arthur," of the American-Palestine Steamship Line, sailed out of New York Harbor with the flags of the United States and Judea flying at its masts. About five hundred Zionists were on board, and the "President Arthur" was headed for Haieffa, the seaport of Jerusalem. Before its sailing, the Jews participated in a solemn religious service. It is interesting to note that the flag of Judea that day took the high seas for the first time in more than two thousand years. For the Jews the world over, it should have been a memorable day, because it was indeed the unfurling to the winds of heaven an old, old flag.

WOMEN PROTEST AGAINST UNION.—

It is announced that a petition signed by many women of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, protesting against the union of the Northern and Southern branches of that Church, has been addressed to the conferences of the Church, asking that they defeat the proposed union. The signers come from almost all the Southern States. The Southern Methodists may have good reason for wishing to defeat the union, but on the face of things, we would think that such a union would be the finest way of proving that the Church stands for genuine Christianity. While we are conscious of the fact that much readjustment would be necessary, yet we are quite sure that the restoration of public confidence in the Christian Church as a whole would be worth all that the step could possibly cost.

CHANGES IN DIPLOMATIC CIRCLES.—

Secretary of State Kellogg stands in danger of losing two of his assistants to the diplomatic service. Albert H. Washburn, minister to Austria, has tendered his resignation to President Coolidge, and J. Butler Wright is being considered for the position. Mr. Washburn is by profession a lawyer, but has served as minister to Austria since 1922, having been appointed by President Harding. He was at one time private secretary to the late Henry Cabot Lodge. Mr. Butler Wright is well known in diplomatic circles, having served as counsel to the embassy at Peking and London. The other assistant secretary whom Mr. Kellogg is in danger of losing is John Van A. McMurray, who is being seriously thought of for the position of minister to China.

NEGROES GET JEWISH TEMPLE.—

The negroes of Chicago have completed the purchase of another Jewish temple. B'Nai Sholom Temple Israel, at the corner of Fifty-third Street and Michigan Boulevard, has been purchased by the negro Baptists of that city. This is the third building erected by white congregations to go into the hands of the colored people of Chicago. Olivet Congregation, the largest Protestant congregation in the world, occupies what was once the First Baptist Church. The congregation numbers about ten thousand. The Pilgrim congregation, numbering around six thousand, now occupies a former Jewish temple. In the new temple recently bought by the Bethesda congregation, a large and varied program will be carried into operation.

STUDENTS BEGIN CHURCH ERECTION.—

The Episcopal students of the University of Illinois, feeling that their needs require a three hundred thousand dollar chapel, have begun the fund by subscribing five thousand dollars among themselves in the hope that their example will arouse the Church to come to their rescue. On May 25th, they will break ground for that part of the building which their money will build. The Methodists plan to add four hundred thousand dollars to the Wesleyan foundation, which they maintain at the same institution. The Churches are awaking to the grave responsibility which rests upon them to care for the religious needs of the university students all over the country and to care for them in a most practical way. Every university town is a strategic point, because of the opportunity which the Church has in the lives of the students doing intellectual work. If the Church could line up the students, there would need be no great concern for the rest of the field, the future leaders now in the making would care for that in a fine way.

INTERCHURCH CONFERENCE PLANNED.—

Growing out of a suggestion of the Methodist General Conference, an interchurch peace conference has been called for next December to meet at the meeting of Congress. Fifteen denominations have already expressed a willingness to participate in the conference. It is to be in connection with the international alliance for friendship. Such a step should draw the Churches together, and if the Church can be brought to take a definite stand for peace, there can be no more war.

No government will dare to engage in any struggle against the outspoken disapproval of the Churches. More ministers need to take the same stand with Dr. Fosdick, who declares that he is opposed to war and that he will never bless another. So long as the Church will bless war and follow governments into war, so long can there be war; but with the Church positively opposed, and voicing that opposition, governments must needs take cognizance of their stand.

NOTES-PERSONALS

A missionary rally at Spring Hill Church was attended by representatives from the First Christian Church of Richmond Wednesday, April 1st.

Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, pastor of the Suffolk Church, attended the meeting of the Rotarians in Richmond last week and honored this office with a brief visit.

The Churches of the United States, according to H. K. Carroll, compiler, gained in membership, over all losses by death, withdrawal, etc., last year 690,000. Of this number, it is noted with pleasure that the Christian Church had a total gain, over all losses, of 5,409 in membership. There is marked ggainst us, however, a decrease in ministers of 25. We are inclined to think that last number is an error, as one acquainted with situations in our Church can hardly believe that 25 more ministers died or quit the ministry last year than came into it.

Dr. W. P. Minton, mission secretary, Dayton, Ohio, writes March 20th: "Miss Olive Williams is now located in the Coleman's Hospital, Troy, Ohio. She is fearfully weak and suffered a great deal yesterday from chills and fever. I am very fearful of the outcome, but yet hopeful that she may yet improve. She seems quite cheerful and her mind is full of thoughts of the work." SUN readers are aware, from a previous note, that Miss Williams was taken very ill in Porto Rico and had to be rushed home recently for hospital treatment. Many prayers will be offered that this faithful soldier and missionary will be restored to health and given back to the work which she so much enjoys.

It is to be noted with some surprise that the Baltimore Methodist Conference, one of the very large Southern Methodist bodies, in session last week at Washington, D. C., voted 141 to 136 not to unite with the Methodist Episcopal Church, North. These two Churches divided over the subject of slavery several years before the Civil War, and there has been much agitation as to their union for the past several years. The General Conference of the Northern branch of the Church has voted for the union, but the Baltimore Conference last week was the first of the Southern Conferences to vote. It will require three-fourths of the votes of the Conferences of the South to effect the union. There seems to be much doubt expressed now as to the union of the two bodies.

Rev. V. T. Crawford, pastor of our Elm Avenue Church, Portsmouth, Va., seems to be making progress and achieving results in his field. Under date of March 23d, he writes: "Our work here is making very good progress, and we are enjoying a splendid attendance; we have had several more additions to our Church recently. The work at Highland Park, which has been conducted as a union mission since I have been here, voted yesterday in favor of making it a Christian Church. Some land has been purchased for the purpose of erecting a Church. The people at Highland Park have been using a small building, which was originally a garage (or repair shop), for Church and Sunday School work. Highland Park is a promising place for a Church; it seems probable that it may be in the near future an important residential section. However, it is not possible for me to report any very definite progress on the part of our denomination at that place, as the deciding vote was not taken until yesterday. I hope to be able to report some definite progress along the line of Church organization there very soon."

The committee appointed by the last Convention, Judge J. F. West, chairman, to erect a marker at Old Lebanon site, Surry County, Va., and a memorial to the name and honor of Rev. James O'Kelly has not by any means abandoned its work or ceased its activities. The committee has been seeking to determine exactly the character of the memorials and to get plans and specifications and an estimated cost for establishing the same. Judge West, chairman, has just written THE SUN'S editor: "I expect to have in my hands in a few days the blueprints and specifications upon which to call for bids on the Lebanon marker. A dealer in granite and marble monuments who desires to make a bid on the job is furnishing me blueprints without cost." We have collected some funds on these memorials, but we yet lack a great deal of having enough. What has been collected is in a savings bank, drawing interest at 5 per cent. We are ready to receive gifts from any source, and the same will be greatly appreciated and will expedite the work of the committee. We hope to state in an early issue of THE SUN exactly what the Old Lebanon marker and the O'Kelly monument each will cost. The other members of the committee are: Mr. W. E. McClenny, Suffolk, Va.; Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, secretary, Durham, N. C.; J. O. Atkinson, treasurer, Elon College, N. C. Any amounts sent in will be received and placed to the credit of the fund.

Questions for Pastors to Answer.

A question: Why do not our pastors write more often to THE SUN?

Another question: Why do some of our pastors go for weeks and months without writing a line to their Church paper—THE CHRISTIAN SUN?

Still another question: Why do so many pastors go for weeks and months without either writing to their Church paper or even securing from their members any subscribers for THE SUN?

Another question yet: Church news is the very best reading that goes into a Church paper. Why do pastors, who alone can furnish such news, so seldom write?

And yet another question: How long has it been since some of our most active pastors have written anything for THE SUN?

One other question: A good brother wants to know why the editor does not put more Church news in the Church paper. Who is to blame, the editor or the pastors?

NOTICE.

"ANNUALS" WANTED.

We are very anxious to have in our fireproof library at Elon C ollege a complete file of "The Christian Annual." The fire of 1918 destroyed the library files, along with all other books of the library. We have been able since the fire, however, to secure a complete file of "The Annual" from 1891 to 1925, with the exception of two, namely, for 1904 and 1905. If any CHRISTIAN SUN reader can supply these, or either of them, it will be greatly appreciated and will be a very valuable contribution to the Elon College Library. We also have "The Annual" of 1883 (Vol. 12). If any SUN reader can send nay "Annual" prior to 1891, with the exception of Vol. 12 (1883), this will be also appreciated.

Gratefully,

MISS LOUISE SAVAGE, Librarian.

Elon College, N. C.

WHAT ARE YOU WORTH?

BY REV. THOS. F. OPIE, D. D.

When one asks what is Mr. So-and-So worth? he really means, what is his property worth—what is his money worth? The average person's estimate of a man is raised or lowered by the answer he gets in dollars and cents.

Real estate, personal property, holdings, houses, mills, factories, grounds, tangible assets, servants, luxuries, machines, dividends, dollars, gold dust—these are the things that weigh heaviest in man's scales. But there is an Old Testament text which says that man seeth not as God seeth; for man looketh at the outward appearance, while God looketh at the heart.

Is any man really worth $500,000,000? Is he worth it to his community, his Church, to his fellow-citizens? Is he worth it to the poor and the wretched- Is he worth it to asylums, to hospitals, to charity?

What is the man worth as a citizen? Is he public-minded? Is he socially minded? Is he public-spirited? What does he care about overworked mothers and underfed children? What does he care about dirty politics, grafting officials, unclean spirits? And caring, what daes he do about it all? What does he care about better schools, cleaner streets and a better community?

What are you worth?—in time, thought, effort? In ideas, interest, ideals? Do you contribute yourself to the general weal?

While the community has increased a hundredfold in tangible wealth in the last decade, has it developed ten per cent in spiritual force?—in engendering faith and good works? In fellowship and brotherhood, and kindness, and purity, and tolerance on the part of its citizenship?

Character is finer than cash—but the two together make a fine combination—one that can scarcely be excelled! Goodness is purer than gold; but together they make a pair that might work miracles! Divinity is nobler than dividends; but together they might produce a heaven on earth! The Golden Rule is squarer than the rule of gold; but together they might measure out untold benefits to the race!

While the city has finer pavements, better streets, handsomer homes, greater businesses, has it at the same time and in the same ratio increased in God's business? Are the people 10 per cent more generous, more kindly disposed? Are they more Christ-like, loving, brave and true? Are the children 10 per cent happier? Are young women 10 per cent safer? Have crime, graft, profiteering been reduced? Has drunkenness been lessened? Have lust and immorality been checked? This is the way to determine true worth!

What are you worth in moral values, in spiritual estimates? What are you worth in Christhood—to the Church; to the town; to God? What are you worth?—Southern Churchman.

The special session of the Senate has closed after two stormy weeks, and the lawmakers have hurried from Washington for a rest. The final hours were dull, except for a brief flurry over the President's renewal of his nomination of Thos. F. Woodlock to be a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, but Republican leaders decided confirmation could not be obtained, and pigeon-holed the nomination in committee to speed adjournment.

Scientists are digging out from the sand hills of Southern Nevada the ruins of a city which they believe may be 10,000 years old.

About $2,000,000 is spent annually in this country on products sold for rat control.

"MUST LIVE THE TRUTH."

Rev. C. H. Rowland, of the First Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C., used as his subject Sunday morning "Seeking Those Without." His text was taken from Col. 4:5-6, "Walk in wisdom towards them without, redeeming the time. Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man."

"Christians are not told to get out of the world," said the speaker, "nor are they told not to have anything to do with the world. The very existence of the Church depends upon influencing those without to accept the truth. Jesus mingled with the world, but was wise in His talk and speech. We read from the Word, as many as walk according to this rule, peace be on them. And again we read: walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called. The apostle in speaking these words was giving a summary of Christian conduct. It is the essence of all the apostolic counsel to Christians toward those without. To this end, walk wisely, speak correctly, and act judiciously. We are to watch our steps, guard our words and live the truth.

"The pure fountain remains pure by flowing out. To imprison it is to lose its quality of purity. It is the law of the spirit that if we would be strong we must expend our strength. This the very nature of things. Money, brainpower or anything else, increases by use.

"Walking wisely means not walking in sin, but exhibiting before those with whom you come in contact the spirit of Christianity. It is said that Livingston made the Christ known to Africa by his walk. Correct speech is not necessarily quoting the Scriptures, but speaking kind words, which are not only gentle, but pleading for the Christ and the right way of living.

"Walk in wisdom toward them that are without, redeeming them and the time. Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man."

THE BIBLE IN THE HOME.

The test of the nations is their loyalty to God's Word. The nations which have honored God's Word, and which are honoring God's Word are the nations which have His blessing.

The State will never be guided into ways of constructive peace and permanent development through society's aim and desire to better mankind. Reform movements, no matter how strong and efficient they may be, can never reform the State or the nation until that reform begins at the fireside. There is no chance for men to do, in their interests and desires for others, what God has said the father and the mother, the husband and the wife, the brother and the sister, must do.

The Bible is the one great power which God has given to us, to instruct us how to build our homes aright.—Exchange.

PERSONAL LETTER.

From a personal letter of Rev. E. T. Cotten, Oshawa, Canada:

"It might be interesting to you to know that I am a Virginian, my home being in Dendron, Surry County, and that I have relatives attending your Richmond Church. I am always glad to greet the warm rays of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, especially on a winter's day. Canada has treated me very kindly during my little over three years' stay, the Ministerial Association of this city of 17,000 population, electing me president. Church membership was 131 when I came; I have received 113, nearly doubling the membership. So you see 'Cotten' is useful even in a cold climate."

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

We should be glad to furnish your Sunday School the following supplementary supplies, cash to accompany order:

Improved Uniform Series International Lessons.

1. Bible Lesson Picture Roll, 21x32 inches, per quarter $1.25
2. Sunday School Superintendent (to accompany the Picture Roll), per quarter..... .15
3. Pupils' Lesson Stories, per quarter..... .06

Group Uniform Series, Primary Course.

1. Group Bible Lesson Picture Roll, 16x20 in., per quarter 1.00
2. Group Pupils' Lesson Stories, Primary, per quarter ..... .07

In making order, be explicit and name the quarter for which supplies are wanted; thus: First quarter, January to March; second quarter, April to June; third quarter, July to September; fourth quarter, October to December.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The Illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the Number and prices.

TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Minion Bold-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4 7-8x 7 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

India Paper Edition, Size 4 7-8x7 Inches, 1 1-10 Inches Thick.

2152X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$6.00

Bourgeois Type, Size 5 3-8x8 Inches, and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.

2167—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.00

2172—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.50

India Paper Edition, Only 1 1-8 Inches Thick.

2172X—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$8.50

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3¾x5⅜ inches, and 1 inch thick; with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black.

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations. Special book for Sunday Schools 95c

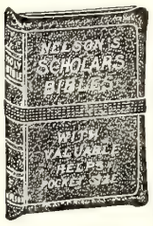
Ruby Type, Size 3¾x5⅜ Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps $2.50

Minion Type, Pocket Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ inches Thick.

With 32 full-colored illustrations; also 25 outline maps through the text and 12 colored maps.

133—Bound in cloth, round corners, red edges, title stamped on side in pure gold $1.60



135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 15-16 of an Inch Thick.

135X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.$3.75

Minion Black-Face Type, Self-Pronouncing, Size 4¾x 7 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick.

Printed from clear, large, black-face type, 32 full-page illustrations in Sepia and colors, 4,000 Questions and Answers, Harmony of the Gospels, How to Study the Sunday School Lesson, 25 outline Maps, 12 full-page colored Maps.

4152—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold.....$3.25

TEXT BIBLES—AMERICAN STANDARD VERSION.

Printed from Easy-Reading Type, on Good Bible Paper, for Sunday School and Church Use.

Minion Type, Size 4x6 Inches, 1½ Inches Thick, 25 Outline Maps, Bound in Black.

101—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, title stamped on back in pure gold..$1.10

112—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title on back in pure gold $2.75

India Paper Edition, Only ⅞-Inch Thick.

112X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold.....$3.75

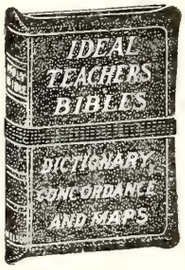
Reference and Text Bibles also in minion, brevier, bourgeois, long primer, pica and English type.

Thumb index cut on edge, 50c extra; name printed on any Bible in gold, 40c extra; extra wording, 40c per line.

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (v vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3-8x 8 1-2 Inches and 1 3-8 Inches Thick.



Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red;other parts of the book are printed in black. With concise Bible dictionary, combined concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Levant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold $4.75

RED LETTER EDITION

With all the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands, title stamped on side and back in pure gold $3.25

Any of the above Bibles sent post paid. Address

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street, - - - Richmond, Va.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR.

J. O. ATKINSON, Elon College, N. C.

Contributing Editors.

W. W. STALEY W. A. HARPER
R. C. HELFENSTEIN S. C. HARRELL

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE LAYMAN'S OPPORTUNITY.

As a minister, I am intensely interested in the layman's viewpoint in life, and in his part in kingdom service. It is my sincere conviction that the laymen are coming into their own in a new and larger way than the Church has ever known before. The opportunities for vital Christian service on the part of the laymen are more challenging today than ever before. Whether we wish it or not, the day has passed when the laymen looked with a longing eye to the ministry, wishing to enter its ranks in order to render a larger service to the kingdom, and thinking that he could do a more effective work for Christ as a minister of the gospel than as a layman. I say that day has passed, and now instead of laymen aspiring to be ministers, ministers, in alarming numbers, are looking with a longing eye to the position of the layman, believing that perchance they could render a larger service to the kingdom themselves as laymen than as ministers. We are told that more than 500 ministers from one denomination alone withdrew from the pulpit last year to enter the field of business.

I am quite aware of the possible reactions people may have and do have when it is announced that a minister has quit preaching to enter business. A great many people instantly conclude that every minister who quits preaching to go into business does so because of the lure of money. However, one is persuaded that, in most instances, such is not the case. But rather they feel that the opportunity for larger remuneration will enable them to render a larger service to the kingdom by doing better by their families and by their communities. The layman in the Church has at least just as great an opportunity for service to the kingdom as has the minister himself.

Every legitimate trade or profession should be looked upon as an opportunity for Christian service. The old idea that the ministry was the only sacred profession and that all other vocations and avocations were secular is no longer entertained by thinking people. Any vocation is sacred or secular just according to the spirit that prompts a person to enter it, and the spirit he puts into it. There are men who, by reason of their passion to render honest service to their fellow-men, have hallowed and made sacred the work of the carpenter, the mason, the merchant, the physician. Certainly it must have been so with our Master as He worked at the carpenter's bench in His effort not only to make a living, but to live a life. And so with every legitimate vocation, men have made their work sacred by entering into it with the idea of rendering a service thereby to God and to their fellow-men. However, it is possible for a man to secularize even the pulpit. He does that very thing when he enters the profession without the conviction that he can render his largest use to humanity and to God in that capacity.

It is the layman's privilege and his right to look upon his profession or business or trade as sacred, provided he puts the spirit of a servant into it.

The minister is rightly concerned in the task of persuading men to put their religion into their business. And we all know, and the world knows that there is a lamentable need of that very thing today. Men must put their religion into their business life. They must let their religion have breathing space in the world of commerce, the realm of industry, and in the social spheres. The world is terribly out of joint. The wheels of industry are running hard, the whole machine of social relationships seem to be out of gear, and there are countless hundreds of men who deplore the present social, political and economical disorders, and cry with Hamlet, "Things are out of joint; O cursed spite that ever I was born to set them right." But the man whose life is charged with true religion recognizes the fact that things are not as they ought to be, but he is determined to do his part in putting things right, and he sings:

"The world is out of joint;
O happy plight
That I have the privilege
To help set it right."

And the minister is constantly concerned about getting men to express their religion in terms of daily life, to put their religion into their business. The kingdom needs and must have the minister's service.

But the layman sounds another note that is just as important and just as essential for kingdom progress and expansion. He calls to the Church to put business into its religion, and because of the layman's insistance that the Church must adopt business-like policies and methods of carrying on its work, the Church has accepted the duplex envelope and budget system of finance. It rapidly responded to the principle of systematic giving, and by putting business into their religion we have done away with the old notion that efforts to raise money for the Church and Sunday School was begging, and now we think of it as being the greatest business on earth, and men no longer look upon making their pledges to the support of the Church as giving so much to the Church. But now they look upon their pledges as the amount they are willing to invest in the cause of religion for their community. And all these more dignified methods and motives for financing the Church work have come about by reason of the insistence of the layman to put business into religion.

The Church could not survive without consecrated Christian ministers—men who devote their time and energies to the propagation of Christian faith and spiritual leadership. But the Master well knew that the men from the common walks of every-day life would be best qualified by reason of their experience for this arduous task of spiritual leadership, and he selected Matthew, the tax collector; Mark, the young man of financial independence; Luke, a physician; John, a fisherman, and Paul, a tent-maker, to be outstanding spokesmen of His new-world religion. And from the ranks of the laymen the best ministers of our day have come. For after all, the ministers are just men. In fact, they are simply laymen who have felt called of God to devote all their energies in the spiritual leadership of the Church by the work of the gospel ministry. The prophets were laymen; Jesus was a layman; the disciples were laymen dedicated to their definite tasks. And the layman of today, if he be a consecrated layman, is in just as great favor with God as the minister, by reason of the fact that he is devoting his energies to supporting the kingdom enterprises. The old idea of there being three sexes—men, women and ministers—has a certain basis, for time was when ministers differentiated themselves from other people. But, thank God, that day is past, and past forever.

The Church cannot function without consecrated ministers of the gospel; but on the other hand, the Church cannot function without consecrated laymen. A Church is still a Church, even though it has no minister. But a Church ceases to be a Church when it has no laymen. The very life of the Church, and the progress of the Church, depend as much upon the laymen as upon the minister, and to my own mind it depends even more. The laymen of the Church might be divided up into two classes—those who are liabilities and those who are assets. There are those in every Church who constitute an ever-present problem for the pastor and the Church officials. Instead of being a source of inspiration and help to the pastor, they draw on his energies and his nerves. He would gather them into the inner circle of spiritual fellowship, but they will not. Then there are those in every Church who are genuine assets to the Church life. Their very presence is an inspiration to everybody else. Instead of having to be nursed and coddled and petted, they are strong and determined to give help. They are lifters and not leaners; they are boosters and not knockers; they are stayers and not quitters; they are assets and not liabilities. The Church needs more laymen who are in the Church not only for the good they may receive, but mainly for the service they can render.

But there is a new day dawning for the Church because of the fact that a new type of layman is being developed in all our Churches, a type of laymen who put the Church of Jesus Christ first in their thinking and planning, and who look upon life as an obligation of stewardship, believing that as they live in God's world, breathe God's air, enjoy God's sunshine, and partake of God's gracious providence, they are duty bound to make their lives count for God. There is no task that they will not champion—no problem that they will not tackle if the welfare of the Church is at stake. They are possessed of the conviction that anything that ought to be done can be done.

If it is the intensifying of the spiritual life of the Church that is needed, this new type of laymen set themselves to praying more earnestly, more constantly and more believingly than ever before. If it is the task of winning the men of the community to Christ to which they are called, they joyfully respond in the service. If it is the work of influencing the youth to follow definite lines of Christian service and to enlist as life recruits in kingdom activities, they unhesitatingly lend their influence to that objective. If it is the call of missions at home and abroad that is asking for greater support and larger attention, they accept the challenge without complaint. If it is the raising of large sums of money for a parish house in order that the Church may be a community center to serve the whole life of the whole community, or to raise large sums of money for any other Church enterprise, this new type of laymen that characterizes the Church of our day rises in the strength of his faith and says "it shall be done," and he does it.

The laymen are interesting themselves as never before in the devotional life of the Church. They have come to realize that silent or private prayers are just as powerful as oral prayers or public prayers. And men who prayed little because they could not pray aloud are now praying much because they have learned the privilege of silent prayer. The laymen are interesting themselves as never before in the work of evangelism. Time was when the chief emphasis of evangelism came from the pulpit, but in the future it must come from the pew. The day of tabernacle evangelism seems to be passing, and the day for personal evangelism, or lay evangelism, is at hand. The layman must win their brother-workmen and associates if needed they are to be won. They must witness for Christ in the shops, in the factories, in the store, in the mines, in the market place, in the office, in the lodge—wherever they come in contact with their "brother-man"; they must be willing to witness for their Father God. The strength of a Church is not estimated by the number of members it has upon its roll, but by the number of members it has who are imbued with the passion of the evangel and who have a mind to serve and to win others to the Christian life.

Carlyle sounded a truth that every layman should ponder over: "To have been the evangelist of a single soul is not to have lived in vain."

Every layman should be concerned about providing for an educated ministry. Religious education is the lever by which the layman may raise the whole Church life to a higher plain. It is one thing for the laymen to demand a well-trained ministry; but it is quite another thing, and altogether a much more important thing for the layman to encourage and make provision for young men aspiring to the gospel ministry to secure the training required.

Then again the laymen are responding more worthily than ever before to the challenge of missions. No Christian can assume a passive attitude on the subject of missions, and the laymen of our day are rallying to the cause of missions as never before. They are reading about missions, talking about missions, praying for missions, and giving to missions in a way that is inspiring.

And in recent times the laymen have responded and are responding to the great teachings of God on the subject of stewardship of life and of property. This fact is to usher in a new day of power for the Church of Jesus Christ.

It Can Be Done.

Somebody said that it couldn't be done,
But they with a chuckle replied
That maybe it couldn't, but still there were none
In their crowd who would quit till they tried.
So they buckled right in with a trace of a grin
On their faces—if worried they hid it;
They started to sing as they tackled the thing
That couldn't be done—and they did it!

Somebody scoffed: "Oh, they'll never do that—
At least, no one ever has done it."
But they threw off their wraps and took off their hats,
And the first thing we knew they began it
With a lift of their chin, and a bit of a grin
Without any doubting or "quiddit,"
They started to sing as they tackled the thing
That couldn't be done—and they did it.

There are thousands to tell you it can't be done;
There are thousands to prophesy failure;
There are thousands to enumerate, one by one,
The dangers that wait to assail you.
But just buckle in with a bit of a grin,
Then take off your coat, and go to it;
Just begin to sing as you tackle the thing
That "can't be done"—and you'll do it!

WHY THE CHURCH IS PAUPERIZED.

Roger Babson, the noted statistician, has issued a statement declaring that Christian people in this country are not giving more than 1 per cent of their incomes to God's work. Babson says if Christians would pay into the treasury of the Lord one-tenth of their incomes, the annual receipts for God's work in this country would be $4,000,000,000. And this is exactly what God enjoins upon us in His Word. We are to give not less than a tenth with which to finance His kingdom.

No wonder the work of the kingdom lags, and the Church of God is pauperized. Men and women enjoying Christian privileges and opportunities give God a "hand out" and withhold from His cause and work that which belongs to Him.

Christians of America would not be poorer, but richer; not less happy, but more happy, if they would obey God's plain and unmistakable teaching in the Word. Truly has one said that the next great revival needed is a revival in Christian giving, a revival in the sense and practice of stewardship. "Upon the first day of the week, let one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him." (2 Cor. 16:2.)

PAUPERIZING THE CHURCH.

Here is a most startling statement, and from very high authority. Roger Babson, the noted statistician, says that figures show that Christian people of this country are not giving on an average of more than 1 per cent of their incomes for God's work. Babson says if Christians would give a tenth of their income to God's work there would flow into the Lord's treasury $4,000,000,000 a year.

The following is from the Burlington News of March 27th:

Much interest is seen in all services in Graham Providence Memorial Church. The Sunday School is increasing in numbers and interest under the efficient leadership of J. B. Farrell, superintendent of his teachers. The Men's Bible Class, taught by Junius H. Harden, now numbers more than fifty, and the interest and attendance record is very remarkable.

New song books for the Church and Sunday School have been purchased, and the singing is inspiring. An interesting society of Christian Endeavor has just been organized. Misses Bruce Cates, Mary Addie White and Estelle Kelly, students of Elon College, were visitors Sunday, and Miss Cates sang a very effective solo.

The Woman's Society are training for a missionary pageant, which will be given Sunday night. The public is cordially invited. Rev. T. E. White is the capable and beloved pastor.

GOD'S PLAN.

Proportionate giving is God's plan for His Church, as has been through all the ages. But unfortunately the Church has largely drifted away from that idea. It seems strange that there should ever be any lack of money for carrying on God's work, but every branch of the Church is feeling it, and probably has always found it difficult to secure the money needed, ever since the days of the apostles. If the Church would return to the practice of proportionate giving, the financial problems oft he Church would soon be solved. Very few people realize how small a proportion of their income they give to God. Roger Babson, the greatest statistician in this country, has recently issued a statement in which he said that Christian people of this country are not giving on an average more than 1 per cent of their incomes for God's work. Think what would be the result if all gave a tenth of their incomes. Babson says that that would bring into the Lord's treasury in this country $4,000,000,000 a year. But whether the tithe is adopted or not, every Christian ought to decide upon some percentage of his income. The Rose Hill Church, in South Carolina, has just undertaken a plan that is to be much commended and one which will be watched with much interest. Instead of having the usual every-member canvass for pledges of definite amounts, every subscriber pledged himself to give a definite percentage of his income during the year. This varied from 2 to 10 per cent. We predict that this Church will have the best year it ever had, and that its members will be greatly blessed. For a fuller account of this Church, see our South Carolina news column.—Presbyterian of the South.

AN ORDINATION.

Rev. M. F. Allen, with three of his members and good friends, came to Elon from Lynchburg, Va., Wednesday, March 18th, to meet the educational committee of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, to be examined as a candidate for ordination in the Christian Church. The examination was duly held and was found satisfactory, and the committee recommended to the executive committee of the Conference, which was also called in session at the same hour, that Bro. Allen be ordained. The executive committee, in proper form, authorized his ordination, which took place at the college on the afternoon of the 18th.

It was a pleasant and a very appropriate exercise. The ordaining presbytery was composed of Dr. P. H. Fleming, president of the Conference (chairman); Dr. J. U. Newman and Dr. C. H. Rowland and The Sun's editor, comprising the other members. Dr. Alexander, pastor of the College Church, and Rev. P. T. Klapp also assisted in the solemn ordination services.

Bro. Allen is pastor of a community Church which he has recently led in building in the environs of Lynchburg, which organization is known as the United Christian Church. This Church, which had been duly organized on the first Sunday in January, elected all officers and complied in every detail with the requirements of our Christian principles and government; also made formal application for membership in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference and was received. We now have a splendid Church building, a competent and beloved pastor, an enthusiastic and growing congregation. "United Christian Church" of Lynchburg takes its place with other Churches of North Carolina and Virginia Conference. May it prosper and grow under the directing hand of our blessed Lord.

Pen, ink, and paper are merely tools as are the saw, plane, hammer, and chisel the tools of the carpenter, while thoughts, like wood, are the raw material. One would not engage a workman to fashion and hang a door just because he possessed the wood and tools. He must possess knowledge of the craft as well, and to acquire this knowledge, he must submit to a period of training.—World's Work.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Prayer meetings and primaries are the heart of religion and government. Non-Christian people do not maintain either. Both are the product of Christianity. Church membership and citizenship are the most important human relationships. Church membership relates men to God, and citizenship relates men to government. Church and State are both of God. "The powers that be are ordained of God." "There is no power but of God." God founded government and the Church, and citizenship, as well as Church membership, is a sacred right and trust." Whosoever, therefore, resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God; and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation." Violation of law is sin.

Burk's maxim was "that we should be such patriots as not to forget that we are gentlemen; and that we ought to bring all the dispositions which are lovely in private life into the service of the Commonwealth." That was a noble ideal, but we may elevate it and say: we ought to be such citizens as not to forget that we are Christians, and that all the qualities which are lovely in Christian life we should bring into the service of citizenship. Or, we may turn the statement around and say: we ought to be such Christians as not to forget that we are citizens. Some are so immersed in citizenship that they fail to become Christians; and some are so engrossed in religion as to fail to be real citizens. Citizenship and Christianship belong together, as both are ordained of God. The primary, in the one, and the prayer meeting in the other is the measure of value in either relation. Complaint against government and the Church is really a complaint against ourselves. Government and Church are both ordained of God; the administration of these institutions is in the hands of men. If citizens took more interest in primaries, better men would be in office; and if Christians took a deeper interest in prayer, it would make Christian testimony more potent.

Obedience to law is obedience to a divine institution; taxation is the support of a divine ordinance; recognition of State claims is religious. These relations in the Church are even more sacred, because the Church is the kingdom of God in the spiritual sense. No one can be a good citizen who is not a good Christian; and no one can be a good Christian who is not a good citizen. Support of the State and of the Church, financially, is based upon financial possessions. The citizen who has no property, pays no tax except the little he pays on himself as a "poll tax." The same is true of the Christian. But as "man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth," he can be a good citizen and a good Christian by obedience to law and loyalty to the Church, which is the "body of Christ." Citizenship and Church membership carry responsibilities that demand interest in prayer meetings and primaries.

W. W. Staley.

ELON LETTER.

The memory of the "Men and Religion Movement" a decade ago is a sweet and precious heritage for all who felt its inspiration and, in response thereto, gave the kingdom a larger place in their hearts and also in their daily interests.

The spirit of this great movement is to reappear in a new movement to which the name Laymen's Church League has been given. The purpose of this league is thus described: "The Laymen's Church League is a new interdenominational effort by laymen to secure real working fellowship and co-operation between all groups of Christian laymen who are eager to serve their Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and to increase the spiritual power and efficiency of the Church of Christ."

An effort of this character appeals strongly to the men of the Christian Church. We have believed earnestly in co-operation and hoped wistfully for Christian union. Our hearts should greatly rejoice over this promising new movement, embodying the fundamental purpose of our brotherhood throughout its history.

This league is to hold an interdenominational conference at Columbus, Ohio, May 8th to 11th, in connection with a district conference for the State of Ohio. The interdenominational conference is to be limited to one thousand delegates representative of all the Churches of the United States and Canada. The district conference will no doubt number three thousand, but they will be visitors only to the general meeting unless they as individuals are also members representative of their denomination in the interdenominational conference of the league.

Our Church is to be represented in this interdenominational conference by the following laymen: Byron N. Andrews, Eastport, Maine; F. R. Woodward, Hill, N. H.; U. D. Brownell, New Bedford, Mass.; Wm. L. Blaum, Albany, N. Y.; A. F. Foor, Everett, Pa; John J. Stryker, Irvington, N. J.; L. Rose Jones, Franklin, Va.; J. B. Hutton, Dover, Del.; J. P. Montgomery, Burlington, N. C.; J. J. Pitt, Norfolk, Va.; I. A. Luke, Holland, Va.; C. E. Booz, McPherson, Kans.; J. G. Lucas, Madrid, Iowa; C. L. Botkin, Towanda, Kans.; Elmer L. Roe, Superior, Neb.; L. D. Wilhelm, Macomb, Ill.; C. E. James, Mansfield, Ill.; M. S. Campbell, Collison, Ill.; W. O. Jones, Hagerstown, Ind.; J. F. Barnes, Huntington, Ind.; Earl Bayman, South Whitley, Ind.; C. B. McConnell, Sidney, Ind.; John T. West, Sharpsville, Ind.; V. B. Caris, Columbus, Ohio; H. R. Fisher, Condit, Ohio; Earl F. Smith, Columbus Grove, Ohio; W. A. Snider, Defiance, Ohio; Perry G. Yantis, Troy, Ohio; J. L. Reck, Covington, Ohio; Wm. Schmidt, Ansonia, Ohio; Harry McPherson, Dayton, Ohio; Dr. G. W. Flory, Eaton, Ohio; Lewis Banta, Lebanon, Ohio; J. L. Rector, Pleasant Hill, Ohio; W. C. Hile, Versailles, Ohio; J. W. Deever, Trotwood, Ohio; Joseph Johnson, Dayton, Ohio; A. F. Chase, Dayton, Ohio. W. A. Harper.

THE CHURCH'S INDIVIDUALITY.

By Robert E. Speer.

There is nothing in Christ that any one communion can monopolize. This is the most outstanding single impression that comes to me as a result of close association with all the Churches in the Federal Council during the last four years. It is a sheer impossibility to segregate any fresh discovery of Christ that any one of our great Christian groups has made. It any group has had a true insight into Christ and what He means for human life, all have shared in that insight. If any one writes a hymn that exalts Christ or writes a new devotional book centering around Him, no one stops to inquire to what denomination the author belongs.

We are coming to a common recognition of the elemental unity of life and experience among the Churches. There is no Presbyterian type of sin, with which only the Presbyterian Church can deal. You cannot denominationalize sin. There is just one kind of sin. And there is, accordingly, just one task, elemental in its unity, before all the Churches, whatever their names may be—the task of overcoming sin through the power of their one Saviour and Lord.

We have come to a realization of this inner unity as our Churches have been brought face to face with concrete tasks. There is an indivisibility of our Christian reactions to any great moral issue. Among the many recent evidences of this, none has been more striking than the response in all communions to the Japanese exclusion act. The reactions among the various Churches against such a racial discrimination were identical. The public statements made by the Federal Council were simply a gathering up of the judgment of all thoughtful Christian groups.

Or take the resolutions on war adopted by almost all the Christian bodies. If you erased the denominational names, no one could possibly tell which declaration came from which body. The common convictions on the issue of war and peace are a revelation of the community of mind among the Churches. Other illustrations, equally convincing, of the indivisibility of our Christian experience could be drawn from the attitude of the Churches toward prohibition, their efforts to relieve the suffering in the Near East, Russia and Central Europe, their new experience in grappling with the problems of race, and in many other fields of co-operative activity.

That there are difficult and delicate questions before the Churches as they undertake to deal with great social and international questions cannot be denied. None is more difficult and complex than the true function of the Church in its relation to issues which are also the concern of the State. But the difficulties themselves are a unifying force, drawing the Churches together in an effort to find together the right way, as they cannot find it alone. Certainly, the Churches must not be intimidated from doing what they ought to do because of fear of making mistakes or of doing what some think they ought not to do.

There are voices that would like to keep the voice of the Church from being heard. We ourselves may at times have misgivings as to what the Church should do. But all our questions as Churches finally reduce themselves to two. The first concerns our relation to our common Head. How great a Lord is Jesus Christ to be? Are there areas of life of which He is not meant to be Lord? If so, then he is not the Lord at all, as we had supposed. The whole of human life belongs to Him, and must be brought under His mastery. That is the first issue on which we must be clear.

The second question has to do with the relation of our Churches to one another. The problems which are faced in the Federal Council are Church problems. They are issues with which the Churches as Churches must deal. They are questions on which the Churches must find a common mind and in relation to which they must be able to fulfill their corporate and indefeasible responsibilities. We have passed beyond the day when the Churches can delegate their responsibilities to other agencies. We must grapple ourselves with these momentous tasks, and in order to do so with power, we must develop a will to unity that will relegate to a secondary place all details of polity and organization and draw the Churches together in a growing oneness of spirit and purpose.

Read the editor's "Questions to Pastors," and then lend a helping hand.

Holding Evangelistic Services at Albany, N. Y.

THE EVANGELISTIC PARTY AT THE FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH.
Top—Rev. W. C. Hook, pastor; Rev. J. F. Morgan evangelist and director of music.
Bottom—Samuel Leonard Davis, pianist; Mrs. Davis, soloist.
Services were held each evening (except Saturday) at 7:45 o'clock.

EVANGELISTIC SERVICES AT ALBANY.

The Christian Endeavorers of Dixie sent greetings to the Endeavorers of Albany local union through the kindness of Rev. J. F. Morgan, of Winchester, Va. The Rev. Morgan is director of music and personal work during the community evangelistic campaign in progress at the First Christian Church, Chestnut Street, from March 15th to 29th. Wednesday evening a session for young people was held, with about 200 Endeavorers present, including the president of Albany local union, Elmer Garvin, and the treasurer, Edgar Knox. A very interesting program was directed by Sam Leonard Davis, of Norfolk, Va., noted blind pianist; Mrs. Davis, soloist and evangelistic worker; Mr. Morgan and the pastor of the Church, Rev. W. C. Hook. Rev. Hook portrayed in a very vivid manner the story of the prodigal son, after which a solo entitled "Where is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" was rendered.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Memorial Baptist Church conducts a food sale in its Church parlors.

We understand the society meetings of the First Christian Church will be omitted for the next two weeks, but will combine with the evangelistic services being held in that Church.

The community evangelistic campaign, which has attracted large congregations to the First Christian Church since March 15th, came to a close last evening. The pastor, Rev. W. C. Hook, used as his closing message the topic, "What Will You Do with Jesus?"

The meetings, which have been of the conservative type, have been very popular and greatly appreciated by all who have been in attendance. There have been many reconsecrations and new professions and in the closing service a number of new members will be received into the Church.

The Rev. J. F. Morgan, director of music and personal work during the campaign, has won his way into the hearts of all who have been privileged to listen to his great messages in song and to observe his splendid personality. Sam Leonard Davis, noted blind pianist, has inspired his audience night after night with his wonderful talent.

The Rev. W. C. Hook, pastor-evangelist, has brought some very earnest and helpful messages to his hearers.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT.

Hon. O. W. Whitlock, Huntington, Ind., secretary of publications of the General Christian Convention, makes an announcement that CHRISTIAN SUN readers will greet with gladness and applause, and very many of us will avail ourselves of this great generosity and far-sightedness on the part of our Board of Publications. Read the announcement in Judge Whitlock's words and then send your request to Dr. J. F. Burnett, secretary, C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio, and get books, that should sell at a high price, simply for the asking.

This department has had printed for free and general distribution sixty-nine thousand four hundred booklets and pamphlets prepared by Rev. F. G. Coffin, D. D., and Rev. J. F. Burnett, D. D., president and secretary, respectively, of the General Convention of the Christian Church, as follows: "Origin and Principles of the Christians" (Burnett), 16,000; "Historical and Biographical Sketch of Rev. James O'Kelley" (Burnett), 10,000; "Sketch of the Life of Rev. Abner Jones" (Burnett), 9,000; "Sketch of the Life of Barton W. Stone" (Burnett), 9,000; "Sketch of the Life of Elias Smith" (Burnett) 9,000; "Pioneer Women of the Christian Church" (Burnett), 9,000; "The Church that Jesus is Building and Churches that Men are Organizing" (Burnett), 400; "The Christian Church and its Present Task" (Burnett), 3,000; "The President's Convention Address at Burlington" (Coffin), 3,000; "Address at Central Convention, Versailles, Ohio" (Coffin), 1,000.

TRUE STORY OF FAITH.

A poor widow living near Glasgow had an only daughter, who, while greatly beloved, was the source of much pain and anxiety to her mother. She was inconsiderate, giddy, and fond of gay company. Affectionate entreaty and warning were alike unavailing, and at length the sorrow of the unhappy mother culminated in her daughter's leaving home abruptly, and going to a disreputable neighborhood in Glasgow, refusing to return. For more than a twelvemonth the Christian mother carried her grievous burden constantly to the throne of grace. While mechanically about her work in the household, the prayer was ever in her heart and upon her lips, "Bring back my wandering child, O Lord!"

An officer who was well acquainted with the good woman, and with her great grief, was riding in a procession in Glasgow, when, in the crowd lining the sidewalk, he recognized the face of the girl. He at once left his place, and, dismounting, said to her, "Are you not Sarah M—?"

"Yes, that is my name," was the reply.

"Well, let me say to you that your mother hasn't fastened her door since you went away. I have told her many times that it was unsafe and imprudent for her to do so, but she always says, 'Perhaps my Sarah may come back, and while I live I will leave my door unbolted.'"

The sad, dejected child burst into tears, and said, "I will go to my mother this very hour."

She returned at once, and was received with love and tenderness, and was won to a life of sobriety and Christian happiness.

What an intimation of the tender solicitude with which the prodigal is watched over by the Lord of glory; willing to forgive transgression and sin, cast out idols and make all things new, that an eternal communion may be thenceforth maintained between the redeemed sinner and his gracious Saviour.—Broadcasting Prayer.

MISS ELDREDGE COMING.

Miss Lucy M. Eldredge, secretary for young people, Department of Christian Education, will visit the Southern Convention April 12th to May 15th. The following schedule has been arranged for her:

April 12th—First Church, Portsmouth, Va. (morning).
April 12th to 14th—Waverly, Va.
April 15th to 16th—Franklin, Va.
April 17th to 18th—Holland, Va.
April 19th—Temple, Norfolk, Va. (morning); Newport News, Va. (night).
April 20th to 25th—Temple, Norfolk, Va.; Christian Churches, Norfolk, co-operating in school.
April 26th to May 1st—Elon College, Elon, N. C.
May 3d to May 6th—Holy Neck, Va.
May 7th to May 10th—First Church, Norfolk.
May 11th to May 15th—Winchester, Va.

BOARD OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.
DR. W. T. WALTERS, Chairman.
REV. J. H. LIGHTBOURNE, Reg. Dir.

The Saratoga, huge airplane carrier, a $43,000,00 shiu, is to be launched at Camden on April 7th.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

BY WARREN H. DENISON, D. D., Secretary.

Some Points to Guard.

You are planning for your annual every-member canvass for some time in 1925. There are some points to watch, because some Churches overlook a few important matters. We desire to help you have your canvass a splendid success, so we call attention to four matters that should be carefully guarded.

1. Take time to prepare your budget. Do not leave out items that belong there. See that your estimates are carefully calculated. They must not be hurriedly thrown together, nor prepared by one person, but by the entire finance department and pastor together. Then when both sides of the budget are set down in black and white, stand back a little way and look at both sides—current expenses and benevolences—and see how they compare. Men face God when they make out their budgets! It is not a place for driving close bargains; it is not a place for selfishness and littleness. When men make the budget, they are in the midst of a great spiritual experience. Give much thought and prayer to the making of your budgets.

2. Take time to prepare your membership. The members need much instruction on local responsibilities and of the world needs. Literature, sermons, charts, stewardship, prayer are essential. Every effort should be made to make Church attendance large during the two months necessary for preparation for the every-member enlistment. You cannot prepare in two or three weeks. Time is a necessary element.

3. Make it really an every-member plan. It is not merely for heads of families, for the more well-to-do, for older members, for the active and interested membership; it is for every one—young and old, husband, wife, children, widow, rich, poor, active, indifferent.

4. Train the canvassers thoroughly. There should be at least three meetings of the canvassers for training. So important is this that the stewardship department has prepared a manual of instructions. It will be sent free, so that pastor, stewardship secretary, and the one chosen to train the canvassers may each have a copy. More failures occur right here than at any other point.

Every-Member-Canvass Day.

"Ye stand this day, all of you, before the Lord your God; your captains of your tribes, your elders, and your officers, with all the men of Israel. Your little ones, your wives, and the stranger that is in thy camp, from the hewer of thy wood unto the drawer of thy water; that thou shouldst enter covenant with the Lord thy God, and into His oath, which the Lord thy God maketh with thee this day; that He may establish thee today for a people unto Himself, and that He may be unto thee a God."—Deut. 29:10-13.

SUNDAY SCHOOL MISSIONARY OFFERINGS FOR MARCH.

Reidsville, N. C., $6.29; Zion, Moncure, N. C., $1.40; Richmond, Va., $2.84; St. Luke's, Dover, Del., $1.00; South Norfolk, Va., $3.30; Salem Chapel, Walnut Cove, N. C., $1.00; Berea (Norfolk), Hickory, Va., $7.00; Wadley, Ala., $2.16; Pleasant Hill (A), Liberty, N. C., $1.00; Richland, Ga., $1.84; Holland, Va., $10.00; Liberty, Vance, Henderson, N. C., $2.20; Antioch, Harrisonburg, Va., $2.91; Linville, Harrisonburg, Va., $2.70; First Christian, Portsmouth, Va., $10.10; Winchester, Va., $9.28; Elon S. S., Elon College, N. C., $5.00; Leaksville, Luray, Va., $2.42; Wakefield, Va., $3.82; Palm St., Greensboro, N. C., $7.65; Beulah, Wadley, Ala., $1.65; Elm Avenue, Portsmouth, Va., $5.25; Berea (Nansemond), Driver, Va., $6.00; First Church, Greensboro, N. C., $13.54; Monticello, Brown Summit, N. C., $2.82; Randleman, N. C., $3.00; Chapel Hill, N. C., $3.83; North Highlands, Columbus, Ga., $1.76; Mt. Bethel, Summerfield, N. C., $1.33; Wentworth, McCullers, N. C., $3.40; Dry Run, Seven Fountains, Va., $1.51; Ramseur, N. C., $7.38; Rose Hill, Columbus, Ga., $2.78; Timber Ridge, High View, W. Va., $1.63; Burlington, N. C., $69.62; Christian Temple, $283.33; Class 3, Rosemont S. S., R. R. 3, Berkley, Va., $10.00—total, $502.74.

We are grateful to these good schools for their liberal offerings to our mission cause. We trust that this number shall greatly increase, as funds are so much needed now to carry forward our missionary work at home in Carroll County, Va., and abroad in Japan. We are happy at what these wide-awake schools are now doing.

Gratefully,

J. O. ATKINSON,
Mission Secretary.

VALLEY LETTER.

The winter has passed quite rapidly, and it is about time for me to begin revival meetings again. I shall not hold many this spring, as I am holding a meeting at each of my Churches only once every two years, taking about half of them each year; and fine weather favored me last fall, so that I was able to push them right along. To hold a meeting at all my Churches every year, I have found, takes too much time and strength for that line of work, causing me to have to neglect other important lines. And, then, to hold all the meetings would necessitate some Churches having meetings in bad weather, which would be neither satisfactory nor successful.

It is important that our Churches come up in full with Conference apportionments this year. The need is very great. Every fund on the apportionment table is needy and important. We can bring everything up in full if we try. Of course we can. It can be done without trying very hard if all will help. Conference apportionments and everything else in the Church would be far more than paid if all our members would tithe their income as the Lord requires. When people stop robbing God and fall in line with God's tithing plan, the financial obligations of the Church will no longer be a bugbear, but a joy and delight.

With the hope of stimulating the interest in Conference apportionments, I am sending to the members of my Churches the following letter:

Harrisonburg, Va.

Dear Church Member and Friend:

This letter is addressed to you with the earnest hope and prayer that it may touch a responsive chord in your heart.

I am so anxious that every member of the Church shall really get awake to the teachings of Jesus in regard to sending the gospel to those who have it not. Our duty is plainly stated in Matt. 28:19, Acts 1:8, and in many other places. And then we have before us the example of Jesus and the apostles, who did all in their power to lead others into the light. Are we doing our duty unless we make some sacrifice for the good of others?

Conference apportionments is the regularly appointed channel through which most of us can do this kind of work. Last year many of our members gave nothing to this great cause, and some who ought to have given many dollars only a few cents. The average for the whole Conference was the poor pitiful little sum of 55 cents per member. Is it not a burning shame that followers of Christ do so little for the extension of His kingdom! When cents have been given where dollars ought to have been, how can they expect the Lord to say, "Well done"? How we do need a greater vision in this important matter!

My earnest appeal to you and to every other member is that we shall do the biggest and best thing this year for the causes represented by the Conference apportionments that we have ever done, and do it for the glory of God and the good of fellowman. Sincerely, your pastor,

A. W. Andes.

We are hoping for a greater missionary awakening to come to us as a result of our missionary institute, to be held at Mayland on Saturday before the first Sunday in May. Our Conference mission secretary, Rev. J. F. Morgan, of Winchester, has arranged a good program for that occasion. The principal speaker will be Dr. W. P. Minton, foreign mission secretary, of Dayton, Ohio. Now, here is an opportunity our folks cannot afford to miss. The subject is great, the principal speaker is great, and some of the rest are not so poor, and it is up to our people in the whole Conference to come together in large numbers and make the occasion great. Remember the time and place—May 2, 1925, at Mayland. Come.

Harrisonburg, Va. A. W. ANDES.

LINVILLE.

We have recently held a series of evangelistic meetings at Linville. These meetings began on March 1st, and closed March 15th. The services were conducted chiefly by a number of Christian laymen from Harrisonburg, known as the Codle's Crusaders—a different group or "team" coming each evening. Rev. Stokes Lott, the new head of the mission work in Harrisonburg, was with us and preached one night. Rev. A. W. Andes was with us on three different occasions. Both Bro. Andes and Bro. Lott preached fine sermons, which added much to the success of the meetings. As a result of the meetings, there were twenty professions of faith in Christ, thirteen of whom united with our Church—in all, there were fifteen accessions to our Church, and the members of all the Churches in the community, we believe, were greatly revived. The members of the M. E. and other Churches co-operated with us admirably and profitably. In these meetings, as in all others, no denominational or sectarian lines were recognized. The music during the entire two weeks, was under the management of Bro. E. A. Emswiler, a member of the local M. E. Church, who conducted the singing to the pleasure and profit of all. The organization of Codle's Crusaders, mentioned above, is composed of consecrated laymen of various denominations—Baptist, Brethren, Progressive Brethren, Christians, Disciples, Lutherans, Methodists, Presbyterians, Reformed, United Brethren and others. While people are talking Christian unity in other sections, we are practicing it in this one.

R. P. CRUMPLER.

A new suit for Easter is all right. But don't forget to subscribe for THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

THE UNDENOMINATIONAL APPEAL.

By O. J. Randall.

Concurrently with the growth of the community Church movement, the query is heard: "Which type of community Church makes the more effective appeal—the denominational (including federated denominational) or the undenominational type? How do the people, generally, react?" Some whose investigations we suspect have been rather superficial, if not prejudiced, are ready to conclude that the denominational type is the more efficient. From this view we are strongly inclined to dissent.

The ultimate strength of the undenominational appeal lies in the fact, which is being increasingly recognized and acknowledged, that the essential conviction and consequent conceptions of the Christian religion are themselves undenominational. No Protestant denomination has or today claims to have now, or ever to have had, a monopoly of such convictions upon which they rest. No denomination claims to have a monopoly of Christ or of the Bible. Not even the Roman Catholic Church dares to make so bold a claim. This being true, it follows that, whatever it is that differentiates any particular denomination and makes it necessary that it should be denominated at all, it is—to say what cannot be denied—not fundamental to the Christian religion, whether conceived of as a mode of living or as a system of belief, or as both, which it actually is.

The weakness, if there be any weakness, of the undenominational appeal, has its origin in one or two really subsidiary, though greatly exaggerated, considerations, namely: First, the absence of the prestige and of the sense of permanency and solidarity that grows out of the history, the achievements, and the connectional concerns of denominationalism. Second, akin to the first, the realization that the undenominational community Church is in the experimental stage. Its future is uncertain, not to say precarious. The organization is purely local. There is no dependable source of supply of ministerial leadership, of appropriate literature, or of financial aid; all of which have great value in the early developmental stages of any such enterprise. We admit the revelancy and weight of these observations. But, while they are important, they are not vital. They are, after all, minor and not major matters. These conditions can be and are being met. Similar conditions existed in the beginning. They did not deter the fathers, nor did they discourage the founders of the many sects which have blessed (?) our history since the beginning. Our answer, then, to sentiments of this sort quoted is to call the roll of that host, who, without history, without prestige, without financial or any other kind of outside aid; under the compulsion of a great idea, gave themselves to and led their followers into new and heroic adventures in the kingdom of Christ; such adventures, indeed, as timid or overcautious souls will never undertake—not even for so great an idea as that of Christian unity.

On the other hand: the weakness of the denominational appeal lies in the universally admitted fact that no one denomination can satisfy or overcome all the denominational predilection, adverse or otherwise, prevalent in a given community. However broad or community minded a denominational Church may be, it is still a denominational Church. If it is not, why call it such? And many will say, "Why should not the denominational community Church be of the denomination to which we belong?" If we answer that it does not matter which denomination or denominations (federated) the community Church represents, they will promptly and properly reply, "Why, then, should it represent any?"

The plain fact is that these sectarian differences, which we find so difficult of adjustment, are the product of denominationalism. Nor can denominationalism cure the conditions it has thus created until it abandons the very thing that caused these conditions.

It will be apropros, and perhaps both interesting and suggestive, to submit herewith an account of the undenominational "clinic in Christian unity" which we have been quietly conducting here in Potomac Heights, a subdivision of the city of Washington, District of Columbia. This is a community of approximately one thousand souls. The heads of these families are, for the most part, civil service employees. This indicates high average intelligence and comfortable though modest homes. During the period of the growth of this community the question of organizing some form of denominational Church was proposed more than once. Some surveys were made with that end in view. There was no encouraging response to these proposals. Two years ago last December, in response to a neighborhood invitation, thirty-five persons came together to consider the advisability of organizing a community Sunday School. The outcome of that preliminary meeting has been: (1) a successful Sunday School, with an average attendance of about seventy-five or eighty; (2) the erection of the first unit of a Church building at a cost of $10,000, half paid for; (3) the organization of a community Church of the undenominational type on the doctrinal basis of John 3:16, with a membership of one hundred; (4) a society of the Church womenfolk, analogous to the ladies' aid society, rendering substantial service; (5) a Christian Endeavor society; (6) a regular, though part-time, pastor; and (7) a program of religious, instructional, expressional, social, and recreational features throughout the year which makes a definite contribution to the welfare of the people.

Our Church membership includes representatives of many denominations. Several of our best members had not been connected with any Church previously. Others, whose prior Church membership had been more or less nominal, are giving evidence of a fine appreciation of the essentials of religion and of spiritual values.

We formulated our own constitution. We arranged our own very simple ritual. This provides for the recognition of membership, the installation of office bearers, for baptism (the mode optional), and for the Holy Communion. Our organization has been effected without ostentation or propaganda. It is the expression of the convictions of sincere people, who have no ulterior motives, and who honor and love each other, notwithstanding differing denominational antecedents or the lack of them, simply on the basis of their mutual attachment to Christ as children of God.

The experience and observations of more than thirty-five years in quite active participation in religious work leads me to express the opinion that no Church of any denominational connection—not even a so-called denominational community Church—could, under the same circumstances, have made the progress we have made in these two years. And in recording this progress, I desire to say that while in our theology and in our opinions we are both candid and tolerant, the type of piety, the quality of character, the spirit of service, and the sincerity of purpose among our people cannot be surpassed any where.

It is, however, only fair to state that many of us have not and probably will not soon separate ourselves from our denominational affiliation. We maintain a dual membership, believing it better to belong to two Churches and be active in one than to be an indifferent member in only one. By this method we can minister to those who, finding no Church of their own denomination convenient to them, might otherwise affiliate with no Church at all. Such catastrophes, and many another, will be impossible when the undenominational community Church—the New Testament Church—representing the best in all the denominations, without the handicap of any of their shortcomings, is universally recognized as having a place in the kingdom of heaven and as being at least an integral part of the Church of Christ.—The Unity Messenger. (Printed at request of Mrs. J. I. Joyner, Washington, D. C.)

PROGRESS.

Bathtubs now seem advisable and quite commonplace. It is very difficult to believe that less than one hundred years ago they were legislated against and that even the great Commonwealth of Virginia regarded a bathtub tax as a suitable measure for enactment and an easy method of getting a "luxury revenue." Read this:

"The first bathtub in the United States was installed by Adam Thompson, a wealthy grain and cotton dealer of Cincinnati, in 1842. He had lately returned from London, where he had heard that the Prime Minister had such a device. On December 20, 1842, he had a party of gentlemen to dinner, all of whom tried out the new invention. The following day the story was in the papers, and Thompson was attacked both by doctors and politicians. We do not find that Thompson was required to pay a fine, but the discussion in connection with the bathtub resulted in various measures for the restriction of their use. The Common Council of Philadelphia considered an ordinance to prevent any such bathing between the months of November and March. Virginia laid a tax of $30 per year on all bathtubs and extra heavy water rates. In Boston there was an ordinance forbidding their use except on medical advice."

Railroads also came in as harbingers of an evil day and as leading to infidelity. The school board of Lancaster, Ohio, gave the following reply to a request for the school-house in which to hold a debate on the practicability of railroads:

"You are welcome to use the school-room to debate all proper questions in, but such things as railroads and telegraphs are impossibilities and rank infidelity. There is nothing in the Word of God about them. If God had designed that His intelligent creatures should travel at the frightful speed of fifteen miles an hour by steam, He would have foretold it through His holy prophets. It is a device of Satan to lead the immortal souls down to hell."

Most readers cannot visualize the meaning of the figures 400,000,000 people as representing the population of China. China's Millions suggests a new basis of computation, as follows: "If you were asked whether there were more people in China than individual alphabet letters in the Bible, how would you reply? Probably some would say: 'Oh! there must be more letters in the Bible.' On the contrary, there are eighty times as many heathen in China as there are individual letters in our English Bible. Do we realize it? "Eighty souls for whom Christ died going out into eternal night in China for every single letter in the Book which has brought light and life to us. Think of this as you read your daily portion."

Inspire not men with fear, else God will fight against thee in the same manner. Let one provide sustenance for them in the lap of peace; it will then be that they will freely give what has been torn from them by terror.—Precepts of Ptah-Hotep, 2500 B. C.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

April 12, 1925.

Subject: "The Cripple at the Beautiful Gate."

Golden Text: "I am Jehovah that healeth thee."—Ex. 15:26.

Lesson: Acts 3.

Devotional Reading: Isa. 35:3-10.

"Now, Peter and John went up together into the temple at the hour of prayer." They were men of very different temperament, but they found in Christ that which brought them together. They had gone to the tomb together. Now, they were going to the temple together. They recognized the value of associative and common worship. Private devotion is fine, but man is a social being and he needs worship in common with his fellowmen. They went into the temple. They were the heralds of Christianity, a new religion that was the noon-day sun as compared with Judaism, the twilight of the early dawn. But they saw in regular stated worship a helpful feature, and having proved all things, they held fast that which was good. There is a lesson here for those who would break away from the Church on the least pretext. They went into the temple at the hour of prayer." My house shall be called a house of prayer," said Jehovah. It was to be a place where men came to receive supernatural orders and supernatural power; a place where they would be cleansed from their sins, get new visions of their possibilities, be quickened with new power. How empty and poor the life that habitually and willfully stays away from the house of prayer!

"And a certain man, lame from his mother's womb, was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called beautiful, to ask alms of them that entered into the temple." The man was lame—lame from his mother's womb—he had never taken a step or felt the thrill of going where he would. He was poor; he had to beg for a living. He was indeed a pathetic figure. But it were better to be lame and crippled physically than to be lame mentally, morally and spiritually. And it were better to be poor financially than to be poor in friendship and faith and hope and love. He was laid at the gate of the temple—there was dire human need right at the door of the Church. It is ever thus. We do not have to look across the world to find some one to help; there is deep human need right at the door of the Church, within a stone's throw in most cases. The man was to ask alms of those that entered into the temple. What a parable! The needy world looks to those who profess religious faith. The Church of Jesus Christ is supposed to produce the kind of men and women who have the spirit of kindness and helpfulness, and who respond to human need. When men or money are needed, it is the Church which furnishes them.

When the lame man asked Peter and John for alms, Peter responded in the familiar words, "Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have, give I thee; in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk." The man expected to get something. He had a right to expect it, for to whomsoever much is given of him will much be required. Those of us who know Jesus Christ are under obligation to make Him known to others. But the man did not get what he expected. Well for him that he did not. Alas, for him if Peter had had silver and gold; he would probably have been a beggar and a cripple yet. Alas, for us if we got everything we wanted instead of what we need. May it not be that this principle explains so much so-called unanswered prayer. "Silver and gold have I none"—a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of things which he possesseth. How poor is the life that has only silver and gold! "But such as I have, give I thee." We wish we had more to give or more talent to use. That is idle tommy-rot! The question is whether we are giving of such as we have. God demands of us, not what we do not have, but what we have—of money, of time, of talent, of energy, of life. "In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk." Jesus had promised power, and Peter claimed that promise. We have the same promise; we need only to claim the power.

"And he took him by the right hand and lifted him up, and immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength. And he, leaping up, stood and walked and entered with them into the temple, walking and leaping and praising God." Here is the story of a miracle that is being enacted in life wherever the same principles are applied. He took him by the hand—it was the personal touch of a good man: he took him by the right hand; it was the hand of warm, strong, Christian fellowship; he lifted him up: there was strength there, there was sympathy and power that lifted the lame man above the lower levels on which all of his past life had been lived; his feet and ankle bones received strength; powers which had never functioned were released and developed at the touch of this friendly godly man; he, leaping up, stood and walked and entered into the temple; he used his new-found powers in the ways of the Lord and to His glory. The warm, right hand of good fellowship from a holy life has uplifting power, and lifts men from the lower levels of life, awakens new powers within them, causes them to walk in new ways, and inspires them to glorify God. And the power that makes this possible is not of ourselves; it is the spirit of Jesus Christ of Nazareth expressing itself through us.

"And His name, through faith in His name hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know." He giveth power to the faint, and to them that have no might He increaseth strength. "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary; they shall walk and not faint."

The lesson is full of teaching truths. Here are a few of them:

1. There is value in co-operative Christian effort.

2. Jesus Christ is big enough to command the loyalty of men of all types and temperaments.

3. Human need lies even at the gate of Church.

4. Religious faith and practice should go hand in hand.

5. The world has a right to expect something from those who go to Church or in any way have the benefits of religion.

6. The Church can no longer say, "Silver and gold have I none." Nor can it say, "Rise up and walk."

7. We are to give, not of what we do not have, but of such as we have.

8. The personal touch is most vital.

9. The right hand of fellowship lifts men up.

10. Those who are maimed in body and mind and soul have within them great possibilities.

11. When Christianity helps a man, he ought to help Christianity.

12. Faith in Jesus Christ makes men strong.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

April 12, 1925.

Topic: "What the Resurrection Means to Us."
Scripture Reference: Matt. 28:1-15; 1 Cor. 15:1-20.

Plans for the Meeting.

In order that the program may be well planned and run smoothly, topics should be assigned ahead of time. An Easter meeting should be impressive. It should show that beyond a doubt Christ lives and works in our lives today; it should make Church membership more meaningful; it should be a message of good will and cheer. A short worship service should come first. The leader should arrange to have the topics which deal with the last week of Christ's life and His crucifixion follow in order, each announced in turn, and the leader's talk should be reserved for last when he (or she) will speak of the resurrection and what it means to the world. The Church should be decorated with flowers.

Worship Service.

Song: "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."
Scripture: Psa. 24.
Prayer: "O God, who hast prepared for those who love Thee such good things as pass man's understanding, pour into our hearts such love toward Thee, that we, loving Thee above all things, may obtain Thy promises, which exceed all that we can desire, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."
Leader: "If, then, ye were raised with Christ, seek the things that are above, where Christ is, seated on the right hand of God. Set your mind on the things that are above, not on the things that are upon the earth."
Song: "In the Cross of Christ I Glory."
Song: "Fairest Lord Jesus" or "Christ, the Lord, is Risen Today."

Three-minute talks on the last week of Christ's life.

1. The Last Supper.

According to tradition, Christ's supper with the disciples was in a room on Mt. Zion, not far from the high priest. It is recorded in Matt. 26:17-30. Da Vinci's picture of "The Last Supper" is the best one which has been painted, and gives us the tenseness of the disciples as they are seated with Christ at the table. Jesus has said that one of the disciples shall betray Him, and there is a look of deep concern and anxiety on their faces. Christ is calm, seemingly resigned to what shall come, knowing and understanding it all.

2. Christ in Gethsemane. (Matt. 26:36-46.)

Christ goes into the Garden of Gethsemane to pray soon after the last supper. If possible, show Hoffman's picture of Christ in Gethsemane. In this picture, He is kneeling with eyes lifted to heaven and a bright light shining into His face. He struggles with Himself at this time and prays to the Father. He knows the things which are to come to pass in His life and is struggling to harmonize His own will with that which seems to be His Father's.

3. The Arrest. (Matt. 26:47-56.)

Judas comes with the multitude and betrays his Master by kissing Him and saying, "Hail, Master." He is cruelly arrested and taken away to Caiaphas. Matt. 26:58-75 gives the story of the denial of Christ by Peter. This hurt the Master, but from this time forward Peter, who regretted his weakness so much, lived a much stronger and truer life.

4. Remorse of Judas and Christ Before Pilate. (Matt. 27:3-10; Luke 23:1-25.)

When Judas realized what he had done, his heart was filled with horror. His own conscience was hurting him, and the shame of what his Master and the disciples thought of this deed and his disloyalty to his Master and the cause he represented. In his shame, he ran to the priests and gave them back the thirty pounds of silver. The injustice of the trial of Jesus before Pilate and Herod impresses us most after He is arrested. He is examined in the hope of finding something which will be big enough to condemn Him, and for this reason false witnesses are brought in. It is such weak evidence that even Pilate cannot see that He deserves such cruel treatment. But the people cry out, "Crucify Him," and He is delivered into their hands. He is made to carry the heavy cross.

5. On the Cross. (John 19:16-37.)

(The entire audience, or three or four people, should sing the song, "Must Jesus Bear the Cross Alone?" just following this talk.)

The triumph on the cross is the triumph of character over failure and death, and shows the way of salvation is through loyalty to God's will, and surrender to life of service and love. After death, Joseph, a rich man of Arimathea, begs for his body, and it is given to him. He wraps the body of Christ in linen and lays Him in his own tomb. (Matt. 27:57-66.)

Leader's Talk—The Resurrection.

With out the resurrection, there would not have been the Christianity we know today. It was the triumph over death and the promise of life everlasting. For many years the Jewish people had looked and hoped for the Messiah, who would some day come and reign supreme. Read the wonderful passage from Isaiah, in which he prophesies the coming of the King: Isa. 9:6-7. When Christ said on the cross, "It is finished," the hopes of the disciples and His followers would have been dead had it not been for the resurrection. When Christ arose and was seen by them, their hopes were again raised, and they set about their task of winning the world to Christ. At first, they thought the kingdom was near at hand, later that man's vocation was to fit himself for leadership in this kingdom, and later realized that the "kingdom of God is within us" (Matt. 28:1-15). The Bible record should be told. The climax is reached when Christ told the disciples of their task: "All power is given unto me in heaven and earth . . . Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost . . . and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

If there was a resurrection for Jesus, there will come a time of resurrection for all people. This is an evidence of the divine life in the soul of man, the great power by which God speaks to men. It assures us of immortality of the soul, a great promise of life after death. Read John 14:1-4. It is a message of cheer, "Let not your hearts be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me" (2 Cor. 5:17). This is a commandment to service, a message of hope and represents the Church universal.

It is fitting that Easter should be the joyous, happy time that it is. It should bring a message of joy and hope to all and a call to deeper consecration. It comes in the spring when nature is taking on new life and every thing seems new and the flowers are beautiful. It is a time of rejoicing.

The fire in Tokyo swept a square-mile area which had been rebuilt hastily after the great earthquake, destroying 1,700 houses and making 8,500 persons homeless. No deaths were reported, but ten persons were listed as missing.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

April will be the special Easter offering month. We have mailed envelopes to all our Churches in the Southern Christian Convention in order to have them there on time, so the Church can take its offering on the Sunday it is most convenient.

The goal this year is $5,000. Are you going to make a special effort in your Church to help us reach it? We are hoping and praying that "all" our Churches will take this special offering this year and swell our offering till we will not only reach our goal, but will go beyond. In making your offering this year, please bear in mind that—

1. We have one hundred and ten children.
2. They have to be fed three times each day.
3. They wear clothes.
3. It takes money to pay bills.
5. The Christian Orphanage is your institution.
6. It is your duty and your privilege to support it.
7. Make your offering liberal and make your servants in charge feel that you and your Church are backing them in the work.

Chas. D. Johnston,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR APRIL 2, 1925.

Amount brought forward		$3,493.28
Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Pleasant Hill (J)	$ 5.45
Henderson	7.08
Wake Chapel	6.32
		18.85
Western N. C. Conference:
Union Grove	$ 3.00
Burlington	52.25
		55.25
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Mt. Bethel	$ 1.42
Pleasant Ridge	2.58
Elon	2.50
		6.50
Valley of Virginia Conference:
Linville		4.51
Georgia and Alabama Conference:
Rose Hill	$ 4.88
New Hope	1.40
		6.28
New Building Fund.
National Cloak and Suit Co.	$ 2.00
W. J. Ballentine	10.00
Jas. A. Gray, Winston-Salem	25.00
Webster County S. S., Ind.	5.00
G. A. Brown and wife, Oregon, Ill.	15.00
		57.00
Special Offerings.
Wake Chapel C. E. Society	$ 15.00
A. W. Parrish	25.00
Garland Horner	65.00
Pervis Tilley	30.00
		135.00
Grand total		$3,776.67

The Palm Beach fire fortunately took no toll of life, but in the destruction of the Breakers' Hotel, said to be the largest frame structure in the world, and of the Palm Beach Hotel and a few smaller structures, the property loss was placed at $7,000,000. Much of the loss was in the destruction of personal property of the wealthy guests in the hotels.

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

These Pens are of standard make, and will give good service. If you are in need of a Fountain Pen, order from us.
MEN'S PENS ..... $2.00 LADIES' PENS $2.00
Postage paid, and Pens guaranteed by the manufacturer.

LIMITED COMBINATION OFFER.—To a new subscriber, or for renewal (if not in arrears), $3.25, either Gentleman's or Lady's Pen, with guarantee of manufacturer. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 EAST BROAD STREET, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Mission Study Books.

Official List for 1924-1925.

ORDER BY TITLE OF BOOK.

FOR ADULT CLASSES.

For Home Mission Classes:
"The Romance of Home Missions," by S. L. Morris, D. D.. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... $ .75
For Foreign Mission Classes:
"Ming Kwong—the City of Morning Light," by Mary Ninde Gamewell. Paper, 50c; cloth .75
"In China," by H. F. Williams, D. D. ..... .25

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

For Intermediate Home Mission Classes:
"The Land of All Nations," by Margaret F. Seelbach. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... .75
For Intermediate Foreign Mission Classes:
"China's Real Revolution," by Paul Hutchinson. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... .75
For Junior Foreign Mission Classes:
"Chinese Lanterns," by Minna McEwen Meyer. Paper, 50c; cloth ..... .75

LEADERS' HELPS.

Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Adult Classes) ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Romance of Home Missions" (Young People's Classes) ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Land of All Nations" ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "Ming Kwong" ..... .15
Leaders' Helps for "China's Real Revolution" .. .15
Leaders' Helps for "Chinese Lanterns" ..... .15

Send all orders to—

THE CHRISTIAN SUN,
1536 East Broad Street - - Richmond, Virginia.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

TURNING TO GOD.

"There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth."—Luke 15:1-10.

God has endowed us with an instinctive love for Himself and a disposition to help others. The "homing instinct" to be in communion with God may lie dormant through lack of instruction or be perverted through willfulness. When life is not moving forward towards God it is losing itself. When the soul is not growing in grace and knowledge of God, it is becoming lost. "All we like sheep" wander and become entangled with material things, and "there is no health in us." But all the while the spirit of God is wooing our souls, and we are being drawn to Him. If we yield to God's spirit, we are being "found." When we sin we forthwith repent and willingly commit that sin no more.

Prayer.—O God, our Father, ofttimes the way is dark, and we are far from home. May the illumination of Thy spirit be round about us. Let the vision of Thy glory shine before us, that we may find the way to Thee. Let our lives move on with ever-keener consciousness of Thee and Thy love. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE GOOD FATHER.

"But the father said to his servants, Bring forth quickly the best robe, and put it on him . . . for this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost and is found."—Luke 15:11-32.

The father yearned with a great longing for his wandering son. He knew, however, that it was useless to compel him to return. He must wait patiently until his son realized for himself his need of his father's forgiveness and affection. The father's abiding love is shown by this, that he restrained himself and endured the pain of his son's absence and sin. He did not resort to authority. But when the son returned, how the father's heart rejoiced! He only waited for evidence of his son's love and repentance.

"The beauty of the story is that his father met him far out on the homeward road, kissed him, kissed him again, clothed him, loved back into health and worthy occupation."

Prayer.—Gracious Father, we pray for all those who are away from Thee. Bless those in far-away lands who seek to reveal Thy Father's heart to Thy children of many races. Help us to surrender our wills to Thine. May our lives be cleansed from all defilement. Purify our hearts, in Jesus' name. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

TRUE RICHES.

"No servant can serve two masters . . . Ye cannot serve God and mammon."—Luke 16:1-13.

In the mind of Jesus, there was just one evil thing about money, and that was its power to stimulate selfish interests. Selfishness is never satisfied. Money may be and should be a mighty factor in friendliness. One of the great lessons of life is to learn how to use wealth and power unselfishly. We can well believe that God will not trust eternal things to a man who in this life has not learned to use for others whatever he may have of wealth and power. The remedy which will prevent money being a power of evil is "to begin to use it, as soon as one has even a little of it, in friendly ways.

"All the good and all the evil which exalt or defile a man have their seat within him, in his own character. The soul's wealth is the only real wealth. Christ's only injunction in the sphere of economics was 'Take heed and beware of covetousness.' "

Prayer.—Our Father, teach us ways to use the wealth of the world. May it be the servant of Thy will. Give us true wealth of soul. May the need of the world inspire us to industry and thrift, that we may be able to help where help is needed. In His name. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE STUBBORN HEART.

"If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, if one rise from the dead."—Luke 16:14-31.

We are all the while trying to escape the necessity of making vital decisions affecting our own lives. We want the right to be so plain that we may see it without search and follow without effort. Life is not thus. We must lay firm hold on our own natures, bring our wills into action, set our minds at work, then the powers of God are available for our instruction and our help.

"It is the old story. We are wanting God to appear in imperial glory; and He comes among us as a humble carpenter. We want great miracles and we have the daily Providence. It is a great day when we discover our God in the common bush. When we enjoy a closer walk with God, common things will wear the hues of heaven."

Prayer.—O God, turn our eyes, we pray Thee, towards Thy light and our minds towards Thy truth. Remove all stubbornness from our hearts. May Thy teachings shine in our lives like stars in the night. Let our strength be renewed in Thee. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE WILLING HEART.

"There is no man that hath left house . . . for the kingdom of God's sake, who shall not receive manifold more in this time."—Luke 18:18.

The rich young man had a willingness of heart, sufficient for him to desire to know the Master's teachings. But Jesus saw that there was still selfishness in his nature, and that he trusted in the power of riches, making it impossible for him to be a true friend of man and a faithful disciple. He had not the ability to master his money—his money mastered him. There are many rich men and women who bless the world continually by their wealth because they have learned how to use it for others. The world needs love and sympathy more than it needs material things, and this greatest gift we all can give if we possess the willing heart. Let each one ask, What is it that stands in my way to largest usefulness?

"Not Thy gifts, I seek, O Lord;
Not Thy gifts, but Thee.
What were all Thy boundless store
Without Thyself, what less or more,
Not Thy gifts, but Thee."

Prayer.—O our Father, sanctify the secret places of our hearts, that we may follow Thee in ministry to others. Make us rich with heavenly treasure. Deliver us from selfishness. Help us to do good to all Thy needy children. For Christ's sake. Amen.

SATURDAY.

SALVATION THROUGH CHRIST.

How did Jesus save men? His method is illustrated again and again in the record of His life. He went to a man who was "lost." He invited the man to a new way of living; and offered Himself as a leader. Jesus made no demand, but for true repentance, and an acceptance of Himself as Lord and Master.

"The one thing that has value was the straightforward acceptance of that gift of new life which Christ offered and ever offers to those who will take it in their hands. And it is this gift of new life freely offered and freely received which brings renewed character and filial relation in the family of the Father."

"It is not so much the teachings of Jesus that accounts for His influence in the world. It is Jesus Himself."

Prayer.—O Christ, our Saviour, we would that we might have Thy forgiveness. We repent of our sins, blot them out and let them have dominion over us no more. May we rejoice in Thy love as flowers in the sun. Let the music of the celestial choir be ever in our ears, that our hearts may be lifted up. Amen.

SUNDAY.

SOWING OF GOOD SEED.

"The seed is the Word of God."—Luke 8:4-15.

The Word of God has been as good seed in the lives of millions as they have made their way through life. Its message of hope and truth is for all men, but the Word cannot accomplish its purpose unaided. It must have the co-operation of man's good will and his right disposition. The hard heart cannot nourish the Word nor can the heart that is already full of "cares, riches and pleasures" give it place. But in the "good ground" of an honest and good heart, the Word finds fruitful soil and brings forth a hundredfold both in this life and in the life to come.

" 'Doing' makes a new word of 'hearing.' The statute obeyed becomes a song. The commandment becomes a beatitude. The hidden things of God are not discovered until we are treading the path of obedience. God has wonderful treasures for the dutiful. The faithful discover the 'hidden manna.' "

Prayer.—O God, we open our hearts to Thy promises. May Thy Word find good ground within our lives and there bring forth rich harvest. Help us to make manifest the fruits of Thy Spirit. In Christ's name. Amen.

(Copyright, 1925, F. L. Fagley.)

OUR DUTY.

The great world's heart is aching fiercely in the night,
And God alone can heal it, and God alone give light:
And the men to bear that message, and to speak the living word,
Are you and I, my brothers, and the millions that have heard.

Can we close our eyes to duty? Can we fold our hands at ease,
While the gates of night stand open to the pathways of the seas?
Can we shut up our compassions? Can we leave one prayer unsaid,
Till the lands which hell has blasted have been quickened from the dead?

We grovel among trifles and our spirits fret and toss,
While above us burns the vision of the Christ upon the cross:
And the blood of God is streaming from His broken hands and side,
And the lips of God are saying, "Tell my brothers I have died."

O voice of God, we hear Thee above the shocks of time,
Thine echoes roll around us, and the message is sublime;
No power of man shall thwart us, no stronghold shall dismay,
When God commands obedience and love has led the way.

—Canon F. G. Scott, Canadian Churchman.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

DEAR LITTLE KIDDIES:

Listen dears: your editor walked into a beautiful shop yesterday, and who should be sitting on top o' the counter but Peter Rabbit—yes, sir-ee—and Kiddies, his ears were all floppy as could be; his fur coat was all sprinkled with gray. He looked sad. So up to Peter Rabbit I went, and there close to him was a little string, and on the end of the string was a queer rubber bulb. I picked it up and mashed it real hard, and Peter hopped and skipped around like he was the happiest lil rabbit on earth. What do you think of that?

I wish all the Kiddies could find one just like the one your editor found. Oh, babies! I love you all. You have been dear to write me little letters. Your editor hasn't had the croup any more—goody!

Come on, little Ford; you and I must go to see a sick Kiddie right now.

Good-by, Peter Rabbit.

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT.

THE FLAG.

Here comes the Flag—
Cheer it!
Valley and crag shall hear it;
Fathers shall bless it;
Children caress it;
All shall maintain it;
No one shall stain it.
Cheers for the sailors that fought on the waves for it!
Cheers for the soldiers that always were brave for it!
Tears for the men that went down to the grave for it!
Here comes the Flag!

EUGENE LANKFORD.

ADVENTURES OF THE PERIWIGS.

BY MARY BOOTH BEVERLEY.

In the largest blue periwinkle by the side of the stone wall lived Captain Periwig. Other Periwigs lived in all the other periwinkles. In fact, the Periwig family was a large one. Captain Periwig was the leader of the tribe that lived by the stone wall.

One morning the first sunbeam that danced into his window woke him up. He stretched his arms and shook the dewdrops from his wig. All Periwigs wear curly wigs spun by spiders. Captain Periwig had a spider valet whom he called Weaver, and who lowered himself every night into the little blue house and spun all night long very silently for fear of waking the captain. The other Periwigs had to search for their wigs among the bushes and on the lower branches of trees. Continual search for wigs had quickened their instinct for finding things.

The captain's eyes were blue. The rest of him, except his legs, was the color of spider webs—that is, hardly any color at all—and made him almost invisible except when the dew drops were clinging to him; then his pale blue body could be seen, shaped like the periwinkle flower. His legs were pale green and tapered down and grew together at the ankle, so that he had but one foot. He could not walk, but oh, how he could hop! All the other Periwigs were exactly like him, except that he could hop faster and think quicker than any of the rest of them.

When the captain had finished stretching and shaking the dew from his wig that morning he put on his shoe. He was then dressed and ready for the business of the day.

His breakfast? Why, he lived on dew! It is thin diet, but a Periwig is the thinnest of all creatures. That is why he can hop so high.

"Periwigs," called the captain, "come and report."

From every blue flower by the stone wall a queer little creature leaped to the earth and hopped over to the biggest periwinkle, where the captain sat enthroned and saluted.

"Who found something yesterday?" he asked. Finding things was the Periwigs' greatest delight. Besides, it was their business.

"Sir, I have found something," said a pert little Periwig, speaking before his betters, as is the way of lieutenants and second lieutenants. The way of lieutenants and second lieutenants. The captain had had trouble with him before; so he listened with a frown to the story of a goat butting a boy into a mud puddle. When the captain asked whether the boy was lost, the pert little Periwig answered no, but a button off his trousers was.

"Is that all the boy lost?" inquired the captain. "Sir, he lost his temper."

"Of course, you found it for him?"

The poor little Periwig looked crestfallen. "Put him in the guard house," roared the captain in a voice like distant—very, very distant—thunder. "A Periwig who cannot find things is good for nothing."

The little Periwig was hopped away grumbling and saying that he would go to Russia and join the Bolibeards, and that he hoped the Periwigs would not find a single thing that day. He was so bad that they put him into a deserted ant hole and double-locked the door.

When the Periwigs returned to their captain they found him just hopping off in search of something to find. They followed him, sometimes hopping together and sometimes hopping quite over one another's heads.

About noon they came to Weeping Willow Pond and sat down to rest. They had found nothing and had met no one who had lost anything. They were very blue; so blue that their little bodies could be seen without dew. A frog sat beside the pond looking as gloomy as the Periwigs felt. Once in a while he croaked dismally. He was a young frog and should have been happy, for he had plenty of insects to eat, and there was a bright sun shining overhead.

Captain Periwig was so astonished when he landed in the grass beside the frog that he hopped high into the air. The frog was so astonished that he hopped high into the air, too. Then they both hopped and kept it up until the frog lost his breath. "Have you lost anything?" asked Captain Periwig hopefully.

"It was my tail," said the frog. "I was swimming in the pond with the other tadpoles when the thought came to me that I should like to get out on the bank. I had never had such a thought before, and I do not know what put the idea into my head. Anyway, I came out for a while. When I was ready to go back I found I had no tail to swim with. I don't want to live on the bank. I want my tail." The poor frog wept dolefully.

Captain Periwig hopped his men up in line and bade them find the missing tail at once or be clapped into the guard house.

They began to look in the bushes and the weeds, and some looked up in the trees. The frog told them that they would never find it, for he was sure he had left it in the water. At this, Captain Periwig leaped into the pond. He knew he could not swim, but he remembered that he could float—so float he did, but away from the shore. He hadn't thought of that!

"Get me out at once," he called, "or be put into the guard house."

Almost beside themselves with grief, the Periwigs implored the frog to tell them what to do.

"Don't ask me," said the frog unkindly. "If you had found my tail, I could swim in and get him out."

"Put them into the guard house at once," came the captain's voice fainter and fainter.

Just then a red bird flew down beside them. "Dear Periwigs, I am so glad you are here," he said, "my mate has lost her voice, and I want you to find it for her. I know how good you are at finding things."

"Gladly," said Lieutenant Periwig, "but our captain has floated away. If you will fly over the pond and bring him back, I am sure we can find the lost voice."

Immediately the red bird fled above the water, seized the little captain in his bill and sat him on shore. The Periwigs saluated and hopped joyfully round him. The frog joined in and hopped with the best of them, but in trying to hope and salute at the same time he came down on his nose. That made him cross again; so he croaked, "You haven't found the lost voice or my tail either, and you can't find them!"

The captain asked the red bird where his mate lost her voice. The red bird replied that, if he knew where she lost it he could find it himself.

"I mean whether she lost it in the top of the trees or lower down in the bushes."

The red bird thought a moment before speaking. "I noticed her voice got lower and lower every day before she lost it," he said.

"Then we will look for it on the ground first," decided the captain.

The Periwigs searched in vain. Second Lieutenant Periwig whispered behind his hand that he did not believe Mrs. Red Bird ever had a voice to lose. Suddenly the captain called to them to follow him to his Cousin Katy-did's. He would ask her where to look, for she was very wise when she stopped quarreling long enough to think. The captain knew the secret of what Katy did so long ago, and the Katy-dids, who feared that he would tell, granted any request he made of them.

They found Cousin Katy in the very tree where the red bird had a nest. She was sitting on the topmost bough, knitting a muffler to use when it rained. "Cousin Katy, I have come to ask you if you have seen anything of a lost voice," began the captain when he was interrupted by a shrill "Katy did!" Cousin Katy went on knitting.

"Oh, you have seen it, then?" he asked eagerly. But another voice in another treetop shrilled, "Katy-didn't." Then the captain became angry and said, "If you do not tell me where to look for the voice, I shall tell what—"

"Katy did," finished Cousin Katy; then she added hastily, "Katy didn't! Grain of wheat."

"Shall we find it in a grain of wheat?"

"Katy did."

"Well," said the captain; "if Katy did, I guess we can."

